That immediately upon the conclusion of the routine morning business on Monday, December 18, 1916, the Senate will proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1082, and that no Senator shall speak more than once upon the bill or any amendment thereto, and that no speech shall be longer than 20 minutes, and that the Senate will take a final vote upon the passage of said measure by the close of said calendar day.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, the Senator from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] I know has been momentarily called from the Chamber, and he ought to be here when a unanimous-consent agreement is asked for.

The VICE PRESIDENT. This request requires a roll call of the Senate to disclose a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Gore	McLean	Smith, Mich.
Bankhead	Gronna	Martin, Va.	Smith, S. C.
Beckham	Hollis	Martine, N. J.	Smoot
Borah	Husting	Nelson	Sterling
Brady	James	Norris	Sutherland
Brandegee	Johnson, Me.	Overman	Swanson
Bryan	Johnson, S. Dak.	Page	Thomas
Catron	Jones	Poindexter	Townsend
Chamberlain	Kenyon	Pomerene	Underwood
Chilton	Kern	Reed	Vardaman
Clapp	Kirby	Saulsbury	Wadsworth
Colt	La Follette	Sheppard	Warren
Curtis	Lane	Shields	Watson
Dillingham	Lee, Md.	Simmons	Weeks
Fernald	Lodge	Smith, Ariz.	Works
Gallinger	McCumber	Smith, Ga.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Sixty-three Senators have answered to the roll call. There is a quorum present. The Secretary will now state the proposed request for a unanimous-consent agreement.

The SECRETARY. The Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD] asks for the following unanimous-consent agreement:

That immediately upon the conclusion of the routine morning business on Monday, December 18, 1916, the Senate will proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1082, and that no Senator shall speak more than once upon the bill or any amendment thereto, and that no speech shall be longer than 20 minutes, and that the Senate will take a final vote upon the passage of said measure by the close of said calendar day.

Mr. SUTHERLAND and Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, I have no objection to fixing a time to vote on this bill; I am ready to vote upon it at any moment; but I object to the proposed unanimous-consent agreement in its present form, because it does not fix a reasonable hour to begin voting.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I am willing to accept an amendment to that effect.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. The request for an agreement provides that we shall vote before the end of the calendar day, which, according to my experience, may mean a very long time. It may mean 12 o'clock of the night of that day, in all probability.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I ask that the words "6 o'clock" be added to the proposed agreement.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Then, the Secretary will call the roll to disclose a new quorum, the proposed agreement having been changed.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I should like to inquire if the roll is now to be called on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Utah?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The rule requires that when a unanimous-consent agreement is proposed the roll shall be called in order to disclose a quorum. The Chair rules that, after such a proposition has been stated, a call of the Senate has been had, and then the proposed agreement is subsequently changed, in order to comply with the rule, a new call of the Senate for a quorum is required.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, the Chair is usually right in his rulings, but I think that he has fallen into an error in this matter. A proposed unanimous-consent agreement is presented by the Senator from Texas. The rule then requires that the roll shall be called to determine whether a quorum is present. Then the matter is open for adjustment in the Senate. Every time a new suggestion is made it does not seem that the rule requires that the roll shall again be called. The object of the rule is to notify absent Members that a unanimous-consent agreement is sought and to bring them into the Chamber. The whole matter is then before the Senate. When they are here, then the unanimous-consent agreement may be modified by interchange of opinion, and it does not seem to me that a roll call is required every time a new suggestion is made.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is not anxious about this matter except to have it correct. The reason for this rule arose since the present occupant of the chair has been here. It arose over a complaint that Senators were not present in the Chamber when unanimous-consent agreements were entered into.

After the roll call was had and the agreement stated, to the certain knowledge of the Chair several Senators left the Senate Chamber. The Chair assumed that when they left they were entirely satisfied with the proposed unanimous-consent agreement as presented by the Senator from Texas; but, having changed the agreement, the Chair did not know whether they were content with it or not. The Chair does not care whether or not the roll is to be called again, if it shall be the understanding of the Senate that when the roll has once been called any changes may be made in a proposed unanimous-consent agreement and it is not needful to order a further call. Shall that be the view of the Senate?

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, if I may be permitted, I desire to make a suggestion very largely along the same line as that of the Senator from Utah [Mr. SUTHERLAND]. It would be extremely difficult to obtain a unanimous-consent agreement at all if the roll had to be called on each amendment to it. At the time the Senators to whom the Chair has referred left the Chamber the proposed unanimous-consent agreement had not been entered into; it had only been submitted. I take it that when a proposed unanimous-consent agreement is submitted to the Senate it is then open to amendment or adjustment in the usual mode of proceeding, and every Senator has notice or ought to have notice that it may be modified before it is finally agreed to. The only purpose of the rule was to enable Senators by the notice to be informed that the proposition was up and to give them an opportunity to attend if they cared to do so.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, the rule has seemed to me a wise one, but I understood the purpose of the rule was simply that Senators should have notice that a unanimous-consent agreement as to the final disposition of a measure was being asked for. Now, it appears to me, that if we adopt an extension of the rule, so that every time a modification is proposed in a unanimous-consent agreement we must have the roll called, we are opening the door to very dangerous delays. A Senator would have nothing to do but propose a unanimous-consent agreement and then the roll would be called and a quorum developed. Then he may modify his proposed unanimous-consent agreement by changing a word, when the roll has again to be called. He could go on all day calling for quorums by modifying his proposed unanimous consent word by word. I submit, in all respect, that it seems to me that it is an extension which was not intended when the rule, a most excellent one, was adopted.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, I can understand how our Presiding Officer is embarrassed in a decision upon this subject, as perhaps the rule itself is not perfectly clear. I agree fully with the view expressed by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] that the purpose of this rule was simply to give Senators notice by the roll call that there was a question pending before the Senate, and that question was a proposition to fix by unanimous consent a specific time when a measure should be voted upon. I think it would curtail very much the value of this rule if we were not allowed to modify the nature of the proposed agreement even after the roll was called, and I feel sure that those who prepared the rule did not contemplate such a restricted view of it. I should like to suggest to the Chair the propriety of submitting to the Senate which construction should control in enforcing the rule, as it is a matter that affects all Senators; let the Senate take the responsibility of adopting the future mode of procedure with reference to it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That is what the Chair has been trying to do for quite a little while—to get the opinion of the Senate. There is now, to the certain knowledge of the Chair, more than a quorum present, and if it shall be considered by the Senate that this rule, providing for the calling of the roll when a proposition is made to enter into a unanimous-consent agreement for the taking of a final vote on a measure on a specified day, permits the amendment of the proposed unanimous-consent agreement without a further call of the roll, the Chair will administer the rule accordingly. If that is the view of the Senate and there is no objection, the Chair will rule accordingly.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I rise for information. I do not understand whether any action has been taken on the original proposal for unanimous consent or whether it is pending before the Senate for action.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is pending for action.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Mr. President, I deem this a very important measure affecting very seriously and hurtfully, and I believe in an un-American way, the interests of the District of Columbia. I enter my protest against granting unanimous consent at this time to taking a vote on the measure at any fixed time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Well, that relieves the Chair from any further ruling.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I am very glad indeed. I had no thought that I was half so potent.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole and open to amendment.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I move to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the matter which I send to the desk.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. Has not the amendment of the Senator been submitted and read heretofore?

Mr. SMOOT. Does the Senator address his question to the Chair or to me?

Mr. SHEPPARD. I am addressing my question to the Vice President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment of the Senator from Utah was read on yesterday.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Then I make the point that the question now is on the amendment.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I offer it now as an amendment. There were very few Senators in the Chamber yesterday when I offered it as a proposed substitute.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I have no objection to having it read again.

Mr. SMOOT. And I think it would be very much better to have it read at this time.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I have no objection to having it read again.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the amendment.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following words:

That on and after the 1st day of November, A. D. 1917, it shall be unlawful for any person, house, association, firm, company, club, or corporation, his, its, or their agents, officers, clerks, or servants, to sell, manufacture, or dispose of any intoxicating liquor or alcohol of any kind in the District of Columbia or to have in his or its possession or to transport any intoxicating liquor or alcohol in the District of Columbia unless the same was procured and is so possessed and transported under a permit as hereinafter provided.

Wherever the term "liquor," "intoxicating liquor," or "intoxicating liquors" is used in this act it shall be deemed to include whisky, brandy, rum, gin, wine, ale, porter, beer, cordials, hard or fermented cider, alcoholic bitters, ethyl alcohol, all malt liquors, and all other alcoholic liquors.

That any person, or persons, or any house, company, association, club, or corporation, his, its, or their agents, officers, clerks, servants, who shall, directly or indirectly, violate the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than $300 nor more than $1,000 and shall be imprisoned in the District jail or workhouse for a period of not less than 30 days nor more than 1 year for each offense.

SEC. 2. That before a pharmacist shall be authorized to transport pure alcohol for scientific or mechanical purposes or for compounding or preparing medicines, as provided by this act, he shall procure a permit for that purpose from the Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

SEC. 3. That to procure such permit a pharmacist shall make and file with the Commissioners of the District a statement in writing under oath stating that he desires to transport pure alcohol for scientific or mechanical purposes or for compounding, preparing, or preserving medicines only, as provided by this act, and giving his name, the location of his place of business, a statement that he is a licensed pharmacist, that he is regularly engaged in the practice of his profession at the location named, and that he will not violate any provisions of this act.

SEC. 4. That if the Commissioners of the District are satisfied of the good faith of the applicant, they shall issue to such pharmacist a permit to transport pure alcohol for compounding, preparing, or preserving medicines or for scientific or mechanical purposes. Such permit shall be substantially in the following form:

PERMIT TO PHARMACISTS TO TRANSPORT PURE ALCOHOL FOR COMPOUNDING, PREPARING, AND PRESERVING MEDICINES ONLY OR FOR SCIENTIFIC OR MEHANICAL PURPOSES.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,
City of Washington, ss:

——— ———, a pharmacist, residing at ———, is hereby permitted to transport pure alcohol for compounding, preparing, and preserving medicines only or for scientific or mechanical purposes. This permit can only be used for one shipment and will be void after 20 days from the date of issue.

By order of the Commissioners of the District.
Dated this —— day of ———, 191—.

———— ————,
President of the Board.

SEC. 5. That said permit mentioned in section 4 hereof shall be issued upon forms supplied by the Commissioners of the District and shall contain the permit, a copy of the application for permit, and a copy of the provisions of section 6 of this act, and shall be issued under the seal of the Commissioners of the District and shall be void for transportation purposes after 20 days from the date of issuance. The Commissioners of the District shall keep in a separate book provided for that purpose a record of permits issued under this act, wherein shall be entered the date and the number thereof, the person to whom issued, and the purpose for which issued.

SEC. 6. That said permit shall be attached to and remain affixed in a conspicuous place upon any package or parcel containing pure alcohol imported into or shipped in the District of Columbia, and when so affixed shall authorize any common carrier or any person operating a boat or vehicle for the transportation of goods, wares, or merchandise within the District to transport, ship, or carry such pure alcohol. Any person so transporting such alcohol shall, before the delivery of such package or parcel, cancel said permit and so deface the same that it can not be used again.

SEC. 7. That all express companies, railroad companies, public or private carriers, are hereby required to keep a separate book in which shall be entered, immediately upon receipt thereof, the name of the person to whom pure alcohol is shipped, from what city or town and State the same was shipped, and the name of the shipper, the amount and kind received, the date when received, the date when delivered and to whom delivered, after which record shall be a blank space in which the consignee shall be required to sign his own name in ink before such pure alcohol is delivered to such consignee, which book shall be open to the inspection of the public at any time during business hours of the company and shall not be removed from the place where the same is required to be kept. A copy of entries upon any such record herein provided to be kept, when certified to by the agent of any express or railroad company, or any public or private carrier in charge of the same, shall constitute prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated in any court of the District.

It shall be unlawful for any person, house, association, firm, company, club, or corporation, his, its, or their agents, officers, clerks, or servants, to ship alcohol or intoxicating liquor to a false or fictitious name or person, or any person to receive or receipt for alcohol or intoxicating liquor in a false or fictitious name.

SEC. 8. That any common carrier or any person operating a boat or vehicle for the transportation of goods, wares, or merchandise may accept for transportation, and may transport to any place within the District of Columbia shipments of wine for sacramental purposes when there is attached to such shipments a certificate in substantially the following form:

"I (or we) certify that this package contains only ——— (amount) of ——— wine, which has been ordered by ——— ———, who represents himself to be a duly authorized and officiating priest, or minister, of the ——— church, at ———, D. C., and that said wine is desired for sacramental purposes only.

"——— ———."

SEC. 9. That whenever a shipment of wines for sacramental purposes shall have been transported for delivery within the District of Columbia the delivering agent of the transportation company must refuse to deliver the same unless it is accompanied by the certificate prescribed in section 8 of this act, and then only to the person to whom the same is addressed, or upon his written order. The transportation company must keep a record of all shipments and deliveries of wines for sacramental purposes, and must preserve for a period of one year after their receipt all certificates accompanying such shipments and all written orders upon which deliveries may be made. Such records must be open to the inspection of the public at any time during office hours.

SEC. 10. That any person who shall desire to purchase pure alcohol for scientific or mechanical purposes shall apply to the Commissioners of the District for a permit for that purpose. To procure such permit he shall make and file with the commissioners a statement in writing, under oath, stating that he desires to purchase pure alcohol for scientific or mechanical purposes, as provided by this act, and giving his name and residence and the place at which such pure alcohol is to be used.

SEC. 11. That if the Commissioners of the District are satisfied of the good faith of the applicant, they shall issue to said applicant a permit to purchase pure alcohol for scientific or mechanical purposes. The original of said permit shall have attached thereto a duplicate copy, and each shall be numbered with the same number and be in substantially the following form:

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,
City of Washington, ss:

——— ———, residing at ———, is hereby permitted to purchase pure alcohol in the amount of ——— (here insert quantity), to be used for scientific or mechanical purposes. This permit can only be used for one purchase, and the copy hereof attached hereto shall be conspicuously pasted upon the package containing said alcohol, and this permit to purchase shall be void after 20 days from the date hereof.

By order of the Commissioners of the District.

Dated this ——— day of ———, 19—.

President of the Board.

SEC. 12. That the permit mentioned in section 11 shall authorize the applicant to purchase and any pharmacist to sell and deliver to him the quantity named in the said permit. The permit shall be canceled, kept, and retained on file for at least one year by the pharmacist so selling said pure alcohol, and the copy of said permit shall be by the pharmacist conspicuously pasted upon the receptacle containing said alcohol, and shall so remain upon said receptacle so long as the same shall contain alcohol. Said permit and copy shall only authorize one purchase and sale. It shall be unlawful for any pharmacist to sell pure alcohol without the permit herein specified or for any person to keep or have in his possession any pure alcohol unless the receptacle containing the same shall be distinctly labeled with the copy of the permit authorizing the purchase of the same.

SEC. 13. That it shall be unlawful for any person owning, leasing, or occupying or in possession or control of any premises, building, vehicle, car, or boat to knowingly permit thereon or therein the manufacture, transportation, disposal, or the keeping of intoxicating liquor with intent to manufacture, transport, or dispose of the same in violation of the provisions of this act.

SEC. 14. That it shall be unlawful for any person to import, ship, sell, transport, deliver, receive, or have in his possession any intoxicating liquors except as in this act provided.

SEC. 15. That any person who shall in any public place or in or upon any passenger coach, street car, boat, or in or upon any other vehicle commonly used for the transportation of passengers, or in or about any depot, platform, or waiting room drink any intoxicating liquor of any kind, or any person who shall be drunk or intoxicated in any public or private road or street, or in any passenger coach, street car, or any public place or building, or at any public gathering, or any person who shall be drunk or intoxicated and shall disturb the peace of any person, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

SEC. 16. That any person convicted of violation of any of the provisions of this act where the punishment therefor is not herein specifically provided shall be punished by a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $500, and by imprisonment in the District jail or workhouse for a period of not less than 30 days nor more than 6 months.

SEC. 17. That a person having once been convicted of a violation of any of the provisions of this act, except section 15, who thereafter violates the provisions hereof shall be considered a persistent violator of this act and shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and upon conviction thereof shall be imprisoned in the District jail or workhouse for a period of not less than one year and not more than two years.

SEC. 18. That in case a pharmacist is convicted under the provisions of this act the Commissioners of the District shall, in addition to the penalty provided by this act, revoke his license to practice pharmacy.

SEC. 19. That the issuance by the United States of any internal-revenue special-tax stamp or receipt to any person as a dealer in intoxicating liquors shall be prima facie evidence of the sale of intoxicating liquors by such person during the time the stamp or receipt is in force and effect.

A copy of such stamp or receipt or of the record of the issuance thereof, certified to by a United States internal-revenue officer having charge of such record, is admissible as evidence in like case and with like effect as the original stamp or receipt.

SEC. 20. That it shall be unlawful for any person, firm, house, company, association, corporation, or club, his, its, or their agents, officers, clerks, servants to have in his or its possession any intoxicating liquors of any kind for any use or purpose, except the same shall have been obtained and is so possessed under a permit authorized by this act.

SEC. 21. That it shall be the duty of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to enfocre the provisions of this act. They shall detail qualified members of the police force to detect violations of the act, if any, and to report promptly all knowledge or information they may have concerning such violations, together with the names of any witnesses by whom they may be proven, to the corporation counsel, but it shall be the duty of all members of the police force to detect violations of the act and to promptly report any information or knowledge concerning the same to the corporation counsel, together with the names of witnesses by whom such violations may be proven; and the corporation counsel shall bring such alleged violators of the law to trial with all due diligence.

If any such officer shall fail to comply with the provisions of this section, he shall upon conviction be fined in any sum not less than $100 nor more than $500; and such conviction shall be a forfeiture of the office held by such person, and the court before whom such conviction is had shall, in addition to imposition of the fine aforesaid, order and adjudge the forfeiture of his said office. For a failure or neglect of official duty in the enforcement of this act any official herein referred to may be removed by court action.

SEC. 22. That prosecutions for violations of the provisions of this act shall be on information filed in the police court by the corporation counsel of the District of Columbia or any of his assistants duly authorized to act for him, and said corporation counsel or his assistants shall file such information upon the presentation to him or his assistants of sworn information that the law has been violated; and such corporation counsel and his assistants shall have power to administer oaths to such informant or informants, and such others as present themselves, and anyone making a false oath to any material fact shall be deemed guilty of perjury and subject to the same penalties as now provided by law for such offense.

When, however, it appears to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia that it will be in the interest of more effective enforcement of the provisions of this act, they may request the United States district attorney for the District of Columbia to prosecute persons charged with offenses against the law, and when so requested by said commissioners the said district attorney shall proceed before the grand jury and in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia to prosecute such offenders in manner now prescribed by law for the prosecution of persons charged with violations of the laws against crime in the District of Columbia.

SEC. 23. That if for any reason any section, paragraph, provision, clause, or part of this act shall be held unconstitutional or invalid, that fact shall not affect or destroy any other section, paragraph, provision, clause, or part of the act not in and of itself invalid, but the remaining parts of sections shall be enforced without regard to that so invalidated.

SEC. 24. That in the interpretation of this act words of the singular number shall be deemed to include their plurals, and words of the masculine gender shall be deemed to include the feminine, as the case may be.

SEC. 25. That this act shall be in full force and effect on and after the 1st day of November, 1917, and all laws and parts of laws inconsistent herewith be, and they are hereby, repealed. And that the excise board for the District of Columbia, provided for and established under the act making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, be, and it is hereby, abolished upon the taking effect of this act.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, the amendments that have been offered to Senate bill 1082 allow the purchase and possession of unlimited quantities of intoxicating liquors for personal use. The substitute that I offer prohibits the personal use of all intoxicating liquors. It is a violation of the law to ship them into the District of Columbia for that purpose. There are only three purposes for which pure alcohol can be imported into the District of Columbia; that is, for scientific purposes, for mechanical purposes, and for the preparation of medicine and medicinal purposes.

I might say in passing, Mr. President, that my amendment is the Idaho law made applicable to the District of Columbia. My substitute is a prohibition bill in fact with provisions to enforce it. If those who believe in prohibition want a law that will bring prohibition to the District of Columbia, they should vote for the substitute that I have offered, and I assure them if it becomes law that we will have prohibition in the District of Columbia.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to his colleague?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; I yield.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Will my colleague tell us how long the Idaho law has been in operation?

Mr. SMOOT. I will give the Senator the exact date when it was passed—February 18, 1915.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I understand that under the terms of that law, and under the terms of this amendment, if any person should bring even a small quantity of any kind of intoxicating liquor into the District and keep possession of it, he would be guilty of an offense.

Mr. SMOOT. Under the law he would be guilty of an offense.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. And if he did that the second time he would be guilty of a felony punishable by imprisonment for from one to two years.

Mr. SMOOT. That is true.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Does my colleague know whether or not anybody has ever been convicted under the Idaho law of an offense of that character?

Mr. SMOOT. I do not know whether anyone has been convicted of such an offense. I know that a number of the provisions in the law have been taken to the supreme court of the State, and the supreme court of the State has upheld the constitutionality of the law.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I was wondering whether anybody had been convicted. I feel quite certain that occasionally some person has carried liquor into the State of Idaho. I wondered how successful the enforcement of the law had been.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, the Idaho law went to the Supreme Court upon the question of its constitutionality, and very thorough consideration was given to it. It was argued on both sides very ably, and the court upheld the constitutionality of the law. That part of it to which the Senator refers came up for the consideration of the court and it was upheld.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I was not inquiring about the constitutionality of the law, but as to the practical operation of it. The Senator from Idaho knows very well that sometimes a law may be so extreme in its penalties and require such extreme things to be done that it will defeat its own purpose. I wondered how successful the law had been in its actual operation.

Mr. BORAH. My understanding is that the law has worked very satisfactorily thus far. Of course this feature of the law, with reference to the possession of any quantity of liquor, was designed to reach the man who is known as the "bootlegger," with whom we have had a great deal of trouble under local-option laws.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. He ought to be reached. There is not any doubt about that.

Mr. BORAH. That feature of it was incorporated in the law for the purpose of reaching him, and making the mere possession of the liquor an offense, and there have been convictions in the lower courts, I understand. I do not know whether any of those have been carried up or not. I am told that it is now being very effectively enforced.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I have not any objection at all to penalizing with the utmost severity the "bootlegger," but this law evidently applies to an individual who may be in some other State and bring into the State of Idaho a small quantity of intoxicating liquor. If he retains that in his possession with the intention of using it himself, or not using it at all, he is guilty of an offense, and if he does it twice he is guilty of a felony and can be punished by imprisonment for two years in the penitentiary.

I doubt very much whether any jury would convict a man under such circumstances as that. A penalty of that kind, being so severe, would be very apt to defeat the very purpose of the law.

Mr. SMOOT. I hardly think that. I believe if we are going to have prohibition, we ought to have it in fact, and the only way to have it so is to pass a law that will provide for it and its enforceemnt. The present regulations of the liquor traffic in the District of Columbia are such that if we are going to have the liquor trade they are as good, I believe, as in any part of the United States. I understand that it is the purpose of the friends of Senate bill 1082, and I want to here state that I shall vote for it if my substitute is defeated, to secure prohibition for the District of Columbia. However, I do not believe that Senate bill 1082 is a prohibition bill, and will not insure prohibition to the people of the District.

There are in the District of Columbia nearly a hundred thousand negroes. Any one of them could send out of the District under this bill and purchase unlimited quantities of intoxicating liquor and bring it into the District, and instead of going to a saloon and taking one drink there is no telling what would be the result on receipt of a large quantity of intoxicating liquor. If they had a gallon or five gallons to bring in at one time, I am afraid the result will be even worse than the present regulation.

Mr. GALLINGER. I think the Senator has misstated the number of negroes in the District of Columbia.

Mr. SMOOT. I said 100,000.

Mr. GALLINGER. There are not so many as that.

Mr. SMOOT. Not far from that number.

Mr. GALLINGER. However that may be, a white man could get just as much as the negro.

Mr. SMOOT. There is no question about that. I was going to refer to them later. I spoke first of the negro and what he could do. I now say that any person in the District of Columbia could do the same thing. I believe that those who believe in prohibition will be greatly disappointed in the operation of the bill if it becomes law.

Now, Mr. President, Senators have heard the substitute read section by section, and I do not think that I will take the time of the Senate to go over and compare the provisions of my amendment with Senate bill 1082, but I will content myself by saying that if the amendment is adopted it is not going to interfere with any object that a believer in prohibition has in eliminating liquors of all kinds from the District of Columbia, but, on the contrary, I believe that if it is adopted and becomes a law in the District we will see the abolishment of all intoxicating liquors from the District with the exception of pure alcohol to be used for mechanical, scientific, and medicinal purposes.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. SMOOT. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. LODGE. I wish to ask the Senator how, under the law, he proposes to determine whether there is liquor in any form, wine or anything else, in a private house?

Mr. SMOOT. I will say to the Senator that I have provided no provision for search and seizure, but the whole question will be handled by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, and they have power to appoint men for the purpose of determining whether the provisions of the law are violated, and, if violated, prosecuted under the provisions of the bill. The bill states plainly how alcohol can come into the District. The bill prevents all other intoxicating liquors from being imported. All that can be imported is pure alcohol for scientific, mechanical, and medicinal purposes. Everything that is designated in the bill as intoxicating liquor—and they are enumerated in section 1 of the bill, with the exception of pure alcohol—is prohibited from importation into the District, with the exception of wine for sacramental purposes.

Mr. LODGE. None is to be allowed to be sold except for medicinal purposes?

Mr. SMOOT. For medicinal purposes by pharmacists or an individual under the provisions of the bill.

Mr. LODGE. But private houses are to be searched at the pleasure of the commissioners?

Mr. SMOOT. There is no search and seizure provision in the bill. I do not know that they would search the private houses unless they became a public nuisance.

Mr. LODGE. In order to search private houses there will have to be some provision so as to make it conform with the Constitution. It could not be done arbitrarily under the Constitution.

Mr. SMOOT. I think that is true, I will say to the Senator, and for that reason I have not provided a seizure clause in the bill.

Mr. LODGE. This makes a second offense—that is, if a man is twice discovered to have liquor in his house for his own use—a felony, does it not?

Mr. SMOOT. It does.

Mr. LODGE. That is a serious penalty. What I was trying to get at is what provision there is for proving the guilt of a person.

Mr. SMOOT. I suppose they will have to prove that the intoxicating liquors were brought into the District contrary to the law, and if they can prove that, then the man is guilty, and if found guilty the second time he is guilty of a felony.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. As I read the provision of the bill it would not have to be proved that the liquor had been actually introduced into the District; the mere possession of it by any person or his servant would inflict a penalty upon the person in whose house the liquor was found, even if his servant had it.

Mr. SMOOT. If found there it would no doubt be brought in contrary to the provisions of the bill.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I do not think so. The crime is in its possession irrespective of how it came into his possession.

Mr. SMOOT. If it came in contrary to the provisions of the law, then it would be a violation of the law.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. But under the language of the bill it is a crime if a man's servant has it in his possession in his house irrespective of how it came in, whether it came in on permit or whether it was smuggled in.

Mr. SMOOT. The only intoxicating liquors allowed to be imported into the District under the provisions of the bill is pure alcohol for the three purposes I have named, and any other intoxicating liquors that come into the District come in in violation of the law. It is a prohibition bill pure and simple.

Mr. REED. I desire to ask the Senator a question.

Mr. SMOOT. Certainly.

Mr. REED. As I read the Senator's bill—I am referring now to the language on page 1—it absolutely prohibits the possession of any kind of intoxicating liquors regardless of how the individual came into the possession of it.

Mr. SMOOT. The first section does, but the other sections provide the exceptions, and the exceptions afford the only way that an individual can have in his possession alcohol without a violation of the law.

Mr. REED. Now, the language is this:

That on and after the 1st day of November, A. D. 1917, it shall be unlawful for any person, house, association, firm, company, club, or corporation, his, its, or their agents, officers, clerks, or servants, to sell, manufacture, or dispose of any intoxicating liquor or alcohol of any kind in the District of Columbia or to have in his or its possession or to transport any intoxicating liquor or alcohol in the District of Columbia unless the same was procured and is so possessed and transported under a permit as hereinafter provided.

Under that is it not true that if it is found that there was a bottle of liquor in a man's possession, in his house, in his pocket, in his traveling bag, that would in and of itself constitute a complete crime?

Mr. SMOOT. It would if it was not procured under the provisions of the bill.

Mr. REED. You could not procure anything but alcohol under the provisions of the bill?

Mr. SMOOT. That is true.

Mr. REED. So if you had whisky or wine in your possession that would be enough?

Mr. SMOOT. It would be a violation of the law.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Will the Senator just look at section 14 on page 9?

Mr. REED. Yes; I will be glad to look at it. I thank the Senator. I think it just reenforces the statement:

SEC. 14. That it shall be unlawful for any person to import, ship, sell, transport, deliver, receive, or have in his possession any intoxicating liquors except as in this act provided.

Then, if a man came into the District of Columbia from any one of the States, went down to a hotel and registered, and happened to have a half pint of liquor in his grip, he would violate this law?

Mr. SMOOT. He need not violate the law. He could dispose of the liquor before he came into the District.

Mr. REED. Exactly; but if he brought it into the District of Columbia inadvertently or in any other way he would be at once liable to the pains and penalties of this law?

Mr. SMOOT. Technically, Mr. President, he would. It would be a violation of the law if he kept in his possession intoxicating liquors in the District of Columbia.

Mr. REED. Now, the language goes further and says that it shall be unlawful not only to sell, manufacture, dispose of any intoxicating liquors, and so forth, or to have in his possession, transport, any intoxicating liquors or alcohol in the District of Columbia, and so forth, but the language is so drawn that it is made unlawful for any person, house, association, firm, club, or corporation, its or their agents, officers, clerks, or servants to sell or have it in their possession, and so forth. Now, we will take the illustration of a hotel again. Suppose the proprietor of the Willard Hotel, in this city, were to have a clerk who had in his possession in the hotel a bottle of liquor, would not the proprietor be liable under this law?

Mr. SMOOT. I do not think so, Mr. President. I think the clerk would be liable.

Mr. REED. He would be a servant.

Mr. SMOOT. The proprietor would not be held responsible.

Mr. REED. The language is——

Mr. SMOOT. I will say to the Senator that there is no question as to what the bill intends, that all intoxicating liquors shall be forever excluded from the District of Columbia except as provided in the bill.

Mr. REED. I understand that.

Mr. SMOOT. It is a strict prohibition bill. The clerks will know it, the proprietors of hotels will know it, the possessors of homes will know it, and all who live or come into the District of Columbia will know it, and if they intend to obey the law they will comply with its terms.

Mr. REED. The point I am making now is this: Here is a proprietor of a hotel. He has a clerk working for him. The clerk, without the knowledge of the proprietor, has in the hotel a bottle of liquor. Could the proprietor of the hotel be sent to jail because the clerk, without his knowledge, had the bottle of liquor in his possession? As I read this language——

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President——

Mr. REED. In a moment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PITTMAN in the chair). Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator from Missouri has not concluded.

Mr. WORKS. I think the Senator from Utah has the floor.

Mr. REED. If the Senator from California desires to interrupt me in the middle of a sentence, I will give him the floor.

Mr. WORKS. The Senator need not take offense; I had no intention to do anything of the sort, but referring to his inquiry——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. SMOOT. I yield to the Senator from California.

Mr. WORKS. I wish to say in reference to the inquiry made by the Senator from Missouri, of course the proprietor would not be responsible, for in that case the liquor would not be in his possession; it would be in the possession of his guest.

Mr. CLAPP. I wish to remind the Senator from Missouri that to-day the proprietor of the Willard Hotel might be absolutely innocent of any knowledge, near or remote, that one of his servants sold liquor in his house within a prohibited hour or within a prohibited day, and the proprietor would be liable to a suit under the law. So it is in all States where there is a license law.

Mr. REED. It appears, therefore, that the Senator from Minnesota takes a view that is absolutely in conflict with the opinion just rendered by the Senator from California——

Mr. CLAPP. Mr. President——

Mr. REED. The Senator from California saying there would be no possible liability unless there was guilty knowledge on the part of the proprietor of the hotel; the Senator from Minnesota urges that the language is not objectionable, because already under the law, as he construes it, the proprietor might be held liable for the act of the servant done without his knowledge.

Mr. CLAPP. The Senator from California was dealing with one suggestion that had been made by the Senator from Missouri; I was dealing with an entirely different one. The Senator from California was dealing with a situation where a guest has the possession of liquor. I was dealing with the suggestion, as I understood it, made by the Senator from Missouri that if the servant of the owner of the hotel had liquor in his possession it would result in placing the owner within the hands of the law. I was not dealing with the suggestion made by the Senator from California at all.

Mr. REED. The Senator is in error, because I was talking about the question of servants. I had not been talking about anything else but the question of servants. The Senator from California directed his reply to that. However, that is all immaterial. The question that I am trying to get at is simply this: Would not the proprietor of the hotel be liable if one of his servants had in his possession in the hotel a bottle of liquor, even though the proprietor of the hotel did not know anything about it? If that is true, I would like to know. If it is not true, I would like to know.

Mr. SMOOT. I told the Senator that I did not believe he would be liable. I think the suggestion offered by the Senator from California is the true interpretation of the language of the bill, for the bill says that—

It shall be unlawful for any person, house, association, firm, company, club, or corporation, his, its, or their agents, officers, clerks, or servants, to sell, manufacture, or dispose of any intoxicating liquor or alcohol of any kind in the District of Columbia, or to have in his—

That is, the hotel proprietor—

or its possession or to transport any intoxicating liquor or alcohol in the District of Columbia, unless the same was procured—

And so forth.

Mr. REED. My own judgment about it is that the language is so drawn that it will be very likely to be construed that the proprietor of a hotel would be liable if any one of his servants or agents had any liquor in the hotel. It might be construed the other way; but, in view of the learned opinion which was rendered here the other day by a judge in the District of Columbia, that under the present law somebody who was serving beer to some guests in his own house was liable, I think it would be very well to proceed with some care.

Mr. SMOOT. Serving beer in a home under present law is quite a different thing from finding in the possession of a servant a bottle of wine, if the amendment is adopted and becomes a law.

Mr. REED. Yes; I know; but we sometimes get very strange constructions of laws.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Missouri if he thinks the law would apply, unless the proprietor of the hotel knew that the servants were handling the liquor?

Mr. REED. The Senator from Minnesota has already answered that by saying that frequently under the law the proprietors of public places are held liable for the acts of their servants done without their knowledge. Of course, we know that is true.

I am not contending about this bill, but I want to get at its meaning, just to see how far we are going; and while the Senator from Utah is on his feet, I wish to ask him a question.

Mr. SMOOT. I wish to say, in answer to the question of the Senator from Missouri, that I propose to go in the substitute just as far as I think it is possible to go to insure absolute prohibition.

Mr. REED. The substitute, as I understand, is largely taken from the Arizona statute?

Mr. SMOOT. No; it is taken from the Idaho statute.

Mr. REED. Is it not true that in the Idaho law there is a provision which prohibits people from carrying liquor even through the State?

Mr. SMOOT. No; I do not believe there is a provision in that law specifically stating that. I do not so remember it.

Mr. REED. My understanding is that the bill does prohibit carrying liquor through the State.

Mr. SMOOT. I understand, however, that if a person is found with liquor in his possession while stopping in Idaho, whether he comes in from another State or not, he violates the law.

Mr. REED. Is that the intention as to this substitute?

Mr. SMOOT. That is the intention; that if individuals here have liquor on their persons they violate the law. This is a prohibition bill, as I said a few moments ago.

Mr. REED. Would the substitute permit the use of alcohol, for instance, in the bath if a citizen happened to want to use it for cleansing purposes?

Mr. SMOOT. It has been declared that alcohol has no medicinal properties; and, therefore, I do not know why a man should have alcohol for his bath.

Mr. REED. I do not know; but that is a question.

Mr. SMOOT. It would depend upon whether the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, after an inspection, should say whether or not the alcohol was for medicinal purposes.

Mr. REED. Before a man could take a bath and have a rubdown with alcohol he would have to go down and see the District Commissioners?

Mr. SMOOT. If he got the alcohol himself, Mr. President, he would have to do so.

Mr. REED. Yes.

Mr. SMOOT. He would have to comply with the provisions of the law before he could get the alcohol; and when he applied for it he would have to say for what purpose he desired to use it.

Mr. REED. Suppose a man was to go to a Turkish bath, as occasionally men do, and having taken his bath and desiring to escape catching a cold, should ask to have an alcohol rub, who would have to get the permit for that rub?

Mr. SMOOT. I doubt very much under my substitute whether he could obtain a permit, and I do not think it is necessary at all to have an alcoholic rub after a Turkish bath.

Mr. REED. Of course, that depends on the man. Some people would regard alcohol as necessary in the bath; some people regard soap as necessary, and there are some people who regard neither as essential.

Mr. SMOOT. And some are content with merely water.

Mr. REED. Yes; and there are some people who disregard the bath altogether, who regard it as unhealthful. I am merely trying to get some light on the substitute.

Mr. SMOOT. The substitute is not an endeavor to regulate the opinion of people as to what constitutes a proper bath.

Mr. REED. But it would regulate the bath.

Mr. SMOOT. It will regulate the question of alcohol coming into the District of Columbia for that purpose; there is no question about that. I think that every man and woman in the District could have all the baths they desired and just as good baths as they are used to if there never was an ounce of alcohol brought into the District.

Mr. REED. That is a question of what a man is used to and what he thinks is cleanly. I should like to ask the author of this amendment now—I have not had a chance to read it—does it have a provision like the bill for which it is a substitute that requires any minister of the Gospel to go to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia and get a permit to administer the holy sacrament?

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, it provides in section 9—

> That whenever a shipment of wine for sacramental purposes shall have been transported for delivery within the District of Columbia the delivering agent of the transportation company must refuse to deliver the same unless it is accompanied by the certificate prescribed in section 8 of this act.

The certificate is specifically provided for on page 6, section 8, of the substitute, as follows:

> SEC. 8. That any common carrier or any person operating a boat or vehicle for the transportation of goods, wares, or merchandise may accept for transportation, and may transport to any place within the District of Columbia shipments of wine for sacramental purposes when there is attached to such shipments a certificate in substantially the following form—

Then, the certificate is set forth. It is true, as the Senator says, that whenever it is desired to import wine into the District for sacramental purposes those desiring to import it must have a certificate in the specified form issued by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

Mr. REED. But the Senator's substitute does not require, as does the bill in section 4—

> That when any minister, pastor, or priest of a religious congregation or church desires wine for sacramental purposes in the usual religious exercises of his denomination he must apply to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia for a permit—and then, that the District Commissioners shall pass on the question of whether the amount he desires is reasonable or unreasonable?

Mr. SMOOT. That, of course, is not in the substitute which I have offered. The form of permit, after application is made, reads as follows:

> I (or we) certify that this package contains only ——— (amount) of ——— wine, which has been ordered by ——— ———, who represents himself to be a duly authorized and officiating priest, or minister, of the ——— church, at ———, D. C., and that said wine is desired for sacramental purposes only.
> ——— ———.
> (Signature of shipper.)

Mr. REED. There is no limit?

Mr. SMOOT. There is no limit at all.

Mr. REED. Under that, take the case of Simms. No limit being fixed, I take it he could exercise a pretty broad right.

Mr. SMOOT. In referring to Simms, of course we all believe he is such a prohibitionist that he would not even have wine for sacramental purposes.

Mr. REED. But I am talking about what he might have. The Senator, however, does repose in his substitute enough confidence in the regularly ordained minister or priest of a church that he would allow him to get what he thought was necessary, and not, as the Sheppard bill does, require the minister or priest to appear before some whippersnapper of a commissioner and satisfy that commissioner that the amount of wine that he wanted for his church was in the opinion of the commissioner reasonable?

Mr. SMOOT. My opinion is that if the ministers in the District of Columbia do not support a prohibition law, then any such law never will be enforced in the District of Columbia.

Mr. REED. I notice that the Senator's substitute evidently reposes more confidence in the ministers than the author of the Sheppard bill has in the ministerial classes.

Mr. WORKS and Mr. SHEPPARD addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, I am heartily in favor of the substitute offered by the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT], because it is a plain, straightforward prohibition bill. It contains some exceptions that ought not to be made. There is no reason why there should be any exception made in the use of alcohol for medicinal purposes. I think it is very generally understood now that alcohol has no medicinal qualities or virtues at all, and it is being very generally disused by reputable physicians for that reason. I noticed some time back that at a meeting of the surgeons of one of the great railroad companies in this country, they passed a resolution, or in some way reached the conclusion, that there are no medicinal qualities in alcohol, and that it ought not to be used. I think that is very generally true.

With respect to its use for sacramental purposes, there are, of course, great differences of opinion about it. Some ministers who have been accustomed to use it for that purpose have discontinued it and substituted something else in its place. It is just as true that there is no spiritual virtue in wine as that there is no medicinal quality in alcohol, and, to my mind, it has become only a matter of form that might very well be dispensed with and something else substituted in its place. In the interest of good morals I think the time will come when the ministers of the different churches will come to that conclusion, and that its use will be entirely done away with, as I think it should.

The Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED] has asked a good many questions for the purpose of indicating the strength of this bill in certain directions that seem to him, or that he intimates at least, are unjust. There is no injustice in preventing the bringing into the District of Columbia of alcoholic liquors for sale, giving away, or use. We have got to meet this question, and might as well do it now. It is a question of prohibition or not. I think we ought to be fair and open about it, and present this question in the way that is done by this substitute, so that there may be a vote upon it by the Senate. I do not think that it is a matter that ought to be temporized with. The time is coming, of course, when prohibition will prevail in the District of Columbia; practically everybody concedes that fact nowadays, I think; and so we might just as well meet the issue squarely, it seems to me, now as at any other time.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from California a question. What is the distinguishing feature between the bill of the Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD] and the substitute now offered by the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT]? What feature in the Sheppard bill is inadequate or insufficient in its strength and force?

Mr. WORKS. I have just been looking over the Sheppard bill this morning. Some of the amendments that were objectionable to me, I see, have been eliminated or withdrawn, so that the bill is a good deal stronger than I supposed it was, and the difference between the two is not very great. I think the Senator from Utah can explain what differences there are; I can not do so.

Mr. SMOOT. The greatest difference, I will say to the Senator, is that the Sheppard bill, so called, allows the importation of intoxicating liquors into the District of Columbia for personal use and in unlimited quantities. My amendment prohibits the coming into the District of Columbia of all kinds of intoxicating liquors, with the exception of alcohol; and in the importation of alcohol into the District of Columbia it is specifically provided for what purposes the pure alcohol shall be imported. Another difference is that the SHEPPARD bill allows the manufacture of alcohol in the District, while my bill positively forbids its manufacture in the District of Columbia.

Mr. BORAH. May I submit this question also to the Senator from California?

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, will the Senator allow me further to say that the substitute of the Senator from Utah prohibits the manufacture and exportation of ethyl alcohol for industrial purposes, while my bill permits the manufacture and exportation of ethyl alcohol for such purposes?

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator's bill originally prohibited the exportation of alcohol from the District of Columbia, and the manufacture of it; but the Corby Bros. manufacture yeast in the District of Columbia and, as a by-product of the manufacture of yeast, they manufacture alcohol. Therefore, an amendment was offered to the Sheppard bill allowing the manufacture of such alcohol and its disposal outside of the District of Columbia.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Not only as to the Corby Co. but as to any other company.

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; and as to any other company. I am speaking of the reason why the amendment was put in.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I did not offer the amendment solely on account of the Corby Co., Mr. President.

Mr. SMOOT. There never would have been any question if the Corby Co. had not brought it to the notice of the Senate.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I think the question would have arisen anyhow, Mr. President.

Mr. SMOOT. I am not saying anything in criticism of the Corby people coming to the Senator from Texas or to other Senators and calling attention to the condition of their business as it has been established and developed in the District of Columbia under the law; but I was simply stating the difference between my substitute and the bill offered by the Senator from Texas.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I should like to ask a further question of the Senator from California. He is an earnest advocate of prohibition, as are some others here; but before we can have any kind of prohibition we must first get the law adopted, either by Congress or by vote of the people of the District of Columbia, if the bill should be referred to the people of the District. The fear that I entertain is that the measure which is submitted by the Senator from Utah is one that will encounter more difficulty in passing the Senate, and also, if the amendment of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] should be adopted, a great deal more difficulty in passing the vote of the people than the so-called Sheppard bill.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, that may be true, but, so far as my individual vote is concerned, I must vote my convictions, and I presume that is so with the Senator from Idaho. Then, if we are not able to get what I think we should have, we will take the next best.

Mr. BORAH. That is true; but I would feel it unfortunate if we should adopt the amendment of the Senator from Utah, and then that the bill, if so amended, should be defeated in the Senate, and I would feel it extremely unfortunate if we should not get such legislation as would at least eliminate the public saloon from the District. When we shall have accomplished the elimination of the saloon in the country, we will have gone very far toward accomplishing prohibition, and I am satisfied that this amendment will be calculated to deter some from voting for it who otherwise would be in favor of the Sheppard bill.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Under the bill advocated by me the manufacture of alcohol is permitted in the District of Columbia for industrial, mechanical, and medicinal purposes.

Mr. SMOOT. I took it for granted that the Senator from Idaho understood that, of course.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Utah, if he will permit me, a question, which arises out of a situation that has not been suggested and about which I am not quite clear. Suppose a person coming into the District of Columbia should have in his grip a bottle of whisky, and suppose his physician had prescribed that whisky for him, whether wisely or unwisely; that the man has been drinking it on the way here; that he comes into the District with it in his grip and goes to a hotel and has it there, under the amendment of the Senator from Utah he would be guilty of a crime, would he not?

Mr. SMOOT. He would, Mr. President, under the provisions of the amendment if he kept that liquor while in the District of Columbia.

Mr. KENYON. I am a pretty ardent prohibitionist, but I think that is going further than I am willing to go.

Mr. SMOOT. I will say to the Senator that if we open the door we do not know how far the matter may go. I take it for granted that prohibitionists want a prohibition law; and the measure I have presented will, if enacted, provide a prohibition law. I wish also to say to the Senator that Idaho is not the only State that has passed a law similar to this.

Mr. KENYON. What other State has done so?

Mr. SMOOT. I think the Arizona law is even as strict as the Idaho law.

Mr. KENYON. Under the Sheppard bill, the situation I have narrated here would not bring about circumstances where a crime would be involved.

Mr. SMOOT. Well, I do not know whether it would or not.

Mr. KENYON. I think the fundamental difference between the Senator's amendment and the Sheppard bill is that the Sheppard bill is aimed at the saloon, to abolish the saloon, while the Senator goes further and endeavors to do away with all possession of liquor and all drinking of liquor within the District. I wish it might be done, but I very much fear it will impede the success of this measure.

Mr. SMOOT. I want to say to the Senator frankly that I admitted in my statement yesterday that the Sheppard bill was a step in the right direction, but I did not believe that it went far enough. I think that if the Sheppard bill becomes a law in the District of Columbia, instead of the strict regulation we have to-day it will be the striking down of regulation and any man or any person in the District of Columbia can send at any time and have come into the District of Columbia at any season of the year or any day of the year any quantity of liquor for his personal use.

The Senator knows very well that if a man sends off and gets a case of champagne or a case of wine or a gallon of liquor and keeps it in his cellar it is going to be served in that home. If the proprietor of the home desires to serve it at a dinner, it will not only be used by the man himself, it will be used by those who come into his home. I have not any doubt about it; and not only that, but if it were enforced otherwise, then I want to say to the Senator that I would a thousand times prefer the provisions of my amendment than the condition which would arise under a bill of that kind.

Mr. KENYON. Would not the Senator prefer the Sheppard bill enacted into law to present conditions?

Mr. SMOOT. Oh, I stated that I would prefer it to present conditions.

Mr. KENYON. That is, it would be a long step forward in getting rid of the open saloon.

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; and I am going to vote for it.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I welcome a decision by the Senate as to which policy it deems desirable to be pursued—the policy expressed in the Smoot substitute or that involved in the bill which I have introduced.

I believe in prohibition as earnestly and as thoroughly as the Senator from Utah or any other Senator here, and I have given the subject no little study. It is my conviction that Senate bill 1082 represents the best that can be accomplished at the present time. It is similar to the laws in most of the so-called prohibition States to-day. Nearly all of these prohibition States permit the importation of liquors for personal use, either in limited quantities or without restriction. I believe the provisions of the Smoot substitute to be so drastic as to render the bill ineffective. Not only will it imperil the passage of the bill in the Senate, but certainly it will be fatal to the measure if it should be submitted to the inhabitants of the District.

As to the condition referred to by the Senator from Utah, arising out of the right of unlimited shipment, permit me to state that section 8 of my bill provides that the keeping or giving away of alcoholic or other prohibited liquors for the purpose of evading the provisions of the act shall be deemed an unlawful selling, subject to the penalty provided in section 1 of the act. In other words, the burden of proof is placed upon the individual who has the liquors in his possession to show that they have been obtained and are kept in conformity with the law.

Furthermore, Mr. President, the substitute of the Senator from Utah forbids the manufacture of alcohol for industrial purposes within the District of Columbia, or its exportation from the District for that purpose. It thereby prevents the people of this District from entering into a legitimate field of manufacture. I have here an enumeration of some of the purposes for which ethyl alcohol is used along medicinal lines.

It is a raw material in ether, which is an anesthetic in cases of surgery.

It is also a raw material in chloroform, an anesthetic in similar cases.

It is a raw material in what is known as ethyl carbonate, a hypnotic in cases of tetanus or lockjaw.

It is a raw material of ethyl chloride, a local anesthetic in cases of minor surgery.

It is a constituent element of chloral, which is used as a hypnotic in many diseases; also in formaldehyde, trianol, and sulfanol.

It is a raw material in aspirin, which is used as a sedative in cases of headache and rheumatism.

It is used as a solvent in camphor, which is a stimulant in many diseases—such contagious diseases as cholera.

It is used in the shape of collodion in cases of cardiac palpitation and other forms of heart disease. I ask permission at this point to add an appendix at the close of my remarks, showing the legitimate uses of ethyl alcohol.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SHEPPARD. In fact, Mr. President, the uses of ethyl alcohol are almost unlimited, not only for medicinal purposes but as a fuel and for industrial purposes. One plant, the Corby plant, has built up a great business in the development of industrial alcohol, a business extending throughout the United States; and the substitute of the Senator from Utah would confiscate that legitimate enterprise. The section permitting the exportation of alcoholic liquors for industrial and medicinal purposes was not introduced with any special relation to this company, but in order to permit any individual or any institution to engage in a business of this character.

I repeat, Mr. President, after having given the subject careful consideration, that I believe Senate bill 1082, as it now reads, represents the best that can be accomplished at the present time. It will destroy the saloon—one of the chief evils of society—and will otherwise restrict the traffic in alcoholic liquors in such manner as to carry us a long way upward and forward.

APPENDIX.

Products included in the United States Pharmacopœia, ninth revision, in which ethyl alcohol is used either as a raw material for their manufacture or as a solvent, extractant, or preservative.

Name of preparation.	Nature of action of drugs.	Conditions in which it is used.
ALCOHOL AS A RAW MATERIAL.
Ether	Anesthetic	Surgery.
Ethyl carbamate	Hypnotic	Tetanus.
Ethyl chloride	Local anesthetic	Minor surgery.
Bromoform	Anesthetic	Whooping cough.
Chloroform	do	Surgery.
Iodoform	Disinfectant	Syphilitic and tubercular abscesses; burns and wounds.
Paraldehyde	Hypnotic	Headache, sleeplessness.
Trional	do
Sulfonal	do
Chloral	do
Antipyrine	Sedative; depressant
Aspirin	Sedative	Headache; rheumatism.
Acetanilid	Depressant	Headache; colds, etc., infectious.
ALCOHOL AS A SOLVENT, ETC.
Camphor water	Stimulant	Cholera, diarrhea.
Collodion	Antiseptic vehicle for local applications.	Cardiac palpitation.
Aromatic elixir	Menstruum for the pharmacopœial preparations.	Small wounds and cuts, etc.
Extract of—
Aconite	Numerous actions in different diseases.	Heart disease; colds; numerous diseases.
Belladonna		Infections of various kinds eye treatments.
Cannabis	Sedative	Used in a large number of diseases.
Cimifuga	Depressant	Chorea; female diseases.
Colchicum		Gout.
Colocynth	Laxative
Ergot	Astringent; uterine stimulant.	Hemorrhage; labor.
Ox gall	Increases flow of bile
Gelsemium	Depressant	Muscular spasm; whooping and other coughs; headache.
Hydrastis	Hemostatic	Female diseases.
Hyoscyamine	Sedative, stimulant mydriatic.	Hysteria; coughs.
Nux vomica	Stimulant (strychnine)	Heart disease, and various other conditions.
Physostigmine	Various effects	Glaucoma; also used following ether anesthesia.
Rhubarb	Laxative
Stramonium	Antispasmodic	Asthma; whooping cough.
Sumbul	Stimulant and antispasmodic.	Female diseases.
Taraxicum	Mild tonic, laxative and diuretic.	Dyspepsia; constipation.
Viburnum		Female diseases; hemorrhage.
Granulated ferrous sulfate.	Astringent
Fluid extract of—
Belladonna	Antispasmodic	Asthma; collapse.
Buchu		Urinary diseases.
Cannabis	See Extract
Cascara, aromatic	Laxative
Cimifuga	See Extract
Colchicum	do
Digitalis	Cardiac stimulant	Heart disease.
Eriodictyon	Bitter tonic	Used to disguise the taste of quinine.
Eucalyptus	Stimulant	Malarial conditions.
Gelsemium	See Extract
Gentian	Bitter herb	Dyspepsia; loss of appetite.
Licorice	Laxative
Grindelia	Mild tonic	Asthma; whooping cough; Ivy poisoning.
Guarana		Neuralgia and headache.
Hyoscyamus	See Extract
Nux vomica	do
Pilocarpus	Produces sweating; stimulates the growth of hair.	Heart and kidney disease; falling hair.
Podophyllum	Laxative
Rhubarb	do
Sabal	Sedative, tonic, and diuretic.
Sarsaparilla	Flavoring agent	Blood purifier.
Squill		Bronchitis; dropsy.
Senega		Bronchitis.
Senna	Laxative
Staphisagria	Insecticide	Pediculosis.
Stillingia	Emetic	Skin and liver diseases.
Sumbul	See Extract
Hellebore (Veratrum)	Sedative	Eclampsia.
Viburnum	See Extract
Xanthozylum	Feeble stimulant
Glycerite of hydrastis	See Extract
Soap liniments		Bruises, sprains, etc.
Compound solution of cresol.	Disinfectant
Compound mixture of licorice.	Brown mixture	Colds; bronchitis.
Oleate of mercury		Syphilitic lesions.
Oleoresin of cubebs[1]		Respiratory diseases.

[1] Ether, a derivative of alcohol, is also used in the preparation of a number of oleoresins.

Products included in the United States Pharmacopœia, ninth revision, etc.—Continued.

Resin of—
Jalap	Cathartic
Podophyllum	do
Scammony	do
Soft soap	Laxative; antacid	Acid burns.
Spirits of—
Ether	Hypnotic	For use of ether internally.
Nitrous ether	Sedative	Colds, and numerous other diseases.
Ammonia, aromatic	Stimulant and antacid	Fainting; indigestion.
Bitter almond	Flavoring material
Anise	do
Orange	do
Camphor		Bruises, sprains, etc.
Chloroform		Colic.
Cinnamon	Flavoring material	Do.
Nitroglycerin	Heart stimulant	Angina pectoris; heart failure.
Juniper	Diuretic	Dropsy.
Lavender	Flavoring material
Peppermint	do	Dyspepsia.
Spearmint	do	Do.

SIRUPS.

The sirups constitute simply another form for the administration of a number of drugs, for the most part those occurring also in other preparations; alcohol is a constituent of a number of them, appearing as a solvent or stabilizer.

TINCTURES OF ALL KINDS.

[In most cases the most important preparation of a drug.]

Name of preparation.	Nature of action of drugs.	Conditions in which it is used.
Aconite	See Extract
Aloes	Laxative
Arnica		Bruises and sprains; the alcohol is probably the only really active constituent.
Asafœtida	Laxative	Intestinal disorders.
Bitter orange	Flavoring material
Sweet orange	do
Belladonna	See Extract
Benzoin		Skin eruptions.
Calumba	Tonic and appetizer
Cannabis	See Extract
Cantharides	Vesiculant	Blistering agent.
Capsicum	Gastric stimulant	Indigestion; alcoholism.
Cardamon	Flavoring material
Catechu	Astringent	Diarrhea.
Cinchona	Tonic
Cinnamon	Flavoring material
Colchicum	See Extract
Digitalis	See Fluid extract
Ferric chloride	Astringent and hemostatic
Gelsemium	See Extract
Gentian	See Fluid extract
Guaiac		Principally used as a test for blood stains.
Hydrastis	See Extract
Hyoscyamus	do
Iodine	Disinfectant and absorbent.	Erysipelas, bruises, cuts, swellings.
Kino		Diarrhea.
Lavender	Flavoring material
Lactucarium	do
Lemon	do
Lobelia		Asthma.
Musk	Flavoring material
Myrrh	Local application for ulcers
Nux vomica	See Extract
Opium	Sedative; hypnotic	Used in many conditions.
Physostigmine	See Extract
Pyrethrum	Stimulant	External applications.
Quassia	Bitter tonic
Rhubarb	See Extract
Bloodroot	do
Squill	See Fluid extract
Stramonium	See Extract
Strophanthus	Heart stimulant	Heart failure.
Tolu	Flavoring material
Valerian	Sedative	Heart disease; nervous trouble.
Veratrum	See Fluid extract of hellebore.
Ginger	Flavoring material	Rubifacient and mild stimulant.

ALCOHOL IN ITS INDUSTRIAL APPLICATIONS.

Ethyl alcohol has to-day an extremely wide use in a very considerable number of industrial fields, as evidenced by the list appended hereto selected from the book Industrial Alcohol, by J. G. McIntosh, published in London in 1907. In this book, pages 214–217, a list of about 500 different uses of alcohol in the arts, sciences, and manufactures is given and a special list of 21 different types of application in these uses. The uses are now even wider than this 10-year-old list and the volume used now is much greater than at that time.

Acetic acid and acetates, acetic ether, alkaloids, anatomical specimens, automobiles, bookbinding, brass polishing, brushes, candle making, cements, etching, explosives, fireworks, floor polishes, flavoring essences, furniture, gilding, glazes, gutta-percha, hat making, hospitals, inks, insectides, japanning, laboratory work, lacquers, lamps, lead pencils, maps, medicine, mordants, oil extraction, chemical analysis, chemicals (synthetic organic), disinfectants, drugs (extracted and synthetic), dyes (natural and aniline), electric-lamp filaments, embalming, enamels, paints and paint cleaners, perfumes, pharmacy, piano making, printing, ropes, rubber manufacture, soaps, shipbuilding, silks, stains, sugar, surgery, tanning, tinctures, tobacco, toys, vinegar, varnishes, waterproofing, weaving, wood working and finishing, etc.

To attempt a list of the purely scientific or laboratory preparations, which are made of necessity by the use of alcohol as a solvent, a raw material, or a precipitant, would be practically endless. The following is a list taken at random from Bluecher's Auskunftsbuch fuer die Chomische Industrie, volume 9:

Acetal, acetaldehyde, acetanilid (medicinal uses, acetonal, acetone sulfite, acetophenome (medicinal uses), lead acetate (sugar of lead) (medicinal uses) and all other acetates, acetyl chloride, acetic acid, aspirin (medicinal uses), adrenalin (synthetic) (medicinal uses), aldol, alkaloids (medicinal uses), arsacetin (antisyphilitic) (medicinal uses), atoxyl (used in sleeping sickness) (medicinal uses), cellulose acetate, camphor monobromate (medicinal uses), celluloid, chloralamid (medicinal uses), chloretone (medicinal uses), tetrachlorethane and other similar solvents, acetic anhydride, dyes, lacquers, fruit ethers (flavoring extracts, synthetic), fulminate of mercury (explosive caps for ordnance), glycholic acid (medicinal uses), solidified alcohol for burning, hexamethylentertramin (used in purification) (medicinal uses), indigo (synthetic), cacodyl compounds (medicinal uses), cantharidin (medicinal uses), casein (pure), rubber industry (especially in the form of derivatives), collodion, milk sugar (used in infant and invalid feeding) (medicinal uses), ethereal oils, pepsin (medicinal uses), photographic chemicals, plastic masses, smokeless powders, artificial silks, soaps, tobacco preparations, tannins.

These two lists will give an idea of the very broad range of applications in which the use of alcohol is obligatory or by far the most convenient and economical reagent to use.

The industrial uses of alcohol as a fuel and as a lighting agent are as yet only beginning their development, and it seems not improbable that the time is not so far off when mankind will depend mainly on alcohol or its derivatives for many of the purposes for which natural gas, petroleum derivatives, and even coal are now used. Of course, most, if not all, of these applications will involve the use of what is now referred to as denatured alcohol, but to obtain denatured alcohol it is first necessary to make undenatured alcohol.

ALCOHOL IN THE SCIENTIFIC LABORATORY.

Without alcohol the work of all scientific laboratories—chemical, bacteriologic, physical, engineering, medical, etc.—would cease. All scientific training in university and college courses would cease or be so seriously handicapped as to be nearly worthless. Alcohol is used as a solvent, as a precipitant, as a purifying agent, as a disinfectant, and as a raw material every day in thousands of laboratories in this country and all over the world. At present we know of no substance which can take its place, nor is it likely that any will be discovered, for the groups of organic compounds to which alcohol is related in its properties have been pretty thoroughly studied, and none is known which will replace this reagent. As a raw material for the preparation of new organic compounds, alcohol and its immediate derivatives can not be replaced by any other substance, for any other substance would not result in the same final product. As a solvent for organic materials, it is without an equal. As a precipitant in various reactions of the chemical laboratory, no other known substance will replace it. This is not said in praise of alcohol, but simply as a statement that it possesses certain specific properties which make it absolutely essential for scientific work, a combination of properties unknown in any other substance. A list of all the laboratory applications of alcohol would practically be a catalogue of all the processes used in the preparation of some quarter of a million organic preparations, not to speak of several hundred inorganic substances.

Its main uses in the laboratory, however, fall under the following heads:

(a) As a solvent: There are thousands of chemical substances which must, perforce, be studied in alcoholic solution. Even a partial list of the names of these would be meaningless to the nontechnical man.

(b) As a purifying agent: There are a vast number of chemical substances which must be purified in the course of laboratory work, and a majority of these are purified by treatment with alcohol or with some of its derivatives, such as ether, chloroform, acetic acid, etc.

(c) As a precipitant: In both analytic work and in the preparation of new compounds, as well as in the purification and study of known products, alcohol comes into constant use to remove from solution in other solvents the compounds being investigated.

(d) As a drying agent: Especially in physiologic chemistry, alcohol and its derivative, ether, are used for the removal of water from substances to be studied in their dry state, and which would be injured by heating to dry.

(e) As a disinfectant and antiseptic: Its use for this purpose is extensive and so obvious as to require no comment.

ALCOHOL IN MEDICINE.

In the Ninth Decennial Revision of the Pharmacopœia of the United States, which became the legal standard for the country on September 1, 1916, under the pure food and drug act, spiritus frumenti (i. e., whisky) has been omitted, which is probably all the evidence that is required that the leading therapeutic authorities of the country do not regard the medicinal properties of that substance as of sufficient value to warrant its continued inclusion in the Government standard. They have, however, retained alcohol in three concentrations—99 per cent, 92.3 per cent, and 42 per cent. These three dilutions of alcohol are used in the preparation of extracts and solution of a great number of the drugs described in this book. The reason for such use are as follows: First, alcohol is the one known substance which will dissolve a large number of physiologically active substances (drugs), retain them in solution, suppress the growth of molds and bacteria which would destroy the preparation, and not itself react with the material so as to destroy its activity. Second, it is the only substance known to us having the above effects and which is at the same time of such a low degree of toxicity that it may be safely included in a prescription in the amounts in which it is usually present in medicinal preparations. For instance, wood alcohol would have many of the solvent and preservative effects of the ordinary alcohol, but its high toxicity renders it objectionable and dangerous even for external use.

Alcohol is, moveover, used as the raw material for the preparation of a large number of the substances listed in the Pharmacopœia. Appended hereto is a list of the preparations listed in the United States Pharmacopœia which contain or are made from alcohol, together with their customary use. It has been observed that in the preparation of the extracts of many drugs the alcoholic extract would be active, while a water extract would be inactive, due undoubtedly in most cases either to the active principle being insoluble in water or being destroyed by water. It is undoubtedly true that many of the pharmacopœial products are practically unnecessary, yet it is frequently essential to have the drug available in both alcoholic and nonalcoholic preparations, for mixing with other drugs of like type where mixing an alcoholic with a nonalcoholic preparation would result in the decomposition of the mixture.

The use of alcohol as a constituent has been grossly abused by the manufacturers of patent medicines. There are large numbers of these preparations on the market whose sole claim to physiologic activity lies in the alcohol—from 10 to 60 per cent—which they contain, and any legislation having prohibition in view which does not include a suppression of this class of alcoholic beverages will almost certainly fall far short of its object.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator from Texas if, under his bill, alcohol can be manufactured in the District of Columbia and shipped outside of the District of Columbia?

Mr. SHEPPARD. It can be manufactured and shipped outside for industrial, mechanical, and other nonbeverage purposes.

Mr. REED. When it is shipped out on the order of A. B., who states that he wants to use it for mechanical purposes, is there any way to prevent its being used by A. B. outside of the District in any way he desires?

Mr. SHEPPARD. We have attempted to reach that situation in so far as it can be reached by the insertion of section 2a, which provides for a complete record of all shipments to be kept by the railroad companies, and for the filing of an affidavit by the purchaser with the manufacturer here showing the purposes for which he intends to employ the alcohol. There is, of course, no way of determining with absolute certainty what he actually does with the alcohol. That is a matter which we can not always control; but we have endeavored to throw as many safeguards around this phase of the proposition as seem to be possible. If the alcohol is going to dry territory, the laws of the dry territory will protect the situation. If it goes into territory where alcoholic liquors are permitted to be used for beverage purposes, that is another question. The manufacturers in the District must take out annual licenses, and must give the commissioners any assurances they require as to good faith in making sales.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, that raises a very interesting question. There is, of course, not much use in discussing any question with about 12 Members of the Senate present; nevertheless I shall speak to the select few who are giving attention to the bill. The section referred to, if I understand it aright, will not place any effective limitation upon the use of alcohol manufactured within the District, once it gets outside of the District.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I beg the Senator's pardon. It is section 5a instead of section 2a.

Mr. REED. Let me look at section 5a then.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I suggest that the Senator read the section.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, having read section 5a, I think I am prepared to assert that a man can manufacture a million gallons of alcohol in the District of Columbia and sell it to any part of the United States without any other limitation than that the purchaser shall certify that he did not purchase it for beverage purposes; that is, that he does not intend to drink that alcohol or sell it to some one who will drink it. Now, nobody drinks raw alcohol. Let us see how the bill will work.

Suppose the case of a man in Maryland who is engaged in making cordials and drinks of various kinds. He desires to use raw alcohol. He gets the alcohol and uses it as an ingredient in that which he manufactures. The alcohol is not procured for beverage purposes. It is procured as an element, as a raw material, to go into something which may become a beverage. It is perfectly plain, therefore, that this bill proposes to permit an institution or institutions in the District of Columbia to manufacture alcohol and to sell or send the alcohol into other States and communities where it can be used for the purpose of compounding with other substances and making intoxicating liquors. The excuse offered by the Senator from Texas is that the manufacturer of alcohol is established as a great industry in the District of Columbia. He further pleads that alcohol is a by-product of yeast.

Now, I do not imagine that all the alcohol that is made in the District of Columbia is a by-product of yeast. I think that would make a good deal of yeast. But why this tender care for an established alcohol factory within the District of Columbia? Why permit this poisonous, deleterious substance to be made and sent into other States? Why employ this little District, which is under the direct care of Congress, where we have supreme jurisdiction save as limited by the Constitution of the United States, as the habitat for those institutions that manufacture this fearfully destructive enemy of mankind, against which the Senator from Texas so eloquently inveighs?

Incidentally, it may be remarked that if it be logical to permit the manufacture of alcohol in the District of Columbia, because here it is an established business, the same plea can be extended to include all distillers of alcohol in all parts of the United States, for they likewise have establised places of business. So, too, it could be logically claimed that the man making whisky has an established business. The man making beer has an established business. The man running a saloon has an established business. When you once begin to admit that it is right to permit the continuance of the manufacture of intoxicating liquor because it is an established business, you have gone so far as to cut the ground out from under every restriction that you may seek to impose, because they all affect business that has been established.

I confess I do not understand that kind of logic which proposes to perpetuate the primal source of an evil, against which so many eloquent declamations have been pronounced, on the ground that it is established and is profitable, and then proposes to try and limit the evil at a point far removed from its source. Everybody knows that if there was no alcohol made there would be none to ship, there would be none to sell, there would be none to carry in grips, there would be none to poison the souls and bodies of men. If you want to establish prohibition in this country you should prohibit absolutely the manufacture of any intoxicating liquor at any place, established or not established as a business.

It looks to me like you are compromising with evil, sort of splitting the difference with villainy, compounding with a felony, attacking the weaker of these classes of men who are declared to be the enemies of mankind, but carefully conserving the rights, immunities, and profits of those who are well estabilshed and whose profits have been large. Surely if the District of Columbia is to be purged we ought not to pause at the matter of profits; and if, forsooth, Mr. Corby in making yeast finds it profitable also to make alcohol at the same time he makes his yeast, and if it is our duty as representatives of the people and as forerunners of the gospel of purity to declare that alcohol shall not be made within the District of Columbia to sell to the benighted inhabitants of this territory, then we ought not to permit the Capital to become the habitat and city of refuge for institutions that will sell their poisonous products to the unfortunates of other States and other cities.

VOLUNTEER OFFICERS' RETIRED LIST.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HUSTING in the chair). The Senator from Missouri will suspend for a moment. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 392) to create in the War Department and the Navy Department, respectively, a roll designated as the "Civil War Volunteer officers' retired list," to authorize placing thereon with retired pay certain surviving officers who served in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of the United States in the Civil War, and for other purposes.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I make the point of order that under the agreement of yesterday the unfinished business is Senate bill 1082. First, I make the point of no quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Gore	McCumber	Smith, Mich.
Bankhead	Gronna	McLean	Smith, S. C.
Beckham	Hollis	Martine, N. J.	Smoot
Borah	Hughes	Nelson	Sterling
Brady	Husting	Norris	Thomas
Brandegee	James	Overman	Thompson
Bryan	Johnson, Me.	Owen	Tillman
Chilton	Jones	Pittman	Underwood
Clapp	Kenyon	Poindexter.	Wadsworth
Clark	Kern	Reed	Walsh
Colt	Kirby	Saulsbury	Warren
Curtis	La Follette	Sheppard	Watson
Dillingham	Lane	Shields	Weeks
Fernald	Lee, Md.	Simmons	Works
Fletcher	Lewis	Smith, Ariz.
Gallinger	Lippitt	Smith, Ga.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I have been asked to state that the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. VARDAMAN] has been called from the Chamber by important official business.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Sixty-six Senators have answered to the roll call. There is a quorum present.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I wish to make the suggestion that on yesterday I asked unanimous consent that Senate bill 1082 be temporarily laid aside and that the calendar be proceeded with without prejudice to the position of Senate bill 1082 as the unfinished business. I understood that to be agreed to. I therefore make the point that at this time it is the unfinished business.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The point of order must be overruled with the plain statement made by the Chair on yesterday. This is the RECORD:

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, what would happen to the bill, then, at 2 o'clock to-morrow?

Mr. SMOOT. It would be the unfinished business.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If it were under consideration, and there should not be anything pending at the close of the business of to-day so as to make that the unfinished business, the pending bill would proceed along as the unfinished business. The Chair understood the suggestion to be to take up the calendar under Rule VIII. Of course, if the calendar is taken up under Rule VIII, nothing can be considered except unobjected bills, so there would not be any other business which would intervene and become the unfinished business. An agreement may be entered into to proceed with the calendar under Rule VIII and at the conclusion of the morning business to-morrow to take up Senate bill 1082. That certainly would avoid any steps being taken to make any other measure the unfinished business.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I have no disposition——

Mr. SMOOT. Just a moment. If the Senator from Texas should ask unanimous consent now to lay the bill temporarily aside, especially if he did so at 2 o'clock, then the bill would be the unfinished business to-morrow.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Provided it were taken up before the adjournment if any other measure were then pending.

There never has been any other ruling made by the present occupant of the Chair than the one there made. The present occupant was not here during the proceedings after the bill was temporarily laid aside at 2 o'clock on yesterday, but if there were business pending at the close of yesterday's session and the Senator from Texas did not ask to take up the bill which had been temporarily laid aside, in the mind of the Chair there is no doubt that that business becomes the unfinished business of to-day and it must be laid before the Senate at the hour of 2 o'clock by the Presiding Officer. That, of course, would not prevent the Senator from Texas from moving to take up in place of it any bill.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1082.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I hope this motion will not prevail. I understand clearly what the thought was on yesterday, but last evening while in executive session but as in legislative session the question was raised of laying the present District bill before the Senate and I objected to it and made the statement at that time that I wished the volunteer officers' bill to be taken up to-day, and that if it was I would try to get an agreement whereby it could be laid aside temporarily until the determination of the District bill. I stated then that I would consent to that being done. I have tried to make such an arrangement, but it now appears that I have not been able to succeed.

Mr. President, I hope that this bill can be kept before the Senate. I do not believe that it will take a great while to pass it; at least, to get a vote upon it. I believe that inasmuch as we have waited so long and worked so hard to get it up we ought to have consideration of it now.

Furthermore, there is no question at all but what the Senator from Texas at any time when this bill is out of the way can get recognition from the Chair and bring his measure before the Senate and it can receive consideration. That is not true in reference to the volunteer officers' bill. I have worked patiently to secure recognition and to get this measure before the Senate, but have failed. I have not been able to secure recognition for that purpose. If the Senate now sees fit to lay the bill aside after the discussion of yesterday, it may be a long time before I can get consideration of it again.

I submit, Mr. President and Senators, we are doing no injustice to the District bill. That is bound to be considered. There is no Senator on this floor who doubts that it will be up for consideration. I repeat that the same can not be said in reference to Senate bill 392.

Therefore I sincerely hope that we may proceed with the unfinished business this afternoon and see at least if we can not make substantial progress upon it.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I merely ask Senators to remember that on yesterday we had substantially a unanimous agreement that Senate bill 1082 should be proceeded with to-day.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Texas.

Mr. CLAPP. I should like to know exactly what is the motion of the Senator from Texas.

Mr. SHEPPARD. To proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1082.

Mr. CLAPP. I should like to ask the Senator if to temporarily lay aside the Volunteer officers' bill would not leave it the unfinished business?

Mr. TOWNSEND. We would then be in the same position relative to this bill that the District bill is in now in relation to the Volunteer officers' bill. If I ask to have it laid aside temporarily and then the District bill is considered up to the hour of adjournment it becomes the unfinished business for Monday. If the Chair will indulge me with a decision upon that subject, if it is in order to lay a bill aside temporarily until the conclusion of another bill that is before the Senate, I would gladly ask that that be done.

Mr. CLAPP. Why could it not be temporarily laid aside for a given length of time? I will state to the Senator I appreciate the full force of his statement relative to the difficulty of getting these two bills before the Senate. I think it is much easier to get the District bill before the Senate than the other bill. At the same time we are confronted with the fact that there is determined opposition against the bill, and we have no evidence of any such resistance to the other measure, which makes the situation somewhat different. Why can it not be temporarily laid aside for a given time?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. If I may make a suggestion to the Senator from Minnesota, the ruling of the Chair, as I understand it, is that even if unanimous consent is given that a bill be temporarily laid aside and the Senate proceeds to the consideration of something else and the something else is still before the Senate at adjournment this afternoon, it displaces the unfinished business. That is the very condition we are in now under the ruling of the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That has been the uniform ruling of the present occupant of the chair.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I simply stated that for the information of the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. CLAPP. The Senator from Minnesota understood that perfectly, but the inquiry in the mind of the Senator from Minnesota was whether that could be obviated not by laying the bill aside temporarily for an indefinite time but laying it aside for a given period of time. I do not know that that could be done. I merely made the inquiry.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I have investigated the subject and find there is no way by which I can be sure that this bill will follow the District bill.

I wish to say, in reply to a statement made by the Senator from Texas, that there has been no lack of good faith on my part in insisting upon this bill remaining before the Senate. I understood yesterday what the Chair said. I also stated here in my seat when the Senator from Utah was discussing the matter that I would not consent to the District bill being temporarily laid aside without any regard to the possibility of supplanting it by another bill. So I am acting in good faith. I should like to do just as I wanted to do last night—lay it aside by unanimous agreement to have it taken up immediately at the conclusion of the District bill—but that can not be done.

Mr. SHEPPARD. If the Senator will permit me, I do not question his sincerity in the matter at all. I endeavored to take care of my rights as to the unanimous consent before the adjournment, as the Senator will remember, by resuming consideration of Senate bill 1082, and the Senator objected, thinking that he could make an arrangement which he finds that he can not now make.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I am very glad the Senator does not misunderstand me. I hope, therefore, Mr. President and Senators, that we may spend this afternoon on the Volunteer officers' bill. It is the unfinished business and should remain so until it at least has had a reasonable opportunity for passage.

Furthermore, I wish to say that the Senator from Minnesota has suggested that there has been an express, determined opposition. I believe yesterday it was denied on the floor that there was to be any other means employed than legitimate means to defeat this measure.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, I wish to say to the Senator that as far as I am concerned I propose to indulge in no filibuster against the bill. I merely desire to have time to prepare a speech against it, and then if the Senate wants to pass it I am not responsible for it, if I have done my part.

Mr. TOWNSEND. That is what I understood.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. That is my feeling about it.

Mr. TOWNSEND. That is my understanding. Furthermore, it is a notorious fact in my judgment that this bill which I am advocating is clearly the choice of a large majority of the Senate. That being true, I think we ought to have an opportunity and the advantage of position which we have now should not be lost.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, I think there was an unmistakable understanding with the Senator from Texas yesterday that if he permitted Senate bill 1082 to go over to suit the convenience of Senators, it would be taken up again to-day. I do not criticize any Senator who does not understand the situation in that way, but, as far as I am concerned, I understand it in that way clearly. I do not propose to vote for the bill now being championed by the Senator from Texas, but I shall not vote to deprive him of his rights when he agreed to lay the bill aside, thus penalizing him, by taking up another bill. I propose to vote for the motion of the Senator from Texas.

Mr. CLAPP. The Senator from Georgia suggests that he is not prepared to go on to-day and he wants to devote an hour perhaps to the discussion of the retirement bill. I should like to ask the Senator if he is prepared to make that discussion this afternoon?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. In a rambling way. I would take a great deal more time this afternoon than if the bill went over and I could arrange what I have to present to the Senate. I do not think the Senator from Michigan will have any trouble in getting the bill up. We can not call the calendar under Rule VIII without finding this bill at the head of the calendar, and a motion would then be in order to take it up. We could not get to bills below it without that course. I think the Senator will have a chance to get it up. I am sorry it is on the calendar where it will get up; I am very much opposed to spending this money, but I do not intend to resort to any dilatory measures to prevent a vote on it. I do not think we will get through this evening. I think we will find a number of rambling talks on it.

I furthermore feel that the District bill is entitled to consideration to-day. It was laid aside yesterday by unanimous consent as the continuing unfinished business. Prior to the occupancy of the chair by the present Presiding Officer it was ruled when I was here that while the unfinished business was laid aside by unanimous consent temporarily, it continued to be the unfinished business and was at all times the unfinished business. I thought that would be the consequence. I am disposed to believe that this is the situation with reference to the rule. It is the unfinished business still during that day and at any moment before adjournment the Senator in charge of the bill could call for the regular order and the temporarily laid aside unfinished business would at once be laid before the Senate. So it may be that we can protect our rights to lay aside the unfinished business temporarily by unanimous consent and preserve it for the future even under the ruling the Chair has made to-day. I find in the discussion of this subject in the past the position taken by the old parliamentarians that a measure which is the unfinished business and temporarily laid aside by unanimous consent is at all times the unfinished business and the regular order when called for.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I am in favor of both these bills and I want to see them both treated fairly. In my judgment, the ruling of the Vice President is absolutely sound. The method heretofore has been that if a bill was temporarily laid aside it could be called up during that day and it would resume its place before the Senate. Failing in that the Senator having in charge the unfinished business could move to take it up before adjournment, and that would again restore it as unfinished business. But if it has been temporarily laid aside and another bill taken up, and the discussion of that bill continues until the close of the day, beyond a question that becomes the unfinished business.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Will the Senator allow me a suggestion?

Mr. GALLINGER. Certainly.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. The Senator from Texas yesterday called attention to the District bill as having been temporarily laid aside as the unfinished business, and asked unanimous consent to take it up. Perhaps it was simply his right to take it up without asking for unanimous consent. Objection was made to the unanimous consent.

Mr. GALLINGER. It is evident it was not taken up, and the Senator from Texas lost his privileges, whatever they may have been. It seems to me we ought not to waste any time. The Vice President has ruled, and the bill has not been taken up. Let us take the vote on the motion made by the Senator from Texas.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, it may be a waste of time, but I am going to offer a suggestion. I have no question as to the ruling of the Vice President, but I want to read to the Senate just what occurred yesterday, which gave me the impression that it was generally understood that this bill would be the unfinished business to-day, no matter what happened on yesterday. The bill had been laid aside, and at the hour of 2 o'clock—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 1082) to prevent the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Will the Senator from Texas allow this bill to be temporarily laid aside that we may finish the bill which has been under consideration?

Mr. SHEPPARD. I ask that the bill be temporarily laid aside.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Can the Senator from Texas tell us with any certainty when we can reach a vote on this bill?

Mr. SHEPPARD. There has been no agreement as to a time for a vote to be taken.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Is it to come up to-morrow?

Mr. SHEPPARD. The bill will come up to-morrow. I hope we may vote upon it at some time to-morrow, but I am not sure that we will be able to do so. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be temporarily laid aside.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. By temporarily laying the bill aside it will remain the unfinished business upon the calendar to-morrow. In addition to that, I think we have had practically an agreement that immediately at the closing of the morning business to-morrow, before this bill is reached as the unfinished business, we will take it up for consideration. So that means that to-morrow is to be devoted to the consideration of the prohibition bill for the District of Columbia, unless something is done by the Senate to displace it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Texas? The Chair hears none.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I was going to ask further that the calendar be proceeded with without prejudicing the bill.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. That will be done.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That has already been ordered this morning. The calendar will be proceeded with.

Mr. JONES. I submit, without a technical consideration of the various statements made, that would give to every Senator the impression that it was the understanding of the Senate that this bill, no matter what might happen in connection with the calendar, would be the unfinished business to-day. I am in favor of both these measures, but I had that impression. Under the circumstances I will vote for the motion of the Senator from Texas.

Mr. TOWNSEND. The Chair has read what he stated to the Senate in reference to it. And what he said was said after what the Senator from Washington has read. No; there can be no question as to good faith in this matter. I was in my seat waiting for the conclusion of the discussion, because I had in mind calling up this bill and making a motion, when the Chair clearly stated what the status would be at the conclusion; and I made no further objection, but allowed that to go through. So there was no misunderstanding and no attempt, as I have said, to take advantage of the other bill. I am for the District bill, too. I know that it will have an opportunity to be passed upon, and I do not want this bill put off, as it was in the last Congress, until the last day, when there could be no opportunity to secure its consideration by the other House.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President, of course, I recall the colloquy yesterday, but, unfortunately, colloquies do not establish the parliamentary status of a bill. Clearly, the Chair has ruled in accordance with the practices of the Senate, and we are now to choose which of these bills we shall consider.

I favor very strongly the bill of my colleague [Mr. TOWNSEND], which he has labored so industriously to have passed, and which has unusual merit. I shall vote for the bill of the Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD], as I believe that also to be important. If there is any organized attempt to delay the action of the Senate, I should greatly regret it; but as we must choose, I shall elect to vote with my colleague to maintain his rights, with the full expectation that we shall get an early day, and perhaps an early hour, in which to further consider, and I trust to pass, the bill of the Senator from Texas.

PROHIBITION IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD] to proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1082.

Mr. KENYON. On that I ask for the yeas and nays, Mr. President.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BECKHAM (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. DU PONT], who is absent. So I shall withhold my vote. If permitted to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. BRADY (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. VARDAMAN]. He is absent from the Chamber, and I therefore withhold my vote. If I were permitted to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. CURTIS (when Mr. CLARK's name was called). I am requested to announce that the Senator from Wyoming [Mr.

CLARK] is paired with the senior Senator from Missouri [Mr. STONE].

Mr. CURTIS (when his name was called). I have a general pair, with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. HARDWICK], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. DILLINGHAM (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Maryland [Mr. SMITH], who is absent. I therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. GALLINGER (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from New York [Mr. O'GORMAN], who is not present. For that reason I withhold my vote.

Mr. McLEAN (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Montana [Mr. MYERS], who is absent. So I withhold my vote.

Mr. STERLING (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH]. In his absence I withhold my vote.

Mr. TILLMAN (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. GOFF] to the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON], and vote "yea."

Mr. UNDERWOOD (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the junior Senator from Ohio [Mr. HARDING] to the junior Senator from California [Mr. PHELAN], and vote "yea."

Mr. SAULSBURY (when Mr. VARDAMAN'S name was called). The junior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. VARDAMAN] is absent on official business.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. BECKHAM. I transfer my pair with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. DU PONT] to the Senator from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON], and vote "yea."

Mr. CURTIS. I have been requested to announce the following pairs:

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE] with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS]; and

The Senator from Illinois [Mr. SHERMAN] with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. RANSDELL].

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. I transfer my general pair with the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. OLIVER] to the Senator from Colorado [Mr. SHAFROTH] and vote "nay."

Mr. CHILTON. I transfer my pair with the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. FALL] to the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. BROUSSARD] and vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 34, nays 33, as follows:

YEAS—34.

So the motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 1082) to prevent the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I was observing when the parliamentary dispute arose that under the pending bill alcohol can be manufactured in the District of Columbia and sold in any part of the United States without limitation as to quantity; that the only limitation is that it shall not be sold for beverage purposes; and I was calling attention to the fact that it can be sold for a raw material, and immediately manufactured into whisky or any other beverage in which alcohol is used. So this bill coolly proposes to allow the manufacture of alcohol in the District of Columbia and the shipping of it to any other point, where it may be manufactured into or used in compounding any kind of intoxicating liquor. Whisky itself is the product of alcohol.

The argument that is made is that the manufacture of alcohol is an established business in the District of Columbia. If it be an established business in the District of Columbia, so, likewise, is the saloon an established business; so is every other instrumentality for the dissemination of intoxicating liquors an established business. If that argument is to prevail and is carried to its logical conclusion, then every brewery, every distillery in the United States might be protected for the same reason.

The Senator from Texas says there has been a restriction thrown around it so far as possible, because it is provided that the purchaser shall certify that he does not intend to use the alcohol for "beverage purposes." Under the amendment the Peoria Distillery could buy a million gallons of raw alcohol in the District of Columbia——

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me?

Mr. REED. And certify that they did not intend to use it for beverage purposes. Then, treating it as a raw material, they could put it through the process of refinement and change in their distillery and sell the whisky anywhere in the world.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LEWIS in the chair). Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Texas, who, the Chair understood, desired to submit an inquiry?

Mr. SHEPPARD. I meant merely to suggest that the liquors would be subject to the laws of the jurisdiction where they are manufactured.

Mr. REED. Exactly. They will be subject to the laws of the State where they are sold, but they can be sold at any place where the local laws do not prohibit such sale.

What is the purpose back of this bill? Is it a great moral purpose? Is this a great moral question? If so, ought there to exist under the protection of the Government itself the fountain source of the evil, and from that fountain source should the poison be disseminated, to adopt the argument of the sponsors of the bill, "to destroy the souls and bodies" of people in other States?

Mr. SHEPPARD. May I ask the Senator a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. REED. I do.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Would the Senator consider the manufacture of alcohol for industrial and medicinal purposes a source of evil?

Mr. REED. Oh, the Senator does not limit its manufacture to industrial and medicinal purposes.

Mr. SHEPPARD. The bill so limits it.

Mr. REED. The manufacturer of alcohol in this District can under this bill ship unlimited quantities to any place in the world. The solitary limitation is that he shall certify that it is not intended to be used "for beverage purposes." The distiller of whisky can buy that alcohol as a raw material—he does not intend to use the alcohol for beverage purposes—and he can put it through the refining processes of his distillery, turn it into whisky or cordials or other intoxicants, and sell them without limit. Now, how much good faith is there in the cry that there is a desire to protect the morals and health of the people, when you propose, under the protection of the Federal Government and within sight of the Capitol, to perpetuate an institution which makes alcohol and allow that institution to sell its product all over the United States? You excuse that by the pitiable reason that the gentleman has an establishment and that there is money in the business. In a word you say that because he has been destroying the souls and bodies of men—to use your language—he has thereby acquired a vested right to continue to do evil. Whenever you admit that argument, sir, you admit a doctrine that will forever shield every distillery, every brewery, every saloon, every barroom in the United States, for they are all established businesses, and nearly all of them are profitable.

Let us have this question clearly understood. It is not intended by the bill to reach the powerful and the rich. It is intended to except from the operation of this law those who have made great sums of money by manufacturing alcohol. It is intended to allow others to come, if they see fit, and manufacture alcohol in the District. The big distiller is to be protected, the fountain source of the supply is to be preserved; but we are to deal with the details; we are to reach the smaller of the evils.

Now, I desire in just a moment's time—and I shall occupy only a moment—to challenge the attention of the few Senators who are paying any attention to this bill to the difference between the treatment the distiller receives and the ministers of the Gospel receive under this bill. A distiller, mark you, can manufacture an unlimited quantity of alcohol and sell it as a raw material anywhere in the United States without any limitation, so long as it is not sold directly for the purpose of drinking—and nobody drinks alcohol in its raw state. All the distiller has to do is to sign his name to a little printed blank, in which he says that he is not selling alcohol for beverage purposes, and all the purchaser has to do is to say that he is not buying it for beverage purposes. Thereupon the stills operate night and day. The alcohol flows forth in a constant stream; it comes on uncontrolled and in unlimited quantities. It is disseminated generally throughout the country. Such is the generous treatment we accord the distiller. But when we come to a minister of the gospel, behold the difference!

Here is a minister, regularly ordained, who has consecrated himself to the service of the church and of his God. He has continued as the head of a church in the city of Washington until the black hairs of youth have turned to gray; he has gone about upon his errands of mercy and missions of religion and love at all hours of the day and all hours of the night, and now he desires a little wine that he may bless as the blood, or symbol of the blood, of the Master and administer with sacred rites to the members of his church—and what has he to do? He must appear, this holy man, before whatever particular individual happens to be a Commissioner of the District of Columbia; he has to apply humbly to the commissioner for permission to get a little sacramental wine; he must state the exact amount he desires, for what period he desires it, and for what purpose he will use it; and then, if he has succeeded in convincing the wise commissioner, who may be any kind of a politician who came down here and got a job, that he, this holy man, is really in good faith, that he is not trying to get some wine to drink or to sell, that he is not trying to "put one over" on the Government and the commissioner, then and only then he can get permission to have shipped to him his quart of wine, provided further he satisfies the commissioner that "it is reasonably necessary." Now, if we had a commissioner like Bob Ingersoll, who did not believe in any religion and who believed that the holy sacrament was an evidence of ignorance and barbarism, he might not think it reasonably necessary to have any wine at all.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. REED. I do.

Mr. SMOOT. So that there may be no mistake or misunderstanding, the Senator is not speaking of my amendment, as I understand, but he is speaking of the Sheppard bill?

Mr. REED. I am not speaking of the Senator's amendment. I have forgotten whether he allows anything for sacramental purposes or not in his substitute bill.

Mr. SMOOT. I told the Senator when my substitute was up for discussion that under it there was wine allowed for sacramental purposes; but the ministers of the gospel do not have to go through the ordeal which the Sheppard bill imposes. As my amendment is before the Senate, I did not want to have any misunderstanding that the remarks of the Senator applied to my amendment as to the manufacture of alcohol in the District or as to the requirements for obtaining wine for sacramental purposes.

Mr. REED. I understand that the Senator from Utah very clearly has cut out this by-product of yeast, to wit, alcohol. By the way, I have a pretty strong suspicion that the yeast is the by-product of the alcohol, instead of the alcohol being the by-product of the yeast. I doubt not that such a consideration will not make the slightest difference to the author of this bill, because, mark you, he insists that the distillation of alcohol is an established business; and, to use his own language, "Corby's is a legitimate business." But for the minister of the gospel, who has gone down to get wine for sacramental purposes, who has appeared before the wise commissioner, who may or may not decide or think that the sacramental wine is reasonably necessary, or who may think that the amount is a little too great or a little too small, trouble is not yet over. He has to be subjected to receiving that wine in a vessel that is labeled; and, mark you, there must not be over five gallons of it. No matter what the size of the congregation, no matter how often the sacrament is administered, there must not be over 5 gallons of it, because, forsooth, the author of this bill has not sufficient confidence in any minister of the gospel to believe that the minister would not misuse the wine if he obtained a little more than would supply the immediate demands for a sacrament about to be administered. The confidence manifested in the ministers of the church by the author of this bill is truly astounding. The minister must go before a commissioner, because, although he is a minister, he may misuse the wine. The minister or priest must satisfy the commissioner. But the author of the bill can not repose complete confidence even in a commissioner. He fears that the commissioner may abuse his discretion. Accordingly he proposes to put some legal hobbles on the commissioner by providing that he shall not permit the minister to get more than five gallons, and this, although the minister may have a church of 5,000 communicants and may hold communion service every week. I do not know whether or not they ever administer communion at a Billy Sunday revival; but if they ever do, and Billy got one of his real revival fervors started, there may not be enough in 5 gallons to go around among the numerous new converts.

But, I remark, the trouble for the minister is not yet over. He must have this material delivered to him in a container that must be plainly labeled, so that all "the world, the flesh, and the devil" can tell that the preacher is having wine shipped to him.

A permit must be "attached to the outside of the package by the shipper and remain so attached until delivered to the consignee when it shall be canceled by the carrier," and "said permit shall be void after 20 days, and shall not be used for more than one shipment."

Now, contrast again the difference between the way you use the minister and the way you treat the distiller who makes alcohol as a by-product of yeast, but whose alcohol will show profits, I think, much larger than his yeast account. All he does is to show a paper signed by some man in some other State saying: "I want a thousand gallons or a million gallons or any other number of gallons of alcohol which I do not intend to drink or sell to somebody else to drink"; but he can use it, as I have said, to make whisky out of. He can use it for any purpose except the one single purpose of drinking it raw.

It seems to me there ought to be a little more confidence in the ministers of the gospel than is manifested in this bill, and a little less confidence in the fellow that makes yeast as a by-product of alcohol or alcohol as a by-product of yeast.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, will the Senator allow me to interrupt him?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. REED. Yes.

Mr. SHEPPARD. The manufacturer of alcohol for industrial and other nonbeverage purposes must obtain a permit or license annually from the Commissioners of the District, and must satisfy the commissioners of his good faith.

Mr. REED. Does the Senator mean that he must put "for industrial purposes" in his application?

Mr. SHEPPARD. And he must satisfy the commissioners that he is going to manufacture it for those purposes, and does so manufacture it. If any large quantities should be sold for beverage purposes, the commissioners would soon ascertain such fact.

Mr. REED. He is only required to satisfy the commissioners that he is making it in accordance with the terms of this bill, and the bill contains the restrictions I have named and none other. Why, take the case of Mr. Corby. I use his name because it has been used here publicly. I do not know the gentleman. I thought Corby made "Corby's Mother's Bread"; but it seems he makes something stronger than bread. [Laughter.] I have often wondered how a man made so much money and had such a fine residence out of the profits on bread; but the veil is lifted. I begin to understand. But coming to the question of the Senator, the Senator will not deny that Mr. Corby or anybody else can establish a distillery for the purpose of manufacturing alcohol without yeast as a by-product or anything else as a by-product, and that he can thereupon sell that alcohol as a raw material in unlimited quantities at any place in the United States, unless the local laws of the place to which he ships it prohibit its sale there, otherwise he can ship it all over the world.

I submit to the careful and prayerful consideration of the author of this bill that he might spend a little time further restricting the distillery and seeing if he can not lift a few of the limitations and restrictions from the minister of the gospel who wants a little wine to administer at the Holy Sacrament of his church.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I suggest to the Senator that if the ministers of the District could vote on this bill, they would be unanimously in favor of it. If they are satisfied, the Senator ought not to have any objection.

Mr. REED. I am willing that the ministers shall vote in favor of it, and everybody else shall vote in favor of it, if they want it. The Senator seems to have polled the ministers, and I have no doubt he has also polled the distillers, for he seems to speak "as one having authority and not as the scribes." I suggest that he just agree to the Underwood amendment, and let everybody vote on it; and if the people want it, let them have it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the pending amendment of the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT].

Mr. CURTIS. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas tenders an amendment. Will the Senator from Kansas enable the Chair to state the matter with some accuracy by informing him whether it is an amendment to the pending amendment of the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT]?

Mr. CURTIS. It is an amendment to the amendment of the Senator from Utah.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas tenders an amendment which is to be an amendment to the measure tendered by the Senator from Utah. The amendment to the amendment will be stated by the Secretary.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add a new section to the bill after section 20, which comes on page 11, to be known as section 20a, and to read:

SEC. 20a. All houses, boathouses, buildings, club rooms, and places of every description, including drug stores, where alcoholic liquors are manufactured, sold, vended, or furnished contrary to law (including those in which clubs, orders, or associations sell, barter, distribute, or dispense intoxicating liquors to their members, by any means or device whatever, as provided in this act), shall be held, taken, and deemed common and public nuisances. And any person who shall maintain, or shall aid or abet, or knowingly be associated with others in maintaining such common and public nuisance, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be subject to the penalties prescribed in section — of this act, and judgment shall be given that such house, building, or other place, or any room therein, be abated or closed up as a place for the sale or keeping of such liquor contrary to law, as the court may determine.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, the latter part of that section should read "subject to the penalties prescribed in this act," and not refer to a section, because there is a general penalty provision.

The SECRETARY. As modified, the amendment will read, "subject to the penalties prescribed in this act."

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, as far as I may, I am perfectly willing to accept the amendment of the Senator from Kansas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah is so privileged under the rules.

Mr. SMOOT. If there are no other amendments to the substitute, Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum before the vote is taken.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum being suggested, the Secretary will please call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Gore	McLean	Smoot
Bankhead	Gronna	Martin, Va.	Sterling
Beckham	Hollis	Martine, N. J.	Sutherland
Brandegee	Hughes	Nelson	Thomas
Bryan	Husting	Norris	Thompson
Catron	James	Overman	Townsend
Chamberlain	Johnson, Me.	Owen	Underwood
Clapp	Johnson, S. Dak.	Page	Wadsworth
Cummins	Kenyon	Pittman	Walsh
Curtis	Lane	Poindexter	Watson
Dillingham	Lee, Md.	Pomerene	Weeks
Fernald	Lewis	Sheppard	Works
Fletcher	Lippitt	Shields
Gallinger	McCumber	Smith, Mich.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-four Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present. The question now recurs upon the amendment of the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] as modified.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Mr. President, I desire to state for myself that I am unalterably opposed to both the proposition contained in the bill of the Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD] and the more drastic amendment of the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT].

Mr. President, I am willing to believe—yes; I know—that the committee reporting this amendment are prompted by honest and conscientious motives, but at the same time I feel and I know that our asylums are filled with men who are prompted by honest and conscientious convictions. [Laughter.] I feel that this committee in their zeal are possessed of hallucinations and dreams that make them well-nigh mad.

It seems to me impossible that our friends proposing this legislation can have any hope that such a measure will ever be enforced. The Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. VARDAMAN], and one or two others have called out in loud tones that it is an effort to abolish the saloon, and that nobody is a friend of the saloon. I say for myself that the saloon is the outgrowth of conditions in this country. All humanity are not amidst the same surroundings. The Senator from Texas and others are blessed with wealth and comfortable surroundings, warm homes, and each morning have a good, appetizing breakfast, and one that is nourishing as well.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LEWIS in the chair). Does the Senator from New Jersey yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Certainly.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I deny the accusation as to wealth. I wish I could plead guilty to it.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Well, if the Senator is not wealthy in absolute coin, he is wealthy in the luxury of a comfortable home, with comfortable surroundings. [Laughter in the galleries.]

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the Senator will pardon the Chair, the Chair is compelled to say to the occupants of the galleries that any exhibition of feeling on the part of the galleries, in the way of approval or otherwise, is forbidden by the rules, however attractive the speech may be.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Take the other side of the question—the workman who digs 10 or 20 feet in the earth to build the sewer that carries off the filth and waste of our homes. He is illy fed, illy clad, with but a crust of bread and an onion for his breakfast. Is it not natural, I ask, that he should seek the saloon or some other place where he might get the stimulating draft and, mayhap, the warm bite?

Before you abolish the saloon, Mr. President, substitute for humanity something better. The Senator and other gentlemen will not be found on the street corner proffering a warm cup of coffee, nor a sandwich, nor even a thin coin to the workman—oh, no!

Mr. President, in the words of that angel of temperance whose statue graces yonder hall, Miss Frances E. Willard—

First let us make it easier for mankind to get bread and butter, and then our theory of temperance will fall, mayhap, in more fertile ground.

True enough, one half the world does not know how the other half lives, nor does it care.

Our friends cry in loud terms, "Humanity! humanity! We are legislating for humanity." But the humanity of the District has not asked you for this. I have heard no cry from humanity or the people of the District for your drastic, un-American proposition. I assert that Washington is an orderly and sober city, equal to any in the country. There are practically no drunkards here. I have seen none. I have not seen the evidence of a drunken man in the District of Columbia for a year. Mr. President, this cry of "humanity" oftimes may be readily interpreted to be political ambition and the innate desire of mankind to dictate to their fellows.

No more drastic and unjust measure was ever proposed in any legislative body. All experience has proven that such a measure has been a signal failure wherever tried. Alcoholic liquors have been used by the human race since the days of Adam, and I believe they will be to the end of time. You can not make men over in a day nor change the tastes and appetites of a people by law. Your measure will tend to make liars and hypocrites of men, and accomplish nothing of good toward sobriety.

We all desire order and sobriety. No man will go further than will I to that end. But prohibition is a failure. This I emphatically believe.

A writer of much experience and knowledge, Arthur Brisbane, has recently published a statement that there is more drunkenness in Maine under prohibition, with a population of 1,300,000 than in Italy, with a population of over 13,000,000. Our own experience proves that prohibition promotes bootlegging, moonshining, and other methods to satisfy man's craving for a stimulant.

Mr. President, I note that this bill—I jotted these thoughts down yesterday, before the Senator had withdrawn the legation feature; I will read it, however—I note that the bill proposes to exempt from its exactions the foreign legations. This shocks me, for I ask, Are not these men your brothers, and do they not need the guardianship and care of the proposed law as much as anyone else? These have no more rights, and should have no more privileges, than the rest of mortals. I stop here, in passing, to say that should this provision prevail the legations will be the most popular irrigating points in the District of Columbia. [Laughter.]

This is a great Nation, Mr. President—the greatest on God's footstool. Our progress has been phenomenal. We are the admiration of the world. For the cause of humanity and for charity we startle the globe with our contributions. This great result and progress of our Nation is the result of liberal and broad-minded policies for years in existence in our land. Let us not now, I say, take this backward step.

Mr. President, this city is the Capital of our great Nation of over 100,000,000 of people. It is admitted by all to be a most beautiful city. It is the home of men and women from every land and of every taste and habit. This aggregation of people has made this an orderly, sober, law-abiding community, of about 350,000. I feel that there is no warrant or demand for this proposed drastic measure.

Mr. President, I assert without the fear of denial that, compared with any other city of comparative size, Washington is a well-ordered, well-governed, sober, and orderly community. As a citizen, I am proud of it. In my daily walks I see no vice, I see no drunkenness, in the city. This city is a credit to our Nation. The passage of this measure can only make us ridiculous in the eyes of the world.

Senators, I appeal to you, do not take this unreasonable and un-American step. I can not understand how Senators who have been reared in this land of freedom and blessed with personal liberty can vote to impose this drastic and un-American measure upon their fellow citizens. Can it be that men believe that in this bill they have found the stepping-stone and the latchstring to popular favor? Mr. President, I warn you to the contrary. It will defeat the Democratic Party or any other party that stands for it, and it should.

Senators, I warn you that if this measure becomes a law we must be consistent. You must be abstainers utterly and literally. No sherry hereafter in your lobster salad a la Newburgh or chicken a la King; no brandy or rum in your mince pie; no brandy sauce for your Christmas plum pudding; no sherry to sip at your dinner. Mr. President and Senators, will you promise here in this presence that this shall be your habit in the future?

The report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for 1915 says that the business of the moonshiner in whisky in the Southern States, where prohibition is the rule and the law, appears to be increasing. The report says that 3,832 illicit distilleries were destroyed in 1915, and in 1914, 2,677. Again, he says that there does not seem to be any abatement respecting bootlegging, whether there be prohibition or otherwise. Your prohibition does not prohibit.

I have here an article I cut from one of the New York papers. It is headed:

Prohibition in practice—Arizona a warning to all advocates of temperance.

I will not read it.

Then I have another article here entitled: "The kitchen still."

I have another article here on "The Sheppard bill." It says very few complimentary things about it. I will ask to have these printed without reading. [See appendix.]

This committee, in their mad zeal, have made the use of wine for communion purposes almost impossible. We read that a clergyman or reverend father may procure the same to the extent of 5 gallons by appearing before the commissioners and making his statement and declaration that he wants this simply for the requirements of the sacrament. Now, Mr. President. I can scarcely imagine any self-respecting clergyman or reverend father willing to belittle himself or the creed he represents by subjecting it to such an indignity. What, Mr. President, must the clergyman or father under whom we and our children sit to hear the interpretation of God's word declare before high heaven that he desires wine alone for the holy sacrament in celebration of the Lord's Supper? This he must do before these guardians of right and sobriety will permit a drop to be dispensed even in God's name. Oh, what a holy mockery!

Mr. President, it would be impossible to saddle this measure or a kindred measure upon any people or any community who have the right to vote. It is cruel and un-American.

The advocates of this measure seek to brand those who venture to disagree with them as dangerous to society or as henchmen of the liquor interests. I have here a letter published by the rector of St. Paul's Church, at Wellington, Kans., saying that prohibition is all wrong. I will not read it, but ask that it may be printed as part of my remarks.

Another article states that Cardinal Gibbons denounced the proposed State-wide prohibition bill pending in the general assembly. He spoke freely to the delegation who appeared before him, insisting that the bill was a failure and that it would be a detriment to the cause of sobriety.

I appeal that in the light of all experience, as prohibition has failed to prohibit where tried, the remedy is to lighten the burdens of mankind, make it easier to get bread and butter, make homes brighter, make them more attractive, and regulate the sale of drink through a well-planned high-license system. Then we will have gone far toward the solution of this vexed problem.

The Newark News, a large and widely circulated paper in the city of Newark, in the State of New Jersey, has an editorial here on "Inhibition versus Prohibition." I ask to print that. [See appendix.]

Further, I desire to submit this letter from the police department with reference to Knoxville, Tenn.—a prohibition State. Knoxville, Tenn., has a population of 36,000. The arrests during the last 12 months were 1,035.

Mr. ASHURST entered the Chamber.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I am glad the Senator from Arizona came in. It is true that in the goodness of your hearts you have left the people of the District two beverages with which the people may regale themselves.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Certainly.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I suggest that the Senator make now the remark about the State of Arizona that he made awhile ago. [Laughter.]

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Well, it will all be in print. The Senator can read it.

Mr. SHEPPARD. The Senator from Arizona has come into the Chamber since the Senator made his statement.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. All right. The RECORD, thank Heaven, will be free to him, and he will have that opportunity. I have no retraction, however. If there is anything that the Senator desires further for the Senator from Arizona, I shall be happy to tell it to him.

They have left two things with which the people may regale themselves—those sparkling, life-giving decoctions known as Coca-Cola and Peruna. [Laughter.] It is true that the first article, if left exposed for a few hours, will turn to a product not fit for swine, and the latter will rapidly be converted by a process of fermentation into alcohol. But dry cities and States are Paradise, we are told. Let us see:

A writer for the Spectator, an insurance journal, according to the Cincinnati Times-Star, has been preparing this table. He shows that murders are increasing in number at an alarming rate in Memphis, Tenn., and that Memphis is the most murderous city in the United States. Its percentage is nearly twice that of any other city. In succession to Memphis comes six other southern cities; and New York, with all its gunmen and its "ripper" crimes, is away down sixteenth in the classification.

I want to read some interesting figures. The following shows the order in which 30 principal cities, all prohibition, come in regard to the number of murders to a population of 100,000: Memphis, Tenn., 63.7; Charleston, S. C., 32.7; Savannah, Ga., 28.4; Atlanta, Ga., 26; New Orleans, La., 25.3; Nashville, Tenn., 24.3; city of Newark, N. J., which is wet, as you call it, 3 per cent; Milwaukee, 2.4 per cent.

Here is another little article that I cut from the San Francisco Star, entitled "In the name of the law."

[From the San Francisco Star, Feb. 5, 1916.]

IN THE NAME OF THE LAW.

The homes of three wealthy men at Seattle were raided last week by the county sheriff, who was ostensibly enforcing the prohibition law of Washington. From the cellars of W. E. Boeing the sheriff took $10,000 worth of wine, some of which was bought years ago by Boeing's father. From the home of D. E. Skinner the sheriff took $6,000 worth of wine, and from the apartments of J. C. Eden, at the Rainier Club, the sheriff took $2,000 worth of wines.

All the wines in each of these cases were bought before the prohibition law went into effect. There was no reason to suspect that either of the men would sell their wine. Possibly the sheriff acted entirely within the law, but is such a law desirable?

What is desirable is the abolition of saloons, of public drinking places that promote disorder. A man's cellar or his ice box is not a public drinking place. A private stock of liquor in a private house is not conducive to disorder and crime.

In an article published in the Atlantic Monthly of February, contributed by Mr. Koren, entitled "Constructive temperance reform," he says:

The prohibition doctrine of coercion has failed because it postulates that the habits and appetites of mankind are amenable to regulation after the manner of some inanimate mechanism, and mistaken attempts at wholesale reform entail more social breakage than salvage. We lack constructive legislation. The extremists make us cowards.

We have Texas held up to us so often as one of the great model States. I cut, yesterday, out of one of the New York papers, the New York American, December 15, 1916, this article headed:

Charges "Dry" zone fosters drug scourge.

The article recites an instance where a man had appeared before a judge in some little town where he lived, under prohibition, where the drug scourge had multiplied to a degree that it had made him absolutely a slave to it. I ask that I may be permitted to publish that in connection with my remarks. [See appendix.]

Now, as to the home of the distinguished gentleman who fathers this bill, Dallas, Tex.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Dallas in not my home.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Dallas is in the State from which the Senator is a respected and honorable Senator. Here is one of the advertisements. From this they must have gotten their idea of printing on the back of the bottle as provided in the bill. Here it is in great big type. Says the Dallas Morning News:

IT'S AGAINST THE LAW TO SELL CIDER CONTAINING ALCOHOL.

That's why most merchants and dealers are selling our Fruit Phosphate, Mexican Hot, Cheery Tip, Concord Punch, Apple Phosphate, Orange Phosphate, and all other flavors. These drinks are pure and healthful—shipped in kegs and 1-gallon bottles, and are absolutely free from alcohol. We guarantee their purity. Don't handle the alcoholic ciders. It will get you in trouble. Merchants send your orders.

THE CHEERY TIP CO.,
Dallas, Tex.

But do not fail to find the cheery tip at Dallas, Tex. It will do the business.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Dallas, may I say to my friend from New Jersey, has not yet gone dry.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Well, it is within the environment of your Commonwealth.

Drink and drug habits successfully treated by ethical methods.

There is nobody who drinks, there is nobody who can be drunk, in sublime Texas under the glories of prohibition, but here we find the advertisement of the Hughes Circle Sanatorium. Where? In Texas.

You can easily free yourself—

Free yourself from what? Not from inebriety, because prohibition prevents inebriety; but yet in Texas men do drink and get drunk.

You can easily free yourself from the curse of any of these addictions by spending two to four weeks here in our homelike institution. Reasonable rates. Inquiries confidential. Write us.

"We will never tell that you were a victim of drunkenness." O God, is that possible? We will not tell on you.

Here is something, Mr. President, that will delight your heart. It seems as though Texas has a monopoly of all of this. Here is another one. I quote from the Dallas Morning News of February 13, 1916. It is written in big letters:

Jump from bed in morning and drink hot water.

[From Dallas Morning News, Feb. 13, 1916.]

JUMP FROM BED IN MORNING AND DRINK HOT WATER—OPEN SLUICES OF SYSTEM EACH MORNING AND WASH AWAY THE POISONOUS, STAGNANT MATTER, SAYS AUTHORITY—A GLASS OF HOT WATER WITH A TEASPOONFUL OF LIMESTONE PHOSPHATE IN IT, DRANK EACH MORNING BEFORE BREAKFAST, KEEPS US LOOKING AND FEELING FIT.

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can instead feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick, or well, should each morning before breakfast drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile, and poisonous toxins, thus cleansing, sweetening, and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste, and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders, and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store, which will cost but little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Always putting in a liberal quantity of our "Cheery Tip."

But, Mr. President, there is a salvation for it all. They have a panacea for all ills in Texas. God knows I am sorry to find so many evils down there. I have been brought up to believe that Texas was the very paragon of excellence and that the strictest propriety prevailed there. But people do get sick, it seems, or else the Hughes Sanatorium would not advertise "Cheery Tip." They needs must take too much of something though they have a panacea. Here is an advertisement from the Dallas Morning News, February 13, 1916. It has a bony hand hanging over a seeming metropolis. It looks like the bony hand of death or the sword of Damocles. It hangs over them, and what they have there is a cure for all the evils that prohibition and teetotalism have brought. Here you have the bony hand of death hanging over the people of Texas, and they would all go into chaos or to hades were it not for this as a preventive.

What is it, do you ask? Why that God-given elixir Peruna.

I say to you here, Mr. President, only a few days ago I consulted no less a gentleman than Dr. Wiley, of this city, and there is no more capable and versatile gentleman on subjects of this character than he. I asked him what he had to say as to Peruna, that you except advertisements of and which your papers spread. He said it is one of the most noxious and dangerous of drugs, the basis of which is the rankest and poorest of whiskys.

Then, Mr. President, I have here something I cut from one of my New Jersey papers, copied from, I think, a Georgia paper, where there are moonshine distilleries. [See appendix.]

Mr. President, I assert in all seriousness I am opposed to this measure. The idea of the argument that it is a gallon or a quart is too contemptible to talk about. We are not here cavilling over the question of quantum in the matter of the liquor or the provisions of this bill, but it is interfering with man's personal liberty; it is against the spirit of our institutions, and I believe against the thoughts advanced by our fathers. I believe if this narrow, contemptible, and un-American system had prevailed, we would never have reached half way to the zenith we have in this great American Nation; and not with hate, not with bitterness I oppose it. I oppose it because I believe it will be a step backward in the Nation that this great Capital of ours should be marked as being in thought so narrow that mankind might not be trusted under the guardianship of reasonable and proper regulations to use alcoholic liquors as was best for their interests and best for their constituency.

I can not imagine what shall prompt men to be so lost to the rights of their fellows, so lost to all our history, so lost to all that we have in the matter of statistics on this question throughout the length and breadth of the land.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair did not interrupt the Senator from New Jersey when inquiry was made as to the privilege of having matter inserted as a part of his speech, but hearing no objection, the privilege will be granted.

The matter follows as an appendix.

APPENDIX.

PROHIBITION IN PRACTICE—ARIZONA A WARNING TO ALL ADVOCATES OF TEMPERANCE.

To the EDITOR OF THE TRIBUNE.

SIR: As Arizona was the first State to attempt shutting out liquor completely her experience is of more than ordinary interest to those watching the liquor situation generally. Where other so-called prohibition States (even Maine after 60 years of prohibition and Kansas after 30) allow shipment from other States for personal use, merely forbidding the local sale, Arizona tried to make a clean sweep with her amendment providing that liquor should "not be manufactured in or introduced into the State of Arizona under any circumstances." Despite protests, even of some of the prohibition leaders instrumental in having the amendment adopted, Arizona officials have barred liquor intended for personal use, as well as that for sacramental and medicinal purposes. A legislative session failed to lift the bars, as was expected, so that theoretically Arizona should be the "driest" State in the Union.

The amendment, in effect for one year now, is, however, declared a flat failure by the editor of the Bisbee (Ariz.) Review, who worked to obtain its adoption. In reviewing its operations over 12 months he says in his issue of January 2, 1916:

"Arizona is a dry State in name only. Arizona is, in fact, an intemperate State. Enough of hypocrisy! * * * Arizona is contributing to false pretenses when she permits her name to be heralded broadcast as being among the standard bearers of temperance. Prohibition in Arizona has not been prohibitive." Further along he observes, "Only the most incomplete statistics are at hand of a year under so-called prohibition rule in Arizona. But taking several of the most important communities as examples, it would seem that the record is damnable."

He then quotes from a news dispatch and from newspapers at other points in Arizona to show the wretched conditions as to intemperance. In the view of the Bisbee Review's editor the weak point of the Arizona law is its failure to allow liquor to be shipped in for personal use and for medicinal and sacramental purposes. He says, "With the exception of Idaho, Arizona is the only one of the States on the new roster (of prohibition) which ignores personal liberty. And Idaho permits the use of liquors for medicinal and sacramental purposes. Arizona stands in a class by herself as a victim of legislative stupidity."

To the outside observer, it seems to me, Arizona's case should be instructive. Here is a State with the nearest approach to absolute prohibition where after a year intemperance is greater than ever. The Review's editor has a theory that conditions would be better if liquor were allowed for personal use. If real prohibition doesn't reduce intemperance, but on the other hand makes conditions worse, he figures that allowing a legal supply from outside the State would cut down the sales of the bootlegger. But isn't this a confession of the failure of prohibition to prohibit and of its inability to do so? And if liquor shipped in for personal use reduces the bootlegger's vile business, why would not sale within the State, under proper regulation by the State, do even more (as the liquor man argues) to hold within bounds the evils of intemperance?

State-wide prohibition confiscates property of citizens without compensation, takes away the living of many thousands, abolishes large revenues of the State, all with the idea that it increases temperance, and then—does not. Arizona should be a warning, even as is Maine or Kansas.

THE KITCHEN STILL—PROHIBITION DOOMED TO FAILURE IF WHISKY CAN BE MADE AT HOME.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE SUN:

Sir: The description published in the Sun of the "kitchen still," which has come into general use in Mississippi as the result of the adoption of prohibition by that State, gives the real reason why prohibition has always failed, and must fail, as a remedy for the evils of intemperance. When anyone desiring an alcoholic liquor can take an ordinary teakettle, a few feet of rubber tubing, and a pail of water and with this simple apparatus convert a quart of molasses into a quart of full-proof whisky it must be evident to even the most fanatical believer in the power of governments to make men temperate by law that their scheme will not work.

The plea for prohibition is always made on the ground that the use of alcoholic beverages is an evil, and that the remedy for this evil is a law forbidding their sale. It is admitted that it is the drinking of liquors that causes all the ills alleged to result from their excessive use, yet the proposed national prohibition amendment now pending in Congress does not prohibit their use, or manufacture for use, but merely their sale or manufacture for sale.

In a speech delivered in Congress in favor of his national prohibition amendment to the Constitution of the United States, Representative Hobson said: "We do not ask that a man shall not drink. We do not say that a man shall not drink or make liquor in his own home for his own use." In other words, the drinking of liquor is so great an evil that its sale should be prohibited, but the drinkers should be permitted to make and drink liquor without any restriction by the Government.

It has always been contended by the opponents of prohibition that its worst result was the creation of a spirit of hypocrisy in relation to the liquor problem. Could there be a clearer case of insincerity and dishonesty that the pretense that national prohibition will stop liquor drinking, when its advocates admit that they do not propose to prevent the production and use of liquors, but simply to stop their sale?

THE SHEPPARD BILL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

The bill introduced by Senator SHEPPARD, of Texas, prohibiting the sale of alcoholic beverages in the District of Columbia violates every principle of home rule and local self-government, and for that reason alone should be defeated.

The advocates of prohibition profess to believe in the right of the people in all sections of the country to vote on the question of prohibitory laws, but are now engaged in an attempt to force upon the citizens of Washington, D. C., an arbitrary and unjust interference with their personal tastes and habits, without giving them an opportunity to express their wishes.

No more glaring instance of undemocratic legislation ever has been attempted in Congress than this proposal to regulate the private affairs of the people of a city with 300,000 population at the instigation of agitators in remote sections of the country. * * *

The advocates of the Sheppard bill know that that measure would be rejected by an overwhelming majority if submitted to popular vote. Why should Washington have an unjust and unnecessary law that its people have not asked for thrust upon it by Congress?

ANTIPROHIBITION.

NEW YORK CITY, February 10, 1916.

PROHIBITION IS ALL WRONG, SAYS RECTOR OF ST. PAUL'S—"TO MY MIND IT IS TANTAMOUNT TO MORAL WEAKNESS, AND I BELIEVE A NATION OF PROHIBITIONISTS WOULD BE A NATION OF HYPOCRITES."

Rev. J. F. Milbank, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church at Kellington, Kans., writes as follows in the St. Joseph (Mo.) Observer:

"You ask for my opinion in regard to this great issue.

"First, let me say, I dislike prohibition intensely. To my mind it is all wrong, or at least it goes about that which it desires to accomplish altogether in the wrong way.

"To my mind prohibition is tantamount to moral weakness. I have seen a great deal of it—have watched its comings and goings, and have even done my best as a just-minded man, to see reason in it.

"To me it stands weighed in the balance; and as a working factor, even in that which it desires to accomplish or promote, found sadly wanting.

"I believe a nation of prohibitionists would be a nation of hypocrites. Prohibition breeds and fosters suspicion among neighbors. It means 'behind doors.' It means all that is not open and above board. It not only breeds a sort of secretiveness of one's actions; but worse still, it introduces a condition of espionage which is something repulsive to any free English-speaking citizen.

"I hate drunkenness; it is beastly, inexcusable; but I fear and loathe prohibition still more. I would rather see a son of mine come home drunk (beastly as that would be) than to think my boy was a sneak and a liar. You can cure and sober a drunkard. Many have been redeemed. But never yet have I known a sneak or a liar changed into a decent man.

PROHIBITION BREEDS DISHONESTY.

"No, I hate prohibition intensely, because, as I have said, it breeds dishonesty and a lack of candor, and were my church—the Episcopal—to commit itself to such an unscriptural platform (as many 'churches' have) I would resign to-morrow, send in my vestments, and go to work at something else.

"Temperance is one thing (and it applies to all our appetites and desires); prohibition is quite another. The one is strength; the other weakness.

"After living some years in an antisaloon State I have come to the conclusion that the absence of the (license) saloon proper by no means abrogates or does away with drinking or drunkenness. It only seems to me to help the druggists grow rich on that pernicious 'signing a lie,' as I call it, when a man sneaks into a drug store and whispers what he wants—holds up his hand and swears."

COFFEE HOUSE VERSUS SALOON.

The advancing wave of prohibition in this country has brought to the fore a difficult and pressing problem in temperance reform. The saloon as a social and economic institution seems to be doomed. Its condemnation rests not only upon moral grounds but upon increasing evidence of its tendency to destroy the most beneficial social institutions and to check industrial and economic progress. If it is to disappear, however, some adequate adjustments and arrangement must be made to supply its place. For there is no doubt that the saloon has ministered to certain characteristic human wants.

The need of some stimulus has so far been a persistent force in the development of society, and the instinct for association in a common place of meeting under exhilarating conditions is a part of man's nature. Alcoholic drinks and the public house have proved to be easily accessible means to meet these ends. Where these social requirements have been overlooked or neglected the enforcement of prohibitory laws against the saloon has been extremely difficult. Where they have been met or substantially ministered to by other agencies alcoholic excesses have been materially reduced.

It has long since been noticed that countries using liberally such infusions as tea, coffee, or cocoa have been able to combat more successfully the excessive use of alcoholic liquors. It is, therefore, significant that at the recent meeting of the National Coffee Roasters' Association announcement was made that the consumption of coffee had largely increased in those States which have in recent years gone into the prohibition column. The association considered the advisability of establishing coffee houses in the more thickly populated cities of the country in competition with the saloons. The convention is reported to have adopted as a slogan, "Coffee as a substitute for liquor as a stimulant." The suggestion not only deserves consideration, but if put into effect will go a long way toward alleviating the difficulties that must arise through the abolition of the saloon.

CARDINAL OPPOSES STATE PROHIBITION—BALTIMORE PRELATE DENOUNCES BILL PENDING BEFORE LEGISLATURE IN MARYLAND.

BALTIMORE, MD.

Although a strong advocate of temperance and a believer in local option, Cardinal Gibbons to-day denounced the proposed State-wide prohibition bill now pending in the general assembly. He spoke freely when a delegation of representative business men of the city, in no way affiliated with the liquor traffic, called upon him.

"I am strongly opposed to any State-wide prohibition bill being passed by the legislature, because I believe that such a law is impossible of enforcement in a city the size of Baltimore and its environs," he said. "Such being the case, a law of this kind interferes with personal liberty and rights and operates to encourage hypocrisy in the people. The history of the world down to the present time demonstrates the fact that people always have and always will indulge in the use of intoxicating liquors. Further, I am opposed to the passage of such a law because it would deprive the State of a large revenue without accomplishing results, and that, too, at a time when both the city and the State are very much in need of the revenues produced.

"However, I am heartily in favor of temperance, and whenever it is my pleasure to confirm a class of boys I always exact from them a pledge to abstain from the use of intoxicants until they become of age. I am also a firm believer in local option, and whenever the majority of the citizens of a county or any portion of the State want to vote on the question of local option their wishes should be gratified. I don't hesitate to say that I contributed in no small measure to the suppression of the sale of intoxicants in St. Marys County. In this case I was satisfied that the local circumstances demanded it.

"Furthermore, it is true that the use of wines and liquors is often abused and leads to lamentable results. This I have observed from long observation in the ministry, yet the best commodities are liable to abuse. What is more harmless, for instance, than the organ of the tongue? We all know the social and domestic joy and utility derived from conversation, and yet the bad use of the tongue daily leads to lying and misrepresentation, to quarrels and slander, to bloodshed, and often even to murder.

"It is a favorite practice of some friends of prohibition to charge their opponents with being subsidized by the liquor interests. That is a most grievous charge, and often without the slightest foundation. But would we be justified in putting a padlock on our mouths because of the occasional misuse of the tongue? We should regulate the use of intoxicants as we would regulate the use of our tongues, by proper safeguards and restraints."

[From the Newark News of Apr. 19, 1916.]

INHIBITION VERSUS PROHIBITION.

The question of liquor is the question of intemperance. The intemperance of some of its users creates the problem. The intemperance of some of its antagonists aggravates it. The intemperance of both is characteristic; it destroys sense of proportion, judgment, and broad vision. Alcohol thus has a characteristic reaction on both sides. It gets all the attention. It is therefore a psychological problem.

Because it is such the News strongly deprecates efforts such as the most recent local attempt to solve it along the usual lines of a crusade and with the usual means of forcible repression through sumptuary laws. The News believes that the eventual solution lies only through inhibition, not at all through prohibition. At best prohibition, if necessary or desirable at all, can only follow general inhibition.

Inhibition is restraint from within. There are fortunate souls who can so strongly feel the immanent presence of Divinity as to find in it the only necessary defense against temptation. In Biblical language they can cast out devils. Others, by self-respect, by consideration for others, by ambition, by common sense reenforced by economic experience, by the sheer desire to lead a respectable life, can find a steady safeguard against excess and temptation. The high ideal expels the low.

Inhibition is an affirmative process; prohibition is a negative. The negative, as the very efforts for political prohibition prove, focuses the attention on the evil. Psychologically it exalts it, in some to the destruction of common sense by excesses of attacks; in others to the destruction of the individual by constantly recalling temptation. The affirmative expels the evil by focusing the attention on the ideal. It defeats it by the substitution of high aim in the mental processes.

"Do" is stronger than "don't." There is the story of the Kentuckians, clergyman and horse breeder. The former's boy was bad, the latter's colts good. The horseman's explanation was that his stock was raised on "dos," the youth on "don'ts." Warn a worth-while young man that there's "a demon in the bottle"—go no further, and he will think, "You don't say? Let's see what he looks like." Nine out of the ten Mosaic commandments contain a negative. The Master's two are both affirmative. Both are good law; the latter are the stronger.

Psychology is but a fancy word for human nature. It is human nature to seek that which is apparently denied. By such force humanity has risen. It is a perverted form of it that makes prohibition a poor remedy. Where it is forbidden humanity is interested in going. For such reason the bootlegger flourishes, and men who would hardly consider taking a drink in "wet" territory find sport in securing it in "dry." It is with human nature we are dealing. Human nature is made up of individuals. So is the State. Statute law is the effort to express the moral judgment of the community. Where it expresses actually that general will, it is enforced.

Where it is not enforced, the reason is that the normal attitude of the community does not support it. Does the disrespect of law rest with the violators or those who have made it attempt something contrary to its real nature? Partly on both; but the obvious remedy is with the individuals who compose the community. And with those individuals it must be inhibition in our judgment—not prohibition. The normally minded preponderancy of the community must be won to the point where their normal attitude is the will to accept the particular restraint before that restraint will be effectively practiced for the protection of the weaker.

Then what is the solution of the liquor issue in New Jersey, or Newark in particular? Well, largely it is solving itself. It is particularly important that by excess enthusiasm we do not interfere with that process. We did once, and, in good Biblical phrase, seven other devils worse than the first moved in and took possession. Liquor isn't our only weakness right here to-day.

But we can accelerate the good work by aids and judgment. Local option is an aid, imperfect, but suitable to certain sections when honestly and frankly put forward and engineered. Its usual form is too exclusive for cities. It gives no halfways between a possibly bad condition existent and utter dryness, psychologically a present impossibility. Strippling saloons of the incitements to intemperance would be helpful.

The News has previously made other suggestions along such lines. One most rapid cure for intemperance is to provide something better. Right here, it will be recognized, is presented one of our greatest social problems, for much more is involved than merely changing the saloon, or, if you please, abolishing it.

We have to employ restraints to protect ourselves and the weaker, but the restraints must be timely in commanding general approval; that is, for permanency they must appeal to a normal, steady opinion of a preponderant majority of the public, which can be educated but can not safely be forced. For permanent results the foundation must be laid by individuals through inhibition. It can not be surely built upon until a general moral judgment has been approved by such means.

The problem is really gigantic, viewed en masse. But its basis is human nature, and that is the individual. By understanding we can help—inhibition. By going counter to it, seeking to force it, we will hinder—prohibition, legal-enforcement crusades, etc. The trouble with enthusiasts is that they have a patent medicine for a constitutional ailment.

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,
HEADQUARTERS OF THE METROPOLITAN POLICE DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., February 16, 1916.

Hon. JAMES E. MARTINE,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: Again referring to your recent inquiry, I beg leave to state that I am just advised that the population of Knoxville, Tenn., is 36,000, and the number arrested during the last 12 months where drunkenness was the charge was 1,035.

Very truly, yours,

RAYMOND W. PULLMAN,
Major and Superintendent.

"DRY" CITIES THE MOST MURDEROUS IN UNION.

A writer for the Spectator, an insurance journal, says J. M. Allison in the Cincinnati Times-Star, has been to the trouble of preparing a rather extraordinary set of statistics concerning the homicide record of 1915. He shows that murders are increasing in number at an alarming rate, and that Memphis, Tenn., is the most murderous city in the Union. Its percentage is nearly twice that of any other city. In succession to Memphis comes six other southern cities, and New York, with all of its gunmen and its "ripper" crimes, is away down sixteenth in the classification. Cincinnati comes tenth, just after San Francisco and just ahead of Chicago. The following list shows the order in which the 30 principal cities come with regard to the number of murders for each 100,000 of population:

	Per cent.
Memphis, Tenn	63.7
Charleston, S. C	32.7
Savannah, Ga	28.4
Atlanta, Ga	26.0
New Orleans, La	25.3
Nashville, Tenn	24.3

CHARGES "DRY" ZONE FOSTERS DRUG SCOURGE—MAGISTRATE SIMMS DECLARES PROHIBITION HAS TURNED MANY ALCOHOLICS INTO NARCOTIC VICTIMS.

Magistrate Simms, sitting in Yorkville court, yesterday charged the spread of prohibition has increased the use of habit-forming drugs.

The magistrate's remarks were called forth by the appearance before him of a heroin addict, a young-old man, who veiled his identity under the name of "John Smith, of No. 234 East Forty-second Street."

"Judge, I want you to send me to the hospital to be cured of the heroin habit," pleaded the man at the bar. "I contracted the habit while traveling with a theatrical troupe. I get my supply of 'dope' from actors."

"Oh, you mean the fellows who travel around a great deal and into dry territory," said the magistrate. "This is another bit of information which seems to show the relationship between the spread of prohibition and habit-forming drugs.

"When the confirmed alcoholic can not get what he wants, he finds a substitute which can be easily carried around. Then he boasts of the merits of the substitute to persons easily influenced by the boasting."

Magistrate Simms sent "Smith" to the Metropolitan Hospital on Blackwell's Island. Then he heard the case of Gertrude Wilson, 37, of No. 369 Second Avenue. The woman, a servant, said she was a morphine and paregoric fiend. Morphine she has been using, she said, since her sixteenth year.

"I have been using paregoric for eight months," she added. "Now I require 12 to 16 ounces a day. The cost has gone up. I am suffering for lack of dope."

The legislative investigating committee went to Harlem court and listened to Magistrate Ten Eyck's disposal of several drug cases. Before leaving for Syracuse to continue the committee's inquiry Senator Whitney, chairman of the committee, said:

"The information we received to-day verified our previous findings. There seems to be no doubt that any person with sufficient money can get any drug and in any quantity without the least trouble."

"MOONSHINE" IN PENITENTIARIES.

Indications that whisky is being smuggled into the Eastern Penitentiary, in Philadelphia, or, what is more probable, "moonshined" within the prison walls have caused a great sensation in that city. Pennsylvania women are up in arms over the alleged discovery.

The charge that Warden McKenty, himself a prohibitionist, had been unable to enforce prohibition within a prison is causing amusement. It is said by police officials that "moonshining" is a common practice among convicts almost everywhere and that it is almost impossible to stamp it out.

One well-known Pennsylvania chief of police explained that, on going through the kitchen of a certain penitentiary, he noticed potato peelings nicely cleaned and separated in a pile. A convict whom the chief knew explained that the potato peelings were distilled for the purpose of supplying the inmates with whisky.

Exposé of the illicit traffic in the Eastern Penitentiary was made by Mrs. Elizabeth Derby, of Naraberth, State president of the King's Daughters. The facts, as she had reported them, have been laid before the Parent-Teachers' Association, of Lancaster. Mrs. Derby tells of her discovery as follows:

"While performing work a prisoner remarked to me he would never touch liquor again, whereupon I told him this pledge was easier to keep within prison walls than outside. The prisoner then said he could get all the liquor he could pay for. In response to my request, he brought me two 1-pint bottles of whisky and a large box of morphine. These I took to Warden McKenty, as he had remarked to me previously that only proof counted. He received me with indignation, directed at the prisoner and myself.

"Three months later, finding that liquor and morphine were still being smuggled to prisoners, I asked the warden what he proposed to do toward preventing the practice. He told me it was none of my affair and that my business was teaching the prisoners religion.

"I finally sought counsel of George Wharton Pepper, of Philadelphia, who directed me to Dr. Hart, secretary of the prison board of inspectors. The doctor reprimanded me vehemently for broaching the matter to Attorney Pepper, and remarked that he did not know how Mr. McKenty would forgive it. I replied that the forgiveness of McKenty made little difference, for my sole purpose was the betterment of the prison."

Mrs. Derby declares she will spread the story of her discovery all over the State.

Referring to Mrs. Derby's charges, Warden McKenty said: "What she said about the whisky and dope discovered here is true—that is, to a certain extent. We learned that some one was bringing these two things into the prison, and we had several traps set. We knew that three or four of the prisoners were getting this stuff, and we started an investigation.

"Do you think if whisky were obtainable that men here would drink hair tonic? They did, and two of them died."

[From the Dallas Morning News of Sunday Feb. 13, 1916.]

THE TERROR OF GRIP IS IN THE AFTER EFFECTS.

How will grip leave you? You suffer enough while you have it, but the state it leaves you in worries you even more.

The disease has an almost fiendish way of searching out the weak spot in your system, getting a hold there, and lingering for months. Sometimes it is the back, sometimes the throat, often the digestive organs. You are in pain all the time; your strength is little and the joy of living ceases to be.

Such conditions call for a good tonic. But it must be something more, for grip is a catarrhal malady and the tonic must have special efficacy in catarrhal conditions.

When you think of catarrhal conditions, you always think of Peruna.

IN CONVALESCENCE—PERUNA.

It is the one tonic for such conditions. Literally, thousands have used it with marvelous success after grip. It seems to make little difference what part of the body is affected. The trouble is a result of a catarrhal disease, and when this catarrh is overcome and a good tonic helps regain bodily strength the patient begins to get well. There are many grateful letters from those who have been benefited by it, and each of them treats of a different phase. Rely on Peruna. It will build you up.

So effective has it proved that many now take it on the first appearance of grip symptoms, and these folks unite in proclaiming

PERUNA AS A PREVENTIVE.

There is much good sense in this, for grip infection must find a weak place in your armor before it can harm you. Remove all catarrhal conditions, build up your bodily strength, clean all waste matter from your system. A good tonic will do this—Peruna is an especially good tonic for just such cases Fight off the grip. It is better than curing it, even, but if it gets ahead of you restore yourself to vigor with Peruna.

You should keep Peruna at hand ready to check any symptom of cold or grip at their first appearance. Promptness may save you a long and suffering illness.

Remember that Peruna also comes in tablet form.

THE PERUNA COMPANY, Columbus, Ohio.

PROOF AT HAND.

Mrs. Gentry Gates, 8219 First Avenue, East Lake, Ala., writes: "I had a bad case of grip. I tried Peruna and it cured me. I can safely say it is a fine medicine."

Mrs. George E. Law, 13½ North Franklin Street, Brazil, Ind., writes: "I am satisfied that Peruna is a wonderful remedy for grip, and I do most heartily indorse and recommend it."

Mrs. S. A. Weir, 827 West Fifteenth Street, Pueblo, Colo., writes: "There is no better medicine in the world for colds and grip than Peruna. One bottle did more to relieve me of a bad cold and case of grip than any remedies that I have ever taken.

Mr. OWEN. Mr. President, I merely want to put in the RECORD the statement that I have heard a great many arguments in favor of the liquor traffic, and there is not one of them that has the slightest sound foundation. They are all based upon some fallacy. The drug referred to has been abandoned by all the hospitals of the world of good standing. It is recognized by all the world as one of the most dangerous and harmful of evils to the human race.

I hope that this bill will pass, and I hope that the people of the United States will establish the prohibition principle from Canada to the Gulf.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, I shall detain the Senate but a moment. When the Senator from Texas moved to take up this bill I voted against taking it up. I think that my attitude on the question of prohibition is well known. I did not vote not to take it up because of opposition to the measure, but because of my interest in the bill then pending before the Senate, the bill in charge of the junior Senator from Michigan [Mr. TOWNSEND]. I am also very much interested in that measure. That bill has been pending before the Senate for many years; in fact, it has been pending here so long that I understand about one-half of those who would have been beneficiaries of the measure have died since its introduction; and I was very much in favor of disposing of that measure first.

Mr. President, I shall vote for the bill in charge of the Senator from Texas, not because I believe it is a perfect bill, for it is not. It is not what we might call a prohibition measure. It is simply a measure to do away with the saloons in the District of Columbia.

There is one provision in the bill which I trust the Senator will amend, and that is where a provision was taken out of the bill which provided that no liquor should be imported into the District and given away. I can see a reason for striking out the clause that it shall not be used, because that may infringe upon the personal liberties of people, but I certainly can see no reason for striking out the word "gift."

I trust that the Senator having the bill in charge will assure those of us who are sincere, and who are really in favor of a prohibitive measure, that that is taken care of, at least in conference.

I am not opposed to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT]. That is in fact a prohibition measure, but I share in the belief of other friends of prohibition that it would be impossible at this time to pass that bill through this body, and perhaps through the other body. I realize the fact that under the provisions of this bill you may establish distilleries in the District of Columbia, as was so well said by the junior Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED], that you may export in any quantity you see fit alcohol, but there is one reason why we can support the measure, and that is that nearly all the States are going dry. Most of the Western States, and many of the Southern States, are adopting prohibitory laws. That is the only reason why I feel that I can vote for the measure, although distilleries are being permitted to go on and manufacture alcohol within the District of Columbia.

Something has been said about the amount manufactured in the District. I understand that there are manufactured in the District of Columbia about 5,000 barrels of alcohol annually, averaging about 46 gallons to the barrel, or about 230,000 gallons. I also understand that some of the people who are close to those who are in control of legislation are anxious to receive the revenue derived from the manufacture of alcohol.

I do not think there is any excuse for allowing a distillery in the District of Columbia. I can remember when the prohibition measure was before the Legislature of the State of North Dakota there happened to be at that time breweries in my State. There were many breweries there, and one of those breweries was owned by a close relative of mine, a first cousin, but I showed no favoritism. I said to him, "We can not enact a prohibition law and favor anybody. You have gone into this business with your eyes open, and I am going to vote for a prohibition bill"; and I did vote for it.

I do not believe that we should show favoritism to anybody. I do not care whether it is a distilling plant or a brewery or a saloon. If we are going to enact prohibition, we should treat them all alike. We should make it impossible to manufacture as well as to dispose of it either by retail or in any other way.

But I fully realize, Mr. President, that this is only the beginning. The friends of prohibition have said to me, "We can not expect to get everything we want in the first instance." This is simply a beginning, simply a stepping-stone to such a measure as the Senator from Utah has introduced. Personally I should be very glad if it were possible to enact a law such as has been presented by the Senator from Utah, because it is in fact a real prohibition measure; but I have been told, and I believe it is true, that it would be impossible at this time to pass such a measure as the amendment proposed by the Senator from Utah.

For that reason, Mr. President, I shall content myself, although I am not satisfied with the measure, to support the bill which the Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD] has in charge.

Mr. SMOOT. May I ask the Senator a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LEWIS in the chair). Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. GRONNA. Yes, with pleasure.

Mr. SMOOT. I merely want to say to the Senator that a number of Senators who believe in prohibition have made the same statement to me in private the Senator has just made in public. I have been wondering if the friends of prohibition, I mean of real prohibition, take that position when on earth can we pass a prohibition law. I believe myself if the Senate of the United States would now pass this substitute it would be easier of passage in the House than the Sheppard bill, and I say that from what Members of the House have told me. I do not know that it is so, but I say that Members of the House who believe in prohibition have told me that it would be easier to pass through the House of Representatives my substitute bill than the Sheppard bill, if it passes the Senate of the United States.

Mr. GRONNA. I will say in answer to the Senator from Utah that if I could be convinced that it would be possible to pass such a law as has been presented by him, personally I should be very glad to vote for it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is upon the amendment of the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT].

Mr. SMOOT. I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I should like to suggest to the Senator in charge of the bill that I have no desire to delay the consideration of the measure, but it is 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon; there are a good many absentees and some of them went away with the understanding that we would not have a vote this afternoon. In fact, I thought I had that understanding. I should like to ask the Senator in charge of the bill if we can not adjourn and let the vote be taken on Monday? I am willing to agree that a vote shall be taken upon the bill on Monday.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Inasmuch as we seem to be ready for a vote on the pending amendment, and a vote upon it is not a final disposition of the bill, I prefer to take the vote now.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. As I stated to the Senator, I thought I had reached an understanding that we were not going to have a vote this afternoon, and I stated that to several Senators who are absent.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Very well.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. I should like if the Senate would have a short executive session to have some Army officers confirmed.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Very well. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After five minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 4 o'clock p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, December 18, 1916, at 12 o'clock meridian.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate December 16, 1916.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE ARMY.

GENERAL OFFICERS.

Brig. Gen. John J. Pershing to be major general.

Col. Eben Swift, General Staff Corps (Cavalry), to be brigadier general.

Col. Francis H. French, General Staff Corps (Infantry), to be brigadier general.

Col. Edwin St. J. Greble, Sixth Field Artillery, to be brigadier general.

Col. Charles G. Treat, General Staff Corps (Field Artillery), to be brigadier general.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

SATURDAY, December 16, 1916.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

We would approach Thee, Eternal God, in the spirit of Him who taught us to pray, Our Father, who art in heaven, hallowed by Thy Name; Thy kingdom come; Thy will be done in earth as it is done in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil; for Thine is the kingdom and the power and the glory forever. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

ENROLLED BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED.

Mr. LAZARO, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found enrolled bill and joint resolution of the following titles, when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 8816. An act authorizing the Commissioner of Navigation to cause the sailing vessel Golden Gate to be registered as a vessel of the United States; and

H. J. Res. 282. Joint resolution authorizing the Postmaster General to provide the postmaster of Springfield, Ill., with a special canceling die for the one hundredth anniversary of the admission of the State of Illinois into the Federal Union.

The SPEAKER. With the consent of the House the Chair desires to make a short statement about these bills reported from the Committee on Enrolled Bills. It will be remembered that early in this session the House passed a concurrent resolution authorizing the Speaker and the President of the Senate, or the Vice President as the case might be, to sign two bills which were passed at the last session, but not passed in time to be signed. The Senate indefinitely postponed that resolution. The Chair signed these bills, and the Chair has laid them before the House because he believes the Speaker, the Vice President, or the President of the Senate pro tempore have as much right to sign these bills as any other bill. There is nothing anywhere the Chair has been able to find that fixes any time when the Speaker, the Vice President, or the President of the Senate pro tempore shall sign bills. The Chair has laid them before the House with that statement because he believes the Chair had the right to sign, resolution or no resolution, and that the resolution is superfluous.

IMMIGRATION BILL.

Mr. BURNETT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 10384, to agree to the conference asked for by the Senate—the Senate has already appointed conferees——

Mr. MANN. To disagree to the Senate amendments.

Mr. BURNETT. To disagree to the Senate amendments and agree to the conference asked for by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BURNETT] asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the immigration bill, to disagree to all Senate amendments, and agree to the conference requested. Is there objection?

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman from Alabama if the conferees on the part of the House, before agreeing to Senate amendment 5, page 7, striking out the words "Hindus and persons who can not become eligible under existing law to become citizens of the United States by naturalization, unless otherwise provided for by existing agreements as to passports, or by existing treaties, conventions, or agreements that may hereafter be entered into," will give the House an opportunity for a separate vote?

Mr. BURNETT. Mr. Speaker, I would not like to make an agreement of that kind in advance of the action of the conferees. I would ask the gentleman not to make that request.

Mr. RAKER. The only suggestion I make is, that would be the only opportunity, it seems to me, the House has to pass on this amendment of the Senate striking out in regard to the exclusion of Hindus and of persons who can not become eligible, under existing laws, citizens of the United States by naturalization. I think the House ought to have opportunity to fully act on that, if the Senate conferees insist on their amendment.

Mr. BURNETT. I would not want to agree in advance to anything of that kind.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object further——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California has been answered.

Mr. RAKER. I know, but not quite fully. I understand the conferees of the House will insist upon the House bill in reference to that feature?

Mr. BURNETT. Yes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The Clerk will report the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 10384) to regulate the immigration of aliens to, and the residence of aliens in, the United States.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the conferees.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. BURNETT, Mr. SABATH, and Mr. HAYES.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Waldorf, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 611. An act for the erection of a monument to the memory of Matthew Fontaine Maury, of Virginia; and

S. 1428. An act to reimburse certain fire insurance companies the amounts paid by them for property destroyed by fire in suppressing the bubonic plague in the Territory of Hawaii in the years 1899 and 1900.

LEGISLATIVE, JUDICIAL, AND EXECUTIVE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 18542, the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 18542, the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill, with Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering the bill the title of which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 18542) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, and for other purposes.

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to return to page 118 for the purpose of offering an amendment which will not consume any time. I ran my legs off endeavoring to get over here yesterday and missed it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent to return to page 118 for the purpose of offering an amendment. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Chairman, let us have the amendment reported first.

Mr. FERRIS. I will state it. On page 118, lines 13 and 14, strike out "editorial assistant, $2,000," and insert "chief of division of district offices, $2,500."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 118, lines 13 and 14, strike out the words "editorial assistant, $2,000," and insert "chief of division of district offices, $2,500."

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order on the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, what is the reason for it?

Mr. FERRIS. The reason is simply this. The gentleman who holds the place now is Mr. Dan Casey. He is designated as the editorial assistant, and while he edits the Daily Consular and Trade Reports he is also the chief of the Division of District Offices in the Foreign and Domestic Bureau. Mr. Casey is an expert in his line. He is a civil-service man and has been employed in the bureau ever since its creation by Congress. Even before that he entered the service about the time of the establishment of the Bureau of Manufactures, the functions of which were later absorbed by the Foreign and Domestic Commerce Bureau. His services cover a period of at least eight or nine years, and, moreover, in addition to the actual experience he has had in this work during this period, he has made a special study along foreign and domestic commerce lines. The $2,000 per annum that he gets is not sufficient pay for the services he performs. Others, perhaps not as well qualified as Mr. Casey, have left the bureau to accept positions offered them by private concerns, and these concerns have been glad to avail themselves of the services of these men, and at salaries two or three times as much as they were paid in the Government service. If we are to retain men of extraordinry capacity and ability in the Government service, we ought to at least pay them what they are worth. The justification for it is this:

The work is an important feature in the bureau and is handled by a member of the regular bureau staff. There are eight district offices, with 32 employees, and eight "cooperative" offices, established in chambers of commerce in large cities. The agents in charge are specialists in foreign commerce, selected as a result of a civil-service examination. In a comparatively short time these offices have become the centers for foreign-trade information where they are located. They enable the bureau to keep in close touch with business men.

The work of this division chief requires familiarity with all phases of the bureau's work. Important questions must be handled with sound judgment. By being in immediate contact with the business men the bureau is able to make all its work more effective. The chief of this division must be able to sense the opportunity for new and creative work and for the extension of existing facilities of the bureau. The position requires initiative and constructive ability. It is believed that $3,500 is little enough to pay for work of this grade.

Just one word more——

Mr. GOOD. Reserving the right to object, I want to ask the gentleman from Tennessee if he intends to make a point of order?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes; I intend to make a point of order against the amendment, which is clearly subject to a point of order.

Mr. GOOD. Then I object.

Mr. FERRIS. Does the gentleman from Iowa object?

Mr. GOOD. The gentleman had not finished his statement.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. GOOD. I object.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa objects, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Bureau of Standards: Director, $6,000; physicists—chief $4,800, 1 qualified in optics $3,600, 2 at $3,600 each, 1, $3,000; associate physicists—3 at $2,700 each, 4 at $2,500 each, 4 at $2,200 each, 6 at $2,000 each; assistant physicists—9 at $1,800 each, 11 at $1,600 each, 14 at $1,400 each; chemists—chief, $4,800; 1, $3,500; 1, $3,000; associate chemists—3 at $2,700 each; 2 at $2,500 each; 1, $2,200; 4 at $2,000 each; assistant chemists—4 at $1,800 each, 4 at $1,600 each, 6 at $1,400 each; physical chemist, $1,800; laboratory assistants—19 at $1,200 each, 14 at $1,000 each, 14 at $900 each; laboratory helpers—2 at $840 each, 3 at $720 each, 3 at $600 each; aids—11 at $720 each, 7 at $600 each; 12 laboratory apprentices, at $540 each; secretary, $2,200; storekeeper, $1,000; librarian, $1,600; clerks—1 of class 4, 2 of class 3, 2 of class 2, 6 of class 1, five at $1,000 each, 5 at $900 each, 2 at $720 each; telephone operator, $720; office apprentices—2 at $540 each, 2 at $480 each, 3 at $360 each; elevator boys—1, $480; 3 at $360 each; mechanicians—chief, $1,800; 1, $1,600; 1, $1,500; 1, $1,400; 3 at $1,200 each; 4 at $1,000 each; 1, $900; shop apprentices—1, $540; 2 at $480 each; 5 watchmen; skilled woodworkers—1, $1,200; 1, $1,000; 1, $840; skilled laborers—6 at $720 each; draftsman, $1,200; photographer, $1,200; packer, $840; messenger; assistant messenger; superintendent of mechanical plant, $2,500; assistant engineers—1, $1,600; 1, $1,400; 2 at $1,200 each; 1, $1,000; 1, $900; pipefitter, $1,000; 5 firemen; glass blower, $1,600; glassworker, $1,600; electricians—1, $1,200; 1, $900; foreman of janitors and laborers, $840; 12 laborers; janitors—3 at $660 each; 1, $600; 2 female laborers, at $360 each; in all, $348,900.

Mr. DILL. Mr. Chairman, I wish to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Washington offers an amendment, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 125, in line 5, after the figures "$600," strike out "two" and insert "four."

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Will the Clerk read that amendment again. Mr. Chairman, I ask for order.

The amendment was again reported.

Mr. DILL. Mr. Chairman, my reason for proposing this amendment is the fact that these women in this particular bureau are working eight hours a day at $360 a year, and in some departments of the Government the charwomen are being paid $300 for working three and four hours a day. I find that down in the Interior Department these female laborers at $400 a year work four hours a day, while these women in the Bureau of Standards work eight hours a day. And the reason the bureau gives is that they have not enough of them to do the work in four hours.

Now, Mr. Chairman, it seems to me if there is any class of people laboring in the departments of this Government who work eight hours a day who should be given a liberal and decent wage, it is those women who spend their time in cleaning up the office buildings. I do not propose to offer an amendment to raise their salaries, because if I did a point of order would be made. I believe that, when the price of foodstuffs and everything else has increased as it has, if a woman is to receive $360 a year she ought to have the time to work at something else in order to make a living, and if we add these two female laborers these women will have time to work in other places also. I do not believe that even the honorable gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS] thinks that a woman can live on $360 a year even if she has no family to support.

I made the statement a few days ago in speaking about the women laborers in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing that they work eight hours a day down there at $400 a year. I stated that on the information of the assistant director of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. This morning I talked with the director, and he told me that the statement was correct, that those women do work eight hours a day there at $400 a year.

Now, Mr. Chairman, with a country as wealthy and as prosperous as this country is, with the Government taking in such tremendous revenues as this Government is taking in at the present time, with increases of appropriations being made for every department of the Government for almost every purpose, it seems to me that it can ill-afford to continue a system of paying wages to women that makes it impossible for them to live, women working eight hours a day for $360 a year, as is the case in this particular instance. For that reason I believe the committee ought not to oppose this amendment but rather accept it as a matter of justice to these women.

Mr. BORLAND. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DILL. Yes.

Mr. BORLAND. The gentleman realizes that there are 30,000 employees in the District of Columbia who work only seven hours or less a day?

Mr. DILL. Yes.

Mr. BORLAND. And that it costs the taxpayers approximately $5,000,000 a year because of that short day's work. Is the gentleman in favor of a standard of eight hours a day?

Mr. DILL. If the wage is commensurate with the extra hours; yes.

Mr. BORLAND. Assuming it is, is the gentleman in favor of it, then?

Mr. DILL. I will say to the gentleman this: I think if the Government employees did work eight hours a day they would be in much better position to demand an increase of wages, but what I object to is that the Government employees who do work eight hours a day get the poorest wages in the Government service. Take these laborers at $300 and $360 and $400 a year, and they are working eight hours a day, every one of them. Yet these clerks that work seven hours, as the gentleman from Missouri says, are getting wages of from $1,200 to $1,500 a year. I have not in these discussions on the subject of wages at any time proposed to raise the wage of any employee who is getting more than $900. I have been talking repeatedly for the people who were not making enough money to live on. It is a fact that you can not take care of yourself properly on even $600 a year and have any decent standard of living at all, much less on $360 per year. Certainly, this Government ought to be the last government in the world to pay its employees as ridiculously low wages as $360 or $480 or $600 a year for their work, I care not what they do. If the Government uses their time, it should pay them decent wages for that time.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Washington has expired.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman has repeatedly stated that these female laborers work eight hours a day. I do not know from what source the gentleman gets his information. The committee has had before it the Director of the Bureau of Standards and other officials of the bureau and of the department. The gentleman evidently gets his information from some private source with reference to these female laborers. I dare say that if he would ask them they would tell him possibly that they were doing more work than any of the laborers out there at the Bureau of Standards. But the fact is that Dr. Stratton, whom we all know as one of the most useful, able, and splendid gentlemen in the service of the Government of the United States, a man entirely humane and a man who has never shown any hesitation—neither he nor the Secretary of Commerce—to come before the committee and recommend increases of salary when he thought it proper—I say the fact is that Dr. Stratton has not asked for any increased salary for these female laborers, nor has he asked that his force of female laborers be increased from two to four.

Mr. DILL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes.

Mr. DILL. In answer to the gentleman's question as to where I received the information, I will say to him that I procured it from the secretary of the Director of the Bureau of Standards, Mr. Stratton himself not being in this morning. I asked him particularly in order not to make any mistake, and I explained to him that I had been informed that these women worked eight hours a day, and wanted to know if I had been correctly informed. I also called up Mr. Ralph, Chief of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and he tells me that these women at his bureau work eight hours a day.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. The Director of the Bureau of Standards estimated for increases of salary for various members of his force, but he did not ask for any increase with reference to these female laborers, evidently believing that they were receiving the entire amount justified by the services they performed.

Now, the gentleman will note from this appropriation that the Bureau of Standards has 12 laborers and also a foreman of laborers. As to these female laborers, I do not know how many hours they work, but they do very light work, such as cleaning and dusting. It is lighter and the hours not so long as those required of servants in the households of Washington, where the wages paid are much less than that paid to these employees. The amendment of the gentleman does not propose to relieve these female laborers in any way. He simply proposes to increase the force there and to put two more female laborers in the service of the Government at the same price of $360; and the gentleman, instead of relieving the situation from his own point of view, is simply increasing what he calls an injustice that is being done by this Government to some classes of its employees by adding two more at the same standard of wages.

Mr. DILL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes.

Mr. DILL. Does the gentleman believe that a woman who works eight hours a day can live on $360 a year?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I do not for a moment concede, Mr. Chairman, that these female laborers work eight hours a day. I do not know how many hours a day they work, but, I repeat, they do a very light character of work, and the Director of the Bureau of Standards, who is in charge of that work, has not asked that they be given one dollar more than they have been given for the current year or than they were given last year.

Now, I assume that the Director of the Bureau of Standards knows a great deal more about what they are really worth than does the gentleman from Washington or myself or any other Member of this House, because he is there and he knows the class of work they perform, and I insist that we ought not to vote money out of the Treasury and give him additional female laborers when he does not need them and does not ask for them. We ought at least to consult with him as to whether or not their services are needed. I repeat, the amendment of the gentleman from Washington does not propose to relieve, and will not relieve, these female laborers in any sense of the word. It simply proposes to put two useless and unnecessary employees out there at the same salary as those now performing the work, and who are willing and content to do the entire work required of this class of laborers at the salaries they are now receiving.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Tennessee has expired. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Washington [Mr. DILL].

The question was taken, and the chairman announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. DILL. A division, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. A division is demanded.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 18, noes 41.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For rent of buildings in the District of Columbia, $66,500.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Commissioners of conciliation: To enable the Secretary of Labor to exercise the authority vested in him by section 8 of the act creating the Department of Labor, and to appoint commissioners of conciliation, for per diem in lieu of subsistence at not exceeding $4 pursuant to section 13 of the sundry civil act approved August 1, 1914, and traveling expenses, including an executive clerk at $2,000 in the District of Columbia, $75,000.

Mr. CALDWELL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. CALDWELL. I do so for the purpose of calling the attention of the House to the fact that in the preceding paragraph the Assistant Secretary of Labor gets $5,000, and the private secretary of the Assistant Secretary gets $2,100.

Now, every Member of this House does more work than the Assistant Secretary and because of his ability and the character of the work he does is paid $7,500. He has only one clerk, and that one gets only $1,500.

Now, then, in addition to that, that clerk is doing all the work required of him by his principal, and has no help whatever. Yet the Assistant Secretary of the Department of Labor is provided with a clerk at $2,100. So that when we ask here that our clerks be paid $2,000 a year and that we be supplied with a stenographer to be paid $75 a month during the session of Congress, we are not asking for as much as is given to the Assistant Secretary of this department of the Government, and under the circumstances I think it is only fair that this House should consider those things when it is considering the amendment on the roll call.

Mr. Chairman, I withdraw my pro forma amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The pro forma amendment is withdrawn. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Bureau of Labor Statistics: Commissioner, $5,000; chief statistician, who shall also perform the duties of chief clerk, $3,000; 4 statistical experts, at $2,000 each; employees—1 $2,760, 1 $2,520, 3 at $2,280 each, 1 $1,800, 6 at $1,600 each, 7 at $1,400 each, 2 at $1,200 each; special agents—4 at $1,800 each, 6 at $1,600 each, 8 at $1,400 each, 4 at $1,200 each; clerks—7 of class 4, 6 of class 3, 8 of class 2, 14 of class 1, 9 at $1,000 each; 2 copyists; 2 assistant messengers; 2 laborers; in all, $148,280.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. While we are on the subject of labor and labor statistics, I want to ask the member of the committee in charge of the bill [Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee] whether any provision has yet been made to meet the wages of workmen in the various mints of the United States, as requested by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes; there were increases made of the lump sum for wages of labor.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I am referring to a deficiency appropriation that has been asked for to cover the wages of the men employed in various mints, in excess of previous appropriations, because of the heavy demand for coinage.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. That is a matter that will be taken care of, if taken care of at all, in another bill, and not in this bill; but I will say to the gentleman that this bill takes into consideration the alleged deficiencies for this year, and has made a substantial increase in the lump-sum appropriation for the wages of workmen in the mints during the fiscal year 1918.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I have in my hand a letter from the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Newton, dated December 2, in which he states that there is a deficiency in appropriations for wages and contingent expenses, and that so far as the mint at Philadelphia is concerned he may be forced to suspend operations at that institution. That situation, I understand, is aggravated since December 2. Evidently the Director of the Mint is compelled to make contracts or to incur indebtedness in excess of appropriations already made, unless the required amount is appropriated as a deficiency appropriation, and I assume that for him to be compelled to do that would be a very serious matter.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. As the gentleman well knows, that matter is taken care of in the deficiency bill and not in this bill.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Can the gentleman representing the committee state whether any provision has been made for these deficiencies, in order that the work may continue and the wages be paid?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Not being a member of the subcommittee on deficiencies, I am unable to give the gentleman that information.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Does the gentleman know that men have been employed at the Denver Mint, and at San Francisco, who are working now without any authorization of Congress?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. No; I have no information of that kind. The hearings disclosed that there would be a possible deficit in the sum provided for the wages of workmen in these various mints, but as to the exact amount, or how that deficiency arises, of course, I do not know. It is not a matter of inquiry for this bill.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Would this question come before the gentleman's subcommittee? A letter dated December 5 from the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury states that there is now a deficit of $107,500 in the matter of wages due to workmen employed in the various mints, and that unless an appropriation is made to meet those wages there is danger of closing down.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I will state that this bill carries a considerable increase over the sums heretofore allowed for wages of workmen in these mints.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. But does it carry anything to meet the deficiency referred to in the letter of the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Newton, dated December 2, in which he says:

> The depletion of these appropriations is due to the unprecedented demand for coinage, the extraordinary volume of deposits of foreign gold, and the marked rise in all supplies used in the handling of bullion and the execution of coinage.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. No; it does not, for under the rules of the House a deficiency would not be in order on this bill. That is a matter for the deficiency bill, and will doubtless come up later.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. May I ask the gentleman whether a deficiency bill is contemplated that will provide for such deficiencies as are herein reported by the Secretary of the Treasury?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Of course, the gentleman knows that I am not in a position to speak with authority upon that matter, but the gentleman knows that deficiency bills are reported every session of Congress, and undoubtedly if there are deficiencies in any of the departments of the Government a bill will be reported making the proper allowance.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. As to the suggestion that the mints may close down, has the gentleman any information?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I have not.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. CRISP). Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

> Amendment by Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois: On page 132, line 20, strike out the word "four" and insert in lieu thereof the word "eight."

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I reserve a point of order on the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee reserves a point of order.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, this is to provide the additional clerks asked for by the Department of Labor, so that it may do its work more expeditiously and for the greater benefit of the people whom that department was created to serve. I am informed that the difficulty about the work of the Bureau of Labor Statistics is that that bureau has not sufficient help to compile and prepare its report in time to get it before the readers while it is fresh. In other words, the field men go out and search for the necessary information, but after that is obtained there is not a sufficient force to compile it and prepare it for printing, until it becomes stale, when it is not of the value that it would be if it could be received by the people it is supposed to benefit at the time they should receive it.

I believe we are now considering bills in the name of preparedness, for the expenditure of some seven or eight hundred million dollars. I believe we all agree that there is no better preparedness than to preserve the physical and mental resources of our citizenship. This research work, the securing of information as to industrial conditions, accidents and the remedy therefor, hygienic conditions, and so forth, is necessary in order that we may be able to preserve the physical and mental resources of the citizenship of this country. The amount that is asked for that purpose is insignificant compared to what Congress has expended and proposes to expend for preparedness in the building of battleships, yet we are not able to get men enough to man them to-day. Therefore I submit that this amendment, with others that I am prepared to offer, should be accepted by the House.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Tennessee insist on his point of order, or withdraw it?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order on the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. My point of order is that these statistical experts are not authorized by law, and I submit that the burden is on the gentleman to furnish the Chair with the law authorizing the amendment, or making it in order.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, the position taken by the gentleman from Tennessee, it seems to me, is erroneous, for the reason that no matter what you call these employees, whether statistical expert clerks, or what not, they are employed to do the work that the Bureau of Labor statistics was authorized to do by law. It seems to me that it would be a very weak and poorly drawn law that would provide for a bureau or department to do certain kinds of work and then not provide for the procurement of experts or other employees sufficient to do the work in an efficient and expeditious manner. If that is the only ground that the gentleman has for his point of order, it seems to me that it is not well taken.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. CRISP). The Chair would like to ask the gentleman from Tennessee, Does the act creating the bureau provide for the number of statistical experts?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. It did not specify the number; it did not authorize any experts. It provided for a chief clerk and clerical assistance, but there was no authorization in the act for a statistical expert. For that reason four statistical experts were provided for by law by reason of the passage of the last appropriation bill.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, this increase differs from an increase of clerks or laborers or assistant messengers or charwomen. It is to increase the official force of the bureau. The four experts that are carried are made in order by a provision in the legislative bill of last year to this effect:

> The officers and employees of the United States whose salaries are herein provided for are established and continued from year to year to the extent they shall be appropriated for by Congress.

If it had not been for that amendment to the legislative act of last year, these statistical experts would have been subject to a point of order, but all four were authorized by this very provision. Four experts have been authorized, and there is no warrant of law that will provide for an additional number of those officials. You might as well say that if we provided for one Secretary of Labor you could provide for two when there was only one authorized. There have been four experts authorized and not eight.

The CHAIRMAN. Are these experts under the general civil-service law or are they specially provided for by the act?

Mr. STAFFORD. I presume they are civil-service employees, but they are those only provided for by this act.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, the only authority for statistical experts in the Bureau of Labor Statistics is a provision in the current legislative act providing for four such places. There is no authority in the organic act of the Labor Department, nor is there any authority or provision in the Revised Statutes under which it is in order to increase the number of clerks in the classified service of the various departments. These employees are established to the number of four by reason of the provision contained in the current legislative bill, which establishes to the number and extent and character the places provided for in that act. Any increase in compensation, any increase in number, is contrary to the number established by law and not in order in the bill under the rules of the House.

The Chair will recall that for a number of years there was considerable difficulty encountered in the consideration of the legislative bill, because a good many positions had been from time to time provided on appropriation bills, and in many instances the compensation increased above that fixed in the statute creating the place.

That situation resulted on several occasions in the legislative bill being practically emasculated by points of order being interposed. It was to correct that condition that there was inserted two years ago for the first time a provision in the legislative bill which established at the compensation and to the number the positions carried in the legislative act. That was repeated in the current law, so that every position provided for in the current legislative act is established by law to the number provided and at the compensation provided. The only authority for statistical experts in the Bureau of Labor is in the current legislative act, and that establishes four statistical experts in the Bureau of Labor at a compensation of $2,000 a year. There is no authority for additional ones. Any proposal to increase the number is subject to a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. CRISP). The law provides for four statistical experts. The amendment proposing to increase it to eight changes existing law, and therefore the Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois: On page 132, line 21, strike out the word "one" after the comma following the figures 2,760, and insert in lieu thereof the word "two."

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order on the same ground, that it is not authorized by law; that the increase is not authorized by law, and that the law fixes the number which the amendment seeks to increase.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I understand the committee has already increased the number of employees in the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The present provision provides for an increase, and my amendment provides for a further increase. I do not understand what law there is to prohibit Congress that created the department from providing a sufficient number of employees or experts to do the work in an efficient manner. I have never thought of this being attacked on the point of order, and therefore have not looked up the precedents in regard to it. I have nothing further to say about it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule. While it is thoroughly competent ordinarily for the House to pass such legislation as it sees fit increasing the clerical force of any of the departments, yet the House has adopted a rule for its guidance which provides that in considering appropriation bills no amendment shall be in order that legislates; under the law the number of special employees for the Department of Labor are numbered, and this amendment seeks to enlarge that number by adding an additional clerk of the special class. Therefore it changes existing law, and in the opinion of the Chair is not in order upon an appropriation bill. The Chair, consequently, must sustain the point of order.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

Page 132, line 25, strike out the word "seven" and insert the word "nine."

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, this additional clerk hire is necessary for the purpose of doing the work efficiently in the Department of Labor, in the Bureau of Labor Statistics. It seems that it is very difficult to be able to provide for sufficient assistance to do that work as it should be done. I do not know that it is necessary for me to take up the time of the House in making any additional statement in regard to the matter, further than to say that I am convinced that this amendment as well as all of the others is very important, because they tend to secure information which will permit us to properly legislate, and not only that, but permit those who are in charge of the industries of the country to improve the conditions of the working people of the country. I therefore urge the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, the Bureau of Labor Statistics now has 72 persons employed in it. It carries an appropriation of $137,880. The committee allowed 7 additional clerks, 2 of them of class 4, 1 at $1,600, 2 clerks of class 2, and 2 clerks of class 1, making a total of 7 allowed to this particular bureau, which it was believed by the committee would be sufficient to enable it to keep up with its work and keep the work current. That is a considerable increase given to this bureau, and I think I may say that possibly without exception the committee has been more liberal with the Department of Labor and with this bureau than with any other department in the Government in so far as this particular bill is concerned. I submit that having allowed two additional clerks of class 4 and five clerks at salaries ranging from $1,200 to $1,600 a year, that that is all that Congress ought to allow, and I therefore ask that the amendment be voted down.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois) there were—ayes 22, noes 29.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read:

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 132, line 25, strike out the word "six" and insert the word "nine."

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, this is for additional assistance to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. It is very much needed to do the work there in an expeditious manner.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, in this Bureau of Labor Statistics there are at present in the clerical force, from $1,800 down to $1,000, 37 clerks. The committee was more than liberal in providing additional places and opportunities for promotion in this bureau. We increased their force by seven, but we did not increase their force by seven in the lower grade of clerks of $1,000 and $1,200 a year. We gave them two additional clerks in the $1,800 grade, one in the $1,600 grade, two in the $1,400 grade, and two in the $1,200 grade. Those increases will provide for 17 promotions altogether, from $1,000 up. The committee recognized the principle that it has followed throughout the bill of providing additional places in the higher grades, so that the chiefs of the bureaus could give the additional allowances in salaries to efficient clerks whom they would promote from lower positions. Never before in the history of this bill, so far as my memory serves me, has the committee been so liberal in providing additional places in the $1,800 and $1,600 and $1,400 and $1,200 grades. More than 400 places are provided, which will enable the promotion of deserving clerks. The committee was prompted in doing that by reason of the increase in the cost of living. We realized that there was some need for raising the pay on account of the increased cost of living, which is impinging upon all of the clerks in the departments. There were many of us in the committee who believed that the first consideration should be given to those receiving $1,000 and under, but in these higher grade positions the committee has recognized the fact that there is need of providing for an increase in the salaries, and we have left it to the heads of the departments, as only a committee can do in the administration of clerical force, to determine where merit shall be recognized and the salaries increased. In addition to that, the committee has brought in the recommendation to provide every one from $1,800 to $1,200 with a 5 per cent horizontal increase bonus of pay for one year. No one can criticize the action of the committee in the policy that has been pursued, not only with this bureau, but with all bureaus, and having granted them seven additional clerks in this bureau is there anyone who can say that we were not liberal?

Mr. LONDON. Mr. Chairman, I fear that there is a failure to appreciate the importance of the work of the Department of Labor, and particularly of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The Department of Labor is one of the most important departments. There is not the slightest doubt but that the next Congresses will be concerned with labor legislation to a greater extent than any other kind of legislation. With the growing intelligence of the great industrial masses the Congress of the United States will be compelled to take up one labor measure after another. The preparation and systematizing of knowledge on all subjects relating to labor must precede intelligent legislation. The Bureau of Labor Statistics asks for an increased appropriation so that it may continue the study of collective bargaining, so that it may improve the method of collating industrial accident statistics, and make a study of the condition of labor in the coal-mining industry. Take the list of contemplated publications. Additional publications in course of preparation at the end of the fiscal year include the following: Wholesale prices; retail prices; wages and hours of labor in the cotton, woolen, boot and shoe, lumber, and iron and steel industries, and special studies of occupations and processes in these industries; studies of the productivity of labor by occupations in the lumber industry, the boot and shoe industry, and the cotton and woolen industries; union scale of wages; trade schools for girls in Massachusetts; workmen's compensation laws and their administration; accidents and accident prevention in the machine, building, and iron and steel industries; causes of death in cotton-mill occupations; causes of death in industrial employment, as shown by experience of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.; hygiene of the printing trades; mortality from consumption in dusty trades; labor laws and court decisions; administration of labor laws in various States; standards of safety and hygiene in industry required by law or regulation in the different States; foreign labor legislation; wages and working conditions of street railway labor in the United States; profit sharing; what establishment bureaus of employment are doing to reduce the labor turnover and increase regularity of employment; employers' welfare work; work of State and municipal employment bureaus; sick-benefit funds of trade-unions and of establishments; proceedings of annual meetings of international associations of industrial accident boards and commissions and of the American Association of Public Employment Offices; effect of workmen's compensation laws in connection with fatal industrial accidents in minimizing the necessity of the industrial employment of women and children; coal-mine labor legislation in Pennsylvania; protection of the health of workers engaged in the manufacture of high explosives and of coal-tar dyes; housing of working people by employers in the United States; report of the President's board for standardization of first-aid methods; handbook of occupational diseases; purposes and work of the Bureau of Labor Statistics; vocational experience by young people in Boston; a study of the work of State boards of arbitration and conciliation; and the beginning of a series of reports on the history of American trade-unions.

The work of the bureau should not be thwarted. Congress should be more liberal in appropriating funds for the study of those vital problems, so that we may all know more about those things than we know now.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

For per diem at not exceeding $4 in lieu of subsistence, pursuant to section 13 of the sundry civil act approved August 1, 1914, of special agents and employees and for their transportation; experts and temporary assistance for field service outside of the District of Columbia, to be paid at the rate of not exceeding $8 per day; temporary statistical clerks and stenographers in the District of Columbia, to be selected from civil-service registers and to be paid at the rate of not exceeding $100 per month, the same person to be employed for not more than six consecutive months, the total expenditure for such temporary clerical assistance in the District of Columbia not to exceed $6,000; traveling expenses of officers and employees, purchase of reports and materials for reports and bulletins of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, and for subvention to "International Association for Labour Legislation," and necessary expenses connected with representation of the United States Government therein, $65,090.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. The word "subvention" is used here in line 17, page 133. It is a new word in legislation of this kind. Evidently it means a direct appropriation in connection with some convention of the "International Association for Labour Legislation." Is that what it means?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. So I understand. It is a permanent appropriation which the United States Government contributes every year.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Have we been sending delegates to this convention heretofore?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. We have.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. How much money would be included in this subvention?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. One thousand two hundred and fifty dollars.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. And that is all. We send delegates—appointed by whom?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I am not able to inform the gentleman. This $1,250 represents expenses in connection with this association.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Well, "subvention to International Association for Labour Legislation" is covered in the aggregate by an appropriation of $64,090. My inquiry was as to how much the subvention would amount to, and I should also like to know who appoints the representatives of the United States to this international association?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. The expense would amount, as estimated, to $1,250—not exceeding that.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. No salaries?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. No salaries. My understanding of the matter of appointment is that the Department of Labor makes the appointments, but I am not very sure about that.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Is it an annual convention?

My BYRNS of Tennessee. It is an annual convention; yes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. And the convention is held annually?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. In this country or in Europe?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. In this country exclusively?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. It is international; I do not think it is necessarily held in this country.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Does the gentleman know where it meets?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. No; I can not say to the gentleman where it meets, I am frank to say. It has headquarters in Switzerland. It is an organization for the purpose of comparing and unifying labor legislation of the world.

Mr. SISSON. I will state that my information about this matter is not extensive except that the various labor organizations of the country hold a convention. Just how long this has been organized I can not tell the gentleman, but it perhaps antedates the organization of the Department of Labor here in Washington; and the delegates of these labor organizations meet and the Department of Labor sends, as I am informed, a representative to attend that convention, which will be called, as they call other labor conventions, for the purpose of discussing throughout the world questions of legislation affecting labor.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Is the American Federation of Labor represented at that convention?

Mr. SISSON. I think not only that, but I think all labor organizations who are members of this association send delegates there, but just how many labor organizations belong to it I am not informed.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Is the gentleman sure that the Secretary of Labor appoints delegates on behalf of the United States to attend this convention?

Mr. SISSON. I think he selects somebody out of the Department of Labor. I do not know exactly, but I understand he will select some representative from the Department of Labor to attend this convention, not as a delegate as I understand it, but merely to attend the convention for the purpose of securing information as to what is going on.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. And to report back to the Government of the United States?

Mr. SISSON. And to report back to the Secretary of the Department of Labor, as I understand. In other words, that keeps him informed about the labor conditions that are being discussed by the labor organizations throughout the country.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Does the gentleman know that this is an official matter?

Mr. SISSON. It is official only in that the Congress appropriates this money so that the Department of Labor may have representation at such a meeting.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Then, it is an official representation?

Mr. SISSON. Yes; I understand that it is.

The Clerk read as follows:

For books, periodicals, and newspapers for the library the sum of $100 may be expended for newspapers for the purpose of procuring strike data, $1,000.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. I desire, Mr. Chairman, to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 133, after line 23, insert the following item:
"Collective bargaining: To enable the Bureau of Labor Statistics to undertake a study of collective bargaining in the more important industries, and for the employment of suitable persons to conduct such study and for the needed clerical assistants, whether within or outside of the District of Columbia, such persons to be selected in accordance with civil-service regulations, $19,000."

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order on the amendment. It is new legislation.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Will the gentleman withhold the point of order?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I reserve it.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. While I did not hope to be able to secure a withdrawal of the point of order, I wish to say that those of us who have studied industrial questions know something about the great cost of industrial warfare. An investigation of this sort might lead a way to avoid many of those industrial troubles and it would be a great saving to the working people of the country and to the manufacturers of the country. It is a work of great importance to do anything that will tend to bring about peace and good will in the industrial world. It is costing the people of the country entirely too much. Perhaps if there was some great industrial war threatened, where it would tie up the industries of the country and make it a hardship upon the consumers to secure the necessaries of life, throw thousands or hundreds of thousands of men out of work, without hesitation and unanimously we would spend one, two, three, or four, or five hundred thousand dollars to bring it to the proper adjustment.

This is a small amount. It might find a way to avoid these troubles, which is much better than curing the disease after it has been contracted. It is so important, from my point of view, that I am certain if the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS] could see its importance as I do, he would withdraw the point of order and permit this amendment to be adopted.

Mr. COX. What is meant by the phrase, "collective bargaining"? I do not know.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Well, collective bargaining is where organizations of labor bargain with their employers.

Mr. COX. That is, bargaining with employers for price?

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Or wages, or to adjust any differences that might arise, or to secure better conditions by higher wages or other things that labor is seeking to secure to improve its condition. Collective bargaining is the organizations bargaining with their employers for a purpose.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order, and the Clerk will read.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer another amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois offers another amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 132, after line 23, insert the following item:
"Condition of labor in coal-mining industry: To enable the Bureau of Labor Statistics to conduct an investigation of wages, hours, and conditions of labor in the coal-mining industry and to make an industrial survey of that industry, and for the employment of suitable persons to make such investigation, and for needed clerical assistants whether within or outside the District of Columbia, such persons to be selected in accordance with civil-service regulations, $25,000."

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, does the gentleman desire me to reserve the point of order? If so, I will do so in order that the gentleman may discuss his amendment.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. KING] may wish to make some observations on this, as he is familiar with the coal-mining industry, and I will be very glad to yield to him.

Mr. KING. Mr. Chairman, I trust the distinguished gentleman who is representing the committee at this time will be merciful in this particular instance and not press the point of order.

This amendment authorizes a thorough study of wages, hours, conditions of labor, including an industrial survey of coal mining in the United States. It reads as follows:

To enable the Bureau of Labor Statistics to conduct an investigation of wages, hours, and conditions of labor in the coal-mining industry and to make an industrial survey of that industry, and for the employment of suitable persons to make such investigation, and for needed clerical assistance whether within or outside of the District of Columbia, such persons to be selected in accordance with civil-service regulations, $25,000.

For three years every effort has been made to include an investigation of the coal-mining industry in the regular work of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. After trimming other wages work of the bureau to a minimum it was found to be still impossible to cover coal mining, and therefore Congress is asked to assist to the extent of $25,000. This would not be a continuing item; the work would be done in the fiscal year and no request for reenactment of this appropriating clause would be submitted.

There has never been a survey of earnings and general labor conditions in the coal fields of the United States. Individual States have made partial surveys that were very good, but none of these are recent.

With frequent recurrence of industrial conflicts and periods of unrest in the various coal fields, considered in relation to the vital connection of this industry with our domestic and industrial life, no argument should be necessary to show the importance of authentic and impartial information as to the real labor situation in the coal fields—information secured over a wide enough area and upon sufficiently broad principles to satisfy the public and challenge the respect of both parties to all issues.

That is in effect the statement made by this bureau seeking this appropriation.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I live in a country that is dotted with soft-coal mines, springing up everywhere. My own city, for instance, is in the heart of the soft-coal fields. The conditions amongst the soft-coal miners in my district are deplorable. Although we are the center of a coal field, the price of coal has risen continually from 8 cents a bushel to nearly 20 cents a bushel this winter. The other day near my house in the city of Galesburg a man brought in a load of coal, and there were at least six different people who tried to buy that load of coal from that man, and it was impossible for them to make a purchase. They did not have the high price demanded and they could not buy it on credit.

Now, Mr. Chairman, why is it that, with coal surrounding them on all sides, the people of a community are required to pay 20 cents a bushel for it?

In an investigation which I had occasion to make in a lawsuit some time ago I found that the mines were delivering coal to their purchasers at $1.05 a ton. That was in February, three years ago. I also found that the purchasing agents who bought the output of that mine were selling it at Chicago for $3.75 a ton during that winter.

Now, what is the explanation of that? The miner is not getting it, and the mine is not getting it, but the identical men who own the mines constitute the directors of the corporation that was selling the output of that mine, and they put the difference between $1.05, which went to the mines, and $3.75, which the purchaser paid, into their pockets.

Mr. COX. What was the freight haul from your place to Chicago?

Mr. RUCKER. It probably was the same that it was a year ago.

Mr. KING. Yes. It was the same as a year ago. The usual alleged reasons for the high price of coal in the United States are mere moonshine—the lack of cars furnished by the railroads. The railroads are always supplying cars. The trouble is that the selling agencies in the city of Chicago are controlling, in that part of the country at least, the output of coal which the poor people must have.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired. Does the gentleman from Tennessee insist on his point of order?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I have listened with a great deal of interest to what the gentleman has said. I do not undertake to deny the importance of this investigation, but I think it is a matter that ought to come up before the House in a regular legislative way. I think it is a matter that ought to be considered by the committee that has jurisdiction of legislation, and that it is not proper to insert it upon an appropriation bill. Therefore, I must make the point of order, regardless of what my personal views might be.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois offers the amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 133, after line 23, insert the following item:
"Industrial surveys: To enable the Bureau of Labor Statistics to conduct descriptive industrial surveys for determining occupational opportunities and for the employment of suitable persons to conduct such surveys and for needed clerical assistants, whether within or outside the District of Columbia, such persons to be selected in accordance with the civil-service regulations, $21,600."

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on that.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, this would have to do with the supply of labor, or perhaps it would be better to say with the opportunity for workingmen to secure work, and it would also have to do with the employers knowing the resources, where they could secure the sort of labor they desired. Therefore such a provision, such a law, providing for this work to be done, would render great assistance to the industrial world, both to the employer and the employee.

In many of the European countries they have systems similar to that to which this perhaps would lead, and which I studied some years ago, but not recently. I found that those systems have developed industry in some of these European countries, especially in Germany, where there was not such a thing as a tramp. The system took care of the unemployed and pointed out where they could secure employment. Therefore, the result of this would be something that would be of great benefit to the American people.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I want to say again, with reference to this particular amendment, that without questioning the importance of this investigation the committee did not undertake to go into that matter, believing as they did that matters of such importance ought to come before the House in the regular legislative way. They believed, in other words, that this matter ought to come before the House by way of a bill or resolution reported by the regular committee of the House which has jurisdiction of this particular kind of legislation, and that it was improper to insert legislation of this kind in an appropriation bill—legislation which had not been previously considered by the committee and by the House. For that reason I am constrained to make a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained. The Clerk will read.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I have one or two other amendments here, and I see that it is no use to take up the time of the House to offer them. Therefore I will ask unanimous consent to print them in the RECORD at this place.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to print certain amendments in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The following are the proposed amendments referred to:

On page 133, after line 23, insert the following item: "Collation of industrial accident statistics: To enable the Bureau of Labor Statistics to collate State statistics of industrial accidents and to make special studies to determine accident rates by industries and causes, $11,400."

On page 133, after line 23, insert the following: "Government shops: To enable the Bureau of Labor Statistics to conduct investigations of wages and hours of labor to determine prevailing rates for the purpose of adjusting wages in Government shops, $2,800."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Children's Bureau: Chief, $5,000; assistant chief, $2,400; experts—1 on sanitation $2,800, industrial $2,000, social service $2,000, librarian $2,000, statistical $2,000; special agents—1 $1,800, 4 at $1,600 each, 10 at $1,400 each, 12 at $1,200 each; private secretary to chief of bureau, $1,500; clerks—2 of class 4, 4 of class 3, 5 of class 2, 18 of class 1, 10 at $1,000 each; copyist; messenger; in all, $106,640.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. GOOD: At page 134, lines 15 to 22, strike out the paragraph and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Children's Bureau: Chief, $5,000; assistant chief, $5,000; experts—1 on sanitation $2,800, industrial $2,000, social service $2,000, librarian $2,000, statistical $2,000, research $2,000; special agents—1 at $1,800, 4 at $1,600 each, 15 at $1,400 each, 20 at $1,200 each; private secretary to the chief of bureau, $1,500; clerks—administrative $2,000, 5 of class 4, 8 of class 3, 11 of class 2, 25 of class 1, 27 at $1,000 each; 5 copyists; messenger; assistant messenger; in all, $178,760."

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order on the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman reserve his point of order?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. If the gentleman from Iowa wishes to discuss it, I will be glad to reserve it. I did not know he wanted to speak on it.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, the Children's Bureau was established by act of Congress approved April 9, 1912. For the first three years of the life of this bureau we appropriated annually $25,640. That provided for a force of 15 persons. For the last three years we have appropriated $106,640, which provided for a force of 76 persons. I do not believe there is any bureau in any of the departments of the Government that is really doing a greater work for all the people than the Children's Bureau is doing.

The mortality of children is considered in all civilized countries as the best index of the morals and social welfare of a country. This is so well stated by Sir Arthur Newsholme, the great English statistician, that I quote his words:

Infant mortality is the most sensitive index we possess of social welfare. If babies were well born and well cared for, their mortality would be negligible. The infant death rate measures the intelligence, health, and right living of fathers and mothers, the standards of morals and sanitation of communities and governments, the efficiency of physicians, nurses, health officers, and educators.

It is not altogether to our credit that we are lagging far behind much smaller countries than ours in the matter of the protection of the lives of our children. This is an educational question. Information upon it varies in different localities. In some communities, among children of a certain class, as many as 27 per cent of these little babies die before they attain the age of one year; and the investigation that the department has made already leads us to discover certain fundamentals which, if carried to the homes of these people, will save a great many of the children. Think of it! It is estimated that last year more than 300,000 little babies under 12 months old died in the United States. In 1910 in the city of New York out of every 5 deaths 1 was an infant under 12 months of age. More deaths of infants under 12 months are occurring every day than from tuberculosis in all forms and of persons of all ages. Where the fathers and mothers of these children have been told how to take care of them, how and on what to feed them, and how to house them the death rate has materially decreased.

Little New Zealand is far ahead of us. She commenced the investigation before we did, and when she commenced the investigation the death rate of children under 12 months was over 9 per cent. Since that investigation they have reduced the death rate of infants of all ages in New Zealand to 5 per cent, and they have reduced the death rate of infants under 12 months to 3§ per cent, while in the United States the death rate of infants is more than 13 per cent. Here we have a paltry sum as compared with what is necessary to carry on this investigation.

The amendment I have offered is subject to a point of order. It is the estimate of that splendid woman who is at the head of this bureau. She is doing a great work and should have all she asks for. It is her estimate of what it will cost to carry on this great work, and I feel that the chairman of the committee ought not to make a point of order, but ought to let us take up this question and discuss it like men—for we are not boys—and decide what force is necessary to carry on this work in an intelligent and forceful way, and then make the appropriation accordingly.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. CALDWELL. Mr. Chairman, I should like to be heard on that.

Mr. GOOD. I am going to offer another amendment on the same subject.

Mr. CALDWELL. Then I will ask recognition when that amendment is offered.

Mr. GOOD. I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. GOOD: At the end of line 22, page 134, insert a new paragraph, as follows:

"To investigate and report upon matters pertaining to the welfare of children and child life, and especially to investigate the question of infant mortality, $72,120."

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order on that amendment that it is not authorized by law.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will listen to the gentleman on the point of order.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, the bill carries a lump-sum appropriation for identically this kind of work; but I want to submit to the gentleman from Iowa that even if this amendment be adopted, it does not in any sense increase the force here in the city of Washington, because under the law those employed under this lump sum could not be used here in the city of Washington, but must be used entirely for field work; and if the gentleman, by introducing this amendment, seeks to increase the clerical force here in the District of Columbia certainly this amendment will not do it.

Mr. GOOD. I am not seeking to increase the clerical force here in Washington. That can not be done in this way.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman insist on his point of order?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I do not think that the amendment is in order, in view of the succeeding paragraph, which undertakes to make an appropriation for the field work of this bureau. There is an item already carried in the bill for that.

The CHAIRMAN. On what page and line is that?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. On page 134, beginning at line 23.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi). The Chair thinks it is not the province of the Chair to pass upon the effect of the appropriation. The law of 1912 was passed on by Chairman GARNER in 1914, and the Chair thinks the point of order is not well taken, and overrules the point of order.

Mr. CALDWELL. Mr. Chairman, I desire to say something in behalf of this amendment. Representing as I do a part of the great congested district of the city of New York, and because of the experience I have had with this great work, and because of the results that have been obtained in the second congressional district of the State of New York, which I have the honor to represent, I feel that this additional appropriation would be an entirely proper thing to grant. I have taken occasion to call upon this department for assistance. They have responded willingly as far as their appropriations would permit; but we have many demands for a great deal more than can be done under the current appropriation. So therefore I want to ask those who have the welfare of the congested district in the great city of New York at heart to give us an opportunity to carry on this work that has done so much good.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Chairman, speaking in behalf of the rural districts, I want to say that having a personal knowledge of the work that this department has been doing, I believe there is no work of the United States Government departments that deserves more credit than that of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor and that of Miss Julia C. Lathrop, Chief of this Children's Bureau. The work she has done in my district deserves the commendation of the people, and I would be false to my trust if I did not raise my voice in behalf of this appropriation so as to be able to continue and further extend her good work, because I know that 95 per cent, if not 100 per cent, of the people in my district are in favor of extending this bureau and of giving Miss Lathrop more power and more money for this great work, and I am therefore in favor of larger appropriations, so that she may continue the splendid work she has done and the work that is contemplated, and particularly that which is set forth in her last report, her fourth annual report to the Congress. It shows what can be done and what ought to be done, and I trust that this amendment will be adopted unanimously. The fourth annual report of this bureau contains many good reasons for the enlarged appropriation for the work contemplated by it.

That children's welfare from babyhood to adolescence is bound up with industrial conditions is emphasized by this recent work of the Federal Children's Bureau, of which the chief, Miss Lathrop, tells in this report.

A study of infant mortality in Manchester, N. H., completed this year, adds new evidence that when the fathers' earnings are low or the mothers work out of the home the infant mortality rate is exceptionally high. In Manchester it varies from 1 death among every 4 babies where fathers earn less than $450 to 1 death among every 16 babies where fathers earn $1,050 or more.

Miss Lathrop's report refers to the effect of living conditions upon mothers, and points out that the sickness or death of the mother lessens the baby's chances for life and health. The bureau has prepared a statistical study of maternal mortality, and finds that 15,000 mothers die year by year in this country from largely preventable causes incident to maternity and that the death rate from maternal causes has not decreased since 1900. Miss Lathrop says in commenting upon this fact:

The means of prevention are the instruction of the mother, skilled supervision before the birth of her child, and suitable care during confinement. But she must have also nourishing food and sufficient rest and freedom from anxiety—in other words, decent living conditions.

Then the bureau has been concerned with the protection of the child itself from premature employment. It has published all the child-labor laws in the United States and has completed a report on the administration of the employment certificate system in New York State. In commenting upon the new Federal child-labor law as marking a distinct advance in the attitude of this Nation toward that one-third of its population which is under 16 years of age, Miss Lathrop says:

Merely keeping the breath of life in children is valueless to the Nation unless they are brought on to adult life trained masters of their full powers of body and mind. The law is a national measure, and all attainable information for a better understanding of the ways in which the children it sets free from labor may be started in life should be furnished by a national study.

It is a matter of speculation as to what proportion of children at work are dependent upon their own earnings or support families in whole or in part. Also, the number of dependent children now supported by public and private funds is unknown. In fact—our ignorance of the whole field of dependency is great.

The report gives figures about Philadelphia indicating that the majority of dependent children are members of families, and the question of protecting them is a question of family structure and support. Preliminary work toward a study of dependency has been done by the bureau, and Miss Lathrop expresses the hope that Congress may direct the Children's Bureau to make a special inquiry into the condition of the children to be affected by the Federal law.

Why are there so many deaths among country babies and country mothers? And what should the Federal Government do about it? Miss Lathrop in this report describes its new rural studies of child and maternal welfare which combine a scientific inquiry with work of immediately practical value to the children of the neighborhoods visited, and suggests a constructive plan for the future.

The report gives many reasons for extending this rural work. First, the Census Bureau's figures show average infant mortality rates in the rural districts higher than the mortality rates found by the Children's Bureau in the more prosperous sections of the cities which it has studied.

Again, the census figures show a markedly high death rate among country women of child-bearing age for which a large number of preventable deaths from maternal causes appears to be responsible. It is estimated that more than 15,000 women die year by year in the United States from conditions incident to maternity, while the extent of unnecessary ill health is at present unknown. "The sickness or death of a mother inevitably lessens the chances of her baby for life and health, and it is plain that the question of maternal care in rural districts is of genuine public interest."

An argument for better care of rural childhood is based on the high percentage of physical defects among children in rural schools given in reports of State boards of health. Miss Lathrop concludes:

These comparisons are a strong indication that there is room for great permanent improvement in maternal and child welfare in rural districts. The day when all children shall be well born and well cared for is far ahead, but surely that day should dawn first for the country.

In connection with the bureau's rural studies a child-hygiene expert holds a children's health conference, to which parents bring their children for examination and advice about daily care (but not for medical diagnosis or treatment). Parents have shown great eagerness for this kind of help in the counties already visited, bringing their children often long distances, over bad roads, and even sacrificing farm work for the journey.

State and other local officials are urging the bureau to cooperate with them in similar studies and demonstrations in many States, and a number of rural units to extend this work are among the items for which the bureau asks a larger staff and appropriation. Miss Lathrop believes that such Federal studies, making plain the necessity and suggesting a method are bound to lead toward adequate local provision for maternal and child welfare.

May I have unanimous consent to extend my remarks?

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the request will be granted.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, the Children's Bureau was created a little over four years ago—five years ago next spring, I believe. It has more than justified the fondest anticipations of its friends. There was a prolonged consideration of the subject before the bureau was created. It was finally created. The office of chief of the bureau was filled by the appointment of Miss Julia C. Lathrop, who was appointed by President Taft and continued in office by President Wilson. No one has suggested that there ever was in any way whatever any partisan consideration in the action of the bureau.

We are going to appropriate at this session of Congress possibly close to $2,000,000,000, a large share of which will be for the purpose of possible engagement in the destruction of human beings through defensive war. It seems to me that we may well add a little to the appropriation to save the babies of the country. This bureau is engaged very largely in giving needed information to present and future mothers of the country in order that they may properly care for the babies that are born into the world. We are adding by this amendment less than $100,000. One hundred thousand dollars can well be saved. We can afford to make this appropriation, we can afford to give these mothers of the country this little assistance. I hope that this committee and this House will not feel that it is extravagant, but only doing a small mite of justice in promoting the welfare of the children and babies of the country. God bless them. [Applause.]

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Chairman, I have been somewhat surprised, as I think many must have been, who have known the facts, that the only increase that we have ever been able to obtain for this bureau of the Government has been obtained as we are endeavoring to do now, on the floor of the House. I understand the position of the gentlemen of the committee who in general are endeavoring to keep down the appropriations of the Government. I have nothing but words of praise for them, especially this subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations. In this bill I think they have kept as closely as possible to the necessary expenditures of the Government. In a general way their record is good.

Mr. BORLAND. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TOWNER. Yes.

Mr. BORLAND. The gentleman may be aware that the original law creating this bureau limited the amount of the appropriation. The original act defines what shall be the operating expenses of the bureau. That is the reason that changes were made on the floor of the House.

Mr. TOWNER. That would hardly apply to an amendment of this character. As already stated, the United States of America, which ought to be foremost in this kind of work, is lagging behind almost every civilized nation of the world in regard to it. Other nations are devoting large expenditures for the purposes in furtherance of which this bureau was created. Certainly nothing could more appeal to the broad humanitarian spirit of the age than work of this character. And it is so particularly advantageous, it is so immediately beneficial, it brings results that every one can see so easily are in the highest degree desirable that it certainly ought to appeal to even those who are the most economically inclined. All over the United States we find conditions existing where a mere increase of knowledge would bring immensely better conditions. It is in many cases absolutely true that infant mortality is dependent on knowledge and care. We now have a percentage of 13 of infant mortality, and it is estimated that it may be reduced to 3 or 4 per cent by the wide dissemination of such knowledge as this department is sending out everywhere to the people of the United States.

Take the question of the care of the infants during the first 12 months of their lives. It is shown that by the dissemination of knowledge made available by this department a betterment of conditions has resulted which causes a saving of lives that is nothing less than marvelous. In many cases infant mortality has been reduced more than one-half merely by knowledge disseminated by this bureau. Not only are they doing that class of work, but they are doing an important work in furnishing the mothers with knowledge in regard to prenatal conditions that have so much to do with the health of the infant after it comes into the world.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Chairman, I ask for five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

Mr. TOWNER. They have sent out a bulletin to the mothers on this very important subject, and it is wonderful how large the demand is for this bulletin in the country districts where aid is not easily procured and in the mining and mountain districts where they can not easily have the services of a physician. The bulletins printed in regard to this have gone into the homes of those who are soon to become mothers, and they have blessed the Government for sending to them information in that most trying period of a mother's life. This increase is merely to extend and make more general the application of this knowledge to the people everywhere that it may be needed and desired. I think no one who has had anything to do with the management of this most admirable bureau of the department but has been led to express in highest terms his admiration for the way in which it has been managed. Miss Julia C. Lathrop, in my judgment, is the woman best fitted for this work in all the world to-day. Her fame is not bound by this Nation by any means, because the result of her work and the suggestions of this department have gone into every civilized nation in the world because of the remarkable ability and practical value displayed under the present management. All of the assistants, those immediately engaged with Miss Lathrop, seem inspired with a like spirit and work with the highest philanthropic aims. There is no work that appeals more nearly to that which is highest and best for the cause of humanity than the work of this bureau. In my judgment, to refuse the needed increases from year to year that are demanded by this department would be a reflection upon the Congress of the United States. I do not believe that on either side of this House there can be this feeling. I know that men sometimes object to this class of legislation because they say it is an undue extension of governmental powers, but in this and similar instances there is no possible way in which this work can be done except by the General Government, and we all know that there is continually coming from the people more of a demand for service in the social betterment of the citizens of the land. We all know that this is the class of legislation that most directly appeals to the hearts and consciences of the American people, and so I sincerely hope that there will be no opposition on the part of the committee to this amendment and that the membership of the House will understand that if there can be any possible increase justified in any appropriation or in any bureau of this Government it is most certainly justified in this instance. [Applause.]

Mr. BARNHART. Mr. Chairman, I have always been or tried to be an advocate of consistent economy. I have assisted as far as my best judgment has always dictated in keeping the expenditures of the Government as low as possible, that they might be in harmony with the legitimate needs of public welfare. Fifteen years of my life have been partly devoted to the duties incident to the care and keeping of the delinquents and unfortunates in my State, and during those years I have learned to my everlasting satisfaction that about 75 per cent and sometimes more of the unfortunates that go into our State institutions and become public charges are there not of their own volition but because of some defect due to environment or heredity. They are there because some ancestor or evil environment had imbued them with criminality or mental misfortune. I believe that the Children's Bureau is the longest step in the direction of creating better health and therefore more happiness for the people of the United States than any other legislative enactment on which I have ever voted, and I want to see it strengthened. I want to see it strengthened for several reasons, and especially for the reason that it furnishes so much comfort and hope for the motherhood of the country. I do not know how it may be in other districts, but in my district I know that the young mothers of the district are associating themselves into mothers' clubs for the betterment of child life, and they are not asking me for information, but going direct to the Children's Bureau. They are doing this not because of lack of information on the upbringing of their own little ones, but because they are ambitious to contribute to less fortunate mothers the knowledge that the Children's Bureau of this country may give, and I hope the increase that is asked for in this appropriation may be granted. Inasmuch as we are so ready to furnish means of keeping and drilling men to take human life, I want to see something done in the direction of protecting and preserivng it, and I believe that the enacting of legislation of this sort is going to do more to make better conditions for future humanity and the trips of the little white hearses less frequent than anything we can do, and to that end I am heartily in favor of this amendment. [Applause.] As for me, I want to go slow in spending public money in doubtful experiments of any kind, but when it comes to conserving the future health and happiness of the people I would rather spend thousands too much than to lack one dollar of meeting a requirement of human welfare. [Applause.]

Mr. SISSON. Mr. Chairman, the Committee on Appropriations in dealing with this matter has been liberal with this bureau. In 1915 $25,000 were appropriated and then $81,000 additional. From 1913 down to 1917 in this city this office has increased over $75,000. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa does not increase the force in Washington, but increases or attempts to increase a field force which is not organized, nor does the law provide for a field force. This bureau when it was created was intended for the purpose of furnishing information to the country. It can not take charge of the children. It can only furnish the information. Now, if this $78,000 additional which the gentleman from Iowa is asking for goes in the bill in this form, then the $78,000 can not be used, because it can not be used here in the District, and it can not be used in the field force, for the reason that the work done by the Children's Bureau is nothing more nor less than the sending out of documents and pamphlets. Some investigation is made, it is true, but the chief work of the bureau is to send out information in reference to child life.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SISSON. Yes.

Mr. KEATING. I merely want to ask the gentleman if he contends that the work of the Children's Bureau should be confined to the city of Washington and that under the law——

Mr. SISSON. I am not contending that it should.

Mr. KEATING. And that under the law the bureau is not authorized to conduct any investigation outside of the city of Washington.

Mr. SISSON. No; I said except to conduct investigation.

Mr. KEATING. Would not that be the work of the field force?

Mr. SISSON. There is a separate fund for that, and it has nothing to do with this particular item here. There is another item in the bill providing for investigation.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SISSON. If I have the time. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. MANN. Is it not a fact that the force now provided in the Children's Bureau was first provided in a bill where the House inserted an item just exactly like this over the protest of my genial friend from Mississippi?

Mr. SISSON. I do not think that at that time I was on this subcommittee. I was a member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. MANN. That is the way it got in, is it not?

Mr. SISSON. That is not a reason why it should be done in that way now.

Mr. MANN. That may not be a reason, but that shows how to do it.

Mr. SISSON. The question is this: Whether or not in this department in Washington this money is needed? In the first place, there is not a State in the Union that does not maintain a department of health. Great sums of money are expended by the State looking after the health of its communities. In addition to that, every county in the United States, so far as I know, maintains a county health department. In addition to that, the Federal Government spends on the Bureau of Health, that of which Dr. Blue is the head, over $20,000,000; and in a great deal of the work done by the Children's Bureau, if you will investigate the pamphlets which were prepared in the medical department of the Government under Dr. Blue's supervision, you will find many of those reports sent out in the past have been nothing but duplications of those documents.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the gentleman have five minutes additional.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from Mississippi may proceed for five minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. SISSON. I realize fully the sentiment to which men appeal, and if you should appeal to the business mind and business judgment of the Congress, and not to their sentiment, you would find infinitely less disposition to duplicate work we are now duplicating. If the Children's Bureau is to look after the health of the children, it ought to be in the Department of Health, where they can get the benefit of all of the information in that department. But they are now doing a similar work in that department, gentlemen of the committee, and spending a great deal of money in investigating children's diseases, in caring for children, and have been for a number of years sending out that information; so when you increase this appropriation to $78,000 you are doing nothing more or less than duplicating the work done by the Bureau of Health. But when you make an appeal to people in the interest of children, if the demand were for $10,000,000, you would get it just as easily if you consult your sentiments. I do not want gentlemen to consult the mere question of sentimentality. The information that is sent out reaches an infinitesimally small part of the motherhood of the country. Doctors all over the country that I know are giving that information which medical science can bring to bear upon all of these questions, and they have made marvelous strides and marvelous progress. I do not know just how far the Federal Government is going. I do not know whether they will go to the extent of sending men to the bedside of the sick. I do not know whether they are going to provide physicians and nurses by the Government, but there must be some limit somewhere to the growth of this bureau; and with the growth of this bureau from $25,000 to over $100,000, and then when you add the increase for the field force and other increases, no department in the Government has increased so rapidly, and that rapid increase has been due to the very kind of speeches which have been made here to-day. They do not tell you practically what is being done. They simply say in general terms they are doing so much for the children.

Go back to your districts, go back to your homes, and ask for the specific cases and for the specific mothers who have gotten this information, and you will find to your amazement they are extremely few. But when you make an appeal to expend money out of the Federal Treasury for purposes of this kind it is only necessary to make an appeal; nothing further is said or thought of what goes with the fund. I am just as much interested in their health in the future and in the welfare of children as anybody. I have children of my own. I believe that nothing can be done for the children that would be cheaply done, but the States of the Union maintain public schools, maintain physicians to supervise those schools. They have investigations conducted by the county and by the State in reference to the health in the institutions and the physicians themselves in the States hand out all the information with reference to child life, doing duty in the public schools, and the department under Dr. Blue has physicians there who make a specialty of studying children's diseases and sending out these documents which doctors throughthe country are asking for, and this is a mere duplication of some of the statistical information and a duplication of work or a cut almost made literally in many cases from documents prepared by the Department of Health here. Therefore I can see no earthly use in increasing this appropriation $78,000.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I do not want to cut anybody off, but I would like to have some agreement for time for debate upon this amendment.

Mr. KEATING. Count me in for five minutes.

Mr. BENNET. I would like to have five minutes.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. And I wish five minutes. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the debate on this amendment close in 25 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee asks unanimous consent that the debate on this amendment close in 25 minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, there ought to be some agreement as to how this time is to be divided.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I do not think over five gentlemen desire to talk.

Mr. SISSON. I will state to the gentleman from Iowa there has only been one speech made by a member of the committee.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I do not think there has been over 10 minutes in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. MANN. There has only been used about 10 minutes in favor of it.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I beg the gentleman's pardon.

Mr. MANN. I did not take over five minutes, and none of the rest of the gentlemen did.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. There were three or four speeches made in favor of it. I will say 30 minutes, 15 minutes to be controlled by myself and 15 minutes by the gentleman from Iowa.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee asks unanimous consent that all debate close on this amendment in 30 minutes, 15 minutes of which is to be under the control of the gentleman from Iowa and 15 minutes under the control of the gentleman from Tennessee. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears no objection. The gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield two minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. BENNET].

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Chairman, the State which I have the honor to represent in part is in the category of States mentioned by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. SISSON], which already do a great deal for the children. We do have school nurses and we do have investigations in relation to children. But, I say very frankly, there is not a constituency of the 43 Members from the State of New York but that would support the Member representing that constituency in a vote in favor of this amendment concerned with this comparatively small amount of $72,000.

In the State of New York we believe in the conservation of children. It is quite true we believe in preparedness, and we vote large sums to the Army and Navy gladly, but we are even more willing, and I know I speak for the entire 43 Members, to act for these humanitarian ideas which tend to the betterment of the race. I hope that this proposition will carry largely.

I yield back the rest of my time.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, how much time does the gentleman from New York yield back?

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. CASEY). The gentleman from New York has used one minute.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KEATING].

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Chairman, I hope the House will adopt the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD]. When Congress passed the bill creating the Children's Bureau it did not intend that the bureau should be placed in a straitjacket. I am certain it was the thought of Congress that the work of the bureau should be developed in a natural fashion.

The bureau has been in existence four years. For the first two years Miss Lathrop was satisfied with the appropriation which took care of the office force in the District of Columbia.

Then on the floor of this House she was given a lump-sum appropriation for the purpose of extending the work throughout the country. Now she has come to Congress with a request for an extension of this work, and naturally that extension will require more money.

If her requests are granted, we will expend on this bureau something over $300,000. That is a very good beginning, but personally I hope to live to see the day when this bureau will be spending millions of dollars and spending those millions for the care of the children of the United States.

It is not a question of how much money you spend in this cause. The sole question we should ask is, Is the money being properly expended? In other words, are we getting a dollar of value for every dollar we expend? And I am confident, Mr. Chairman, that every man familiar with the work of the Children's Bureau is prepared to vouch for the truth of the statement that we are getting a dollar's worth of value for every dollar we expend. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, the child is the most important thing in the world, for upon the children of to-day depends the civilization of to-morrow.

Within a short time we will be called upon to consider the military and naval appropriation bills. We will vote more than $800,000,000 to purchase or construct the machinery with which human lives may be destroyed. Before we enter on that gruesome work let us pause for a few minutes to appropriate the trifling sum suggested for the upkeep of an institution designed to conserve human life.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD].

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, those of us who oppose the increased allowance can not be put into the attitude of opposing the work of this bureau. If the Members of this House were acquainted with the activities under the direction of the present chief they might not be so sympathetically inclined to this amendment. It was called to our attention in the hearings that work is being done in certain fields that are not national but purely local. In Baltimore they are engaged on the question of infant mortality, a purely municipal matter. In Delaware we find them infringing on the work of the Bureau of Public Health in investigating the condition of the feebleminded, a function of the Board of Public Health of that State and pertaining solely to it, and to which investigation the State is not contributing one cent. To Baltimore, for instance, the chief of this bureau, an estimable woman, sends its representatives, at $1,400 a year, and pays them at the rate of $4 per diem extra for every day in the year, when their home is virtually in Baltimore.

This proposition is one that purely provides for an increase of salaries. The head of the bureau comes before Congress to-day and asks for an increase of appropriation of $164,000, doubling almost the appropriation that is now provided. Here are the estimates, and they show that she wants to increase the salaries of these officials. She has one assistant for which she wants to provide an increase of $2,600, and there is another she wants to employ at $3,500. During the last fiscal year she had a force of 77, 65 temporary assistants, employed at a total expenditure of $13,000. She only intends to employ permanently 66, with an expenditure of $46,900.

The question before the House is whether you are going to run wild with sentiment. She has the idea of having a traveling railroad car going around the country like the Fish Commission has, displaying the work of this bureau. Perhaps that is very commendable, but there would be no harm in moving slowly. We believe there are certain activities, and it is supported by the testimony, as to the work in Baltimore and Delaware, where the money appropriated for those activities can be utilized in these other lines for which she is asking appropriation. When you find a bureau running wild with expenditure, is it the province of the committee which is charged with a detailed investigation of this matter to also run wild? We are all interested in children's welfare, but your committee believed there were ample funds under the existing appropriation that could carry on this work in a reasonable, rational way, rather than being stampeded by the activity of a very commendable woman at the head of a bureau of this Government. We have treated this bureau in no wise differently than any other bureau of the Government. Just because it is presided over by a woman is no reason why we should adopt a different policy. We have amply provided funds in our appropriation to carry on the legitimate work of the bureau, but we did not believe it was wise to have her provided with funds to duplicate work that naturally belongs to the Public Health Service and the Bureau of Education.

This amendment is to be followed by another carrying $52,000. I would call upon those on this side to consider the economy phase of the proposals. If we are going to be launched into these activities all at once, multiplying the appropriations of every bureau 100 per cent a year, where are we going to land? The appropriation carried in the bill provides ample funds for the bureau to continue its proper functions, but does not provide funds for launching into fields of endeavor properly within the province of other bureaus.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Cox].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I do not often find myself advocating an increased appropriation over that recommended by the committee.

Mr. BENNET. Amen! [Laughter.]

Mr. COX. But whenever I find children at stake I will not hesitate, and I will not let a few paltry dollars stand between them and my vote. I will not hesitate to support an increased appropriation when I know that that appropriation will bring life, health, happiness, prosperity, and comfort to some lonely home in this land. [Applause.]

For many years there has been an agitation going on in this country for the conservation of our national resources. The Agricultural appropriation bill carries millions of dollars for the protection of our national forests. For many years there has been an agitation going on for the conservation of other national resources, to wit, our great waterways, oil, gas, and so forth, all of which I have been for, and all of which I am for to-day. Yet the great resources of our Nation to-day lie not in our national forests, lie not in our rivers, gas and oil wells, but our great national resources are in our homes, in our children, in our families. If this little appropriation could save the life of one child—it is only $78,000—and the membership of this House should be convinced that that appropriation would save the life of one child, we would raise that amount out of our own pockets in 30 seconds. We would not pause a moment. I repeat that if we were convinced that by raising a private subscription here of $78,000 we could save the life of one little child, we would pay it out of our pockets.

Now, my friend from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD], for whom I have the profoundest respect, says they are going to run cars over this country as an object lesson. He says that is in contemplation. Suppose they are. That is the very thing that the railroads are doing to-day. That is the very thing that the great agricultural colleges are doing—running cars all over the United States, in connection with the railroads, stopping at the various railroad stations and teaching the farmers how to pack their eggs, how to put up their butter in shape, how to ship apples and other kinds of produce to market.

I was here when the Bureau of Mines was established. If my recollection is correct, that bureau started out with an appropriation of $50,000 a year. That bureau is now expending a little more than a million dollars a year, and I take it for granted that that appropriation has had a tendency to reduce the death rate in the mining industry of the country. The Bureau of Mines is constantly and continuously engaged in running cars and presenting object lessons in the various mining districts of this country showing and teaching the miners how they can best take care of and preserve their lives.

If Miss Lathrop, the head of the Children's Bureau, by the operation of a car—if she can preserve the life of one child—let her have the money necessary to do it. This Congress will appropriate between $600,000,000 and $800,000,000 for the Army and Navy of the Union, in my opinion, which will be used to fight the graveyards of Europe. The official statements as to the revenues for the fiscal year 1918 and the estimated expenditures for the same year mean that 94 per cent of all the revenues that we are going to collect in 1918 are going to be used to prepare for wars or to pay for past wars in the way of pensions. If Congress can have the nerve to do that, to appropriate between $600,000,000 and $800,000,000 to build up a powerful Army and to establish a great Navy in this country, in my opinion the money will be well spent if we spend $78,000 to take care of the little children of the country. They are our natural resources. The militarists tell us that the first line of defense of a country is in the Navy and that the second line is in its coast-line fortifications and that its third line of defense is in the Army. I deny that. The first line of defense of this or any other country is the children of the country [applause], and if by any appropriation or any amount of money there can be built up in this country a strong, active fighting race of men and women who are able to take care of themselves, that money, in my judgment, will be well and economically expended. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Indiana has expired.

Mr. COX. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Chairman, to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the gentleman's request?

There was no objection.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DAVIS].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas is recognized for three minutes.

Mr. DAVIS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, the sum total of all conservation is the conservation of the human race. The same God that in benign love held a little child up and said, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven," said to the fathers of the universe that he who provided not for his own household was worse than an infidel.

The principal element, the sublime element, of every household is the little buds on the stem of life that cluster around the threshhold of the family altar, and an appropriation that seeks to protect and guard, guide and defend the woman in gestation, to bring forth a child and protect it in its tender, helpless age while it is here and develop it into ripened and matured manhood is the grandest of all conservation.

I am for increasing this appropriation and keeping it sufficient to protect, guard, and guide the hapless, hopeless little ones that come into our complex civilization, often amid tenements of squalor, unprovided for, unprotected, and unhelped. I am for the appropriation. [Applause.]

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, I am rather surprised that we should hesitate to increase the appropriation for the Children's Bureau by $72,000. Last year we increased the appropriation for foot-and-mouth disease by $2,500,000. We appropriated over $360,000 for hog cholera. We appropriated hundreds of thousands of dollars for the eradication of the southern cattle tick, of the cotton-boll weevil, and other things of that kind. But when it comes to making an appropriation at all commensurate with the great work of the Children's Bureau we hesitate and quibble.

Gentlemen say there is a duplication of work. I deny that there is in the least any duplication of work performed by the Children's Bureau and the Public Health Service. It is to the credit of these two services of the Government that there is complete agreement and complete coordination with regard to their work.

During the last year there was conducted under the Children's Bureau what was known as Baby Week. It was an educational campaign. It cost some money, it is true. It was carried on in 2,082 communities throughout the United States; but this Government did not pay all of the expenses of that campaign out of the Treasury. Out in Los Angeles, Cal., the county commissioners appropriated out of the treasury of that county $1,000, and private individuals appropriated or gave $500 more for the campaign. In 2,082 communities they carried the gospel to mothers of little infants, telling them how to care for them, how to protect and prolong their lives. Think of it! This great Nation, the richest nation in the world, follows New Zealand, instead of leading all the countries in the world in the preservation of the lives and health of its infants. In New Zealand they have reduced the death rate of infants under 12 months of age to 3.8 per cent, while in the United States more than 125 infants out of every 1,000 die before they attain the age of 12 months.

But gentlemen says that this money is wrongfully expended, that we are expending this money in Baltimore and not in Washington. Yes; we are in Baltimore, just as we went into other cities and towns throughout the United States. We went to Manchester, N. H., where some very valuable information was obtained. How can we obtain these facts? How can the Children's Bureau ascertain any fact that is worth knowing without going to representative communities throughout the United States and conducting an investigation? That is just what this money is wanted for. It was never intended that the lives and health of the infants of the city of Washington only should be investigated. It was intended that a general survey should be made covering the whole United States, and that we should make ample appropriations to make that survey and ascertain why it is that in a certain locality as many as 270 little babies out of every 1,000 die every year. That is the work that Miss Lathrop has been doing, and that is the purpose of this amendment. In order to be fair with the House I will say that when this amendment is adopted, as I am confident it will be—because I have enough faith in the intelligence of this House to believe that they will not halt when it comes to the exercise of their duty in providing for this great work—I shall then offer another amendment to take care of the contingent expense of carrying on this additional work. [Applause.]

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I am perfectly well aware how impossible it is to stem the tide of appeals to sentiment; but I do think that before the House votes upon this proposition we ought to stop and look it squarely in the face, with some degree of reason for such action as we may take.

There has been no argument made here upon this amendment, nothing except a pure appeal to sentiment. Now, let us see what are the facts with reference to this particular bureau. I yield to no man upon this floor in my loyalty to this bureau and the great work that it is accomplishing. I am entirely in accord with the bureau and I appreciate what it is doing. But, gentlemen, we should look at this matter cooly and calmly. The law was passed about four years ago. When that law was passed the number of employees and clerks who should be employed was written into the statute, and if I am not mistaken the argument was made upon the floor of the House at the time that the appropriation would never be increased; and in order to prevent that appropriation being increased the law provided something that no other law creating any bureau ever provided. It was written into the statute the number of employees who should be employed in that bureau, so that in the future a point of order would lie against the attempt of any Member to increase that force. That was only four years ago. Two years ago, as has been stated, an amendment was offered appropriating a lump sum in addition to the appropriation for the clerical force, and the House adopted that amendment. The result has been that within two years after the creation of that bureau, notwithstanding the fact that the friends of the measure stated at the time that it never would cost more than $25,640, we find the appropriation increased to $164,640, or an increase of over 640 per cent in two years, and that is what the bill carries to-day. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD] has offered an amendment here seeking to provide an increase of over $72,000, and he tells you with the utmost frankness and candor that when you adopt this amendment he proposes to come forward with another amendment of a similar amount.

Mr. GOOD. Not a similar amount, but a larger amount.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Will the gentleman state how much?

Mr. GOOD. Increasing the amount from $58,000 to $95,000—to strike out $58,000 and insert $95,000.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. The gentleman according to his own statement—and we appreciate his candor—proposes to follow this amendment with another amendment increasing the appropriation still further by the sum of $37,000, which would make an increase of over 1,000 per cent over and above what it was confidently stated here four years ago this bureau would cost the Government.

Now, I say I am in thorough sympathy with this bureau. I am in thorough sympathy with the work that is being done; but I want to ask you gentlemen, do you propose here, within four years after the creation of this bureau, to increase this appropriation to the extent of over 1,000 per cent? As the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD] and the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. SISSON] have well said, this bureau—and I make the statement without fear of successful contradiction—is duplicating in some respects the work that is being done to-day by the Bureau of Public Health and the Bureau of Education. No one will deny the truth of that statement if he will take the pains to inquire into some of the things being done.

In making this statement I am not personally criticizing the splendid chief of this bureau, because she is enthusiastic in her work. She has it at heart. She is much interested in it; but, gentlemen, I say to you, we ought to pause and hesitate before we at this time, purely on account of an appeal to our sentiment and not to our reason, vote upon the people an increase of over 1,000 per cent over and above what it was said four years ago would be necessary to run this bureau.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Will the gentleman state what was the amount of the estimates this year?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. The amount of the estimates was over $352,000.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. What did the committee allow?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. One hundred and sixty-four thousand six hundred and forty dollars. Now, as the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD] said a moment ago, the head of this bureau told the committee that it was her purpose if the appropriation was allowed to run a railway demonstration car all over the country, costing $20,000 for equipment, and so forth. I do not know whether you gentlemen want that done or not, but I want to say that in the condition of our Treasury to-day, facing as we are a deficit, facing as we are a probable large bond issue, we ought to hesitate a long time before we undertake to increase appropriations to the amount that this amendment seeks to increase this appropriation. This is no time to unduly increase the burdens of our Government, however much a particular work may appeal to us for either personal or sentimental reasons.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee) there were—ayes 141, noes 39.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For traveling expenses and per diem in lieu of subsistence at not exceeding $4, pursuant to section 13 of the sundry civil act approved August 1, 1914, of officers, special agents, and other employees of the Children's Bureau; employment of experts and temporary assistants, to be paid at a rate not exceeding $8 a day, and of interpreters, to be paid at a rate not exceeding $4 a day when actually employed; purchase of reports and material for the publications of the Children's Bureau, books of reference, newspapers, and periodicals, including the advance payment of subscriptions for the same, for newspaper clippings to enable the Children's Bureau to secure data regarding the progress of legislation affecting children and the activities of public and private organizations dealing with children, and for reprints from State, city, and private publications for distribution when said reprints can be procured more cheaply than they can be printed by the Government, $58,000.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

Line 16, page 135, strike out the figures "$58,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$95,000."

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman from Iowa does not care to inform the House what is intended to be done with this increased appropriation, I will. At the present time the appropriation carries $58,000. Of that amount, $13,000 is expended for services. It is proposed to increase the salaries of the field officers, who now receive $13,000, so that they will receive $46,900. In addition to the estimate for $31,000 for travel allowance, the head of the bureau wants to increase that to $100,000. She wants the privilege granted to the assistants and employees of the bureau to go around the country at the expense of the Government to attend meetings of all kinds. Of course, we may single out this bureau presided over by this exemplary woman for special favor, but that rests with the committee. We have refused such allowances to bureaus presided over by men, including investigations pertaining to labor matters. It is purely a case where you are running wild with expenditure. It is the only bureau which allows to its employees assigned to a certain place for an indefinite period a per diem of $4 for every day in the year, including Sundays and holidays. We have corrected that abuse in the Postal Service and in other services several years ago, but because this is the Children's Bureau appealing to the sympathy of all of us, of course, it should have carte blanche and be allowed to pay extravagant salaries and a per diem allowance for every day in the year, including holidays and Sundays, no matter whether the employees are at home where they perform the work or not.

Mr. HELVERING. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STAFFORD. Yes.

Mr. HELVERING. You say the experts receive $1,400 a year?

Mr. STAFFORD. The clerks in the field receive $1,400, in addition to their per diem of $4 per day for every day in the year.

Mr. HELVERING. If they are experts, that is not an exorbitant price, is it?

Mr. STAFFORD. The head of the bureau wishes to increase them to $2,500, plus the per diem, which makes it far more than we are paying for any similar service of the Government.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, according to the statement submitted by the chief of the bureau it is proposed to expend for travel and subsistence and other field expenses, including office rent, telephones, and so forth, $100,000; for reports and material for bureau publications and reprints, $5,500; for books, newspapers, periodicals, and clippings, $1,000; for exhibit material, including rental and equipment of demonstration car, $20,000. The pending amendment, I presume, is intended to authorize the equipment of a car to be hauled over the country at the expense of the people, and to make it possible to rent offices and telephones all over the country. All very well, no doubt. But should we not at least pause a moment and think of the taxpayer, who seems to receive so little consideration when we come to vote upon some of the amendments proposed?

I noticed, Mr. Chairman, that upon the amendment voted on a few moments ago gentlemen on the Republican side voted almost solidly for the amendment, joining with a few Democrats on this side. I trust that hereafter we will not hear any criticism on the other side of the Chamber of the Democratic Party for running expenses of the Government up to an enormous extent. Certainly it does not lie in the mouths of the gentlemen on the other side, who are aiding in raising appropriations on this bill and whose votes have made it possible for these increases to be made, to criticize Democrats for increased appropriations and expenditures of the Government. I expect this amendment to be adopted, but I hope that gentlemen, at least on this side of the Chamber, will realize that we are facing a possible deficit in our Treasury next year, and that while the Republicans may continue, as they have consistently done in the past, to make it possible to pile up these appropriations, after all, we will be held responsible for them. I hope we will remember who will have to pay the bills. We have already given this bureau an increase of over $72,000 by way of a lump sum, and why should we increase this particular lump sum of $58,000 by $37,000?

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee) there were—ayes 103, noes 49.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

National park commissioners: For commissioners in the Crater Lake, Glacier, Mount Rainier, and Yellowstone National Parks, at $1,500 each, $6,000. The provisions of section 21 of the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation act approved May 28, 1896, shall not be construed as impairing the rights of said commissioners to receive the salaries provided herein.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of getting some information. My recollection is that Congress last session passed a bill putting all of these parks under one commissioner. Did that finally become a law?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. The gentleman means the national park service bill?

Mr. COX. Yes.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. That became a law.

Mr. COX. As I recollect it, that bill provided for one commissioner. This provision here is for three or four commissioners.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. These commissioners are all authorized by special act.

Mr. COX. If that bill to which I refer provides for one commissioner, what is the necessity for these?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. The official to whom the gentleman from Indiana refers was to be the superintendent of all the parks. These are commissioners for the respective parks.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, I would state to the gentleman from Indiana that these commissioners correspond to the ordinary United States commissioners that are attached to the district courts throughout the States. They are men who examine first offenders and commit them for trial. These are judicial officers. They are in the nature of a justice of the peace. When a man is apprehended in one of the national parks he is taken before the United States commissioner, and there must be a United States commissioner attached to each park.

Mr. COX. That explains it satisfactorily. What is the necessity for this language—

Shall not be construed as impairing the rights of said commissioners to receive the salaries provided herein.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. That statute fixes the fees paid to United States commissioners. There are no fees, of course, in the parks, or if any they do not amount to anything, and as these commissioners get no fees therefore a salary is provided for them.

Mr. COX. They are on a separate salary?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes.

Mr. COX. I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

For rent of necessary quarters in Washington, D. C., and elsewhere, $7,000; books, periodicals, stationery, supplies, traveling expenses, freight, telephone and telegraph, heat, light, a power service, drugs, chemicals, cleansers, furniture, and printing; pay of bailiffs and all other necessary employees not otherwise specifically provided for; and such other miscellaneous expenses as may be approved by the presiding judge, $5,660; in all, $12,660.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I call the attention of the chairman of the committee to the fact that in line 15, page 139, there is a typographical error. The article "a" should be "and," so as to make it read "heat, light, and power service," and I ask unanimous consent that the correction be made.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the correction will be made.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

For custodian of the building occupied by the Court of Claims, $500, to be paid on the order of the court, notwithstanding section 1765 of the Revised Statutes or section 3 of the act of June 20, 1874.

Mr. SISSON. Mr. Chairman, I would like the attention of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] for a moment. I reserved the point of order on an amendment he offered providing extra pay to the Chaplain until I could look into the matter. I desire now, after having conferred with the gentleman, to withdraw the point of order and to suggest that we take a vote upon the gentleman's amendment at this time.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that we may return to that paragraph, page 12, line 15, for the purpose of offering the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 12, at the end of line 15, amend by inserting the following: "and $600 additional so long as the position is held by the present incumbent."

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Mississippi withdraw his point of order?

Mr. SISSON. Yes.

Mr. CALDWELL rose.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CALDWELL. Mr. Chairman, I rose to make this suggestion. If this is necessary for the Chaplain, and I am in favor of it, ought it not to be made available at the present time instead of waiting until the fiscal year?

Mr. MANN. I will say to the gentleman from New York that I expect to introduce a resolution, which will go to the Committee on Accounts, taking care of the rest of the present year.

Mr. CALDWELL. That is perfectly satisfactory.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 140, to follow line 20, insert:

"No part of any amount herein appropriated shall be used to pay salaries or for personal services in any executive department of the Government in the city of Washington which does not, subject to the provisions and exceptions of section 7 of the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation act approved March 15, 1898, require eight hours of labor each day."

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, on that I reserve the point of order.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, I do not think the amendment is subject to the point of order.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I make the point of order.

Mr. BORLAND. I would just as soon discuss that now. I call the attention of the Chair to the fact that this is a limitation on the appropriations carried in this bill. It is the same limitation that was offered to the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill last session, which was passed on by the then Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, the gentleman from Georgia, Mr. CRISP, after an extended debate. The ruling at that time was that it was a valid limitation, and I am satisfied the Chair will concur in that ruling.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would like to ask the gentleman if this amendment is in the exact wording of that amendment at the last session?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes; and I can refer the Chair to the book and page. It was passed on at the last session on March 4, 1916, at page 4713 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Tennessee desire to be heard?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I am willing to submit the matter to the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, the present attitude of the House encourages me to believe that it will vote for any measure for economy in the Federal expenditures. I am quite certain that the sentiment which prevails here in the consideration of this bill is such that all I have to do is to say this decreases the Federal expenditures in order to get practically your unanimous vote. Most of you know there are some 470,000 Federal employees in the classified civil service. Of that number about 35,000 are in the city of Washington. Of the latter number about 7,000 work in the departments where the eight-hour day prevails. About 28,000 work in departments where the seven-hour day prevails. All of those who are outside of the District of Columbia, numbering nearly 440,000 employees, are required to work eight hours or longer. So that we have, apparently upon its face, an unjust discrimination or special privilege affecting about 7 per cent of the classified employees of the country, all of them being embraced in a few of the great executive departments here that are very close in touch with the business and financial interests of the District of Columbia. The failure of Congress to require an honest day's work on the part of the employees costs the Federal Government approximately $5,000,000 a year. We talk about saving a few dollars in this department or that department when we are to-day expending $5,000,000 of the people's money for a short day's service of our own employees who are closer to us and more immediately under our supervision than any other set of men. I am satisfied that the great bulk of these men, live and efficient employees, are as willing to work the full standard day of eight hours as they would be to work for a private employer the standard day of eight hours if Congress laid down that rule and made them do it. But there is a very powerful interest in the District of Columbia representing the merchants and landlords, who get all of the clerks' money eventually, who are opposed to any retrenchment and reform.

In other words, in plain English, gentlemen, you are asked whether you are going to vote a $5,000,000 slice of "pork" to the merchants and landlords of the District of Columbia. Now, that is all there is to it. There is no particular hardship upon any competent and ambitious employee in compelling him to work the standard day. If the man in the shop can work an eight-hour day, as he does in the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, in the Government Printing Office, and in the Government Ordnance Factory, the clerk in the department can work eight hours. I need not say the business inconvenience of the short day in the departments of Washington affects every business man who comes here to transact business with the Government. It is a constant source of annoyance, a constant source of delay, and a constant source of expense. I have long since ceased to defend that kind of business management in the departments of Washington. I tell my constituents plainly that it is an abuse and ought to be abolished. We are confronted, as the chairman of the committee has told you, with constantly increasing burdens of the Government. We need every dollar of the Federal revenue for the just, necessary, and unavoidable expenses of the Federal Government. There is no justification whatever for paying out $5,000,000 of the taxpayers' money for the advantage of a few landlords, merchants, and financial interests of the District of Columbia. You have to choose between the interests of the District of Columbia, viewed simply as the commercial and business interests, and the interests of the taxpayers of the country. You have no reason to fear any hardship to the men who are required to work eight hours, for you are now requiring men who work in your own districts in the Federal service to work eight hours and longer. You are now requiring the men in all mechanical pursuits in the District of Columbia to work eight hours and longer. You must regard this simply and solely as a Christmas present to the business interests of the District of Columbia. You will find there is more pressure, more abuse heaped upon the heads of Congress, more whips cracked over the heads of Members of Congress by people in the District of Columbia who are not Members of Congress, who are not in the Federal service, than comes from your taxpayers or from the Federal employees themselves. You are confronting an influence and power which does not represent either the taxpayers nor the employees of the Government, but which represents the financial interests of the people here in the District of Columbia. Now, as a matter of fact, there is a sentiment here, and every man knows it——

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, I would ask for two minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri asks unanimous consent that he be allowed to proceed for two minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. BORLAND (continuing). To see that the Federal Government expends as much money as possible in the District of Columbia and get as little in return for it as possible. I am glad to say that does not come from the clerks themselves. It certainly does not come from your taxpayers and constituents. It does not come from the Members of Congress; but it comes from the powerful, well-knit, long-continued organizations in the District of Columbia. You must choose, then, between efficiency and economy in the Federal Service and the special private interests here in the District of Columbia. I want to emphasize again that we have got to provide at this session of Congress to meet the extraordinary expenses of the Government, even though we issue bonds to do it. Is there a gentleman here, when he comes to vote upon taxing his constituents by issuing bonds in the name of the Federal Government, who would be willing to have that coupled with a vote to perpetuate the special privilege of a short day's work for the employees of the Federal Government in the District here? Can you justify yourselves for handing out a slice of $5,000,000 of pork for the financial interests of the District of Columbia? Put them on each side of the scales, your obligation of raising taxes to support this Government and your obligation to see that these taxes are expended for an honest day's work.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND].

The question was taken, and the Chair announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. BORLAND. Division, Mr. Chairman.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 44, noes 85.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 5. That in expending appropriations made in this act persons in the classified service at Washington D. C., shall not be detailed for service outside of the District of Columbia except for or in connection with work pertaining directly to the service at the seat of government of the department or other Government establishment from which the detail is made: Provided, That nothing in this section shall be deemed to apply to the investigation of any matter or the preparation, prosecution, or defense of any suit by the Department of Justice.

Mr. BARNHART. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BARNHART] is recognized.

Mr. BARNHART. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 142, after line 15, insert as a new section the following: "That hereafter the members of the Joint Committee on Printing who are reelected to the succeeding Congress shall continue as members of said committee until their successors are chosen: Provided, That the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives shall, on the last day of a Congress, appoint Members of their respective Houses who have been elected to the succeeding Congress to fill any vacancies which may then be about to occur on said committee, and such appointees and the members of said committee who have been reelected shall continue until their successors are chosen. The Joint Committee on Printing when Congress is not in session shall exercise all the powers and duties devolving upon said committee as provided by law the same as when Congress is in session."

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order.

Mr. BARNHART. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this proposed new section is to give the membership of the House control of its printing during a session when the committee organizations may not have been affected. In two recent special sessions of Congress the House was at the mercy, so to speak, of the members of the Joint Committee on Printing of the Senate, and we had necessarily to go to the Senate joint committee to get any printing done for the House that was necessary. The purpose of this amendment is simply to do this, To give the Speaker of the House the same privilege that the President of the Senate now exercises and which is done under the rule of the Senate and by a statutory enactment, viz, to continue the members of the Joint Committee on Printing of the House and Senate until their successors have been elected.

Under the present rule on the 4th of next March the membership of the Joint Committee on Printing of the House will have become officially extinct, and from that time until the Congress meets again it will be necessary for the membership of the House, if it wants to have any printing done, not only to go to the Senate members of the joint committee for it, but the sole charge of all the printing of the House will be in the keeping of these Senators as well as the direction of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. This amendment simply provides that the House shall have an equal share in the say so on the printing for the Congress until the new committees are appointed.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARNHART. I yield.

Mr. STAFFORD. Has the gentleman prepared any resolution embodying the idea of the amendment proposed, and has it been submitted to the committee and adopted?

Mr. BARNHART. This resolution has passed the House twice in the printing bill, and the Senate has passed it once, conceding thereby that it is eminently fair to both bodies. The amendment merely asks for just treatment of the House in that we have charge of our own printing during vacation and when the House has no Committee on Printing.

Mr. ALMON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARNHART. Yes.

Mr. ALMON. Do I understand the members of the joint committee will be Members of the next Congress?

Mr. BARNHART. Not unless and until they are reelected as such; and it provides that the Speaker shall, as he does with the Committee on Accounts, appoint Members to service until the reorganization of the House. I admit that the resolution is subject to a point of order, but the chairman of the Committee on Printing went before the Subcommittee on Appropriations and submitted the matter, and while they hesitated about putting a legislative proposition in the bill, after conference with members of that committee and with other leaders of the House they agreed with me that it is an important matter and should here be offered. This is probably the only place we can insert it at this time, and it belongs in this bill if it can not be enacted in the printing bill, which is not likely to again come up in this short session.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin withdraws the point of order, and the question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BARNHART].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY] is recognized.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I object to the gentleman violating the rule against a protest. The gentleman desires to debate a motion that is not debatable.

Mr. HENRY. I am stating a question.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I do not desire to have the gentleman state a question.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY].

The question was taken, and the Chair announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. HENRY. Division, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. BARNHART. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. Many Members do not understand what this is all about.

The CHAIRMAN. The motion is not debatable. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Texas.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 72, noes 36.

So the motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 18542) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, and for other purposes, and had come to no resolution thereon.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I offer a privileged resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union reports that that committee has had under consideration the bill H. R. 18542, and has come to no resolution thereon.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I offer a privileged resolution from the Committee on Rules.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 409 (H. Rept. 1224).

Resolved, That it shall be in order to consider an amendment to a bill (H. R. 18542) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, and for other purposes, as follows, notwithstanding the general rules of the House:

"That to provide during the fiscal year 1918 for increased compensation at the rate of 10 per cent per annum to employees who receive salaries at a rate of compensation less than $1,200, and for increased compensation at the rate of 5 per cent per annum to employees who receive salaries at a rate not more than $1,800 per annum and not less than $1,200 per annum, so much as may be necessary is appropriated: Provided, That this section shall only apply to the employees of the Library of Congress, the Botanic Garden, and the executive and judicial establishments who are appropriated for in this act specifically and under lump sums or whose employment is authorized herein: Provided further, That detailed reports shall be submitted to Congress on the first day of the next session showing the number of persons, grades, or character of positions, the original rates of compensation, and the increased rates of compensation provided for herein": And be it further

Resolved, That no amendment shall be in order in the consideration of the foregoing amendment changing existing law beyond the fiscal year 1918, nor shall any amendment be in order relating to the compensation of employees not appropriated for in H. R. 18542.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas moves the previous question on the resolution. The question is on agreeing to that motion.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The previous question is ordered.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, that gives 20 minutes to the chairman of the Committee on Rules?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas is entitled to 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL] is entitled to 20.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Is the gentleman from Kansas opposed to the rule?

The SPEAKER. The Chair can not answer.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, I am not opposed to the rule. I am in favor of the rule.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Then I object to the gentleman controlling the time against it.

The SPEAKER. Is any member of the Rules Committee opposed to this rule? If not, the Chair will recognize somebody that is opposed to it.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, inasmuch as no one seems opposed to it and the rule is very plain, I do not believe I care to discuss it at this time, and shall reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MANN. Oh, that is not fair. Tell us what it means. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HENRY. I will.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentlemen suspend just half a minute? The Chair wants to know if there is anybody who wants this 20 minutes of time.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Yes; I do.

Mr. MANN. That question does not arise until the gentleman from Texas takes his seat. The Chair can not recognize anybody now.

The SPEAKER. The Chair knows he can not recognize anybody, but the Chair wants to get this thing straight for the membership of the House and for himself.

Mr. MANN. I wanted to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. HENRY. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. MANN. Under the provisions of this rule, will it be possible to make the increase apply before next July?

Mr. HENRY. The gentleman asks will it be possible to make it apply before next July?

Mr. MANN. Yes.

Mr. HENRY. No; it is only to make this amendment to section 6 in order for consideration.

Mr. MANN. The rule does not shut out amendments. The rule provides that there shall be no amendments offered beyond 1918. Now, does it also, by implication, mean that no amendment can be offered relating to a time before the fiscal year 1918?

Mr. HENRY. I do not think so. I think you can offer any amendment that is germane.

Mr. MANN. I knew you could offer any amendment that is germane.

Mr. HENRY. I think you can offer the one that the gentleman suggests.

Mr. MANN. But this rule would, as I understand it, permit an amendment which would give to the employees of the Congress the same increase that is given to the employees of the President.

Mr. HENRY. I will state that we tried to make the privilege of amendment just as broad as possible under the special rule, so that all these amendments could be considered.

Mr. MANN. I do not want to express an opinion, but I should not think it very broad, with a thousand years ahead of you, if you could not offer an amendment to take effect before 1918.

Mr. HENRY. I think that sort of an amendment could be offered. The rule is plain. It means to throw open section 6 of this bill to amendment, and this amendment embraces Mr. FITZGERALD'S resolution No. 406, subject to amendment; that is, amendments shall be in order for consideration. The way he originally drew the amendment was this:

Resolved, That it shall be in order to vote upon the adoption or rejection of an amendment—

To this appropriation bill. Upon the adoption or rejection of an amendment—a thing never heard of in this House before—and without meaning to disclose committee secrets, I do not believe anyone was discovered in the Committee on Rules who was willing to report that sort of a resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] is recognized to control the time in opposition to the rule.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, we have just witnessed the most remarkable spectacle in my experience in this House. The chairman of the Committee on Rules, without consultation with the member in charge of the bill on the floor of the House, or with any member of the committee which reported the bill, undertook to take control of the business of the House in order to present this rule. The gentleman did not ask that a member of the committee move that the committee rise because he had a rule to present, but with that assumption of authority which has characterized his conduct since he became chairman of the Committee on Rules, supplanting that czar of whom so much complaint was formerly made, he treated with contempt the members of the committee. He presumed to take the proceedings of the House under his own control, and moved that the committee rise, to offer the pending resolution as a substitute for one proposed by me on behalf of those who prepared the legislative bill.

The Committee on Appropriations gave a good deal of consideration to the question of increasing to some extent the compensation of Government employees. There were suggestions too numerous to be mentioned in any brief compass of time. When it was realized that if the average compensation to Government employees were only $500 per annum, a 10 per cent increase would amount to $22,000,000, and that if the average compensation of Government employees were $1,000, the increase would amount to $45,000,000, it was understood that, facing a deficit of $284,000,000, very careful consideration must be given to whatever was proposed. To precipitate a discussion to increase without even the information necessary to justify it meant that we might permanently add to the burdens of the people a sum that might easily reach $100,000,000 a year without a single dollar of return in added service to the Government. It was in view of these circumstances that I was requested to prepare a rule which would give the House an opportunity to vote upon the simple question of whether for the period of one year there should be an increase of 10 per cent in compensations up to $1,200 and 5 per cent from $1,200 to $1,800.

It was realized that whatever was done on this bill must necessarily be applied to all the employees of the Government; and realizing the magnitude of the sum involved, the committee did not wish to precipitate this question upon the House unprepared and ill-informed. Our committee itself were unable to obtain information definitely determining just how much these proposals would add to the expenditures, excepting to ascertain that on this bill it would not exceed about $3,000,000. To prevent a riot of extravagance, I conferred with members of the Committee on Rules, including the chairman. I stated the position of the Committee on Appropriations, the difficulties surrounding the committee, the desire to do something—not perhaps what everyone would consider full justice nor to the mind of everyone would fully meet the requirements, but to do something—to meet the situation. I said that the committee, because of the situation, would prefer not to have a rule reported unless the one that was proposed should be reported, because it did not believe that in the time that would be available it would be possible in a comprehensive manner to discuss and properly consider a wholesale proposal for increases, bearing in mind our obligations to protect the Treasury. There were some intimations that I might be invited before the committee. I was not. I received information informally that the committee would not report the proposed rule because it did not permit the Members to propose amendments to the provision; and yet the committee, saving its face by changing the rule, brings it in, restricting the amendments that may be offered but permitting amendments to be offered increasing to any extent the rates of compensation to be paid.

Mr. Speaker, other committees of this House besides the Committee on Appropriations have some responsibilities. The Committee on Rules has some obligations in theory, although in practice, since it has been created under the present system, it has not given any indication that it has knowledge of that fact. It has no right to precipitate upon this House an unbaked proposition. I do not know, and no man in this House can tell, what will be the effect of some amendments that will be proposed, and I am unwilling to vote to have considered amendments of every character which, because of the sympathy that may be aroused, because of the desire of Members to do something to alleviate the conditions of some persons who may in their opinion be insufficiently paid, may favor, although unable to determine fully, their effect.

I have heretofore referred to the fact that the estimates submitted to Congress disclose that there will be a deficit in the next fiscal year of $284,000,000, but that does not tell all. Within an hour I have received a message from the War Department stating that in order to continue making payments to dependent families of the National Guard now stationed on the border an appropriation of $8,500,000 additional is necessary to continue the payments from now until the 30th of next June. That is $8,500,000 not considered in estimating the probable deficit. Other items will be submitted from time to time, of which we now have no knowledge; but it is clearly apparent that in the next fiscal year there will be a deficit in the Treasury in excess of $300,000,000. We can not get that money from the air. There is no plant that can furnish that money. It must come from the pockets of the taxpayers of the country. We must raise between $200,000,000 and $300,000,000 in the next fiscal year, and if we do not raise it by taxation we must get it by borrowing it on the credit of the Government. To borrow it would serve no useful purpose. It would merely be a temporary expedient, and it would not give that permanent increase in revenue which is imperative. With such a situation as that in the Treasury I am unwilling to take up for consideration propositions that may increase the financial burdens of the country and the predicted deficit anywhere from $45,000,000 to $100,000,000 a year.

Mr. Speaker, I have no particular joy in attempting to stop money being spent in a way that will benefit some persons in whom we are all interested. I know it is a much more pleasant task to be gracious and liberal with the public money to employees of the Government. But, Mr. Speaker, in this oasis where taxpayers seem to be unknown, some one must occasionally raise even a feeble voice in protest against the things that are proposed to increase their eternal and ever-increasing burdens. I resent the action of this Committee on Rules which is supposed to be operating for the protection of the Treasury, for the protection of the House, for the manner in which it has acted on this occasion. Perhaps it is readily explainable, when it is remembered that whatever may be the political complexion of the next House that there will be a different individual at the head of that committee.

I am opposed to this rule, and I shall vote against it. I appeal to those men who have the real interests of the Government at heart, who are not trying to play petty and picayune politics, who have some sense of their responsibility to the country, to vote down the rule. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GARRETT. Will the gentleman from Texas yield me two minutes?

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee two minutes.

Mr. GARRETT. Mr. Speaker, I requested this time in order to make a statement which is made necessary, so far as I am personally concerned, by the remark of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY], the chairman of the Committee on Rules, just as he concluded his statement, to the effect that no member of the Committee on Rules was found to favor the resolution presented to the committee which was introduced by the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD]. It is not customary for gentlemen to state what occurred in the committee room——

Mr. HENRY. The gentleman from Tennessee is correct, and I wish to withdraw that statement. I had another matter in mind, and the statement was incorrect.

The SPEAKER. It is absolutely against the rule to reveal what occurred in the committee room.

Mr. GARRETT. Mr. Speaker, I do not object to the remark of the gentleman from Texas and have no objection to my action in committee room being known, and I do, in justice to myself, wish to say that I did favor the resolution offered by the gentleman from New York. After that failed, however, I was not willing as a member of the Committee on Rules to put myself in antagonism to the only resolution which the Committee on Rules seemed willing to adopt which would permit the House to consider this question of the adjustment of the salaries of Government clerks.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT].

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] has cast some very severe strictures on the Committee on Rules. With his quarrel with the chairman I have no concern, but I do want to say a word concerning my view of the obligations and responsibilities of the Committee on Rules. The gentleman from New York is obviously of the opinion that when his committee, or any other committee, asks the Committee on Rules for a rule, that that committee thereupon becomes merely the adjunct of the committee, and that the Committee on Rules must report such a rule as his committee asks for, or report no rule at all.

Mr. Speaker, I have a different idea of the obligations of the committee. It is the province of the Committee on Appropriations to ask the Committee on Rules for any rule it chooses, but when it does refer a resolution to that committee its jurisdiction over that resolution is gone, and it thereupon becomes the duty of the Committee on Rules to examine that matter, to amend the rule in any way that it chooses.

Now, with reference to this rule, what did the Committee on Appropriations report this section for? Was it a play? The gentleman from New York knows full well that it must have gone out of the bill if a point of order was made to it. If the point of order was waived it was open to amendment in every way, and to wider amendment than that proposed by the Committee on Rules in this resolution.

Does the gentleman from New York contend that it was the province of his committee to determine and say that this House should accept the judgment of his committee blindly without any opportunity to consider or amend the judgment of that committee? Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Rules during this Democratic administration has committed many outrages on this House, but I am glad to say that up to this day it has never reported a resolution closing all right of amendment. I am glad it has not done so in this case.

The speech of the gentleman from New York implies but one thing only—that he is afraid to trust the membership of this House to act upon one thing that his committee and himself have exercised their judgment upon. But this resolution now before this House does simply that one thing. We have guarded it so that the House will exercise its judgment upon the one question that the Committee on Appropriations exercised its judgment upon, and that is a temporary increase of salaries during the fiscal year of 1918, and that it shall apply only to the employees provided for in this bill. I am amazed that any Member of this House should stand before the House and say that the membership should not have any opportunity to exercise its own judgment upon a matter reported from any committee, even the great Committee on Appropriations. [Applause.] I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL].

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, I voted for the amended rule, and I am in favor of it. I voted for it because I believe that the Members of this House have the right to say whether or not they will amend a matter of great importance considered in an appropriation bill before this House. There is no matter now in the bill that has engaged so much attention as the item we are about to reach, and there is no question that it is subject to a point of order.

The object of the rule introduced by the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] was to have a vote upon that important question without debate or amendment. The Committee on Rules thought that it was of great importance that the Members of this House should have the right not only to amend it if the House saw fit, but debate it; and I am not afraid, and I hope I shall not be afraid hereafter, to submit matters of great importance to the Members of this House and let them decide whether or not they are in favor of increasing or reducing appropriations. I believe that they have at heart not only the welfare of the taxpayers, in whom the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] has so much solicitude at this time, but also of those for whom appropriation bills are passed, and that they will balance the equities and the justice as between those who pay and those who receive. This resolution simply saves to this House the right to say whether or not in the consideration of an important matter that matter shall be subject to amendment and debate; and I submit that even at this time a Democratic committee ought not to urge upon the Congress of the United States the adoption of a resolution that would absolutely close both amendment and debate upon a matter of very vital importance.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CAMPBELL. Yes.

Mr. GORDON. Why did you limit the right to amend beyond one year by this rule?

Mr. CAMPBELL. We are appropriating for one year in this bill, and we limited the amendment to matters that were absolutely germane to the bill. That was the only thing to be considered.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Kansas has expired.

Mr. HENRY. Does the gentleman from New York wish to use any more of his time? There will be but one more speech upon our side.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Not unless some one desires to speak.

Mr. OGLESBY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Yes.

Mr. OGLESBY. I would like to ask the gentleman to explain the difference between this rule and the rule proposed by the Committee on Appropriations. I have listened as best I could, but have not yet been able to understand the difference.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, the rule proposed by the Committee on Appropriations did not, as the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL] has stated, preclude debate. It provided that the House should vote upon the question of adopting or rejecting the proposed increases. Debate would be in order, because there was no restriction upon it whatever.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Yes.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Under what rule of the House would debate have been in order?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Under the rules of the House which provide, first, that if an amendment is proposed in the House whoever gets the floor is entitled to an hour, and anyone else getting the floor would be entitled to an hour; while if it were proposed in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, it would be debated under the five-minute rule. Anyone sufficiently familiar with the rules to understand them would know that the proposed rule would not cut off debate, but that it left the proposition subject to debate as any other provision would be.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Yes.

Mr. CAMPBELL. This was not an amendment offered upon the floor. It could not be debated under the five-minute rule, could it?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, it would depend upon when it was proposed.

Mr. CAMPBELL. And the rule specifically provided that it should simply be voted upon.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Oh, no; it did not. I have not a copy of the rule before me, but as I drew it I know what is in it—unlike some other gentlemen. I can state it without looking at it. The rule provided that it should be in order to vote upon the adoption or rejection, as an amendment to the bill H. R. 18542 of the following provisions, which was set forth at length. Mr. Speaker, I know enough about the rules of the House to know that that did not cut off debate upon the proposition, but permitted not only discussion, but a vote upon the specific proposition whether there should be an increase of 10 per cent on compensations up to $1,200 and 5 per cent on compensations from $1,200 to $1,800. The Committee on Rules, proclaiming to be anxious to preserve the sacred rights of the House to propose amendments to the provision, proposes a substitute rule expressly prohibiting as amendments provisions which would not be in order under any construction of the rules of the House. To a provision proposing to increase compensation and appropriating the money for the fiscal year, covered by the bill, no amendment extending the increase of compensation beyond that fiscal year would be in order, but the Committee on Rules thought it necessary to specifically provide that it should not be in order. It incorporated another useless provision in the rule. It prohibits the offering of any amendment that will increase the compensation of employees not affected by the appropriation bill under consideration—as if by any construction of the rules such an amendment would be in order without specific provision to make it in order.

The only thing the Committee on Rules has done is to go through the idle performance of imagining it is curtailing the rights of the House in two particulars, and by permitting it to vote upon increases in the rates of compensation to take off all restrictions. I was not surprised when I heard read the proposed rule that Members should have been under a misapprehension as to the effect of the resolution offered by myself. The only difference between those two propositions is that the Committee on Appropriations suggested that the House vote upon its specific proposition and the Committee on Rules suggests that it be open to any germane amendment, that is all, to increase or decrease the rate. That is all there is to it, and the provisos have no parliamentary effect whatever. Have I furnished my colleague with the information which he sought?

Mr. OGLESBY. Does the gentleman mean the provisos only differ, or does the gentleman mean that to permit amendments would permit them to increase the appropriations without limit?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Under the substitute of the Committee on Rules the rate of increase can be modified. That is the only difference.

Mr. OGLESBY. And the only modification would be to increase the amount?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Nobody suspects that anyone will propose a decrease. It is merely opening wide the sluiceways of the Treasury.

Mr. CANNON rose.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, have I any time remaining?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has five minutes remaining.

Mr. FITZGERALD. If the gentleman from Illinois wishes that time, I yield it to him.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I favor the enactment of legislation increasing the salaries of Government employees provided for in this resolution, and I may say for employees not provided for in this resolution. I regret there is no provision in the resolution by which the pay or increase would begin at once and continue for the remainder of the current fiscal year. The whole matter should be adjusted finally when the conditions are normal, which will not happen until the war in Europe closes. The rules of the House prohibit legislation on general appropriation bills, and wisely so, and should be observed, as the money must be appropriated to carry on the Government or government would stop. When legislative riders are placed on appropriation bills it is rarely well considered and is frequently vicious. The previous question has been ordered upon the resolution so it can not be amended. Under its operation immediate or early relief can not be given to meet the present emergency. Therefore, I shall vote against the resolution.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN].

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, there seems to be nothing left for this side of the house to do but to vote for the rule. Everybody seems to be of the opinion that there should be some increase in salaries. The Committee on Appropriations reported section 6, which if read would go out on the point of order. If this rule is not adopted the House will have no opportunity even to vote upon any proposition with reference to increasing the rates of salaries. The resolution introduced by the gentleman from New York is not before us. This resolution is beyond the amending stage. The House has already ordered the previous question, and if we vote the resolution down, then we go ahead with the appropriation bill, section 6 will be stricken out on a point of order and there will be no opportunity to increase the salaries. If the resolution goes through the House the House will have to determine. I think it might have been just as well to have given the House a fair opportunity to vote upon the proposition submitted by the committee. That we will still have under this resolution though it will be subject to amendment, but if the resolution is defeated we have no chance to do anything at all.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas has five minutes remaining.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I had hoped that I might escape the ordeal of receiving a lecture at the hands of the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD]. He stated that, in his judgment, the Committee on Rules has no sense of responsibility. I think some of us have as much a sense of responsibility as the gentleman had when he left the standard of his party some years ago and went over and helped the Republicans to defeat the Democratic Party.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman kindly says that he drew this resolution which did not allow amendment, and which some of the members of the Rules Committee thought did not allow discussion even under the five-minute rule, in order to protect the membership of this House against itself. In other words, the plain inference is that through their blind ignorance and groping around in this House they might hurt themselves if the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] did not draw a rule like this, which would deny them the right of amendment.

Mr. CALDWELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HENRY. I have not the time.

Has the time come in this country when the gentleman from New York must formulate the policy of the Committee on Appropriations and draw a rule which will deny the membership the power of amending an appropriation bill, in the simple fear that they might injure themselves? If I might venture to do so without receiving another lecture at the hands of the gentleman from New York, allow me to say I believe, if he will permit it, with the right of amendment and discussion, we will be able to consider this question and set him right where he thinks he is wrong on some phases of it.

Now, Mr. Speaker, some time ago, when the war in Europe came on, and the people of the South were stricken and the price of cotton went down to ruinously low levels, the gentleman from New York said it was an outrage and a shame to make it possible for a man who had produced a crop to borrow money in order that he might hold his product until the war had passed and the markets were normal. And yet in a brief period the gentleman comes and proposes an embargo against the foodstuffs that have been produced by the men who toil in the sunshine and rain, and desires to prevent the shipment of these products abroad.

Let me say, although it is digressing somewhat, as far as I am concerned, I am opposed to this proposition for two reasons. In the first place, I believe, as a congressional policy, such legislation would not be wise, and in the next place you and your constituents and others situated as you are ought to be willing to suffer a little and deprive yourselves a little bit in order that we may feed and clothe the dying and suffering and distressed of Europe. And I am against your embargo and in favor of sending clothing and food products to the starving and suffering people of Europe.

It makes a good deal of difference with the gentleman about the attitude of the Rules Committee. Let me say to him, inasmuch as he so graciously stated that I would not be chairman of the Rules Committee in the next Congress, that I never was chairman by his permission and never would have been chairman. [Applause.] But if I had chosen to return to the House of Representatives I could have come without any opposition, and I would have been chairman again even over the protest of the all-powerful chairman of the Committee on Appropriations. [Applause.]

Now, why all this hue and cry about this special rule, which is plain, and just and defensible from every standpoint? It ought to be adopted. We ought to meet this question like men; and I want, in respectful tones, if I may, without incurring the displeasure of the gentleman from New York, to say that whenever the Rules Committee gets ready, as far as I am concerned, we will amend his resolution, we will bring in special rules, and we will allow the Members of this body to act and vote as they please, and to amend and freely discuss the appropriation bills, as well as all the other bills of this House.

That is all there is in the proposition, and I ask for a vote [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I ask for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 190, noes 49.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 264, nays 77, answered "present" 0, not voting 92, as follows:

WOMAN SUFFRAGE (H. REPT. NO. 1216, PT. 2).

Mr. NELSON rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Wisconsin rise?

Mr. NELSON. To ask unanimous consent that any member of the Committee on the Judiciary opposed to the action of the full committee on House resolution No. 1, known as the woman-suffrage amendment, shall be permitted to file minority views not later than January 2.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin asks unanimous consent that any member of the Committee on the Judiciary may file minority views on the resolution indicated at any time between now and January 2.

Mr. MANN. I understood the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] to say that he wanted it made January 10, although I am not sure.

Mr. NELSON. I accept the amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will please state his request over again.

Mr. NELSON. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, that any member of the Committee on the Judiciary may file minority views on House resolution No. 1 until January 10.

The SPEAKER. Until January 10?

Mr. NELSON. Yes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin asks unanimous consent that any member of the Committee on the Judiciary opposed to the action taken by that committee on the woman-suffrage amendment may file minority views up to January 10. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GARD. I merely desire, Mr. Chairman, to say that there is no objection on the part of the Committee on the Judiciary.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. LINDBERGH, by unanimous consent, was granted leave of absence indefinitely, on account of sickness in his family.

DISPENSING WITH CALENDAR WEDNESDAY BUSINESS NEXT WEEK.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to dispense with Calendar Wednesday next Wednesday, so that we can finish these appropriation bills, in order to justify the holiday recess.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent to dispense with Calendar Wednesday business on next Wednesday. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, my understanding, which I think I have obtained from the gentleman, is that after the disposition of the legislative bill it is the intention to take up the District of Columbia appropriation bill.

Mr. FITZGERALD. The District bill will be reported on Monday.

Mr. MANN. And that he desires to finish that bill in order to take the holiday recess on Friday.

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; Friday, December 22. That is my understanding, and that is the purpose.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. KENT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD concerning the Alaska fisheries bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD on the subject of the Alaska fisheries bill. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FOCHT. Mr. Speaker, I desire to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the vocational education bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD on the vocational education bill. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

SENATE.

MONDAY, December 18, 1916.

The Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, we lift our hearts to Thee and pray for the passion of eternity. In the pressing duties of our daily life and the output of our energies to solve the problems of life we are lured from a contemplation of the things that make for our eternal life. We pray that the appetite of spirit, starved small by the stern necessities of this life, may not be satisfied with the pleasures and with the honors of this world only, but give to us a desire to measure up to God's supreme conception of manhood. May we follow after Him who embodied the fullness of all life and at last attain unto the perfect measure of human life. Bless us in the discharge of the duties of this day. For Christ's sake. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Saturday last was read and approved.

SENATOR FROM MICHIGAN.

I hereby certify that the foregoing copy of the certificate of determination of the board of State canvassers is a correct transcript of the original of such certificate of determination on file in this office.

In witness whereof I have hereto attached my signature and the great seal of the State at Lansing this 12th day of December, 1916.

[SEAL.] COLEMAN C. VAUGHAN,
Secretary of State.

SENATOR FROM TENNESSEE.

Mr. SHIELDS. I present the credentials of KENNETH D. MCKELLAR, chosen by the qualified electors of the State of Tennessee a Senator from that State for the term of six years, beginning the 4th day of March, 1917, which I ask may be received.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The credentials will be printed in the RECORD and placed on the files of the Senate.

The credentials are as follows:

To the PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES:

This is to certify that on the 7th day of November, 1916, KENNETH D. MCKELLAR was duly chosen by the qualified electors of the State of Tennessee a Senator from said State to represent said State in the Senate of the United States for the term of six years, beginning on the 4th day of March, 1917.

Witness his excellency our governor, Tom C. Rye, and our seal hereto affixed at Nashville, Tenn., this 6th day of December, in the year of our Lord, 1916.

[SEAL.] TOM C. RYE, Governor.

By the governor:

R. R. SNEED, Secretary of State.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by J. C. South, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House disagrees to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8092) confirming patents heretofore issued to certain Indians in the State of Washington, asks a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. STEPHENS of Texas, Mr. CARTER of Oklahoma, and Mr. CAMPBELL managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had passed a joint resolution (No. 324) authorizing payment of the salaries of officers and employees of Congress for December, 1916, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. HARDING presented a petition of the City Council of Toledo, Ohio, praying for an investigation into the high cost of living, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of the National Association of Civil Service Employees, of Dayton, Ohio, praying for an increase in the salaries of all Government employees, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota presented a memorial of the Retail Merchants' Association of Pierre, S. Dak., remonstrating against any further extension of the parcel post system and favoring the adoption of a 1-cent letter postage, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

Mr. LODGE presented petitions of sundry citizens of Massachusetts, praying for an increase in the salaries of postal employees, which were referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

He also presented a petition of the Ship Painters' Union of East Boston, Mass., praying for the placing of an embargo on food products, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of Boston and Leicester, in the State of Massachusetts, praying for national prohibition, which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. GALLINGER presented the memorial of E. R. Brown, of Dover, N. H., remonstrating against the deportation of Belgians by Germany, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. WATSON presented a petition of District No. 11, United Mine Workers of America, of Terre Haute, Ind., praying for the placing of an embargo on food products, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a memorial of Columbia Grange, No. 2174, Patrons of Husbandry, of Elizabethtown, Ind., and a memorial of Lowell Arbor of Gleaners, of Lake County, Ind., remonstrating against the placing of an embargo on food products, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of Bedford, Frankfort, Goshen, and Mishawaka, all in the State of Indiana, praying for an increase in salaries of postal employees, which were referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

He also presented a memorial of District No. 11, United Mine Workers of America, of Terre Haute, Ind., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation to provide compulsory arbitration of industrial disputes, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented a petition of Lincoln Council, No. 56, Junior Order of American Mechanics, of Terre Haute, Ind., praying for the passage of the so-called immigration bill, which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of Local Branch, National Association Bureau of Animal Industry Employees, of Indianapolis, Ind., praying for an increase in the salaries of employees of the Bureau of Animal Industry, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. COLT presented petitions of sundry citizens of Wickford, Cumberland, Lincoln, Georgiaville, and Providence, all in the State of Rhode Island, praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution granting the right of suffrage to women, which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented resolutions adopted by the Medical Society of Newport, R. I., expressing appreciation of the passage of the so-called Hay and Chamberlain bills providing for an increase of members of the Medical Reserve Corps of the Army, which were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. GRONNA. I present resolutions adopted by General Crook Post, No. 33, Grand Army of the Republic, at a regular meeting held December 1, 1916, at Devils Lake, N. Dak., favoring the passage of the volunteer officers' retirement bill, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the resolutions were ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Resolutions passed by General Crook Post, No. 33, Grand Army of the Republic, at a regular meeting held December 1, 1916.

Whereas there is now pending in the Congress of the United States a bill entitled "The volunteer officers retirement bill," and which bill proposed to place the volunteer officers who served during the Civil War in the same position as officers of the Regular Army upon their retirement from service, placing them upon the retired list with pro rata pay as provided by law; and

Whereas we believe that the passage of this act would be but a long-delayed act of justice toward such volunteer officers: Therefore be it

Resolved, That this post of the Grand Army of the Republic hereby approves of the spirit and purpose of said act and urge our Senators and Representatives in Congress to aid in every possible way the passage of said bill.

By command of—

JAMES MCCORMICK, Commander.
By ALBERT ROBERTS, Adjutant.

WATER-POWER DEVELOPMENT.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I present a communication from the Michigan State Grange, which I should like to have read for the information of the Senate.

There being no objection, the communication was read and ordered to lie on the table, as follows:

MICHIGAN STATE GRANGE,
Lansing, Mich., December 13, 1916.

Hon. WILLIAM ALDEN SMITH,
Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SIR: The following resolutions were introduced for immediate action and unanimously adopted at the annual session of the Michigan State Grange now in session in this city:

Resolved by the State Grange of Michigan, an organization representative of agriculture and jealous of the rights of the common people—

1. That we view with alarm the action of both branches of the Congress in passing bills giving to private ownership the vast potential wealth represented by the water power of navigable streams and in national reservations, and by attempting to dispose of the oil fields belonging to the National Government, without which, under modern conditions, an efficient navy is an impossibility;

2. We hereby enter our most earnest protest against the passage of the Shields bill, covering water power on navigable streams; the Myers bill, covering water power on public lands; and the oil-land provisions of the Phelan bill; all of which, under the specious plea of providing for the development of natural resources give to private citizens and monopolies the wealth belonging to the people and the supplies needed for adequate defense, and we call upon our Senators and Representatives in Congress to use every effort to defeat these bills, and ask that our protest be entered in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD; and

3. In the event of the passage of these pernicious measures, we most respectfully urge President Wilson to interpose his veto and save for the people of this Nation and their children this small portion of the priceless heritage of natural resources bequeathed them by the founders and builders of this Republic.

Very respectfully, JENNIE BUELL, Secretary.

EDUCATION OF IMMIGRANTS.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I present a communication from the Detroit Board of Commerce, which I ask may be read for the information of the Senate.

There being no objection, the communication was read and ordered to lie on the table, as follows:

DETROIT BOARD OF COMMERCE,
Detroit, Mich., December 14, 1916.

Senator WILLIAM A. SMITH,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR SMITH: I have been instructed by the board of directors of the Detroit Board of Commerce to submit to you the following resolution, which was adopted by the board of directors of this board Friday, December 8, 1916:

"Resolved, That the board of directors of the Detroit Board of Commerce urge the Members of Congress from Michigan that everything possible be done to secure an appropriation of $50,000, to be administered through the United States Bureau of Education for the purpose of disseminating information as to the methods, standards, and established practices in the education of immigrants and in stimulating the extension of the necessary education facilities looking to the Americanization of the foreign-born or alien residents of this country."

With kindest regards, I am, very sincerely, yours,

WALTER C. COLE, Secretary.

INDIANA STATE SOLDIERS' HOME.

Mr. KERN. I have a letter in the nature of a petition from Mr. Canfield, adjutant of the State Soldiers' Home of Indiana, and also a statement signed by him giving the average age of the members of that institution who were officers in the Civil War. I ask that both be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter and statement were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

INDIANA STATE SOLDIERS' HOME,
Lafayette, Ind., December 8, 1916.

Hon. JOHN W. KERN,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I send you herewith a roster of the members of this home who were officers in the Civil War, who, with me, are most anxious for our bill (S. 392, H. R. 386) to be acted upon. We have confidence in our friends being able to pass it if they can only get it to vote.

I have given you the ages on this roster, and you will see the average is 78 years. I also give you some figures showing how little the bill would cost. I take the members here:

	Per month.
Pension	$30.00
Government pays ($100 annually to State)	8.33
State clothes the man	2.67
State subsists man and wife	32.00
Total	73.00

The above is the average cost for the officers who have been forced to go to soldiers' homes. Deduct this amount given us in the officers' bill and see how little it will cost to let us end our days in our own homes.

I hope we have not taken too much of your valuable time, but you will readily see how very serious this matter is to us.

Yours, very respectfully,

H. R. CANFIELD,
Adjutant, Indiana State Soldiers' Home.

DECEMBER 8, 1916.

SIR: We, former officers of the Union Army in the War for the Preservation of the Union, and at this time members of the Indiana State Soldiers' Home at Lafayette, Ind., respectfully ask your best efforts to prompt enactment of the Volunteer officers' retired bill (S. 392, H. R. 386), which has been favorably reported by the Military Committees of both Houses. We will deeply appreciate all you may do for us.

NAME, RANK, REGIMENT, AND AGE.

William W. Angel, first lieutenant Company G, Twelfth Indiana, 80.
James Beeber, captain Company D, Seventy-third Indiana, 76.
Samuel L. Campbell, first lieutenant Company D, One hundred and thirty-fifth Indiana, 76.
Thomas B. Carey, first lieutenant Company F, Seventieth Indiana, 77.
William A. Early, second lieutenant and quartermaster Second Battalion, First Missouri Cavalry, 84.
James Glenn, Captain Company I, One hundred and thirty-fourth United States Infantry, 80.
Alexander Lawrie, captain Company B, One hundred and twenty-first Pennsylvania Infantry, 88.
Elmore T. Montgomery, first lieutenant Company C, One hundred and first Indiana, 75.
Joseph McClellen, first lieutenant Company C, One hundred and twenty-third Indiana, 74.
Leroy Rogers, second lieutenant Company K, Eighty-seventh United States Colored Infantry, 71.
Isaac A. Sheaffer, second lieutenant Company K, Eighteenth Ohio Infantry, 72.

Russell D. Utter, chaplain One hundred and fiftieth Indiana Infantry, 80.
H. R. Canfield, first lieutenant Seventeenth United States Cavalry Troop, 72. (Not member of Indiana State Soldiers' Home.)
Average age, 78.

H. R. CANFIELD,
Adjutant, Indiana State Soldiers' Home.

TORRENS SYSTEM OF LAND TITLES.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Mr. President, I present a copy of a bill providing for the Torrens registration system of land titles, which has been recommended by the American Bar Association. I desire that it be printed as a Senate document. Under the practice here I am willing that it shall go to the Committee on Printing.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It will be referred to the Committee on Printing.

FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, I ask to have printed in the RECORD a statement issued by the Federal Reserve Board on the 27th of November, which as yet has had no official publication anywhere, and which warns the banks of the United States against the investment of their funds, which should be liquid, in the securities of foreign governments, such as treasury bills.

I think this a very important statement; that the effect of it was to essentially place the Federal Reserve Board at the head of the financial affairs of the United States, and permanently to bring about that reform which was intended by legislation. It has had a marked effect in controlling the conduct of banks since that time. For that reason, and because it is an epoch-making document, I should like to have it published in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The statement referred to is as follows:

In view of contradictory reports which have appeared in the press regarding its attitude toward the purchasing by banks in this country of treasury bills of foreign governments, the board deems it a duty to define its position clearly. In making this statement the board desires to disclaim any intention of discussing the finances or of reflecting upon the financial stability of any nation, but wishes it understood that it seeks to deal only with general principles which affect all alike.

The board does not share the view, frequently expressed of late, that further importations of large amounts of gold must of necessity prove a source of danger or disturbance to this country. That danger, the board believes, will arise only in case the inflowing gold should remain uncontrolled and be permitted to become the basis of undesirable loan expansions and of inflation. There are means, however, of controlling accessions of gold by proper and voluntary cooperation of the banks, or if need be by legislative enactment. An important step in this direction would be the anticipation of the final transfer of reserves contemplated by the Federal reserve act to become effective on November 16, 1917. This date could be advanced to February or March, 1917. Member banks would then be placed on the permanent basis of their reserve requirements and fictitious reserves would then disappear and the banks have a clearer conception of actual reserve and financial conditions. It will then appear that while a large increase in the country's gold holdings has taken place the expansion of loans and deposits has been such that there will not remain any excess of reserves, apart from the important reserve loaning power of the Federal reserve banks.

In these circumstances the board feels that member banks should pursue a policy of keeping themselves liquid; of not loaning down to the legal limit, but of maintaining an excess of reserves—not with reserve agents, where their balances are loaned out and constitute no actual reserve, but in their own vaults or preferably with their Federal reserve banks. The board believes that at this time banks should proceed with much caution in locking up their funds in long-term obligations or in investments, which are short term in form or name, but which, either by contract or through force of curcumstances, may in the aggregate have to be renewed until normal conditions return. The board does not undertake to forecast probabilities or to specify circumstances which may become important factors in determining future conditions. Its concern and responsibility lies primarily with the banking situation. If, however, our banking institutions have to intervene because foreign securities are offered faster than they can be absorbed by investors—that is, their depositors—an element would be introduced into the situation which, if not kept under control, would tend toward instability and ultimate injury to the economic development of this country. The natural absorbing power of the investment market supplies an important regulator of the volume of our sales to foreign countries in excess of the goods that they send us. The form which the most recent borrowing is taking, apart from reference to its intrinsic merits, makes it appear particularly attractive as a banking investment. The board, as a matter of fact, understand that it is expected to place it primarily with banks. In fact, it would appear so attractive that unless a broader and national point of view be adopted individual banks might easily be tempted to invest in it to such an extent that the banking resources of this country employed in this manner might run into many hundreds of millions of dollars. While the loans may be short in form and severally, may be collected at maturity, the object of the borrower must be to attempt to renew them collectively, with the result that the aggregate amount placed here will remain until such time as it may be advantageously converted into a long-term obligation. It would therefore seem as a consequence that liquid funds of our banks, which should be available for short-credit facilities to our merchants, manufacturers, and farmers, would be exposed to the danger of being absorbed for other purposes to a disproportionate degree, especially in view of the fact that many of our banks and trust companies are already carrying substantial amonts of foreign obligations and of acceptances which they are under agreement to renew. The board deems it therefore its duty to caution the member banks that it does not regard it in the interest of the country at this time that they invest in foreign treasury bills of this character.

The board does not consider that it is called upon to advise private investors, but as the United States is fast becoming the banker of foreign countries in all parts of the world it takes occasion to suggest that the investor should receive full and authoritative data, particularly in the case of unsecured loans, in order that he may judge the future intelligently in the light of present conditions and in conjunction with the economic developments of the past.

The United States has now attained a position of wealth and of international financial power which, in the natural course of events, it could not have reached for a generation. We must be careful not to impair this position of strength and independence. While it is true that a slowing down in the process of credit extension may mean some curtailment of our abnormally stimulated export trade to certain countries, we need not fear that our business will fall off precipitately should we become more conservative in the matter of investing in loans, because there are still hundreds of millions of our own and foreign securities held abroad which our investors would be glad to take over, and, moreover, trade can be stimulated in other directions.

In the opinion of the board it is the duty of our banks to remain liquid in order that they may be able to continue to respond to our home requirements, the nature and scope of which none can foresee, and in order that our present economic and financial strength may be maintained when, at the end of the war, we shall wish to do our full share in the work of international reconstruction and development which will then lie ahead of us, and when a clearer understanding of economic conditions as they will then exist will enable this country more safely and intelligently to do its proper part in the financial rehabilitation of the world.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia submitted an amendment authorizing the Auditor for the State and Other Departments to credit E. A. Wreidt, disbursing officer of the Commission on Federal Aid to Vocational Education, with the sum of $102 in the final settlement of his accounts, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill, which was ordered to be printed and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. WILLIAMS submitted an amendment relative to the enrollment of members of the Choctaw Tribe of Indians of persons identified as Mississippi Choctaws by the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes under the provisions of section 21 of the act of Congress approved June 26, 1898, etc. (H. R. 18453), intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill, which was ordered to be printed and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

FLOOD CONTROL.

Mr. GRONNA submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 14777) to provide for control of the floods of the Mississippi River and of the Sacramento River, Cal., and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed.

PROHIBITION IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The morning business is closed.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1082.

Mr. GALLINGER. Pending that motion, Mr. President, I make the point of no quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Chilton	Fletcher	Hollis
Bankhead	Clapp	Gallinger	Hughes
Beckham	Colt	Gore	Husting
Brady	Cummins	Gronna	James
Brandegee	Curtis	Harding	Johnson, S. Dak.
Bryan	Dillingham	Hardwick	Jones
Chamberlain	Fernald	Hitchcock	Kenyon
Kern	Overman	Smith, Ga.	Tillman
Kirby	Page	Smith, Mich.	Townsend
La Follette	Penrose	Smoot	Underwood
Lane	Poindexter	Sterling	Vardaman
McCumber	Saulsbury	Stone	Wadsworth
Martin, Va.	Sheppard	Sutherland	Walsh
Martine, N. J.	Sherman	Swanson	Watson
Nelson	Shields	Thomas	Works
Oliver	Smith, Ariz.	Thompson

Mr. THOMAS. I desire to announce the absence of my colleague [Mr. SHAFROTH] on account of illness. I will let this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. KIRBY. I desire to announce the absence of my colleague [Mr. ROBINSON], who is detained on account of illness.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Sixty-three Senators have answered to the roll call. There is a quorum present. The Senator from Texas moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1082.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 1082) to prevent the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, there has been more or less discussion concerning the need of alcohol in scientific laboratories in the United States, and in that connection I beg to present a letter from the Bureau of Chemistry, Department of Agriculture, and ask that it may be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read the communication, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,
BUREAU OF CHEMISTRY,
Washington, D. C., December 16, 1916.

Hon. J. H. GALLINGER,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR GALLINGER: Replying to your letter of December 14, inquiring whether the Government requires pure alcohol for use in scientific research and investigation in its laboratories, and what effect it would have upon such laboratories should they be prevented by law from securing pure alcohol, I beg to say that the Bureau of Chemistry does require pure alcohol for use in scientific research. If the Bureau of Chemistry were not permitted to use pure alcohol in its scientific research and in its analytical work in connection with the enforcement of the food and drugs act, much of the work now under way would be brought to a standstill. Alcohol is so largely used by chemists that it forms an essential reagent in the preparation of many substances and in the making of many analyses. If it were impossible to use it, and it would be necessary to endeavor to devise new methods of preparation and new methods of analyses for certain methods of preparation, long studies, possibly lasting years, would be required in order to find a substitute. For other methods of preparing certain substances it may be impossible to find a substitute.

In the place of analytical methods in which alcohol is used, entirely new methods would have to be devised, and to do so would require the work of many men extending over a long period. In certain cases it is altogether probable that no satisfactory substitute could be found. In short, to deprive the Bureau of Chemistry of the possibility of using pure alcohol in its work would hamper a great part of the work required by law to be done, and would make some, if indeed not all of it, permanently impossible. The obstacles thus imposed upon the bureau might to some degree be overcome through years of investigation, but even then only partially.

Very truly, yours, C. L. ALSBERG, Chief.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] as modified.

Mr. SMOOT and Mr. UNDERWOOD called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BECKHAM (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. DU PONT], who is absent. I shall therefore withhold my vote. If permitted to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. CHILTON (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. FALL]. In his absence I withhold my vote.

Mr. DILLINGHAM (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. SMITH], who I observe is not in his seat. I therefore withhold my vote. If permitted to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. THOMAS (when Mr. SHAFROTH's name was called). If my colleague [Mr. SHAFROTH] were able to be present, he would vote "nay."

Mr. SHERMAN (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. RANSDELL] and withhold my vote. If I were at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. OVERMAN (when Mr. SIMMONS's name was called). I desire to announce that my colleague is absent from the city on account of important business, and is paired with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. CLAPP].

I also desire to say, while I am on my feet, that I am paired with the junior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] and will let my vote in the negative stand.

Mr. STERLING (when his name was called). It is understood that my general pair with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] does not extend to this measure or any of the amendments thereto. I therefore vote "nay."

Mr. WALSH (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. LIPPITT], who is absent. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Colorado [Mr. SHAFROTH] and vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. CLAPP (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SIMMONS]. I observe that he is absent. I am also advised that if present he would vote "nay." Therefore, being unable to obtain a transfer, I am constrained to withdraw my vote.

Mr. BECKHAM. I transfer my pair with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. DU PONT] to the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS] and vote "nay." The Senator from Illinois is absent on account of illness.

Mr. CHILTON. I transfer the pair which I announced with the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. FALL] to the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] and vote "nay." If the Senator from South Carolina were present he would also vote "nay," as I understand. He is detained from the Senate on account of illness in his family.

Mr. KERN. The following Senators are detained from the Senate on account of illness: The Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. RANSDELL], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. BROUSSARD], and the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. LEA].

Mr. CURTIS. I have been requested to announce the following pairs:

The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. GOFF] with the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. LEA]; and

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MCLEAN] with the Senator from Montana [Mr. MYERS].

Mr. GALLINGER. I have voted in the negative, but I have observed that the senior Senator from New York [Mr. O'GORMAN], with whom I have a general pair, has not voted. Therefore I withdraw my vote.

Mr. PENROSE. I did not vote when my name was called because I am paired with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS], and he being absent I withheld my vote.

Mr. OWEN. I transfer my pair with the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CATRON] to the Senator from Nevada [Mr. NEWLANDS] and vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 8, nays 61, as follows:

YEAS—8.

So Mr. SMOOT's amendment as modified was rejected.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I move to strike out of the bill the following language appearing in lines 5 to 7 on page 2:

For beverage purposes or for any other than scientific, medicinal, pharmaceutical, mechanical, sacramental, or other nonbeverage purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 2, lines 5, 6, and 7, after the word "liquors," it is proposed to strike out the remainder of the paragraph, which reads:

For beverage purposes or for any other than scientific, medicinal, pharmaceutical, mechanical, sacramental, or other nonbeverage purposes.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I can state the purpose of this amendment in a very few words.

Under the bill as it now stands alcohol can be manufactured within the District of Columbia in unlimited quantities and shipped to any part of the United States, provided there is furnished a certificate that it is not obtained for beverages purposes. Of course, alcohol is never used for beverage purposes, and everybody can sign that certificate. Accordingly, if this bill passes in its present form, alcohol can be manufactured in unlimited quantities within the District of Columbia and sent to every State of the Union. When it arrives there the only limitation is that the man who bought it shall not use it for beverage purposes, but he can use it as a raw material in making any kind of liquor, including whisky.

Now, if we are to make the city of Washington the habitat and city of refuge of distillers who sell liquor all over the United States I think we are acting in a manner which is absolutely inconsistent with the alleged purposes of this bill.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, the Senator's fear is entirely unfounded. The sale of the liquor in the various States will be subject to the laws of those States. If it goes into dry States, its use for beverage purposes and sale for beverage purposes will be prevented by law. If it goes into wet States, it is already permitted. Besides, Mr. President, the commissioners keep in constant touch with such institutions in the District. They must secure annual licenses and must show the commissioners that they are acting in good faith and are complying with the spirit and purpose of the law.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, good faith as to what? Good faith as to those things covered by the terms of the bill. What are the terms of the bill? The limitation is that the alcohol shall not be shipped out of the District for beverage purposes. Alcohol, I repeat, is never used for beverage purposes unless it should be by a very limited number of poor creatures who are utterly in the gutter. The limitation, therefore, which the commissioners can consider, or anybody can consider, is the limitation of the law. The limitation of the law is that the alcohol shall not be sent out to be drunk as a beverage.

Mr. SHEPPARD. And a complete record must be kept of the amount shipped out.

Mr. REED. Exactly; and when you have kept the complete record and it shows a million gallons a month, what of it?

Mr. SHEPPARD. Why, the commissioners would be put on notice, and they would make an investigation to see what was becoming of it.

Mr. REED. They would be put on notice to see that it was not used as a beverage; and what does that notice amount to when it never is used as a beverage? But there is no limitation in this law, and the author of this bill knows it, and I want to advise the country that there is no limitation in this law which would prevent the manufacture of millions of gallons of alcohol and sending it to any place where it can be shipped, and there having it employed for any purpose except beverage purposes, which means that it can be used as a raw material and transformed into any kind of drink that men will use as a beverage.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Does the Senator see how large a section of the Republic is under prohibition laws? [Exhibiting map.]

Mr. REED. I will come to the Senator's map in a minute, if he wants to hold it up. The alcohol made in the District, once it is shipped out of the District, can be used to make whisky of, and the whisky can be sold for a beverage, and not a single line of the bill will be violated—not a line. A man can do that and be strictly within the law. Now, if it is the theory of the authors of this bill that liquor is a product that poisons the souls and bodies of men, and if, proceeding upon that theory, they propose to prohibit its use within the District of Columbia, they ought not to provide that the District shall be kept as a place where the raw materials can be manufactured that will destroy men and women in other States.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. REED. I do.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I am really very much pleased to see the Senator's solicitude about the effect of liquor manufactured in the District of Columbia on the human system. Now, would the Senator like the bill better if we should prohibit the manufacture of alcohol in the city of Washington altogether?

Mr. REED. Yes.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Will the Senator vote for it with that provision in it?

Mr. REED. I will vote for that provision.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Will the Senator vote for a bill to stop the manufacture of alcohol?

Mr. REED. If you will amend the bill in other particulars, I will.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I should like to have the Senator indicate to me, because I should like to have his support for this bill, how he would like the bill modified. If he wants to promote temperance by prohibition, let us fix it to suit the Senator.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. You can not do it by prohibition. Intemperance has never been stopped by prohibition.

Mr. VARDAMAN. If the Senator will pardon me, I am talking about the Senator from Missouri now, and not the Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I know you are. Well, you are talking of me, too. [Laughter.]

Mr. VARDAMAN. No; I am not.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. That is what I think about it, at any rate.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, one thing at a time. In order that this matter may be fully understood, it will be noticed that the first section of the bill provides:

That no person, * * * company, etc., shall, in the District of Columbia, manufacture for sale or gift, import for sale, sell, offer for sale, keep for sale, traffic in, barter, export, ship out of the District of Columbia or exchange for goods or merchandise, or solicit or receive orders for the purchase of, any alcoholic or other prohibited liquors—

Now, thus far there is an absolute prohibition, but notice the limitation contained in the succeeding language—for beverage purposes or for any other than scientific, medicinal, pharmaceutical, mechanical, sacramental, or other nonbeverage purposes.

The qualifying words, then, make the section mean this—that you can manufacture liquor within the District of Columbia and can send it anywhere in the world, provided it is not there used for beverage purposes. The protection against manufacturing and selling for other than beverage purposes is merely the certificate of the purchaser that he does not intend to use the liquor for beverage purposes, and the supervisory power of the commissioners to see that the liquor is not used for beverage purposes. Now, that might constitute some limitation upon the manufacture of wine, which can be used as a beverage, or upon the manufacture of whisky, which can be used as a beverage, but it constitutes no limitation upon the manufacture of alcohol, which is not used as a beverage.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. REED. Let me conclude my sentence. Accordingly, I repeat, a man who is here now or an institution that may hereafter come within the District of Columbia, can set up an alcohol distillery of unlimited capacity, and can sell alcohol in any State of the Union where it can find a purchaser, because it does not go there to be used as a beverage. Alcohol is always a raw material, and it is that raw material from which whiskey is produced; and under this bill, with these words of limitation in it there could be manufactured in this District enough alcohol to supply the raw material to make every gallon of whisky that is consumed in the United States, and there is nothing in the bill to prevent that sort of abuse.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me now?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. REED. I do.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Does the Senator hold that if the letter of the law and the spirit of the law should be carried out alcohol could be bought under this bill for the manufacture of liquor to be used for beverage purposes?

Mr. REED. Undoubtedly. It is a mere raw material going into liquor.

Mr. VARDAMAN. The language is:

Any alcoholic or other prohibited liquors for beverage purposes or for any other than scientific, medicinal, pharmaceutical, mechanical, sacramental, or other nonbeverage purposes.

Mr. REED. Exactly.

Mr. VARDAMAN. It seems to me, Mr. President, if the Senator will pardon me, that that clearly prohibits the use of this alcohol for the manufacture of something that is a beverage.

Mr. REED. Oh, no.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I do not think there is any question about it.

Mr. REED. The law would be strictly construed. This alcohol, once it is made and shipped from the District of Columbia, can be employed in manufacturing other products. Alcohol is a large constituent in a vast number of things, including bay rum, witch-hazel, and tens of thousands of things. Among other things, it is a raw material from which whisky is made. It is a raw material that enters into cordials that are used at the table. It is a large constituent element of such cordials as crême de menthe, and other similar cordials. It is a raw material and can be sold and used as a raw material under this bill; and, being a raw material, it can thereafter be transformed into another material, and that material sold and drank in any part of the country, unless the local laws make it impossible so to sell it.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. REED. Yes; certainly.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Under the Senator's amendment, alcoholic liquors could not be shipped into the District of Columbia for medicinal purposes?

Mr. REED. No. The language is "export, ship out of the District of Columbia, or exchange for goods or merchandise."

Mr. SHEPPARD. The words "import for sale" occur in line 1 of page 2.

Mr. REED. Yes.

Mr. SHEPPARD. You prevent its importation for sale for any purpose whatever.

Mr. REED. If there is a necessity to put in another word, we can put it in.

The author of this bill will not deny that it is his purpose to permit the present distillers of the District of Columbia to continue to distill their alcohol and sell it all over the United States wherever they can sell it, subject only to a limitation which is not a limitation at all, namely, that it shall not be sold for beverage purposes.

Mr. SHEPPARD. The Senator ought to add, subject also to the laws of the States.

Mr. REED. I said wherever it could be sold.

Mr. SHEPPARD. It could only be sold in a very small section of the country [handing map].

Mr. REED. I do not care anything about your map. I have seen these black-and-white maps ad nauseum. They generally are misleading. Liquor can be sold to-day in that part of the United States which contains fully one-half of the population of the United States. The mountains of Montana make a big picture on a map, but there are not many people who live in those mountains, and so of the rest of the white portion of the map.

But that is only dodging. If this thing is wrong, it is wrong. If it is an evil, it is an evil. If it ought to be suppressed by the Federal Government, then it is no excuse to say that the sale outside of the District will be limited because other people have passed prohibitory laws. That is the Government of the United States writing into its laws, under the leadership of the distinguished Senator from Texas, something like this: "The liquor business is declared to be an iniquitous business, destroying the souls and bodies of men, but we propose to allow all of it to be made in the District of Columbia that anybody wants to make, provided he only poisons the people of certain parts of the United States."

You can not draw the red lines of a map around a moral question. If this evil is of the character the Senator complains, if it is wrong to sell liquor to the people of the District, it is equally wrong and wicked to provide a place in the District of Columbia where liquors can be made to be administered to the unfortunates of other States.

The truth is, and everybody ought to know it by this time, that it is proposed to protect Mr. Corby and other gentlemen possibly who may have large sums of money invested in the production of alcohol. If we are to admit the doctrine that because a business is established and a large sum of money invested in it therefore we are not to touch with the finger of the law any such interests, every brewery in the United States would be excepted, every saloon, every hotel bar.

Certainly, the author of this bill can not take that ground. Here are two institutions in the District of Columbia. One is a brewery and makes beer; the other is a distillery and makes alcohol. Pass this law and the distiller will run on at full blast. The worms of his still will continue to turn out every day many gallons of alcohol. The brewery will be stopped.

Now, between the two classes of drinks, alcohol and its immediate products, and beer, every student of the question of temperance knows that the alcoholic liquor, speaking now in the sense of what we call hard drinks, whisky, brandies, and so forth, is much more destructive than the milder thing we call beer.

If the Senator proposed to allow alcohol to be manufactured in this District and proposed that all of it should be denatured, I would not say a word, because then it would be limited by virtue of its quality to mechanical purposes. But he does not intend to do that. He intends to except Mr. Corby and similar gentlemen so that their business shall not be interfered with, while all the other business is.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. REED. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. LODGE. I ask to have the amendment stated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will state the amendment.

The SECRETARY. On page 2, lines 5, 6, and 7, it is proposed to strike out the words "for beverage purposes or for any other than scientific, medicinal, pharmaceutical, mechanical, sacramental, or other nonbeverage purposes," so that if amended it will read:

Export, ship out of the District of Columbia, or exchange for goods or merchandise, or solicit or receive orders for the purchase of any alcoholic or other prohibited liquors.

Mr. LODGE. Striking out the last three lines?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The last three lines.

Mr. BORAH. Did the Senator from Missouri observe the reading of the amendment as stated from the desk? Is that the way he offered it?

Mr. LODGE. It is to strike out the last three lines.

Mr. BORAH. Is that the amendment of the Senator?

Mr. REED. Yes; I strike out the words of limitation so that the bill stands as an absolute prohibition of the manufacture within this District to be shipped elsewhere.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Or the importation into the District from outside for any purpose.

Mr. LODGE. For any purpose whatever?

Mr. SHEPPARD. For any purpose whatever—sacramental, medicinal, or other.

Mr. REED. The purpose of the amendment is to stop the shipping out of the District.

Mr. BORAH. That is the reason why I asked the Senator about his amendment. I am willing to stop shipping out of the District.

Mr. REED. If the Senate will bear with me for a minute, I will perfect the amendment so as to limit it to that language.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I suggest that we proceed with the consideration of the bill and that the Senator from Missouri reserve his amendment until a later time and reoffer it.

Mr. REED. I have no objection to that course. I will let the amendment lie on the table for the present.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri withdraws his amendment?

Mr. REED. I will withdraw it for the present and offer it in a few moments.

Mr. GRONNA. I offer the following amendment: On page 2, line 1, after the word "sale," I move to insert the words "or gift." I call the attention of the Senator from Texas to my amendment, and I trust that he will accept it so far as he is able to do so.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 2, line 1, after the words "import for sale" insert the words "or gift," so as to read:

Import for sale or gift.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I accept the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment being offered to the bill while it is pending, the Chair understands he will have to put the question. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from North Dakota.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Has the Senator from Texas finished perfecting the bill?

Mr. SHEPPARD. I have offered all the amendments I intend to offer for the present.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, I present a substitute for the bill. A part that I have prepared has been printed. I have had to change the substitute as printed to conform to the amendments agreed to by the Senate on Saturday. The way the amendment reads now, the first 10 paragraphs are the same as the amendment I offered some time ago for a referendum and the last 4 paragraphs are the same as the printed form that I offered. The other portions of the substitute I offer conform identically with the bill as perfected by the Senator from Texas on Saturday evening. I send it to the desk and ask that it be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read.

The Secretary proceeded to read the amendment of Mr. UNDERWOOD, which was to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert a substitute.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I wish to ask the Senator from Alabama if he considers it necessary to have the remainder of the amendment read, inasmuch as it is in the same terms as the bill as amended to-day?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I have cut out the language of the bill as submitted by the Senator from Texas and inserted it in place of the other, except that I have renumbered and cross-numbered the sections.

Of course, I have no objection to the Senator's suggestion, and if the Senator desires it, I should be very glad to have the Secretary resume the reading of the amendment at section 35, which is the new part of the amendment, which relates to the referendum and not to the Sheppard bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the Secretary will resume the reading with the section indicated.

The Secretary resumed and concluded the reading of the amendment.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Secretary to make an amendment on page 23, line 2, after the figure "$3," by inserting the words "per diem each," so that it will read:

That the managers, clerks, returning officers, and registrars shall be entitled to $3 each per diem for their services in conducting the said election.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands the Senator from Alabama has a right to modify his amendment.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, perhaps the modification of the amendment had better be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 37 of the amendment, on page 23, line 2, after the numeral "$3," it is proposed to insert the words "per diem each," so as to read:

That the managers, clerks, returning officers, and registrars shall be entitled to $3 per diem each.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I observe that there is a provision in the amendment that the expenses of the referendum shall be paid from the treasury of the District of Columbia. If under the organic act Congress had dealt as it was intended it should, there would have been no money whatever in the treasury of the District of Columbia. There is more or less there now; but we are operating under the half-and-half principle. I would suggest to the Senator from Alabama that, as it is recognized that the Government has a partnership in this District and it is claimed that it owns half the property—though I think that is an exaggeration—the language should be "one-half from the revenues of the District and one-half from the Treasury of the United States from any money not otherwise appropriated."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, the question is not material to me. I really am not concerned in which way the expenses are paid, except that I think this is purely a local question, and we are trying to give the people of the District themselves an opportunity to vote on a matter in which they are concerned. I do not, therefore, see any reason why they should not pay for the election if they are going to vote.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will not urge it; but, after all, it has been universally recognized that the Government has an equal interest in this District with the people of the District.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Under ordinary circumstances I would concur in what the Senator from New Hampshire has said, and I have always voted along that line; but as this is a purely local matter I shall leave it in this way.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will leave it there, too. I simply wanted to call the Senator's attention to the fact that I have stated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment of the Senator from Alabama will be modified as suggested by him.

The amendment of Mr. UNDERWOOD as modified is to strike out all after the enacting clause of the bill and to insert the following:

That upon the application of 25 per cent of the male taxpayers over 21 years of age, resident citizens of the District of Columbia, by petition in writing signed in person by such resident citizens, addressed to and filed with the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, asking that an election be held in such District for the purpose of submitting to the qualified voters thereof the question of whether or not the manufacture and sale of spirituous, vinous, or malt liquors shall be licensed therein, they shall within 30 days after the presentation of such petition order an election to be held in such District within 40 days from the time of making such order to determine the question of whether or not the manufacture and sale of spirituous, vinous, or malt liquors shall be licensed in compliance with existing law, or whether the sale of spirituous, vinous, or malt liquors within the District of Columbia shall be prohibited under the terms prescribed in this act.

SEC. 2. That all male resident citizens of the District of Columbia who are over the age of 21 years, of sound mind, and have not been convicted of an offense involving moral turpitude, and who have been residents of the District of Columbia and the voting precinct in which they reside for more than one year prior to the date of the holding of said election, shall constitute the qualified voters at said election. The managers of the said election shall be the sole judges of the qualifications of the voters.

SEC. 3. That notice of such election shall be published for 20 days preceding the election in some newspaper published in said District. The Commissioners of the District of Columbia shall provide for and give the publication and notice required in this section, and shall divide the District of Columbia into convenient precincts and prescribe the voting places in said precincts, and give notice of the boundaries of said precincts and of the voting places at the time the notice is given of the holding of said election.

SEC. 4. That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia shall, within 10 days after the election is so ordered, appoint three managers, two clerks, and one returning officer for each precinct or voting place in said District to manage, conduct, and make returns of said election. Such managers, clerks, and returning officers so appointed shall, so far as practicable, be equally divided between those who favor and those who oppose the licensing of the manufacture and sale of said liquors.

SEC. 5. That as soon as practicable after the appointment of such managers, clerks, and returning officers for said election the commissioners shall notify each of them, in writing, of his appointment. Before opening the polls the managers, clerks, and returning officers appointed to conduct the election shall take an oath to support the Constitution of the United States and to faithfully perform their duties as officers of the election.

SEC. 6. That in the elections authorized under this act, submitting the question of licensing the manufacture and sale of liquors, the issue shall be, first, whether or not such manufacture and sale shall be permitted under existing law, or, second, whether such manufacture and sale of said liquors shall be prohibited under the terms prescribed in this act. The ballot issued in said election shall have printed thereon such phraseology as will enable each voter to express intelligently and clearly his choice on the issue to be voted upon by making a cross mark opposite to certain of the phrases so printed on the ballot, and the choice of the voter shall be so expressed. No ballot or vote shall be rejected or the count thereof refused for any failure to comply with this section, if the ballot clearly shows or indicates the choice of the voter as to such of the issues submitetd in the election as he attempts to vote upon. The purpose hereof is to provide for the determination of the issues indicated by a majority vote at the elections hereby authorized, and not to deprive any voter of his vote merely because of any technical inaccuracy or informality in his ballot.

SEC. 7. That the commissioners shall prepare and provide the necessary ballots, poll list, tally sheets, return sheets, instructions for holding the election, ballot boxes, voting booths, and other stationery or material necessary for the proper holding of the election, and the commissioners shall see that the same are delivered to one of the managers of each election precinct or voting place before the day of election. That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are authorized and directed to appoint a registrar, or registrars, in each election precinct, whose duty it shall be to register the qualified voters of said precincts at such time and place and in such manner as may be prescribed by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, and the said commissioners are hereby authorized to make such other rules and regulations and issue such orders as may be necessary in their discretion for the management of and the fair and orderly conduct of the said election.

SEC. 8. That immediately after the polls are closed the managers shall duly ascertain the result of the election at their respective voting places and make a certificate thereof, and also a copy of said certificate, and deliver the original certificate and ballot box containing the returns so made, together with the ballots, poll list, tally sheets, and other necessary papers to the returning officer for said polling place, who shall deliver the same to the commissioners at their office on or before noon of the second day after the election, and at the time of the delivery of said documents to the said returning officer, the managers shall post a copy of their said certificate at the voting place.

SEC. 9. That said commissioners shall, in open session five days after the election, canvass the returns so made, and under oath make a written declaration of the result of the election, showing the number of votes cast at each voting place for licensing the manufacture and sale of said liquors and the number of votes cast against licensing the manufacture and sale of said liquors. Said report shall be filed and recorded at once in the office of said commissioners and published in a newspaper published in the District of Columbia.

SEC. 10. That if in any election held under the authority of this act a majority of legal votes cast in said election shall be for the licensing the manufacture and sale of said liquors, thereafter the manufacture and sale of said liquors shall continue under the law as it exists in the District of Columbia at the time of the passage of this act, subject to any modifications that may be subsequently made by the Congress of the United States, but if in any election held under the authority of this act a majority of legal votes cast in said election shall be for the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of said liquors in the District of Columbia then sections 11 to 34, both inclusive, of this act shall become operative and remain in effect until a subsequent election held for the purpose of determining whether or not the licensed manufacture and sale of said liquors shall be permitted in the District of Columbia changes the result.

SEC. 11. That on and after 30 days after the Commissioners of the District of Columbia shall declare that a majority of the qualified voters of the District of Columbia have voted in favor of the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of spirituous, vinous, or malt liquors under the terms of this act no person or persons, or any house, company, association, club, or corporation, his, its, or their agents, officers, clerks, or servants, directly or indirectly, shall, in the District of Columbia, manufacture for sale or gift, import for sale, sell, offer for sale, keep for sale, traffic in, barter, export, ship out of the District of Columbia, or exchange for goods or merchandise, or solicit or receive orders for the purchase of, any alcoholic or other prohibited liquors for beverage purposes or for any other than scientific, medicinal, pharmaceutical, mechanical, sacramental, or other nonbeverage purposes.

Wherever the term "alcoholic liquors" is used in this act it shall be deemed to include whisky, brandy, rum, gin, wine, ale, porter, beer, cordials, hard or fermented cider, alcoholic bitters, ethyl alcohol, all malt liquors, and all other alcoholic liquors.

That any person or persons, or any house, company, association, club, or corporation, his, its, or their agents, officers, clerks, or servants, who shall directly or indirectly violate the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than $300 nor more than $1,000, and shall be imprisoned in the District Jail or workhouse for a period of not less than 30 days nor more than 1 year for each offense.

SEC. 12. That the provisions of this act shall not be construed to prevent the manufacture, importation, exportation, or sale of denatured or of methyl alcohol, or of ethyl alcohol, for scientific, medicinal, pharmaceutical, or mechanical purposes, nor to prevent the sale of alcoholic or other prohibited liquors by druggists for medicinal purposes on prescriptions of physicians under the regulations set out in section 14 of this act: Provided, That the manufacture and sale of ethyl alcohol or of alcoholic liquors for sacramental purposes within the District of Columbia shall be restricted to manufacturers and druggists licensed, respectively, to make and sell such alcohol and alcoholic or other prohibited liquors, as hereinafter provided, for scientific, mechanical, pharmaceutical, medicinal, or sacramental purposes only.

SEC. 13. All railroad, steamboat, or other boat companies, express and transportation companies of any kind, which shall in any manner at any time transport intoxicating liquors into the District, are hereby required to keep a record, alphabetically arranged, in which shall be entered immediately upon receipt thereof the name of every person shipping or to whom intoxicating liquors are shipped, the amount and kind of liquor, the date of delivery, by whom and to whom delivered, and the affidavit of the person receiving the liquor as provided herein. After this record is made and before delivery it shall be signed by the consignee. The book shall be open to the inspection of any person during the business hours of the company. Such books or a copy of such records, attested by an officer of the company or verified by affidavit, shall be admissible as evidence in any court and shall be prima facie evidence of the fact therein stated in any trial or proceeding for the enforcement of the provisions of this act.

An employee or agent of any express company, railroad company, steamboat company, or transportation company charged with the duty of keeping such record who shall fail to keep such record shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Any railroad company, express company, steamboat company, or transportation company who shall not require some one of its employees to keep such record shall be fined not less than $25 nor more than $100 for every day or portion thereof during which such failure shall continue.

No railroad or other transportation company shall receive a package of liquor to be shipped or carried into the District without having attached to it the affidavit of the consignee stating the amount of the liquors, the kinds of liquors ordered, and that it is not purchased for, nor will such liquors be used by the consignee for, an illegal purpose.

SEC. 14. That regularly licensed and registered druggists or pharmacists in the District of Columbia shall not sell alcoholic or other prohibited liquors nor compound nor mix any composition thereof, nor sell any malt extract or other proprietary medicines containing alcohol, except such compounds, compositions, malt extracts, or proprietary medicines be so medicated as to be medicinal preparations or compounds unfit for use as beverages, except upon a written and bona fide prescription of a duly licensed and regularly practicing physician in the District of Columbia, whose name shall be signed thereto. Such prescription shall contain a statement that the disease of the patient requires such a prescription, shall be numbered in the order of receiving, and shall be canceled by writing on it the word "canceled" and the date on which it was presented and filled, and kept on file in consecutive order, subject to public inspection at all times during business hours. No such prescription shall be filied more than once. Every druggist or pharmacist selling intoxicating liquors as herein provided shall keep a book provided for the purpose, and shall enter therein at the time of every sale a true record of the date of the sale, the name of the purchaser, who shall sign his name in said book as a part of the entry, his residence (giving the street and house number, if there be such), the kind and quantity and price of such liquor, the purpose for which it was sold, and the name of the physician giving the prescription therefor. Such book shall be open to public inspection during business hours, and shall be in form substantially as follows:

Date.	Name of purchaser.	Residence.	Kind and quantity.	Purpose of use.	Price.	Name of physician.	Signature of purchaser.

Said book shall be produced before the Commissioners of the District of Columbia or the courts when required, and shall also contain a statement of the kind and amount of alcoholic and other prohibited liquors on hand when this act shall go into effect, and thereafter such druggist or pharmacist shall, on the order of the court or the Commissioners of the District, make a statement of the amount of intoxicating liquor sold or used in any manner since the last statement and the amount on hand at the date when such court or commissioners require such statement: Provided, That ethyl alcohol may be sold without a physician's prescription for mechanical, medicinal, pharmaceutical, or scientific purposes by registered and licensed druggists or pharmacists, or by licensed manufacturers, each and all of whom shall keep a book for the purpose of registering such sales in a similar manner and form as required for the sale of other alcoholic and other prohibited liquors by the provisions of this section: Provided further, That any person who shall make any false statement as to the purpose or use of alcohol purchased under the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and be fined for each offense not less than $50 nor more than $300, and in default of the payment of such fine shall be imprisoned in the jail or workhouse of said District not more than six months.

Any druggist or pharmacist who shall sell or dispense any alcoholic or other prohibited liquors, except in such manner as provided in this section, or who shall fail or refuse to keep the record herein required, or who shall refill any prescription, or who shall violate any other provisions of this act, shall be guilty of illegal selling, and upon conviction thereof shall be subject to the penalties prescribed in section 11 of this act. Upon a second conviction for said offense, in addition to the penalties prescribed in said section 11, it shall be a part of the judgment of conviction that the license of such druggist or pharmacist to practice pharmacy shall be revoked, and the court before which such person is tried and convicted shall cause a certified copy of such judgment of conviction to be certified to the board having authority to issue license to practice pharmacy in the District of Columbia.

Any physician who shall prescribe any alcoholic or other prohibited liquor except for treatment of disease, which, after his own personal diagnosis, he shall deem to require such treatment, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than $100 nor more than $500, and in default of payment of said fine shall be imprisoned in the District jail or workhouse for not less than 30 nor more than 90 days, and upon a second conviction for said offense, in addition to the penalty above provided, it shall be a part of the judgment of conviction that the license of such physician to practice medicine be revoked, and the court before which such physician is tried and convicted shall cause a certified copy of such judgment of conviction to be certified to the board having authority to issue licenses to practice medicine in the District of Columbia.

SEC. 15. That when any minister, pastor, or priest of a religious congregation or church desires wine for sacramental purposes in the usual religious exercises of his denomination, he may apply to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia for a permit, stating the amount desired, for what period, and for what purpose, and said commissioners, if satisfied of the good faith of the application, shall grant a written permit to the applicant permitting the shipment to him, or the purchase by him, of such amount as is shown to be reasonably necessary, which amount shall be stated in the permit, together with the purpose for which it is to be used and the period to be covered by such use; the amount of wine permitted to be shipped or purchased under one permit shall not exceed 5 gallons, and the said permit shall be attached to the outside of the package by the shipper and remain so attached until delivered to the consignee, when it shall be canceled by the carrier. Said permit shall be void after 20 days, and shall not be used for more than one shipment.

SEC. 16. Any person, company, or corporation desiring to manufacture alcoholic or other prohibited liquors for the purposes permitted in this act shall on or before the 1st day of November of each year obtain a license from the Commissioners of the District of Columbia for the year beginning November 1 upon the payment of $100, which money shall be deposited with other license funds of the District. Druggists, wholesale or retail, desiring to sell alcoholic or other prohibited liquors for the purposes permitted in this act shall obtain a license in the same way for the same period, the fee for wholesale druggists being $25, for retail druggists $10. The commissioners shall have power to refuse or revoke all licenses referred to in this section if doubtful of the good faith of the licensee and his intention to comply with this act. Manufacturers licensed according to this section shall sell alcoholic and other prohibited liquors within the District of Columbia to druggists, hospitals, and scientific laboratories only, and only to such druggists as are licensed under the terms of this section. No others than druggists and manufacturers licensed according to this section may manufacture or sell alcoholic and other prohibited liquors in the District of Columbia, and these only for the purposes permitted by this act. Violations of this section shall be punished by fine of not less than $300 nor more than $1,000, and by imprisonment in the District jail or workhouse for not less than 30 days nor more than 1 year: Provided, That nothing in this act shall prevent any executive department or other establishment of the United States Government from purchasing or importing into the District of Columbia, free of tax and for its own uses, denatured, methyl, or ethyl alcohol for scientific, medicinal, pharmaceutical, or mechanical purposes.

SEC. 17. That every licensed manufacturer of alcoholic liquor not herein prohibited shall keep a permanent record of all sales and shipments of alcoholic liquor. Such record shall set forth the following information: The name of the consignee or purchaser, the quantity of liquor, the express company or other carrier by which such liquor was shipped, the date of sale or shipment, and the purpose of the purchase as set forth in the affidavit accompanying the order. Each common or special carrier of alcoholic liquors within the District shall keep a record as above provided, and a certified copy of such record with a copy of the affidavits shall be filed with the District Commissioners not later than the fifth day of each month for the calendar month preceding. No shipment of alcoholic liquors shall be made until the purchaser signs an affidavit that such alcoholic liquors are not purchased for nor will such liquors be used or sold by the consignee for beverage purposes. The District Commissioners shall keep a public record of such sales, shipments, and affidavits alphabetically arranged. Copies of the affidavit shall be attached permanently at the end of the record of each shipment or sale, and to each package containing liquor until delivered to the consignee. Any violation of this section shall be deemed a misdemeanor and be subject to the same penalties as provided in section 11 of this act.

SEC. 18. That it shall be unlawful for any common or other carrier, express company, or any person to deliver to any person, company, corporation, club, or association or order, his, or its agents, clerks, or employees, any liquors in the District of Columbia, knowing the same to be such, and in the case of shipments of liquors for purposes not prohibited it shall be unlawful to bring the same into the District of Columbia, or to deliver the same therein, in original packages or otherwise, on any Sunday or on any other day before 6 o'clock a. m. and after 5 o'clock p. m. Any common or other carrier, express company, or any person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than $100 or more than $500, or be confined in the District jail or workhouse not less than one nor more than six months, or by both fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

SEC. 19. That every person who shall directly or indirectly keep or maintain by himself or by associating with others, or who shall in any manner aid, assist, or abet in keeping or maintaining any clubhouse, or other place in which any alcoholic liquor is received or kept for the purpose of gift, barter, or sale, or for distribution or division among the members of any club or association by any means whatsoever, or who shall maintain what is commonly known as the "locker system" or other device for evading the provisions of this act, and every person who shall use, barter, sell, or assist or abet in bartering, selling any liquors so received or kept, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be subject to the penalties prescribed in section 11 of this act; and in all cases the members, shareholders, associates, or employees in any club or association mentioned in this section shall be competent witnesses to prove any violations of the provisions of this section of this act, or of any fact tending thereto; and no person shall be excused from testifying as to any offense committed by another against any of the provisions of this act by reason of his testimony tending to criminate himself, but the testimony given by such person shall in no case be used against him.

SEC. 20. The keeping or giving away of alcoholic or other prohibited liquors for the purpose of evading the provisions of this act shall be deemed an unlawful selling, subject to the penalties provided in section 11 of this act.

SEC. 21. That if any person shall advertise or give notice by signs, billboards, newspapers, periodicals, or otherwise for himself or another the manufacture, offering for sale, or keeping for sale of alcoholic or other prohibited liquors for purposes forbidden or prohibited under this act, or shall circulate or distribute any price list, circulars, or order blanks advertising such liquors, or publish or distribute any newspaper, magazine, periodical, or other written or printed paper in which such advertisements of liquors appear, or shall permit to be posted upon his premises, or premises under his control (including billboards) or shall permit the same to so remain upon such premises, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and be fined not less than $100 nor more than $500.

SEC. 22. That if one or more persons who are competent to witness shall charge, on oath or affirmation before the corporation counsel of the District of Columbia or any of his assistants duly authorized to act for him, presenting that any person, company, copartnership, association, club, or corporation has or have violated or is violating the provisions of this act by manufacturing, offering for sale, keeping for sale, trafficking in, bartering, exchanging for goods, or otherwise furnishing alcoholic liquor, shall request said corporation counsel or any of his assistants duly authorized to act for him to issue a warrant, said attorney or any of his assistants shall issue such warrant, in which warrant the room, house, building, or other place in which the violation is alleged to have occurred or is occurring shall be specifically described, and said warrant shall be placed in the hands of the captain or acting captain of the police precinct in which the room, house, building, or other place above referred to is located, commanding him to at once thoroughly search said described room, house, building, or other place, and the appurtenances thereof, and if any such be found, to take into his possession and safely keep, to be produced as evidence when required, all alcoholic liquors and all the means of dispensing the same, also all the paraphernalia or part of the paraphernalia of a barroom or other alcoholic-liquor establishment, and any United States internal-revenue tax receipt or certificate for the manufacture or sale of alcoholic liquor effective for the period of time covering the alleged offense, and forthwith report all the facts to the corporation counsel of the District of Columbia, and such alcoholic liquor or the means for dispensing the same, or the paraphernalia of a barroom or other alcoholic-liquor establishment, or any United States internal-revenue tax receipt or certificate for the sale of alcoholic liquor effective as aforesaid, shall be prima facie evidence of the violation of the provisions of this act.

SEC. 23. That any person who shall, in the District of Columbia, in any street, or public or private road, alley, or in any public place or building or in or upon any street car, any other vehicle commonly used for the transportation of passengers, or in or about any depot, platform, or waiting station, drink any alcoholic liquor of any kind, or if any person shall be drunk or intoxicated in any street, alley, or public or private road or in any railroad passenger train, street car, or any public place or building, or at any public gathering, or if any person shall be drunk or intoxicated and shall disturb the peace of any person anywhere, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $100, or by imprisonment for not less than 5 days nor more than 30 days in the workhouse or jail of the District of Columbia, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

SEC. 24. The payment of the special tax required of wholesale or retail liquor dealers by the United States by any person or persons other than manufacturers or druggists licensed under section 16 of this act, within the District of Columbia, shall be prima facie evidence that such person or persons are engaged in keeping and selling, offering and exposing for sale alcoholic liquors contrary to the provisions of this act, and a certificate from the collector of internal revenue, his agents, clerks, or deputies showing the payment of such tax, and the name or names of persons to whom issued, and the names of the person or persons, if any, associated with the person to whom such tax receipt is issued, shall be sufficient evidence of the payment of such tax and of the association of such persons for the selling and keeping, offering and exposing for sale of liquors contrary to the provisions of this act in all trials or legal inquiries.

SEC. 25. All houses, boathouses, buildings, clubrooms, and places of every description, including drug stores, where alcoholic liquors are manufactured, sold, vended, or furnished contrary to law (including those in which clubs, orders, or associations sell, barter, distribute, or dispense intoxicating liquors to their members, by any means or device whatever, as provided in section 20 of this act) shall be held, taken, and deemed common and public nuisances. And any person who shall maintain, or shall aid or abet, or knowingly be associated with others in maintaining such common and public nuisance, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be subject to the penalties prescribed in section 11 of this act, and judgment shall be given that such house, building, or other place, or any room therein, be abated or closed up as a place for the sale or keeping of such liquor contrary to law, as the court may determine.

SEC. 26. The United States district attorney for the District of Columbia, or any citizen of the District of Columbia, may maintain an action in equity in the name of the United States to abate and perpetually enjoin such a nuisance as defined in the preceding section. The injunction shall be granted at the commencement of the action, and no bond shall be required. Any person violating the terms of any injunction granted in such proceedings shall be punished for contempt by a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $500 and by imprisonment in the District jail or workhouse for not less than 30 days nor more than 6 months, in the discretion of the court.

SEC. 27. That when any violation of this act is threatened, or shall have occurred, or is occurring, the doing of, or the continuance or repetition of the unlawful act, or any of like kind by the offending party may be prevented by a writ of injunction out of a court of equity upon a bill filed in all respects as in cases of liquor nuisances; in like manner the writ of injunction may be employed to compel obedience to any provision of this act.

SEC. 28. If a tenant of a building or tenement uses such premises, or any part thereof, in maintaining a common nuisance as hereinbefore defined, or knowingly permits such use by another, such use shall render void the lease under which he holds, and shall cause the right of possession to revert to the owner or lessor, who may, without process of law, make immediate entry upon the premises, or may avail himself of the remedy provided for the forcible detention thereof.

SEC. 29. Anyone who knowingly permits any building owned or leased by him or under his control, or any part thereof, to be used in maintaining a common nuisance hereinbefore described in section 26 of this act, after being notified in writing of such use, neglects to take all reasonable measures to eject therefrom the person so using the same, shall be deemed guilty of assisting in maintaining such nuisance.

SEC. 30. That no property rights of any kind shall exist in alcoholic liquors or beverages illegally manufactured, received, possessed, or stored under this act, and in all such cases the liquors are forfeited to the District of Columbia and may be searched for and seized and ordered to be destroyed by the court after a conviction when such liquors have been seized for use as evidence, or upon satisfactory evidence to the court presented by the corporation counsel that such liquors are contraband.

SEC. 31. Every wife, child, parent, guardian, or employer, or other person who shall be injured in person or property or means of support by any intoxicated person, or in consequence of intoxication, habitual or otherwise, of any person, such wife, child, parent, or guardian shall have a right of action, in his or her own name, against any person who shall, by selling or bartering intoxicating liquors, have caused the intoxication of such person, for all damages actually sustained, as well as for exemplary damages; and a married woman shall have the right to bring suit, prosecute, and control the same, and the amount recovered the same as if unmarried; and all damages recovered by a minor under this act shall be paid either to such minor or to his or her parents, guardian, or next friend, as the court shall direct.

SEC. 32. If any person while in charge of a locomotive engine, or while acting as a conductor or brakeman of a car or train of cars, or while in charge of any street car, steamboat, launch, or other water craft, and while in charge of or operating any automobile or horse vehicle in the District of Columbia shall be intoxicated, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and if convicted shall be punished by a fine of not less than $25 nor more than $300, and in default in payment of said fine shall be imprisoned in the District Jail or workhouse for not exceeding three months, or both fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

SEC. 33. It shall be the duty of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to enforce the provisions of this act. They shall detail qualified members of the police force to detect violations of the act, if any, and to report promptly all knowledge or information they may have concerning such violations, together with the names of any witnesses by whom they may be proven to the corporation counsel; but it shall be the duty of all members of the police force to detect violations of the act and to promptly report any information or knowledge concerning the same to the corporation counsel, together with the names of witnesses, by whom such violations may be proven; and the corporation counsel shall bring such alleged violators of the law to trial with all due diligence.

If any such officer shall fail to comply with the provisions of this section, he shall upon conviction be fined in any sum not less than $100 nor more than $500; and such conviction shall be a forfeiture of the office held by such person, and the court before whom such conviction is had shall, in addition to imposition of the fine aforesaid, order and adjudge the forfeiture of his said office. For a failure or neglect of official duty in the enforcement of this act any official herein referred to may be removed by court action.

SEC. 34. That prosecutions for violations of the provisions of this act shall be on information filed in the police court by the corporation counsel of the District of Columbia or any of his assistants duly authorized to act for him, and said corporation counsel or his assistants shall file such information upon the presentation to him or his assistants of sworn information that the law has been violated; and such corporation counsel and his assistants shall have power to administer oaths to such informant or informants, and such others as present themselves, and anyone making a false oath to any material fact shall be deemed guilty of perjury and subject to the same penalties as now provided by law for such offense.

When, however, it appears to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia that it will be in the interest of more effective enforcement of the provisions of this act, they may request the United States district attorney for the District of Columbia to prosecute persons charged with offenses against the law, and when so requested by said commissioners the said district attorney shall proceed before the grand jury and in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia to prosecute such offenders in manner now prescribed by law for the prosecution of persons charged with violations of the laws against crime in the District of Columbia.

SEC. 35. That if for any reason any section, paragraph, provision, clause, or part of this act shall be held unconstitutional or invalid, that fact shall not effect or destroy any other section, paragraph, provision, clause, or part of the act not in and of itself invalid, but the remaining parts of sections shall be enforced without regard to that so invalidated.

SEC. 36. That in the interpretation of this act words of the singular number shall be deemed to include their plurals, and words of the masculine gender shall be deemed to include the feminine, as the case may be.

SEC. 37. That sections 11 to 34, both inclusive, of this act when put in operation by a vote of the qualified electors of the District shall remain in force until the Commissioners of the District shall declare that the majority of the qualified voters of said District have voted in favor of the licensed sale of spirituous, vinous, or malt liquors in said District, when said sections shall cease to be operative unless they are put into force and effect by a subsequent vote of said electors.

SEC. 38. That when an election has been held under the provisions of this act, subsequent elections may be petitioned for and held hereunder, but not sooner than three years from the date of the last preceding election.

SEC. 39. That the managers, clerks, returning officers, and registrars shall be entitled to $3 per diem each for their services in conducting the said election. The expenses and all claims arising under the provisions of this act shall be paid out of the District treasury, on proper proof, from money in the Treasury not specially otherwise appropriated.

SEC. 40. That any manager, clerk, returning officer, or registrar, or any voter or other person, who is guilty of misconduct, fraud, or corruption in the performance of any duty required of him under the provisions of this act or in the exercise of his right to vote, or in connection with the lawful holding of said election, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not more than $1,000 or shall be imprisoned in the District Jail or workhouse for a period of not more than one year, or both, in the discretion of the court.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. BORAH. Is the Senator from Alabama desirous of discussing his amendment at this time?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I did propose to do so.

Mr. BORAH. I have an amendment to offer to his amendment, but I would just as soon offer it after the Senator gets through with the discussion as to offer it now.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the Senator from Idaho that, so far as the portion of my amendment for a referendum is concerned, I have no pride of opinion about it. If any Senator can offer an amendment which will make it more reasonable in its terms or can insure a fairer election than can be secured under the terms which I have offered, I shall be glad to accept such amendment. I have no desire to fight such a proposition. I am only striving to give the people of the District of Columbia an opportunity to vote on this question. I am prepared to agree to any proposition that will safeguard the election. I think the proposals which I make do safeguard the election, but if they can be perfected I have no fight to make on such a proposition.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, discussion on this amendment, I think, is very necessary to a proper understanding of the question. The question itself is one of prime importance and I therefore suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The absence of a quorum being suggested, the Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Bankhead	Husting	Norris	Smith, Mich.
Beckham	James	Oliver	Smoot
Borah	Johnson, Me.	Overman	Sterling
Brady	Jones	Page	Swanson
Catron	Kenyon	Penrose	Thomas
Chamberlain	Kern	Phelan	Thompson
Chilton	Kirby	Pittman	Tillman
Colt	Lane	Poindexter	Townsend
Curtis	Lee, Md.	Reed	Underwood
Dillingham	Lodge	Saulsbury	Vardaman
Fernald	McCumber	Sheppard	Wadsworth
Gallinger	McLean	Sherman	Walsh
Gore	Martin, Va.	Shields	Watson
Harding	Martine, N. J.	Smith, Ariz.	Williams
Hitchcock	Nelson	Smith, Ga.

Mr. KIRBY. I desire to announce the absence of my colleague, the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON], on account of illness. The announcement may stand throughout the day.

I also desire to announce that the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. JOHNSON] is absent on official business.

Mr. WALSH. The absence of my colleague [Mr. MYERS] is due to his illness.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Fifty-nine Senators have answered to their names. There is a quorum present.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. BORAH. I suggest to the Senator from Alabama that the amendment which I have in mind—and I make the statement so that the Senator may use his own pleasure about having it submitted now or later—provides for a wider vote upon this question in the District, including female as well as male voters.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I think that is a question which the Senate should determine, but I prefer that such amendments shall be offered after I have made my presentation of the case.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, if my memory serves me aright, the Senator from Indiana [Mr. KERN] offered such an amendment some days ago, and I think that such an amendment is on the Secretary's desk.

Mr. BORAH. It is immaterial to me who offers it. My amendment was submitted on March 3, 1916; but if the Senator from Indiana has offered such an amendment, it is immaterial to me which one is voted upon.

Mr. THOMAS. Of course, it is immaterial to me. I was laboring under the impression that perhaps the Senator was not advised of the fact, in giving notice of an amendment which he was going to offer, that the Senator from Indiana [Mr. KERN] had presented such an amendment several days ago.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, I desire first to comment on the provisions of the substitute that I have offered to the Sheppard bill. The first paragraph fixes the right of suffrage and provides for the number of petitioners and manner of calling for the referendum. It states:

That upon the application of 25 per cent of the male taxpayers over 21 years of age, resident citizens of the District of Columbia, by petition in writing signed in person by such resident citizens, addressed to and filed with the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, asking that an election be held in such District for the purpose of submitting to the qualified voters thereof the question of whether or not the manufacture and sale of spirituous, vinous, or malt liquors shall be licensed therein, they shall within 30 days after the presentation of such petition order an election to be held in such District within 40 days from the time of making such order to determine the question of whether or not the manufacture and sale of spirituous, vinous, or malt liquors shall be licensed in compliance with existing law, or whether the sale of spirituous, vinous, or malt liquors within the District of Columbia shall be prohibited under the terms prescribed in this act.

The referendum conforms to the laws that have been adopted in most of the States in reference to submitting the question of the sale of liquor to the citizens of a local community, a county, or a State. The only manner in which I have changed the usual form is that I have prescribed that the petition shall be by the male taxpayers over 21 years of age, instead of by the male resident citizens; and I wish to explain to the Senate why I have made this change.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Mr. President, as I understand, then, the Senator's amendment provides for a property qualification.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; not exactly. It provides for a property qualification for those who petition for an election. My main purpose in presenting the case in this way, however, was not to provide for a property qualification.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Well, pardon me; would the word "taxpayers" imply that a man who paid a poll-tax would be entitled to sign the petition?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It would, but there is no poll-tax in the District of Columbia.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. No; I understand that exactly. That is just my point. That would permit only men who were property holders to sign the petition?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It would.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. So there is a property qualification?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Only for those who sign the petition for the submission of this question; but I will explain to the Senator, as I was about to explain to the Senate, why I adopted this method. In the District at the present time there is no organized election machinery, no registration of voters, and no method of determining who are the resident citizens of the District. Therefore, if we followed the usual terms of a law of this kind, and said that this petition should be signed by one-fourth of the resident citizens of the District of Columbia, there would be no way in which the Commissioners of the District of Columbia could ascertain who those resident citizens are. There is, however, a complete list of the taxpayers of this District accessible to the commissioners.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, will the Senator permit a question?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Certainly.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Would the Senator tell us how many taxpayers there are?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I can approximate it, if the Senator will allow me to proceed for just a moment.

The sentiment of this community on the question of holding an election would probably be represented as fully and completely by confining the right to petition to taxpayers as if the entire resident citizenship of the District were permitted to sign. If this amendment is adopted all the resident citizens will be given the right to vote on the question itself. I did not think it was necessary or even of sufficient importance to require a registration of the resident citizens of the District of Columbia prior to determining the question as to whether or not there should be an election. I have avoided that expense and that trouble by providing that the petition shall be signed merely by the taxpayers of the District.

This particular question does not appear to me to be material. It is merely a matter of convenience. If one-fourth of the taxpayers of this District are not in favor of submitting what is here known as the Sheppard bill to a vote of the resident citizens of the District, then certainly there is no real sentiment in this District for the bill. If there is a real sentiment in this District for the Sheppard bill, certainly they can obtain the signatures of one-fourth of the taxpayers. Limiting this petition to the taxpayers will avoid confusion and possibly fraud. It absolutely settles who can sign the petition, and therefore I think it is the best method, if we are going to adopt an amendment to provide for a submission of this question to the voters of the District.

The Senator from Texas asked as to the number of taxpayers in the District of Columbia. For another purpose I had inquiries made at the tax office in the District, and I ascertain that the number of taxpayers in the District was about 50,000, which would probably represent somewhere between one-third and one-half of the voting population of the District.

Section 2 of the bill provides:

That all male resident citizens of the District of Columbia who are over the age of 21 years, of sound mind, and have not been convicted of an offense involving moral turpitude, and who have been residents of the District of Columbia and the voting precinct in which they reside for more than one year prior to the date of the holding of said election, shall constitute the qualified voters at said election. The managers of the said election shall be the sole judges of the qualifications of the voters.

Mr. President, in this amendment I have adopted broad terms for the qualification of these voters. So far as I am personally concerned, I would be willing to make the terms to be prescribed for the qualification of voters in the District conform to those prescribed in my own State; but I realize that I have not the power to fix the right of suffrage in the District of Columbia upon terms that would conform to the views of my own people. If we are to fix the right of suffrage in the District it must conform to the views of a majority of the constituencies of the country, as expressed by their representatives on the floor of the Senate.

I have been criticized by some of the leaders of the Antisaloon League because I have not attempted to eliminate the negro element in the District of Columbia from voting on this amendment. Some have gone so far as to say that I should have limited the right of suffrage solely to the white citizens of the District of Columbia. Of course, if I had followed that suggestion and written in this bill that the only persons entitled to vote in the election should be white citizens of the District of Columbia, I would have been immediately met with the charge that I was trying to commit a fraud on the people of the District of Columbia who favored prohibition, because they would have said that I had knowledge of the fact that the fifteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States prohibited discrimination on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude in determining the franchise in an election within the boundaries of the United States.

I have heard some gentlemen state that they did not believe that the terms of the fifteenth amendment applied to the District of Columbia. Of course, I recognize that there are some provisions in the Constitution of the United States that do not apply to the District of Columbia; but those great principles which protect the rights and the liberty and the property of the citizens of the United States undoubtedly apply to the people living within the District of Columbia as well as the people living within the several States. In fact, there are decisions to that effect. On one occasion a case went from the District of Columbia to the Supreme Court of the United States involving the question as to whether a citizen of the District of Columbia was entitled to a trial by jury, and the Supreme Court held that a citizen of the District of Columbia was entitled to a trial by jury just as any other citizen of the United States. The laws with relation to taxation apply to the District of Columbia as well as to the several States, and in my judgment if we adopted an amendment limiting this vote to the white resident citizens of the District of Columbia the clause relating to the franchise in the bill would be declared unconstitutional, and with that clause eliminated from the bill the whole bill would go down. Therefore I believe that when the members of the Antisaloon League criticized my conduct for offering a bill that was not limited to the white resident citizens of this District they were appealing to race prejudice and not stating honest convictions as to how this bill should be drawn.

It is proposed by Senators here to amend this bill so as to allow females as well as males to vote on this question. That is a question for the Senate to decide. I am not attempting to determine the terms on which citizens of the District should vote. Whether the referendum is amended or not in that respect, I shall vote for it.

It is also proposed to put a property and an educational qualification in the bill. So far as I am personally concerned, I should be very glad to agree to an amendment of that kind, but I do not think it would be effective. It is the law in my own State that no one shall vote except those who can read and write and have paid a poll tax of $1.50. An amendment to that effect would be entirely acceptable to me, but it may not be to the Senate of the United States; and therefore I wish the Senate to determine that question separately instead of involving it in the main proposal.

My desire is to have this question determined by those best qualified and in the interest of the best people of the District; but what effect would such proposed modifications have on this bill and on the electorate in the District of Columbia?

The reports of the Bureau of the Census for 1910, the latest available, show that there are 75,765 white males of voting age—21 and over; 27,621 negroes in the same class; and 375 males of all other nationalities, as Japanese, Chinese, and so forth, making a total male population of 21 years and over of 103,761 in the District of Columbia. No figures for the same ages for illiterates are available, but the same census report shows that the number of illiterate males 10 years old or over for 1910 was: White, 1,311; negro, 4,015; a total of 5,326.

A certain proportion of those illiterates, of course, are under 21 years of age and would not have the right to vote. As to what that proportion would be, I have no means of ascertaining, but I assume that it would be about one-third. So you can see that if the illiterates 21 years and over are two-thirds of those given by the Census report there would be less than 4,000 illiterates to vote in the District out of a total vote of 103,000, which could not very seriously affect the result of the election.

Now, as to the taxpayers——

Mr. POMERENE. May I ask the Senator for what year those figures are given?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. These figures were taken from the census report for 1910. Of course, they have changed since that time because of the increased population, but the approximate result has not changed materially.

I find from inquiry at the District Building that the number of taxpayers in the District of Columbia is approximately 50,000. The number of negro taxpayers is estimated by the District tax assessor at 5,000. The total number of delinquent taxpayers in the District of Columbia is estimated at 8,000, of which number 240, or 3 per cent, are negroes. It is readily shown why this condition exists. There is no poll tax or street tax in the District of Columbia; merely a property tax. The negro owners of property in the District of Columbia are small owners of the frugal, industrious class of negroes, or they would not own property, and they largely pay their taxes. As the record shows, there are only 240 of them who are delinquent in their taxes.

On the other hand, there are about 7,500 white persons in the District of Columbia who do not pay their taxes. Therefore, in my judgment, were a property qualification added to this bill it would probably exclude more people of intelligence, character, and virtue than it would of ignorance and vice.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Will the Senator from Alabama pardon me for a moment?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Certainly.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Why does the Senator call this a property qualification? The proposed amendment does not suggest that the voter shall have property. It merely provides that already having property he shall be honest enough to pay his taxes upon it. It fixes no property qualification. It does not in the slightest degree apply to the man who has no property at all, but it provides that those who have taxable property in the District shall pay the tax before they vote. Men who do not own any property will not be affected by it. The only thing that the amendment goes to is the honesty of the man as an elector, that he shall not be a tax dodger.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The Senator is correct in his statement that it would not operate as a property qualification for voting; it would merely exclude from the electorate certain owners of property who had not paid their taxes. I have no criticism of the proposed amendment. I am merely replying to charges that have been made against me because I did not propose the amendment, and I am attempting to show, and I think the facts do show, that if I had included such an amendment I would not have improved the character or standing of the electorate in the District of Columbia, but would rather have had the opposite effect, because I assume that the white man who owns property in the District of Columbia is an educated citizen, a moral citizen, and an intelligent man, for, as a rule, you find that in any community the property owners fill those qualifications. So far as the negroes are concerned, I think you will find the best part of the negro electorate among those who own property rather than those who do not own property.

I only say this in defense of the position I have taken in drafting this bill. I do not believe that if the proponents of the Sheppard bill had offered a referendum they would have materially changed the provisions that I have proposed for an electorate in the District.

Section 3 provides for the notice of election, the time of calling and the terms under which it shall be called. It is not necessary for me to comment on that section.

Sections 4 and 5 relate to the machinery of the election and to the appointment of managers and clerks.

Section 6 relates to the manner in which the question of the sale or the prohibition of the sale of liquor shall be submitted to the voters of the District of Columbia.

Section 7 relates to the ballot, poll lists, and tally sheets, and to rules and regulations which the District Commissioners may adopt in reference to the holding of the election.

Section 8 relates to the opening of the polls, the poll lists and tally sheets, and the returns of the election.

Section 9 relates to the canvassing and declaration of the result by the commissioners.

Section 10 provides for the putting of the Sheppard bill into effect in the event a majority of the voters of the District declaring in favor of it, and provides that the present law shall remain in effect if a majority of the voters of the District do not favor the Sheppard bill.

Section 11 is the beginning of the Sheppard bill. The only difference between section 11 of the substitute offered by me and section 1 of the Sheppard bill is that the Sheppard bill provides that this law shall go into effect on the 1st day of November, 1917, and section 11 of this bill provides that it shall go into effect 30 days after the declaration of the result by the commissioners, if the result is favorable to the Sheppard bill.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KIRBY in the chair). Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. KENYON. I ask for information as to section 10. It provides that the act shall become operative and remain in effect until a subsequent election, held for the purpose, and so forth. Assuming, for instance, that the referendum resulted in the adoption of the act, does the Senator provide in any way for a vote that may be taken at any subsequent time upon petition?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. KENYON. Or if the act is adopted when there could be another vote?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do; but it is in a subsequent section.

Mr. KENYON. The Senator will reach that later?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will.

From section 11 to section 34 you will find the Sheppard bill just as it was agreed to by the Senate up to last Saturday night, and perfected by the Senator from Texas.

Then, section 35 takes up my part of the bill, the referendum part, and it answers the question that has just been asked me by the Senator from Iowa.

Section 35 provides—

> That sections 11 to 34, both inclusive, of this act, when put in operation by a vote of the qualified electors of the District, shall remain in force until the Commissioners of the District shall declare that the majority of the qualified voters of said District have voted in favor of the licensed sale of spirituous, vinous, or malt liquors in said District, when said sections shall cease to be operative unless they are put into force and effect by a subsequent vote of said electors.

In other words, I propose a strictly local-option bill for the District of Columbia with the so-called prohibition features in it covered by the Sheppard bill.

I wish to say in passing that, except as to the qualifications of the electors, the referendum features of the bill were copied from an Alabama statute that was written on the statute books by the prohibition advocates of my State before we had State-wide prohibition in Alabama. I had better read section 36 before going further, which provides:

> That when an election has been held under the provisions of this act, subsequent elections may be petitioned for and held hereunder, but not sooner than three years from the date of the last preceding election.

In other words, if the Sheppard bill is submitted to the people of the District of Columbia under this referendum and the people of the District of Columbia refuse to accept the Sheppard bill at that time and continue the licensed sale of liquor in the District of Columbia, at the end of three years those who desire prohibition in this District will have the opportunity to present another petition to the District Commissioners and have another vote on this question to determine whether they want licensed saloons or whether they want to abolish licensed saloons in the District. On the other hand, if the first vote under this referendum should be in favor of the Sheppard bill and the wiping out of the licensed sale of liquor in the District of Columbia, and the people of the District of Columbia try it for three years and find it is not operative, find that it does not produce good morals, find that it does not improve temperance conditions in the District, as has been the effect of these laws in some places, then the people of the District, who must live under the law, will have a right to file a petition with the District Commissioners and have an opportunity to pass on the question as to whether they want the Sheppard bill to continue as the law.

Section 37 provides for the payment of the expenses of the election, the managers and clerks.

It has been said that there are not sufficient provisions in this bill to provide for a fair election. I want a fair election. There is nothing which can be accomplished for the good of the people of this District or for the freedom of the people of the District of Columbia unless you provide for a fair election, and I think the provision I have incorporated as section 38 of the bill does provide for a fair election. But if gentlemen desire to improve the bill in that respect they will meet with my hearty cooperation.

Section 38 reads as follows:

> That any manager, clerk, returning officer, or registrar, or any voter or other person—

It seems to me that that is as broad as you can state the case—

who is guilty of misconduct, fraud, or corruption—

That covers the entire situation—

in the performance of any duty required of him under the provisions of this act or in the exercise of his right to vote, or in connection with the lawful holding of said election, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not more than $1,000 or shall be imprisoned in the District jail or workhouse for a period of not more than one year, or both, in the discretion of the court.

It seems to me that any possible fraud or corruption is included within that paragraph of the bill. I know that it is the modern practice in writing legislation to particularize, define and spread your statute all over the face of the law books of the land, but I am one of those who believe that when you say what you mean the courts will so interpret it, and those statutes which in a few words cover the entire field involved are broader in their scope to protect your law and more effective when it comes to the trial court for its enforcement. When I say in this bill, after enumerating the election officers, "any voter or other person who is guilty of misconduct, fraud, or corruption in the performance of any duty required of him under the provisions of this act, or in the exercise of his right to vote, or in connection with the lawful holding of said election, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor," I think I have covered the whole scope of election frauds. If he sells his vote, he is guilty of corruption; if he repeats at the polls, he has committed a fraud in the election, and so on. You can go through the whole gamut of crimes and frauds that may be committed in elections, and you will find them all embraced by this clause. So far as repeating is concerned, the provisions of this amendment require a registration of the voters in precincts by the District Commissioners, which of itself will be a protection against fraud.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. STERLING. I should like to ask the Senator from Alabama a little question of detail in regard to the elections under this act. It is provided not that the issue shall be an issue between license and prohibition exactly, but that the issue shall be whether the manufacture and sale of liquor shall be licensed in compliance with existing law or whether the sale of spirituous, vinous, or malt liquors within the District of Columbia shall be prohibited under the terms prescribed by this act. The question, to my mind, is, How would the issue really be submitted to be made intelligible to the voters at such an election? In such an event, can you make the issue plain unless you print the act itself on the ballot in order that the voters may determine what are the provisions of the act?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not think you could print the entire act on the ballot and have it intelligently understood. I have no doubt, if submitted, every provision in this act will be printed and distributed in the newspapers and discussed in public speeches. My definition of how it shall be submitted is to state the facts, and that is all you can do. The Sheppard bill is not a prohibition bill, as I think I can demonstrate a little later on. It is a bill to prohibit the licensed sale of liquor in the District of Columbia. That is exactly the way I describe it—nothing more and nothing less. The Senate had before it on Saturday and this morning a prohibition bill which was defeated by an overwhelming vote. The Senator from Texas, representing the Antisaloon League, who are the advocates of this measure, did not vote for it himself.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am not criticizing the Senator for not voting for it.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Let me say to the Senator I am not the representative of the Antisaloon League or any other organization.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am not charging the Senator with being so.

Mr. SHEPPARD. However, I have the highest respect for that organization.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not want to misrepresent the Senator, but I will ask him a question: Has not the Senator from Texas advised with and cooperated with the representatives of the Antisaloon League in presenting this measure before the Senate?

Mr. SHEPPARD. I have advised with them and I have advised with Senators on this floor. Differences of opinion developed among leaders of the Antisaloon League just as they developed here.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I have no desire to make any reflection whatever upon the Senator from Texas, but I desire to say now—if I am not stating it correctly, I hope the Senator from Texas will correct me—the bill he has presented at this desk, which I have incorporated in my referendum, represents the legislation that is desired by the Antisaloon League for the District of Columbia at this time.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I do not think that states the case entirely. I would not be authorized to say that it represented all the legislation they desire.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I said the legislation that they desire at this time on this subject.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I believe that is a fact.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That is what I mean.

Mr. SHEPPARD. There are Antisaloon Leaguers who favor the Smoot bill.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I realize that, but I am talking about the representatives of that organization.

Mr. President, I do not propose to discuss at this time, but will do so a little later, the merits of the proposition. I wish first to answer the statement which has been made that the Congress of the United States has not the power under the Constitution of the United States to submit this question to a vote of the people of the District of Columbia; in other words, as to whether a referendum to the people of the District of Columbia is constitutional or not.

Section 8, Article I, of the Constitution of the United States grants to the Congress of the United States the power:

To exercise exclusive legislation, in all cases whatsoever, over such District (not exceeding 10 miles square) as may, by cession of particular States, and the acceptance of Congress, become the seat of Government of the United States.

That is the District of Columbia. The Supreme Court of the United States in defining the extent of this power in the case of the Capitol Traction Co. against Hofman, One hundred and seventy-fourth United States Supreme Court Reports, page 5, says:

The Congress of the United States, being empowered by the Constitution "to exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever" over the site of the National Government, has the entire control over the District of Columbia for every purpose of government, national or local. It may exercise within the District all legislative powers that the legislatures of the States might exercise within the States.

Under that decision the Congress of the United States has all the powers than can be exercised by the legislature of any State. What limitations are there upon the power of a State legislature? There are two: First, the limitations of the Constitution of the United States; second, the limitations placed on it by the constitution of that particular State. Outside of those limitations there are no powers of legislation that the legislatures of the States can not exercise. Of course, the Congress of the United States is limited in no way by the constitutions of the several States. The only limitation upon the power of Congress to act is the Constitution of the United States itself.

There is no direct limitation in the Constitution of the United States against Congress legislating on a question of this kind. Of course, there are some limitations. There is a limitation on our legislating in reference to suffrage, bounded by the fifteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States; there is a limitation on our right to legislate with reference to trial, bounded by the provision in the Constitution of the United States which guarantees to the citizens of this country trial by jury; but there is no direct limitation on this question. The only question that can be raised with reference to the power to act is the question as to whether or not we have the power to delegate to the people of the District of Columbia the right to determine this question and to put the legislation into effect.

I do not contend for one minute that the Congress of the United States has the right to delegate its legislative power; but I do contend, and I think the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States amply sustain the proposition, that the Congress of the United States has the power to create legislation, to make it complete, and then to leave the determination as to when it shall go into effect contingent upon the happening of a certain event. We repeatedly do that in many other classes of legislation, and the Supreme Court of the United States has repeatedly sustained our right to do so.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. WILLIAMS. The Senator from Alabama surely has not forgotten the fact, but has only forgotten to mention the well-recognized fact, that for a long time the District of Columbia was governed as a Territory, with an executive officer who was called a governor and a legislative body which was called, I believe, a council, and that the same constitutional authority which we have over the District of Columbia we have over the Territories; yet from the earliest period of our history we have passed acts to provide for the government of Territories through other bodies than ourselves, retaining to ourselves, of course, a veto power. For years and years this District was governed in almost every particular, not by Congress at all, but by a governor and council, except, as I state, we reserved the power to veto such actions, just as we did in the case of the Territories.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The Senator from Mississippi is undoubtedly correct about that, and I intended to refer to the question of the delegation of power later on.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If the Senator will pardon me, while I am on my feet—because it is quite interesting historically, if not otherwise; I do not know whether or not his attention has been called to it, but my attention was called to it this morning by the Senator from Indiana——

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, we on this side wish to hear the colloquy which is going on on the other side of the Chamber.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I was observing that this reference I am about to make is quite interesting historically, if not otherwise, and comes in here very well. My attention this morning was called to the fact that on January 13, 1849—

Mr. Lincoln gave notice of a motion for leave to introduce a bill abolishing slavery in the District of Columbia by consent of the free white people of the District of Columbia, with compensation to owners.

Later on, at the second session of the Thirtieth Congress, January 10, 1849, John Wentworth, of Illinois, same Congress, introduced a bill abolishing slavery in the District of Columbia.

Mr. Lincoln thereupon read an amendment which he intended to offer, if he could obtain the opportunity, as follows:

I shall not go into it or read it all, but it was to leave the question to the white people of the District of Columbia on a referendum, just as is proposed in connection with this whisky legislation. It is true Mr. Lincoln went further in that bill than anybody is proposing to go in this, because he also provided that there should be indemnity to the slave owners, and nobody is offering any indemnity in this referendum proposition to the liquor dealers.

That, however, does not touch the main question. The main question which I wanted the Senator from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] to emphasize in this connection is, that so great an emancipationist as even Abraham Lincoln did not think that Congress ought to emancipate slaves in the District of Columbia without consulting the people of the District of Columbia, and that he offered in public that amendment.

That is not all, if the Senator from Alabama will pardon me. Later, in the joint discussion which took place in Illinois between Stephen A. Douglas and Abraham Lincoln, Abraham Lincoln said that he would not favor the passage of an act of Congress to abolish slavery within the States—I am not quoting him literally—because Congress had no such constitutional power. Mr. Douglas, who was a very skillful debater, thinking to get Lincoln into a corner, said:

But where Congress has the constitutional power, as in the District of Columbia, would the gentleman vote for a bill abolishing slavery there?

Mr. Lincoln answered, in substance:

I would be glad to see slavery abolished in the District of Columbia, but I think it ought to be done with the consent of the people of the District.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, digressing for a moment from my argument to sustain what the Senator from Mississippi has said, I will observe that before the War between the States the question of the government of this District was a much-mooted question in Congress. There was a city government granted at one time; at another time, a District government, with a legislature and a governor. A number of the Presidents of the United States recommended in their messages to Congress that so far as it was possible to give the people in the District of Columbia representation in their local government it should be done. President William Henry Harrison made a direct recommendation of that kind; President Abraham Lincoln made recommendations of that kind; President Andrew Johnson made a recommendation of that kind. In fact, I have never known it to be contended before the present hour by any man or by any set of men that we did not have the power to give the people of this District the opportunity to pass on questions of their own government or that we could not delegate governmental powers to them.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator pardon me for an interruption?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I agree with the able Senator from Alabama that Congress has the power to pass this bill; that it is not a violation of the Constitution; but will the Senator give me the reason why the power was taken from the District of Columbia after this District was once vested with the power to legislate for itself? The reasons that moved the people of the District to surrender the right of local government are worthy of consideration now.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I was not in Congress at that time; in fact, I was only a child of tender years, and I have not investigated the debates on the questions that were under consideration away back in the early seventies, when the right of self-government was taken away from this District. Therefore I am not prepared to answer the Senator's question at this time. I am only discussing the question as to why the people of this District should not further have their freedom taken away from them.

Mr. President, in the exercise of the power of Congress to control legislation in the District of Columbia there have been delegations of that power to the citizens of the District at different times.

By an act of May 3, 1802, Congress incorporated the inhabitants of the District of Columbia, providing for a city council, consisting of two chambers, to be elected annually by the residents of the city. This corporation was given power to tax, to pass all minor regulations for the good government of the city, such as the preventing of the introduction of contagious diseases, building regulations, and so forth.

By the act of 1812, amending the charter of the city, many powers not previously granted were given to the corporation in relation to the improvement of streets, police regulations, and so forth. The power to sell improved property for taxes was also given. This form of self-government in municipal affairs was continued for nearly 51 years, with some slight changes from time to time.

When it was felt that no more territory ought to be held under the exclusive legislation given to Congress over the District, it was decided to recede to the State of Virginia that land which she had ceded for the District. Congress accordingly passed the act of July 9, 1846, making the recession of the Virginia part of the District, with the provision that it should not be in force until the assent of the people of the town and county of Alexandria should be obtained. This being procured, President Polk issued a proclamation on the 7th of September, 1846, that the act was in full force and effect.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, what the Senator read, as I gather it, was not a submission to the people of the District of Columbia, but a submission to the people of the town and county of Alexandria.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It was a submission to a part of the people of the District of Columbia, because at that time the people of the city of Alexandria and of Alexandria County, as it was called, were in the District of Columbia, and Congress, before they put the law into effect receding the territory to the State of Virginia, submitted to the residents of that portion of the District of Columbia directly affected the question as to whether they desired to remain in the District or to go back into the State of Virginia. They were the only people directly affected by the recession, and to them was given the right of passing on it.

Mr. KENYON. The inhabitants of the other portion of the District did not pass on the measure, did they?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; they were not directly affected. This shows, however, that the Congress exercised the right of submitting to the people of this District the determination as to whether or not a law passed by the Congress affecting local conditions of government should go into effect.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. It seems to me that the authorities sustain the proposition that Congress, for instance, could pass a law, make the law complete, and do all things which Congress could be called upon to do to complete the legislation, and make the operation of the law depend upon a certain fact, which fact was to be ascertained by some condition designated by the Congress and promulgated, such as the instance cited; but can Congress itself stop midway in the act of legislation with an incomplete and unfinished law and delegate to somebody else to say whether or not it should ever become a complete law?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It is not necessary to go that far in this argument, because this bill does not go that far. This bill does exactly what the Congress did with reference to the recession of the territory on the Virginia side of the Potomac River back to the State of Virginia. The Sheppard bill is a complete piece of legislation, as complete as the Senator from Texas and those desiring its passage can make it.

Mr. BORAH. But, Mr. President, the Senator will not contend that, if his amendment should be adopted, the Sheppard law would be a complete piece of legislation, because it would not be legislation at all, and would not become effective as legislation until some other body passes upon the question of whether or not it shall take effect.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; until some other body passes upon the question as to whether it shall go into effect—the time when it shall go into effect. Now, there is no distinction whatever between the effect of the amendment I have offered and the legislation that was passed by Congress and sustained receding Alexandria County, which was then a part of the District of Columbia. What was that legislation? It provided for a recession of certain territory in Virginia back to the State of Virginia. Was it an absolute recession of that territory? No; it was a conditional recession of that territory upon the happening of an event. What event? Upon a majority of the citizens of Alexandria City and the citizens of Alexandria County saying they were in favor of the recession. What is this proposal which I make in my amendment? There is a complete piece of legislation that is proposed to be enacted by the Congress, to wit, the Sheppard bill. The referendum proposes that, on the happening of an event, to wit, an election in the District, in which a majority of the citizens shall declare themselves in favor of the Sheppard bill, within 30 days after that event it shall become effective.

Mr. BORAH. But the Senator will agree with me, will he not, that this never would be a law—a complete act of legislation—until that vote was taken?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Certainly not, until the happening of the event; and the Senator will agree with me also, I think, that the city of Alexandria and Alexandria County would still be in the District of Columbia if the people over there had voted against the recession. It did not become a complete piece of legislation until that vote was taken.

Mr. BORAH. I have not had the opportunity to examine that, and, of course, if the Senator is correct as to the facts and conclusions, it is a very strong precedent in support of his position, but there is a distinction made in all the authorities, or practically all of them, between what is called an "event" or "the happening of an event," and that of an election which puts into operation or nullifies the entire law.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the Senator that I am coming to the authorities in a moment. There are some exceptions; but almost uniformly the courts have held that the legislatures of the several States can submit local-option laws to the people of a State or to counties or to local communities in a State leaving them to determine whether or not the law shall go into effect. There are a few cases on the other side that were passed on in the early days of local-option legislation, when there was a strong sentiment against local option and when the courts were disposed to lean against local option that decided that the legislature could not delegate the power. There are one or two cases of that kind; but where there are one or two such cases decided in the early history of the question of submitting matters of this kind to the people there are forty or fifty cases, modern cases, that sustain the proposition entirely; and I shall be glad to call the Senator's attention to them.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, does the Senator distinguish between temperance laws and other laws? As an illustration, at the last session of Congress in an appropriation bill we placed a tax upon what is known as intangible property in the District of Columbia. There is a very wide difference of opinion on that question in the District. Would the Senator think that that question could have been well submitted to the people of the District?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do think so. I voted with the Senator on that question.

Mr. GALLINGER. Yes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I believe that when we attempt to put the strong hand of this great Government about the necks of these people and oppress them it is wrong.

Mr. GALLINGER. I am very glad to have the Senator say that; that is, I am very glad that the Senator broadens his position with reference to submitting this matter to a popular vote.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not mean to contend that so long as the Congress of the United States exercises the power of government in the District of Columbia we should submit every question to a vote of the people, but I do believe that on great fundamental questions as, for instance, whether there shall be a change in their system of taxation or whether there shall be a change in their excise law—great fundamental questions which involve the rights of property and the freedom of the people—these people ought to have a right to say what shall be done in the government they have to live under.

Mr. GALLINGER. If that is to be the policy, we shall have a good many elections in the District of Columbia in the next five years.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Not necessarily so many. Certain policies can be defined.

Now, Mr. President, as pointed out by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] a few moments ago, I find that in the Thirtieth Congress, when the question of the abolition of slavery was being agitated, Abraham Lincoln suggested to the House of Representatives that the question as affecting the District of Columbia be submitted to the people of the District. A bill was accordingly prepared providing for the gradual emancipation of the slaves, with a proviso that before being enforced the measure should be submitted to the approval of the people of the District. That bill, however, never reached the final stage of action.

By the act of February 21, 1871, Congress again delegated to the legislative assembly of the District, a body to be elected by the people of the District, the power to make all laws generally for the good of the District not inconsistent with the provisions of the Constitution, and to provide for the appropriations for the District government, to be withdrawn from the Treasury, all laws made by them, however, being subject to repeal by Congress.

That was not only done, but it was sustained by the Supreme Court. If we have the power to create a legislative body in the District of Columbia to make laws for the people of the District, have we not the power to submit to the resident citizens of the District of Columbia the question as to what time they desire to put into effect a specific law which we have written? It seems to me there can be no doubt about that conclusion.

The Supreme Court has twice had occasion to pass upon the constitutionality of such acts, and has each time held that Congress was acting within its power. In 1888, in Stoutenburgh v. Hennick (129 U. S., 141), the authority of Congress to constitute the District of Columbia a body corporate for municipal purposes was brought before the Supreme Court for adjudication in connection with an act of the legislative assembly created under the act of 1871 relating to taxation. Mr. Chief Justice Fuller, after stating the case, delivered the opinion of the court as follows:

> It is a cardinal principle of our system of Government, that local affairs shall be managed by local authorities, and general affairs by the central authority and hence, while the rule is also fundamental that the power to make laws can not be delegated, the creation of municipalities exercising local self-government has never been held to trench upon that rule. Such legislation is not regarded as a transfer of general legislative power, but rather as the grant of the authority to prescribe local regulations according to immemorial practice, subject, of course, to the interposition of the superior in cases of necessity.
> Congress has express power "to exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever" over the District of Columbia, thus possessing the combined powers of a general and of a State government in all cases where legislation is possible. But as the repository of the legislative power of the United States, Congress in creating the District of Columbia "a body corporate for municipal purposes" could only authorize it to exercise municipal powers, and this is all that Congress attempted to do.

But in the exercise of those municipal powers it gave it the power to exercise them over the very question that we have involved in this act.

In Welch against Cook, Ninety-seventh United States, page 542, the Supreme Court, in passing on the right of the Congress to delegate to the District government the right to exempt certain classes of people from taxation, said:

> It is not open to reasonable doubt that Congress had power to invest and did invest the District government with legislative authority.

If it could invest the District government with legislative authority, has it not the power to invest the people of the District with the power to determine when a piece of legislation shall go into effect?

Whether the submission of the question of prohibition to the citizens of the District is exceeding the power of Congress to delegate legislative functions has never been positively passed upon by the Supreme Court, and it is not necessary for them to pass on it, in line with the decisions I have already read. That Congress may make the time at which a law is to take effect depend upon subsequent events, and not violate the Constitution as delegating legislative powers, is, however, now well settled.

Here is an early decision, and one in point:

In the case of the brig Aurora (7 Cranch, 382) the question was as to whether a certain section of the act of March 3, 1799, was in violation of the Constitution, as delegating legislative powers to the head of an executive department of the Government. The question involved was whether Congress could make the revival of a law—which had ceased to be in force—depend upon the existence of certain facts to be ascertained by the President and set forth in a proclamation by him. The court said:

> We see no sufficient reason why the legislature should not exercise its discretion in reviving the act of March 1, 1809, either expressly or conditionally, as their judgment should direct. The nineteenth section of that act, declaring that it should continue in force to a certain time and no longer, could not restrict their power of extending its operation without limitation upon the occurence of any subsequent combination of events.

In other words, the Congress left it to the determination of the President of the United States as to whether or not this particular act should be revived. Under the terms of this amendment it is proposed to leave it to the District Commissioners to make proclamation as to whether the Sheppard bill shall go into law upon the happening of the event—to be determined by an election—of the approval of the majority of the people of the District of Columbia.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, I have been very much inclined to agree with one branch of the Senator's argument, that under the provision of the Constitution which vests in Congress the unrestricted power to govern the District this referendum is proper; but I think the authorities which the Senator is citing do not justify the position which he is now taking.

The Supreme Court has held repeatedly that Congress might provide that a piece of legislation enacted by it should go into effect upon the happening of a certain event, the happening of that event to be determined by some agent like the President of the United States. But the difference between that case and this is that the law does not go into operation upon the happening of an event, but it goes into operation according to the will of somebody, and that will is not the will of Congress.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No——

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Just a moment. The making of a law is an expression of the will, and the body to which that power is committed under the Constitution is Congress. In making a law the law must express the will of Congress. Congress may say that its will shall go into operation upon the happening of some event, when some fact occurs; but here the law goes into effect when the majority of the people have declared it to be their will that it shall go into effect. It seems to me that that is very different from the happening of an event.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. As I state, I think there are decisions on both sides of the constitutional question involved. I think I have shown clearly from the Supreme Court decisions and from the acts of Congress heretofore that we have a right to delegate our legislative power to the District or the District government for certain purposes.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. That is another question.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes; that is a different question. But if the Senator will allow me, I think I can cite him numerous decisions to sustain the proposition that you can submit this question, decisions showing that the event upon which a law should go into effect can be an election—a determination of the will of the people—to be declared by some specific authority, in the present case by the District Commissioners.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. If the Senator will permit me, I have had occasion in times past to examine into this question. My recollection is that the vast majority of the cases decided by the supreme courts of the various States have been to the effect that the legislature of a State, under the provision of the Constitution separating the powers, had no authority to submit a law of this kind to a vote of the people of the whole State; that they might enact the law and then provide that certain localities in the State might adopt it and make it applicable to their particular localities, but that it could not be submitted to a vote of the entire people of the State, because the effect of that was to substitute the will of the people of the whole State for the will of the legislature when the Constitution had vested the power in the latter.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. As I stated a while ago, there are some cases on the other side of this question. They were largely cases that were influenced by a sentiment then existing against local-option or prohibition laws. I am sure that the Senator from Utah does not concur with the reason of those decisions. The reason of the law is the life of the law. The reason of any decision is the life of that decision, and it is not sound in reason to say that it is not a delegation of legislative authority, and therefore constitutional, to pass a local-option law submitting to the people of a political subdivision of a State the right to say whether they shall put such a law into effect or not, and then, on the other hand, to argue that if you submit the question as to whether a whole State shall go dry or not to all the people of that State such an act is unconstitutional, because it is a delegation of the legislative power. It is not sound. You can not draw a distinction between the two. You are going to put into effect in a county a law that affects its people, and you say that that is not a delegation of legislative power, but merely the fixing of an event on which the law shall go into effect, to wit, an election, and yet when you go to put it into effect for a whole State, only enlarging the territory, you say that then you are giving the people the right to exercise a legislative function instead of defining the happening of an event declaring when it shall go into effect.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I did not care to follow that matter beyond the suggestion I made to the Senator, but I want to suggest to him this view, and see what he thinks of it:

The power Congress has to govern the District of Columbia comes from the clause which the Senator has read. It is impossible to imagine language more comprehensive than that. I suggest to the Senator that that language confers an original power upon Congress to govern the District of Columbia as full and complete as that which exists in the people of a State to govern the State—to frame their own constitution for the government of the State.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Undoubtedly.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. It is as full and complete, as far as the District of Columbia is concerned, as that exercised by the Parliament of Great Britain. It has no limitations at all upon it.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The only limitations it has upon it are those fundamental limitations designed to preserve the liberties and the rights of the people.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Certainly. Those are inhibitions imposed upon the right of Congress to legislate at all upon some given matter.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Certainly.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. But in that clause there is no separation of the powers. There is no separation of the legislative, executive, and judicial powers; so that originally Congress possesses all of those powers for the purpose of dealing with the District as fully as the people originally, and before they framed their constitution, had in dealing with their States; and Congress may therefore devolve upon anybody it pleases the judicial power which is reposed in it, the executive power which is reposed in it, and the legislative power which is reposed in it. It may devolve it upon any agency it pleases, and if it has the power to devolve this authority upon a local legislature it has, it seems to me, the power to devolve it directly upon the people of the District, or to devolve it upon a commission, or to devolve it upon a single agent, if it pleases to do so, because its power is plenary.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not think there is any doubt about that.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. It seems to me the Senator has sufficiently established his case when he has shown that the entire original power rests in the Congress of the United States to deal with the District of Columbia.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I agree with the Senator about what he said. I think the case that I read from the Supreme Court of the United States is in absolute accord with that view. But, as the question was in dispute, and as some Members of this body had indicated to me that they had some doubts on the matter, I wished to put in the RECORD a full statement of the power of Congress to deal with the question.

In the case of Field v. Clark (143 U. S. Supreme Court Repts., 649) the question arose as to the constitutionality of that section of the McKinley Tariff Act of 1890 which provided for the imposition, in a named contingency—to be determined by the President, and manifested by his proclamation—of duties on certain articles which the act had placed in the free list. The court said:

> He [the President] had no discretion in the premises except in respect to the duration of the suspension so ordered. But that related only to the enforcement of the policy established by Congress. As the suspension was absolutely required when the President ascertained the existence of a particular fact, it can not be said that in ascertaining that fact and in issuing his proclamation, in obedience to the legislative will, he exercised the function of making laws Legislative power was exercised when Congress declared that the suspension should take effect upon a named contingency. What the President was required to do was simply in execution of the act of Congress. It was not the making of law. He was the mere agent of the lawmaking department to ascertain and declare the event upon which its expressed will was to take effect. It was a part of the law itself as it left the hands of Congress that the provisions, full and complete in themselves, * * * should be suspended in a given contingency, and that in case of such suspensions certain duties should be imposed. Again, "The true distinction," as Judge Ranney, speaking for the Supreme Court of Ohio, has well said, "is between the delegation of power to make the law, which necessarily involves a discretion as to what it shall be and conferring authority or discretion as to its execution, to be exercised under and in pursuance of the law. The first can not be done; to the latter no valid objection can be made."

Now, mark you, the Supreme Court of the United States is adopting as part of its opinion this statement by Judge Ranney from the Supreme Court of Ohio, which makes it a part of the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States; and it clearly draws the distinction between conferring an authority or discretion as to the exercise of legislative authority and determining when a legislative act should take effect.

Now, what is done under this amendment? The legislation in reference to this matter is complete. Every line and word of the Sheppard bill, if passed, is agreed to. It is merely a question of delegating to somebody the power to determine when it shall go into effect.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, does the Senator regard this legislation complete in the sense that it is a law, effective, and that Congress has simply chosen some one to execute the law?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The Supreme Court in this case was speaking of the reciprocity feature of the McKinley Act.

Mr. BORAH. Yes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Was that a complete law?

Mr. BORAH. Exactly; it was complete.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Certainly it was complete; but it did not take effect until the happening of a particular event, to be determined by the President of the United States.

Mr. BORAH. Precisely. Congress passed an act. It was a complete law. It was signed; and the Supreme Court clearly distinguishes there that the President was simply executing a law.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. But he determined when it should be executed, and whether or not it should be executed.

Mr. BORAH. No; the Congress determined when it should be executed by naming a specific fact, and the President was authorized to ascertain that fact; and when he ascertained the fact the law operated or did not operate, dependent upon the ascertainment of the fact.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Certainly; and that is exactly what is going to be done here if this law is passed.

Mr. BORAH. Oh, no.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If this law is passed, it will be passed by the two Houses of Congress and signed by the President.

Mr. BORAH. The Senator——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If the Senator will allow me, it will be put into effect upon the happening of an event, to wit, an election.

Mr. BORAH. Precisely.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Suppose we wrote into the law that "this law shall be effective if a majority of the people of the District of Columbia are in favor of it." That is practically what we write into it.

Mr. BORAH. Under the decision of the Supreme Court there it would have been void.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Oh, no.

Mr. BORAH. I think if the Senator will read that opinion again he will see that the Supreme Court stated distinctly that if the President had had anything whatever to do with making effective or ineffective the act of legislation it would have been void.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The Senator from Idaho has not grasped the decision. Of course, the language of Judge Ranney approved by the Supreme Court, was in relation to a State law, and was not under the broad terms under which we legislate, as suggested by the Senator from Utah; but bringing it down to the question of a referendum, if there was anything further to do in a legislative way in determining the conditions under the law, then Judge Ranney said that it would not be operative. But there is nothing to be done. The people of the District of Columbia, under this submission, will not have an opportunity to change one line, one paragraph, or one word of the Sheppard bill. When they pass on it, the Sheppard bill will be a complete law.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, does the Senator from Alabama think that Congress could have passed the McKinley law and provided that it should go into effect if the President of the United States thought it was a good law, depending upon his will with reference to it?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Of course when you are considering a question of taxation, and are not dealing with the broad powers that are given to the Congress of the United States to govern this District, as suggested by the Senator from Utah, there might be in my mind some question; but there evidently has not been any question in the mind of the Congress of the United States in this particular case, because they did leave it to the President of the United States to put the reciprocity treaty of the McKinley bill into effect.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. But it did not depend upon the discretion of the President.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Absolutely.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. No; if the Senator will pardon me, it depended upon the existence of a fact wholly outside of the will of the President, which the President was authorized to ascertain. Now, if the law had provided that it should go into effect if the President determined that it should, and that it should not go into effect if the President determined the contrary, the Senator would not contend that it would be a valid law.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If the Senator goes that far and says it was not the President that determined the fact, that it was the happening of an event, a fact to be determined by somebody else, then it was the determination by a foreign government of the fact. It is still left to a fact to be determined, discretionary with somebody; and if it was not the President of the United States, then it was a foreign government.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. No.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Why, certainly it was. What was the event? The reciprocity treaties, under the tariff bill, were to be put into effect by the President of the United States with certain concessions when foreign governments made certain concessions to us. Is not that so?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Yes; that is so.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Now then, there was the happening of an event, a discretion; and it was not put into effect until, by treaty, the foreign governments agreed with the President of the United States that they would make certain concessions in regard to their tariff laws if we reduced our customs tariff. So that there was a discretion in somebody—if not in the President of the United States, in the foreign government—that put the law into effect.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. There was a discretion in the foreign government as to whether they would do the thing or whether they would not.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Certainly.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. But there was no discretion vested in the foreign government to say whether this should be the law or should not be the law.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Why, certainly not; but the fact remains that the law did not become operative until a certain condition, over which Congress had no control, existed.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. It was not an exercise of their will in regard to the taking effect of the law.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I never contended that there has been a discretion, and there is no discretion with the people of the District of Columbia as to whether or not they want to change the Sheppard bill. The only question with them is the question as to whether or not they will accept it. There is no legislative discretion in it. There is no judgment that can be passed on it. As the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. SMITH] suggests, there is no discretion with the people of the District of Columbia as to whether this shall become the law. We pass the law, and the President signs it, and it is a law. The discretion resting with them is as to whether or not they shall make the law operative at a certain time; that is all.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. SHEPPARD. If the Senator will allow me to make a suggestion, your amendment makes it discretionary with a small part of the people to say whether or not the law shall be voted on.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That does not affect its constitutionality, whether we say a small part or a large part. We might leave it to one man, or we might leave it to every man, woman, and child in the District of Columbia, irrespective of age. That would not affect its constitutionality, if it is constitutional, if it is left to the determinaion of any of them.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Your amendment does not order the referendum. It makes the referendum dependent on the will of a certain number of people as to whether or not the bill shall be voted on.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That might go in an argument as to whether or not that was the proper way to submit it, but certainly the Senator from Texas would not advance that statement as an argument as to the constitutionality of the question. If we can delegate to one man the power to determine when it shall go into effect, we can delegate it to all, or if we can delegate it to all we can delegate it to one.

Mr. SHEPPARD. But this is not as to whether it shall go into effect. It is delegating the power to say whether the bill shall be voted on by the people or not.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Well, that is the same proposition. That is starting it into effect. There is no distinction whatever.

I have a decision here of Moers against the City of Reading, Twenty-first Pennsylvania State Reports, page 188. The language of the court was:

Half the statutes on our books are in the alternative, depending on the discretion of some person or persons to whom is confided the duty of determining whether the proper occasion exists for executing them. But it can not be said that the exercise of such discretion is the making of the law.

That is the whole proposition here, and, as this judge has said, to have the legislation this Congress passes rest in the discretion of some one as to whether you are going to put it into effect or not.

So in Locke's appeal, Seventy-second Pennsylvania State Reports, page 491, the court said:

To assert that a law is less than a law, because it is made to depend on a future event or act is to rob the legislature of the power to act wisely for the public welfare whenever a law is passed relating to a state of affairs not yet developed or to things future and impossible to fully know.

Again, the proper distinction, the court said, was this:

The legislature can not delegate its power to make a law; but it can make a law to delegate a power to determine some fact or state of things upon which the law makes, or intends to make, its own action depend.

Then again, that the "subsequent event" approved of in the preceding cases includes the popular will has been held in the following cases, the language approved by the courts being:

While the legislature can not delegate its power to enact laws, it may provide that whether or not a law enacted shall be operative may be made to depend on the popular will.

The cases which sustain that proposition you will find in Leger against Rice, Federal Cases, No. 8210; Hobart against Butte County, Seventeenth California, page 23; Robinson against Bidwell, Twenty-second California, page 379.

I have a list of 15 other cases here which I will ask to have printed in the RECORD and not take the time of the Senate to read.

The cases referred to are as follows:

Guild v. City of Chicago, 82 Ill., 472.
Lytle v. May, 49 Iowa, 224.
Charles v. Rogers, 81 Ky., 43.
Wales v. Belcher, 20 Mass., 508.
Maggard v. Pond, 93 Mo., 606.
State v. Noyes, 30 N. H.
Noonan v. Hudson Cty., 51 N. J. Law (22 Vroom), 454.
Johnson v. Rich, 10 N. Y., 33.
Smith v. McCarty, 56 Pa. St., 359.
State v. Copeland, 3 R. I., 33.
L. & N. Ry. Co. v. Davidson, 33 Tenn. (1 Sneed), 637.
State v. Parker, 26 Vt., 357.
Rutter v. Sullivan, 25 W. Va., 427.
State v. O'Neill, 24 Wis., 149.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The Supreme Court of Massachusetts, in One hundred and sixtieth Massachusetts, page 591, in response to an order of the Massachusetts House of Representatives for an opinion regarding the constitutionality of submitting the question of suffrage for women to popular vote, make the following statement of the law in Massachusetts regarding local option (dicta):

There has been some conflict of authority upon the constitutionality of what are called local-option laws, which have been principally laws regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors, but they have been held to be constitutional by a majority of the courts which have considered them. They have been held to be constitutional in this Commonwealth. (Commonwealth v. Bennett, 108 Mass., 27.) In that case it is said: "It has been argued in other cases which have been brought before the court since the argument of the present case that these statutes are unconstitutional, because they delegate to cities and towns a part of the legislative power. But we can see no ground for such a position. Many successive statutes of the Commonwealth have made the lawfulness of sales of intoxicating liquors to depend upon licenses from the selectmen of towns or commissioners of counties, and such statutes have been held to be constitutional. (7 Dane. Abr., 43, 44; Commonwealth v. Blackington, 24 Dick., 352.) It is equally within the power of the legislature to authorize a town by vote of the inhabitants or a city by vote of the city council to determine whether the sale of particular kinds of liquors within its limits shall be permitted or prohibited. This subject, although not embraced within the ordinary power to make by-laws and ordinances, falls within the class of police regulations which may be intrusted by the legislature by express enactment to municipal authority."

Mr. President, I think I have cited authorities of the Supreme Court and other courts of the United States clearly showing, first, that the Congress of the United States has power under the Constitution to delegate certain legislative powers to the District of Columbia; second, that Congress has the power to enact a law to take effect upon the ascertainment and declaration of a certain event; and, third, that the weight of authority and the reason of the decisions are to the effect that the ascertainment of the will of the people is the happening of an event within the meaning of the majority of the decided cases.

The proponents of this measure would not for one moment confront the Supreme Court of the United States with the proposition that a local option law was unconstitutional. It may be that in some States where they have State-wide prohibition they are unwilling to trust the people; it may be that where they think they have the power to act without the consent of the people they are willing to arrogate to themselves that power; but in a large number of the Commonwealths of this country, in Commonwealths to-day that embrace a majority of the people of the United States, the proponents of this bill are fighting for exactly what I am requesting the Congress of the United States to do in reference to the District of Columbia.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I think the Senator from Alabama has established beyond question by the Supreme Court decisions the right of Congress to pass this bill in the way that he has proposed. I never had any doubt of it myself. I have, however, very serious doubts about it being the best for the city of Washington and the people of the United States that this power shall be exercised by the people of Washington. Since the Senator has proven by precedent that his amendment does not violate the Constitution, I wish the Senator, who has given very thorough study and investigation to these questions, would state the reason why the right of self-government was taken from the citizens of Washington. The same incompetent material with which the designing and unscrupulous white men made the government of Washington odious to the American people in the past is present here to-day. I should like to have the Senator answer that objection.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The Senator does not make himself clear to me or he is asking again the question he asked a few minutes ago, and I stated that I was not informed and had not investigated it.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Does the Senator know that two white men were disfranchised in order to get rid of one negro in the government of this city; that negro rule here had become a stench in the nostrils of the people of the United States, and in order to get rid of it the white people of Washington surrendered the right of self-government, which the Senator is endeavoring to give them by his amendment.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the Senator from Mississippi that I cherish the rights, the liberties, and the freedom of my people as he does his people. His people have been threatened with negro domination in the past, and that is what he means. He will not rise in his seat now and say that for the purpose of protecting the people of Mississippi against the negro votes he is willing to surrender the legislative power of the State of Mississippi to the Congress of the United States.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Oh, certainly not.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Certainly not; but that is what you ask for the District of Columbia.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I will tell the Senator what I am in favor of. Congress never had the power to govern Mississippi. I would not be in favor of submitting a question of this character to the negroes of Mississippi.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Oh, it has been exercised. The Senator is complaining that it was taken away from them for a particular reason.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I said the people of the District of Columbia voluntarily surrendered it; they asked that it be taken away.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not know whether they did or not; it has been taken away from them.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I want to say to the Senator, in answer to his question, that the Senator would not submit this question to the negroes and the white voters of Alabama if he had the power to do so.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I would submit it to the electorate of my State. I am no modern local optionist. I have had a conviction on this question ever since I was a boy. I believe in local option. The prohibitionists of my State believed in it because it was the rule of the people, but when they passed by and wanted to rule my people with a power which was not authorized by the local communities I parted company with them. I favored local option when we had no restriction on the suffrage of Alabama, and I have no doubt the Senator from Mississippi did the same—that he stood for a local-option law in Mississippi before the Georgia amendment limiting the suffrage in his State was passed.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Certainly I did, and we won in spite of local option, until they got to a point where local option would not work, and then, like your State, we voted State-wide prohibition. And a great work was accomplished for the people when we did it.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That is exactly where my friend from Mississippi and I differ. We do not differ on the question of what we have done or what we are willing to do. If there was no limitation on the franchise in the State of Mississippi to-day and the question of temperance by way of local option came up, I believe the Senator from Mississippi would submit it to the electorate of his State.

As far as I am concerned, as I have said, I am glad to get as intelligent and as virtuous an electorate to determine this question as is possible, but I do say that because there may be limitations on the ascertainment of that electorate no man who believes as the Senator from Mississippi believes and I believe has the right to rob the American people of their freedom without the determination of the question by the people of the State.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Why does the Senator insist upon a referendum in this matter only? Is not the question of taxation and are there not other matters of as much importance?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am sure that my friend from Mississippi must have been out of the room since I have been making this speech, because that question was brought up some time ago by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER]. I stated to him that I concurred with his views, that if we are not going to give these people some form of self-government and the benefit of passing on the great fundamental principles which involve their liberties, their property rights, their happiness, there ought to be some submission of all those questions to them, especially a question involving taxation.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I heard the Senator's reply to the Senator from New Hampshire. But in that reply he did not answer the question of why a matter of such vital importance to the welfare of the citizen as the question of taxation should not be submitted—that nobody thought of submitting it to a vote of the District while one which proposes to cure a condition of manifest detriment to the District should be submitted?

Mr. GALLINGER and Mr. POMERENE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield, and if so to whom?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Allow me to answer the question. I have been more or less a busy man since I have been in the Congress of the United States. I may have been derelict in my duty to the people of the District, a constituency that I do not directly represent, in not submitting a proposal on certain fundamental questions that were of vast importance to them, but I want to say that in the last decade I have had about all the work that one man could do. I never served on the District Committee and these questions have not come directly within the jurisdiction of my legislative acts, but if I was derelict in that respect in the past, why should I be derelict in the future? Does the Senator from Ohio desire to ask me a question?

Mr. POMERENE. Not to ask the Senator from Alabama a question but to suggest that there is a bill now on the calendar conferring upon the residents of the District the right to elect a Delegate to the House of Representatives, so that the people of the District may at least have a still, small voice, even if they do not have a right to vote on questions relating to the District. I hope when that bill comes up it will have the support of the distinguished Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I wish to answer the Senator. I will not, because I do not think the people of the District of Columbia have any more right to a voice in the government of this Capital than the citizens of one of the States. Washington is the Capital of the Nation—belongs to the Nation—and by the National Legislature should be governed. I deny that the people of Washington are without representation in Congress. Every Senator and Representative in Congress represents the people of Washington, and they are in honor bound to do the people of Washington absolute justice, and to enact wise and just laws for the government of this city.

Mr. POMERENE. If I may be permitted, I sometimes marvel at the mental state of some Senators who are insisting with all the vehemence and ability they can command for every right for the people of their own States, and then try to deny the same rights to 350,000 people in the District of Columbia, just as good people as live in the State of Mississippi or in the State of Ohio. I have been a good deal interested at times to see the emotion which is displayed on the floor of the Senate because some Hawaiians and some Porto Ricans and some Filipinos do not have the right to vote, and we lose sight of the 350,000 free American citizens here in the District.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield.

Mr. GALLINGER. I am not going to discuss the question of having the District of Columbia represented. I am against giving the people here a Delegate without a vote. If they are going to have representation, I want them to have representation in both Houses of Congress with a vote.

But I rose, Mr. President, to state the question I propounded to the Senator from Alabama. I asked him if he differentiated between local-option laws and other laws, and I made the suggestion that if he did not the law we passed last year taxing the people of the District on intangibles might, with equal propriety, have been submitted to the people of the District of Columbia. The Senator said he agreed to that.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. GALLINGER. If that law had been submitted to the people of the District, I venture to say that nine hundred and ninety-nine out of every thousand would have rejected it, because they do not want to have additional taxes. If we follow the same principle, we will find that we are passing laws here at every session which would be rejected by the people of the District beyond a question. So I think it is rather a dangerous proposition to say that we should feel constrained to submit those laws to a majority vote of the people of the District of Columbia.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not agree with the Senator about that at all. Of course, as long as the Congress of the United States is paying half the bills of the District, or paying a portion of the bills of the District, the Congress of the United States for the whole people of the United States are entitled to a voice in this matter as to how much taxes shall be raised and how they shall be expended; but on the particular proposition the Senator has referred to the facts show that there was sufficient money being raised at the time the law was enacted to support the District government according to the way we were running it, and they did not need any more taxes. Congress by a law changed the manner of raising that money from a way that I think was satisfactory to the people of the District to a way that was probably unsatisfactory. If all the money was being raised that was needed to run the District government, I think the wishes of the people of the District of Columbia as to how they desired to be taxed should be primary and not the wishes of the Congress of the United States or the people of some other State.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. WORKS. The Senator has referred to the limitation on the franchise in Mississippi. I should like to ask if there is any limitation on the franchise in his own State, and if so, what it is?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will be glad to tell the Senator. There is a limitation on the franchise in the State of Alabama. It is limited in the first place to males. In the next place a man must be of sound mind. In the next place he must not have been convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude. In the next place he must be 21 years of age. In the next place he must be able to read and write; and in the next place he must pay poll tax of $1.50 a year up to the time he is 45 years of age.

Mr. WORKS. I suppose the Senator believes in the right and justice of that limitation?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. WORKS. Suppose the franchise were granted to the people of the District of Columbia, does not the Senator think there should be a similar limitation, considering the conditions that prevail here?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I have no objection to doing that. The Senator was not here when I discussed that question or I am sure he would not have asked the question.

Mr. WORKS. I am sorry I missed that portion of the Senator's address.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I discussed that question thoroughly. I pointed out that out of 103,000 male citizens here 21 years of age and over only about 4,000 of them were illiterate, and that of the taxpayers of the District there were about 8,000 who failed to pay their taxes who were white and only two hundred and forty-odd who were colored. I do not see that the adoption of those provisions in the District of Columbia would materially affect the franchise, but if the Senate wants to do so I have no objection in the world to having the provision put in this bill that only those who can read and write shall vote in this election, or that they should pay their taxes before they vote.

Mr. WORKS. Does that condition prevail in a similar proportion in the State of Alabama between the whites and blacks?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; I do not think it does.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Can the Senator tell us what proportion of the white and what proportion of the colored population pay any taxes at all?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. In this District?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Yes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; I can not tell that, because I have not the figures; but I can state, because I got the information from the District office, that among the colored population for year before last, I think, the figures were—there were only 240 who failed to pay their taxes.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Yes; but to find any comparison we would have to know the number of taxpayers of each race, also. It may transpire that there are very few of the 30,000 colored people who pay any taxes at all.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That is probably true.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. That is why I asked the Senator about the limitation. I say the limitation as to taxes in this District would have very little effect upon the negro population of the District of Columbia.

Mr. WORKS. Can the Senator give us about the proportion of illiteracy in his State as between the white and colored population?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; I can not, because I have not the figures.

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. THOMPSON. The Senator has said that he is willing to limit the franchise or the eligibility of electors. I should like to know if he is favorable to extending the franchise to the women of the District who have the same eligibility as the men?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will answer the Senator's question very candidly. I have not voted for woman suffrage. The people I represent are not for woman suffrage. That being the case, if the amendment is offered here I shall vote against it, but if it is made a part of the bill I shall vote for the referendum. On this particular question I have no serious objection whatever to the women of the District voting, and I do not think it will affect it in one way or another. I really have no serious objection to limiting it to this particular proposition, although I shall probably vote against the amendment when it is offered.

Mr. President, I am glad to be interrupted; I am glad to have an opportunity to fully and freely discuss this question; but I want to come down to the real question that was asked here a while ago as to why we should submit this question to the people of the District of Columbia. It has been answered time and time again by the proponents of this measure. They have appealed to State legislation, they have appealed to constituencies far and wide throughout this Union, for an opportunity to allow the people of the United States or particular localities in the United States to vote on the question as to whether certain territory should be wet or dry, as they express it.

I want to read you a statement from one who is high in authority in the Antisaloon League, who are proposing the Sheppard bill. The following excerpts are from the address of Mr. P. A. Baker, Columbus, Ohio, national superintendent of the Antisaloon League, in reference to county local-option bill 345, made at a meeting held in the senate chamber at Columbus, Ohio, on the 22d day of January, 1908, John C. Drake, chairman of the committee. Before this temperance committee of the Senate of the State of Ohio Mr. Baker, in favoring a local-option bill, one to submit this question to local communities in the State of Ohio, his own home State, said:

> Why this extreme anxiety on the part of these people? If the people of the rural counties in the State of Ohio do not want the saloon, ought they not to have the American right of saying that they do not want it? If the people of Cincinnati and Hamilton County want it, if the people of Cuyahoga County want it, if the people of Lucas County want it, if the people of Franklin County want it, let them have it; but let the people of Delaware and every other county in this State who, by the right of ballot, say they do not want it, let them have their say.

That is the position of the head of the Antisaloon League. I asked the Senator from Texas a few moments ago as to whether this bill which he proposes met with the approval of this organization, whether or not it was not reported here at their request and suggestion, and he concurred in that statement.

Mr. SHEPPARD. No; I did not say that it was reported at their request and suggestion.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Well, that they concurred in the legislation and agreed to it.

Mr. SHEPPARD. That is very different.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Now, here is the head of that organization not only declaring in favor of local option, but he said before this committee of the Legislature of Ohio that if the people of Cincinnati did not want prohibition, they should not have it; but that if the people of Delaware County wanted it, you should give them their say and let them have it. What are we asking here but that same proposition?

If this is a high moral issue, it is not an issue of expediency; if it is a high moral issue that Mr. Baker is proposing in Ohio, then it is equally a high moral issue and on the same plane, that he is proposing in Washington. If it is honest and just, according to Mr. Baker's view, to offer this proposition for the decision of the people of the counties of Ohio, it is equally honest and just to propose it for the people of the District of Columbia. But that is not all.

I take the statement I am going to read from a copy of the 1909 Yearbook of the Antisaloon League. This is from the real authority, the book promulgating the principles of the Antisaloon League. What do they say with reference to local option? They say:

> Local option is another word for Americanism. It is essentially an instrument of free government and has been passed upon a thousand times and in a thousand ways as a real part of our governmental system.

That comes with the authority of the Antisaloon League. That was in the Yearbook of 1909. Here is what they state in their Antisaloon League Yearbook for 1908:

> Local option on the liquor question simply provides for the placing of the saloon question in the hands of the voters of any given local community, such as a district, a county, a city, a village, or a township. It is unquestionably true that local option has proven to be the best method thus far of securing the largest possible area where the sale of liquor is prohibited, and the best possible enforcement of the prohibitory law.

That is the statement of the Antisaloon League. I concur in that statement, and I challenge the men who are fighting this proposition to-day to show that the statement is not true. What does it say? It says:

> It is unquestionably true that local option has proven to be the best method thus far for securing the largest possible area where the sale of liquor is prohibited, and the best possible enforcement of prohibitory law.

Why? Because when you have local option, you have the rule of the people; you have free government. When you submit the question of prohibition or of temperance laws to a people and they vote for it, they enforce it; but the history of all such legislation has proven that when you force prohibition down the throats of an unwilling people, it is never enforced; that the "blind tiger," in all its riot, takes the place of the saloon, and that contempt of law is erected by force of arms in place of respect for law.

I have a number of statements from gentlemen high in the councils of the Antisaloon League; aye, in the councils of temperance movements, on this subject sustaining the position I am taking. I will not occupy the time of the Senate in now reading them all, but I shall ask the privilege to insert at least some of them in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, permission to do so is granted.

The matter referred to is as follows:

[William J. Bryan, in an interview in the Baltimore News, May, 1908.]

> "In answer to questions about my record on the subject, I have stated that, so far as my personal habits go, I am a teetotaler, never having used liquor as a beverage; but in 1890 I voted against the State prohibition amendment because I thought the license system we had, with local option, was better suited to the conditions we had to meet in our State."

The following paragraphs are excerpts from the speech of Wayne B. Wheeler before the Monday evening session of the house committee on liquor traffic and temperance, and the senate committee on temperance at Columbus, Ohio, January 20, 1913:

> "Then, too, we have been for a number of years getting a little more closely to the idea of letting the people rule upon questions that interest them. Take that tendency of the times and ask yourself how much people's rule there is in this proposition, not to let them have one word to say about the kind of a license officer that is to grant the license and administer this policy there in the county where they live. I say to you that there is no home rule in it whatever.
> "Suppose for instance some chief executive wanted to use it in this way and appoint officers who would administer it contrary to its real spirit, say, or to the sentiment of the community; suppose that one of these days you would elect a man governor of the State absolutely opposed in principle to the whole liquor traffic who would appoint a board on down through—down into Hamilton County, for instance—and they would appoint the county officers there absolutely opposed to the whole system. I want to say to you, you would have a whole lot of trouble right in Hamilton County. Suppose they would refuse on some ground or other to give you a single license down there, you would say you would bring a mandamus suit; but you could not bring it with probably the showing that they might make against them for having violated the law or something; you would have, at least, a system there which would not be administered according to its spirit. But you let that officer be elected in your county or chosen in accordance with the average sentiment of that county; he is going to be more nearly responsive to the demands of the people and what they think is fair play than the man will who is appointed to it if he is not in sympathy with your system, and that is where the whole thing is going to hinge in coming years if you put it in the hands of the State board to choose the local officers."

The following are excerpts from the address of Wayne B. Wheeler, now national superintendent of the Antisaloon League, in re House bill No. 73 (Ward local-option bill) in the committee rooms of the house of representatives, Columbus, Ohio, on the 2d of February, 1904, Chairman Briggs, before the temperance committee of the House of Representatives of the Legislature of Ohio:

"In cities like Cleveland, Columbus, and Cincinnati, where a majority of the sentiment of the city is not in favor of voting the saloons out of the whole city, yet there are large portions of the city, the residence districts, where the voters do not want the saloon, and we feel that it is just as fair for them to have the right to say whether or not there should be saloons in their residence wards as it is for the people in the village or in the smaller cities to say whether they want them in their whole municipality. In other words, it is simply home rule on this question. Under present conditions a man can go straight from the penitentiary right out into the residence districts of this city or any other city of Ohio, buy a lot or lease a lot, and start a saloon in the residence district, thus destroying the value of property from 20 to 40 per cent, ruining it for residence purposes, as many people would not want to live there at all with a saloon next to them, and yet the owners of the property around about are absolutely without relief. We feel that that is unfair; that it is un-American in a place where a majority of the people do not want to have the saloon; that they have to put up with it, and over their protest that saloon is established there; and that they have no remedy at law. This gives them relief when they want relief, and I think that every member of this committee realizes that the bill is not forced upon the people and the legislature in advance of public sentiment. If we were asking you to close one saloon of this State arbitrarily, without the voice or the sentiment of the people, it would be a different proposition than that which we present to you to-night. We simply ask for a measure which gives the people protection when they want it. We readily concede that you can not make people good by law. But we do believe it is sane legislation, which gives the people protection from evil when they want that protection."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I hold in my hand an extract from the address of the Rev. J. S. Rutledge, district superintendent of the Antisaloon League of Cleveland, Ohio, before a committee of the House of Representatives of the General Assembly of Ohio, Charles A. Brannock, chairman, in 1902. This is what the district superintendent of the Ohio Antisaloon League said. I do not question his honesty or his sincerity. I believe that what he said in Ohio he would say here, for the same question is involved before the Congress of the United States in this hour that was involved before the Legislature of Ohio in that hour. Here is what he said:

I am thoroughly democratic—not partisan, however—in my American spirit. I think that this is a Government of the people. I believe it must be by the people and for the people, and that government which does not properly represent the people is not a fair government under our jurisdiction here. I do not need to expand upon that. So that I am in favor of a law that will give the people of the State of Ohio the greatest possible opportunity of local management and local representation.

He was speaking in favor of a local-option law such as I am favoring in the Senate of the United States to-day. Here is a man high in the councils of the organization, who says it is democratic and a high principle of Americanism to give the people a chance to pass on this question.

As I have before stated, I have been in favor of that view when there were but few prohibition counties in the State of Alabama; when there was strong opposition from those who sold liquor to a question of this kind being submitted to the people. I believed in it because I believed it was a right of free government; because I believed it was the right of a free people to have such laws on the statute books as they desired for the protection of their local communities. I even went so far as to vote for the Webb-Kenyon bill, preventing the shipment of liquor into "dry" territory where the people had decided they did not want liquor. I have not changed my views. Those were my views when there was no prohibition in Alabama. Alabama to-day has prohibition by legislative enactment; but I have not changed my views and do not propose to change them, for they are fundamental; they go to the real question that every self-respecting America-loving citizen of this country should recognize, namely, the freedom of action of the people of this country. That is the principle that our forefathers fought for; it is the principle that the people of this country have maintained since the foundation of this Government—the right to have laws on their statute books that met with their approval.

This is not a government of men; this is a government of law. Under that government of law you are entitled to have reflected in the law the will of the American people, the will of the people who are going to be governed by the law, and for whose government particularly the law has been passed; and when you write on the statute books of your country a law for the government of a particular portion of the people that does not reflect their views and their sentiments, you are not governing them by law; you are governing them by the despotic power of man; you are taking away from them the rights and the liberties that their fathers fought for and maintained in the Revolutionary War. You would not do so on any other question; you could not for one minute get your consent to overthrow these great principles of government if it were not that a religious propaganda has gotten behind a political organization for the purpose of the accomplishment of a result which that organization and that propaganda believe to be for the good of humanity.

I do not question their motives; I know the people who are attempting to drive this legislation on the people of the District of Columbia with the power and force and will of the Congress of the United States are acting from a good motive; they are doing it because they believe the law will be a benefit; but tell me, you proponents of this legislation, is there a darker day in all the history of Europe than St. Bartholomew's Day, when at the point of the sword thousands of innocent women, children, and men were murdered for what the men who were committing the murders believed was a good cause and the cause of God? Religious fanaticism, it is true; but the men who did the bloody work believe they were right.

More than that, this idea of driving people to do what somebody else thinks is right, what somebody else thinks is moral, has debauched the world with more crimes than any other despotic action by dominant government. Even in as late a day and as enlightened a time as the era when William Shakespeare wrote his plays men's lives and liberties were endangered, threatened, and destroyed in old England if they refused to accept the Protestant faith, instead of the faith of some other church. For centuries legislation was enacted to force by the dominant power of government control of the spiritual life of men, and it was not until our great Government was established and it was written in the pages of the Constitution of the United States that a man might worship his God according to the dictates of his own conscience, that efforts to control the spiritual life of men by force and by law were abandoned and given up, until to-day in all the civilized countries of the world no man for a moment would proclaim that the spiritual life of other men should be governed by his will or by his dictates, although I have no doubt there are men living within the bounds of the United States who would enact laws of that kind to-day if they had the power and the Constitution did not guard us against them. But although we have abandoned as a relic of barbarism and a relic of the Dark Ages of the past the effort to control by law the spiritual life of men, we are attempting to do the same thing and control their physical life under the claim that their spiritual welfare needs it.

I presume I have been abused as much as any man in America because I reserve the privilege to stand at my desk and advocate exactly the same principle that Mr. Baker, the superintendent of the Antisaloon League, stands for in the State of Ohio, but it concerns me but little whether I am abused or whether I am praised, if my action meets with the approval of my own convictions and my own conscience.

I do not contend that prohibition has not at some time and in some places worked for temperance, has not worked for better government, has not worked for higher ideals and greater morality in the community. It has; but what I do contend is that the whole history of this legislation demonstrates beyond cavil that when you have attempted to put prohibition by the force of law on a community which was not ready for it, or was not then willing to take it, instead of accomplishing temperance you have brought about the opposite; instead of licensing the regulation of the liquor traffic, you have brought about riot in the alleys and in the dark places; you have brought about the unlicensed sale by "blind tigers" in violation of law, as it would not be enforced by the community. I have seen in the State of Alabama, under a law such as it is desired to place on the statute books now, in communities which were not willing or ready to take it, "blind tigers" running as open saloons. You have seen them in many States in the United States. I could name other States from which come some Senators who are voting to put this sumptuary legislation on the people of the District of Columbia, whether they are willing or not, where similar conditions prevail. They know in their own States, where prohibition legislation obtains, that there are wide-open "blind tigers" selling without restriction of law to men, women, and children at all hours of the day and night, Sundays and election day, and every other day. Do you tell me that this is a higher state of morals and better for the community than a restricted sale of liquor, prohibiting its sale to minors, not allowing it to be sold on Sunday, and fixing the hour at night when the saloon must close?

You know as well as I do that it is not better for a community, and you know as well as I do that any law that you pass, and any law that you put on the statute books, in the last analysis must come to the jury box for its enforcement. It may be asked, "Will the jury violate its oath; will a jury go against the testimony and acquit a man who has been proven to be guilty?" I do not say a jury should by right or by honesty of purpose do so, but I do say that juries do that, have done it, and will continue to do it when you write laws on the statute books against the approval of the people you seek to govern. You know that when, in old England it was a crime punished by death for a man to steal a chicken, juries refused to convict, and I think that juries in your State and in my State would refuse to convict and hang a man for stealing a chicken to-day.

To enforce this law the Senator from Texas is not going to the extreme of hanging; but, believing that severe pains and penalties must be put on the people of the District of Columbia to enforce the law, he has written in the proposed statute penalties that are entirely contrary to the ordinary penalties that Congress writes to enforce law. Is it more immoral for a man to sell a drink of whisky or to steal? For stealing the law provides that the punishment shall not be over a certain fine—I do not remember the amount, but say a thousand dollars—or confinement not over so many months in jail—I do not remember the term, but say a year—or both, in the discretion of the court, leaving it to the court to determine the gravamen of the offense. Not so when you come to force a law on what you believe is an unwilling people. You must inflict them with severe pains and penalties. Under the terms of this law, if you put it on the statute books, some boy in this District, probably of good family, good raising, good people, with life ahead of him, may in a wild moment, a thoughtless moment, sell half of a bottle of liquor to some companion without intending to run a "blind tiger," without intending to traffic in the business, without intending to violate the law. I know of cases of this kind in my own State—merely having the liquor in possession and selling half of it to a companion in a thoughtless moment, not realizing what the law is. The court convicts him. There is no discretion in the judge as between him and the man who is trying to make money out of the liquor traffic—none whatever. Under the law that you are putting on the statute books you put a fine of $300 against that child and send him to the county workhouse for not less than 30 days to associate with robbers and thieves and highwaymen, and to come out of there with "felon" branded on his forehead and imbedded in his soul, because you think you need extreme penalties to make an unwilling people obey your law.

Mr. President, it concerns me not, so far as I am personally concerned, whether you sell liquor in the District of Columbia or whether you do not. The Senate has recognized that the drinking of liquor is not a moral question. If it were a moral question you would prohibit it entirely. You prohibit theft; you prohibit arson, rape, and murder. You do not compromise with it. You prohibit it, because it is a moral question. But this morning you had an opportunity to prohibit absolutely the manufacture, sale, and possession of liquor in the District of Columbia, and almost by a unanimous vote you rejected the amendment of the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] embodying that proposition.

What does the Senator from Texas propose? Not prohibition; no. He is proposing an antisaloon bill; in part, an antimanufacturing bill. I do not question his wisdom in doing this. He knows, and those behind him know, that the District of Columbit is not prepared for prohibition legislation now, no matter what it may be in the future; that if you should attempt to put prohibition legislation on the people of the District now, it would mean merely a riot and a fight against the law. The only thing that the Senator from Texas is asking you to do is to legislate a method, not a principle. He says in his bill that any citizen of the District of Columbia can send outside of the District and purchase as much liquor and alcohol for his own consumption in his own home as he desires. He is prohibited from selling it, but he can use it in his own home. Of course, if it were a crime to drink liquor the Senator from Texas would not compromise with crime. The Senator from Texas and those behind him are not compromising with crime. They are determining a method—that is all that is involved in this bill—as to whether you can bring about a more temperate condition by a licensed sale or by prohibiting the sale inside the District entirely and allowing it to be sold to the citizens of the District from the outside. That is all that is involved in this bill, except that it wipes out the manufacture of alcohol in the District and confiscates certain property here without paying for it.

So I say that the issue presented in this bill is not a moral one; it is a question of expediency. Now, who is best able to determine that question—you, representing constituencies away from here, or the people of the District of Columbia, who must live under the law?

Now, no matter what may be charged against me, I am not making any effort in this matter except the effort that the leaders of this same Antisaloon League made for years in my own State and are making in the State of Ohio and the State of Pennsylvania and the State of New York and the State of Maryland and the State of New Jersey and numbers of other States in the Union, and proclaiming it to be the righteous and the proper thing to do—that is, that the people of these States may have an opportunity to march toward temperance and not be driven toward temperance.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Wyoming?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. WARREN. In line with what the Senator has just said, I understand that the Antisaloon League in my State is asking that the legislature about to assemble shall provide for referring it to the people and letting them first pass upon the matter; and I am advised the members of the legislature will consider that proposition.

I realize, as every thinking and reading man in public and private life must realize, that the question involved in the pending bill is in the forefront for settlement by the American people, either by legislation enacted by the various legislative bodies representing the States or the Nation, or by direct mandate of the people through expression at the polls.

A glance at recent legislation and at the result of recent elections makes it evident that the country desires to move in the direction of the settlement of the so-called prohibition question. In fact, prohibition exists in the State of Wyoming now in all parts except in the incorporated cities and towns, but our people believe that State-wide prohibition should be submitted to the voters, and more particularly so because for twenty-odd years they were restricted in their voting privileges, and they feel sympathy for the residents of the District of Columbia. They believe, as I do, that the District of Columbia ought to be represented in this body, and in the other body, with a Member each; that by all means this particular matter ought to go before the people of this District.

The rights of the residents of the District are to be passed upon by legislators, not one of whom has been selected by these residents to represent them in regard to the question at issue or any other. The proposed legislation would affect their mode of living, their social life, and whatever may be done as to other matters, this matter should go before the people and be voted on before the Congress should undertake to control them absolutely and completely in regard to it.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Alabama permit me to ask the Senator from Wyoming a question?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. I should like to ask the Senator from Wyoming if in that contest in Wyoming the liquor men are working very hard to have the question submitted to the people of Wyoming for a vote? Are they doing the same there as they are here?

Mr. WARREN. I do not know what they are doing here, but I want to say to the Senator that if there is any work of that kind in Wyoming I do not know of it.

Mr. NORRIS. Then, I suppose the liquor men and the temperance men are united, and there will be no contest in Wyoming.

Mr. WARREN. I do not know about that.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, I think the question that my friend from Nebraska has just asked the Senator from Wyoming is very much the key to the position that is taken by many in the determination of this question, and that is a personal issue dependent on the personal equation of who is for or who is against a measure and not on fundamental truths as to whether the measure is right or wrong. I do not doubt for a moment that without influence, without a lobby behind it, without pressure and threat of political disaster for men who vote against it, this bill would have no chance whatever of passing the Congress of the United States unless the people of the District of Columbia were first given the opportunity to vote on it; and it makes not much difference to me where the personal equation comes from, I stood for local option in Alabama when many of the men who sold liquor, in fact most of them, were against it and were dominant in the State. I stand for local option to-day in my State and stand for it in other States in the Union, and I stand for it for the District of Columbia, regardless of who stands on either side of the question.

Does it make it any more moral for a man to vote for local option in Ohio, where he finds Mr. Baker, the superintendent of the Antisaloon League, favoring local option, and the man who sells liquor against it, than it does to vote for it in the District of Columbia, where he may find Mr. Baker against local option because he thinks he has the power to govern this people without their consent? Now, that is all there is to it.

I think it is a very small equation for any man to attempt to decide great moral questions of right or wrong by the determination of who stands on one side of it or who stands on the other side. Mr. President, the determination of a great moral question in that way is the determination of a coward, not of a patriot.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. NORRIS. I should like to say that I agree with the Senator in the statement he has just made, but I would not go as far as he does in characterizing those who vote that way as the Senator has characterized them.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I have not made any personal criticisms.

Mr. NORRIS. The characterization does not apply to me, of course.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Certainly not.

Mr. NORRIS. But, for instance, just the other day one of the Senators who thought he was going to be away when this matter was voted on announced in the Senate that he was going to vote in favor of the referendum, the Senator's proposition on this liquor question, because he felt obligated to do so by the action of his own State. He did not express himself one way or the other, but his vote in this body was determined by what he conceived to be an instruction from his State.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. A very courageous and a very manly statement; and yet on that same day I heard another Senator make the statement here that he understood how a Senator could hesitate to vote on a particular question because he knew that in that Senator's State there was an organization standing for it, and it was very dangerous for any Senator to stand against an organized body, because they punished him for what he did, while those who agreed with him and were unorganized would not follow it up.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I did not get the idea of the remarks referred to that the Senator from Nebraska did. I understood the Senator from Ohio [Mr. HARDING], when he stated why he should vote for a referendum on this question, to state that it was because he had told his people during the campaign where he stood and how he would stand on that question if he came here into the Senate, and not because his people had voted a certain way at all.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, if the Senator will pardon me——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Certainly.

Mr. NORRIS. I think the Senator from Connecticut states it practically correctly. I do not believe there is much contention in that, although the Senator from Ohio did say, as I understood, that the platform on which he stood there was to the effect that these questions should be submitted to the people, and that it was decided in that election; the prohibitionists were defeated when it was submitted to the people, and that he believed, therefore, in submitting this question to the people of the District. I agree with the Senator from Alabama in the statement that a man should follow his convictions on the question, although I am not criticizing the man who takes the other view, and I think the Senator from Alabama goes almost too far in characterizing those who do.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not criticize the man who takes the other view from that I take from the standpoint of principle. No; I admire him for taking his position. I am not unduly criticizing the man who yields to pressure on a great public question; but I say that position is not to be admired.

Mr. President, I have occupied a great deal more of the time of the Senate in discussing this question than I intended to occupy. I do not know that what I have said will have any effect on a vote in this body. I merely want, in conclusion, to point out and ask the Members of the Senate to consider that the bill I have offered is not against temperance. It is along the road of temperance legislation that has been advocated by the chief advocates of temperance for many years. It is to give the opportunity for the people to walk to it in the light of day and not be driven by oppression in the nighttime. That is all that I advocate, Mr. President. It is an opportunity for expression on the part of a people who have been deprived of their right of representation in a government, deprived of any voice, who are being controlled by the Government of the United States as despotically as a Czar of Russia controlled the people of that country before the establishment of the Duma, their parliamentary body—people without representation, people without a voice, people whose property will be confiscated, and people who may be given a very much worse condition of public morals if this law goes on the statute books and is unenforced than they will have under present legislation. It must be remembered that the enforcement of the law will not rest in the hands of the judge and the marshal, but will rest in the jury box, in the hands of a jury drawn from these same people. I say, give them the opportunity now and in the future to go along this road if they think it right. Appeal, if you will, to their conscience, their intelligence, their brains, but at least give them the right of self-government. Give them the freedom which the great fundamental law of this land, the Constitution of the United States, guarantees to the balance of us.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, a great deal of nonsense has been uttered in the history of the world on both sides of the question of yielding individual conviction to the conviction of others. As a rule the man who talks about his own individual opinions being perfectly sacred and incapable of being yielded to anybody in the world is just a selfish egotist. It depends upon what pressure a free citizen in a free government yields to as to whether he is right or whether he is wrong. If he yields a private opinion concerning a question of expediency and feasibility to the opinion of the school to which he belongs, to the opinion of his State, or to the opinion of his people or his nation, he frequently shows both wisdom and modesty. If he stands out, forming a party by himself, and talks about the "sacredness of his convictions"—generally, by the way, the egotist calls them "convictions" and the gentleman calls them "opinions"—then, if his course were generally followed, he would introduce into society a condition of anarchism that would do away with all government.

This is a representative Government and not a misrepresentative Government, and there is no attack to be made in any valid way upon the man who yields an individual opinion to the opinion of his State. You are not members of a parliament; you are Members of a Congress. The very meaning of the word "congress" is a convening, a coming together of the delegates of States. When we started we started with the idea that this was in one branch of the National Legislature a government of States, and in the other branch a government of the people.

There are just two lines of demarcation between the right of representation and the right of individual conviction. When a man reaches either one of those he must assert his individuality. No man has a right to surrender an opinion founded, in his opinion, upon fundamental morality in order to be representative of a community or a people; and no American representative has the right to surrender an opinion founded upon his construction of the Constitution in order that he may be representative. In the first event he is untrue to God, and in the second event he is untrue to the only thing that an American citizen swears to maintain, which is the Constitution and not the Government. In that particular we differ from every other people that ever established a government or swore allegiance. Nor has he the right to accept the opinion of a court rather than his own opinion in carrying out his sworn observance of the Constitution.

Does this bill present a question of morality or a question of constitutionality, either? Everybody knows it presents neither. I started my political life in opposition to prohibition, in opposition to any sort of attempt upon the part of government to fetter a man's private life. There is no morality involved in it, no question of constitutional power; and I stand here and dare say that I consider myself instructed by the State of Mississippi, my sovereign and my master in all questions involving neither absolute immorality nor unconstitutionality, to vote for prohibitory legislation. I am going to take that back. It is not prohibitory at all. None of you are prohibitionists. None of you ever had the courage to be. You stand here and talk of prohibition as if it were a moral question, and you make it geographical morality by saying that if a man sells me a drink in the State of Mississippi, or, if this bill passes, in the District of Columbia, he is a felon, but if he sends it to me from Boston or St. Louis, equally a seller, he is not. That is geographical morality, if it is any sort of morality at all. And, then, you stand for quantitative morality. A man may sell me a quart a month, but he can not sell me any more. In the first case he is a law-abiding citizen, and in the second a criminal. That is quantitative morality with a vengeance. And so you go through with the whole thing. Sometimes it is a which-side-of-the-bar morality. Is there any difference between the man who stands on that side of the bar and sells me a drink, so far as that individual act is concerned, and me, who stands upon the other side of the bar buying the drink? And yet there is no one of you who dares make it a crime to buy a drink. Why? Why, you would affect Supreme Court Judges, august Senators, Members of this august body, Cabinet members, some generals, and a few admirals. You would interfere with gentlemen in their private pleasures, instead of merely interfering with tradesmen in their pursuit of business.

I get a little tired of it, as far as I am concerned. I have seen it go on year by year, come up to a certain point, and then the next year go a little bit further, until after a while you never knew where it was going to stop; and I am ready now to vote for the whole thing. I am ready to vote for an amendment to this bill to put a fine of not less than $300 and imprisonment of not less than six months upon any man who buys or sells a drink in the District of Columbia. I want to see the thing brought to an issue, because until it is brought to an issue you will never find out how many people are going to rebel against it in a free Government.

The Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] tells me, sotto voce, that I ought to have voted for his amendment. I replied in the same way that I would have voted for it if I had been here.

Mr. President, in a matter affecting the daily life and habits of living of the people in their very homes there can, in my opinion, be no question at all of the political wisdom and the morality and the constitutional right of submitting a law involving these things to the people themselves thus affected. Mississippi is a prohibition State. I consider myself as a representative instructed by her will in a matter which should overbalance my will. But Mississippi never said to me that I should deprive the people of the District of Columbia of the power and the right to sit in judgment themselves upon this question, in judgment upon which the people of Mississippi sat for themselves. Mississippi would have resented a claim upon the part of a Texan or Californian or a man from Utah or a man from New Hampshire to tell her whether she should or should not be governed by certain laws with regard to this particular subject matter. It is not one of the subjects matter delegated by the people in the Federal Constitution to the Federal Government. A great deal of the argument that has taken place here has just lost sight of why this particular power over the District of Columbia was placed in the Constitution amongst the powers of Congress:

To exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever over such District (not exceeding 10 miles square) as may, by cession of particular States and the acceptance of Congress, become the seat of the Government of the United States—

And so forth.

Those words "exclusive legislation" were not put in there with any reference to whether Congress must exercise a given power itself or whether the people of this District should by some governmental provision which Congress should pass exercise it. It was put there because Virginia and Maryland were about to cede to the Federal Government 10 miles square for a seat of government, or because some States might do it, and the exclusive jurisdiction was placed in Congress in order to put an end to all possible questions of the jurisdiction of the State making the cession, so that after Virginia should cede, or after Maryland should cede, which means merely to part with and dispose of, the cession should be total and complete, and the power of the Federal Government over the territory thus ceded should be exclusive of those or any other States.

The word "exclusive" was put in to indicate that it should be exclusive of the State; and lawyers rise here all day long and chop words and split hairs and lose all recollection of the history and therefore of the reason for the constitutional provision.

This exclusive legislation was to vest the government of this District in the Federal Government and divest it entirely from the ceding States. That was the only reason for the use of the word "exclusive." It did not mean that certain things of a governmental character should be exclusively done by Congress. Very early in the history of the country when men were still living who sat in the Constitutional Convention this idea was unheard of. This District of Columbia was governed for years just like the Territory of Arizona was governed, or the Territory of Mississippi, by a man vested with executive power called a governor and by a sort of council vested with legislative power; and the question neither arose nor could arise to men who knew why the District had been erected.

Now, why was it that they wanted a particular district that a State should have no authority over it, legislative, judicial, or executive? Because we in America first started this idea of a dual sovereignty, dealing upon the same citizens but with regard to different subjects matter, and it was necessary that in the Capital of the Federal Government there should be no conflict of jurisdiction between these two sovereignties, and therefore the jurisdiction of the Federal sovereignty was made exclusive.

All day we have heard arguments about "delegating legislative authority." I agree with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] that under certain conditions there may be what looks like a delegation of legislative authority by a State legislature. It is not a real delegation of the authority, but it provides that certain things shall become law provided the people within a certain district say so. All the people have to do is to say yes or no. They do not enact the law. The Senator is perfectly right about that. But it was not necessary to go that far with regard to this District.

This District can be governed in any way that Congress says. There is no doubt about the fact that Congress could pass the Sheppard bill right now without any referendum to the people of the District. There is also no doubt about the fact that we can pass it right now with a referendum to the people of the District. It is not a question of constitutional power at all. It is a question of popular right. Because you have the power are you going to exercise it without consulting the people who are chiefly interested in their habits and homes in the exercise itself, or are you not?

Now, then, I think the next most important thing after providing that these people shall be consulted in a manner which comes right home to them, just as, in my opinion, I think they ought to be consulted about their schools and about a dozen other things which come right home to them, is to find the proper electorate. My quarrel is not with the bill itself, except that I do not think the bill is sufficiently drastic. I think while you are making the issue you ought to pass a prohibition bill and say so, and face it. It will be as much a personal and individual inconvenience to me as to almost any of you, but I am willing to stand up and be honest and square and make a crime of buying intoxicants. The sin or crime is neither in the buying or the selling per se; it is in the effect of the thing bought and sold after its consumption. Put a judge of the Supreme Court, put a member of the Cabinet, put a Senator in jail for it! Make it a felony, so as to evade that clause of the Constitution which says you can not arrest a Member of Congress while he is here "except for a felony or a breach of the peace," or make it a breach of the peace. Be square about it. Bring it home to you and me, and be brave about it!

My only objection to the Sheppard bill is that it does not go far enough. It is not a real prohibition bill.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I wish to inquire if the Senator from Mississippi was here, and if so, why he did not vote for the substitute presented by the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT].

Mr. WILLIAMS. I just explained to the Senator from Utah that I was not here. I got out of bed and came up here via one of the departments with the hope of being able to vote for it.

I want a proper electorate. This substitute bill reads:

That all male resident citizens of the District of Columbia who are over the age of 21 years, of sound mind, and have not been convicted of an offense involving moral turpitude, and who have been residents of the District of Columbia and the voting precinct in which they reside for more than one year prior to the date of the holding of said election—

Shall become the electorate. I want to give notice of the following amendment, which I will ask the Senate to vote upon at the proper time. I ask the Secretary to take it down.

In line 8, page 2, strike out the word "male," and after the word "election" in line 14 on page 2 insert these words:

And who can read and write and who have paid all taxes and assessments due from them and unpaid by them to the Federal Government and the government of the District of Columbia.

They shall constitute the qualified voters. My object in that is this: In the first place, without giving any allegiance to female suffrage, for I have none to give, there are certain questions that women ought to have a vote upon everywhere, and they are the questions that peculiarly affect the home. The regulation of public schools is one of them; the sale of liquor is another; questions which involve the policing of their towns, questions of sanitation which go to the home life. However long extended or shortly abbreviated the list of such questions might be, this is one of them, and women ought always to have a vote upon the question whether or how whisky or other liquors should be sold in their district. Striking out the word "male" will accomplish that purpose. Inserting the language that I have read after the word "election" will accomplish several purposes. First, it will give us at the seat of the National Government, as an example for all the States, an educational qualification, to wit, that a man must at least be intelligent enough to read and write before he can vote. It may be said that it is a man's misfortune if he can not read and write, but if a man is over 21 years of age and has lived in this country for three years the fact that he can not read and write argues stupidity and not misfortune. It argues either a lack of ambition to go forward in the world or it argues a lack of intelligence to learn the very simplest thing. You deprive him of nothing by the qualification. You merely say to him, "If you want to vote, go and learn how to read and write. You can do it if you are a man of average intelligence in six months. You can do it if you are a man of more than average intelligence in half as long a time. But at any rate we fix as a qualification of suffrage something which you can obtain and which will be an advantage to you when you do attain it. We deprive you of nothing. We add to your character and your usefulness something of more worth to you than it is to the public itself."

The next language is:

And who have paid all taxes and assessments due from them and unpaid by them to the Federal Government and the government of the District of Columbia.

That does not require men to have property in order to be voters; it merely requires those having property to be honest, and to be honest with the government under which they live. It merely disqualifies a tax dodger, the most dishonest of all men. It is not the man who simply swindles another individual, but who swindles the very government which protects him. So I should like to see that added to the bill.

Mr. President, a great deal of what I have said was rather irrelevant to the subject matter, but I do hope sure enough, and I am seriously speaking to my friend from Texas and to others for whose intelligence and character I have very high regard—I do hope that the very utmost point which gentlemen want to go to in this legislation will be at some particular moment frankly avowed and confessed, so that society can line up on one side of it or the other. I do hope that this little thing of taking 10 bites at one cherry will stop, because it is a great deal more nagging than it is to eat up the whole cherry at once and be done with it. It is a great deal less trouble to humanity generally, and it is a good deal less trouble to a man, to be soundly whipped than it is to be nibbled at for a week at a time. So I hope at some time you may put in the shape of a bill that which is your ultimate goal, the point beyond which you do not intend to go, and then let us get through with it one way or the other—getting through to a final result of fixed policy is a good thing.

I tell you it is dangerous not to do that. You remember the history of the immorality that came about as a result of the overthrow of the puritanical power in Great Britain. First from one little thing to another the Puritans went, interfering with what men rightfully or wrongfully thought were their rights—wrongfully generally, just as in this case—until they got men into a state of revolt, not against a particular wrong thing that was being done but against every legislative attempt to make them do right, and everything called by the name of religion or morals went by the board for a while. It took a long time afterwards to get things gathered together in a common-sense way.

Now, do not begin with this and come back here next year and go a little bit further, and come back the next Congress and go to the Smoot bill, and then come back five years from now and go to the Williams amendment, making it an absolute crime to buy a drink. Do it all at one time. If you are not going to do it on this bill do it in the next Congress, anyhow, and let the people to be affected see how far you are going, so that they may make up their minds whether they want to go with you or part company with you.

I am not joking about this. It sounds like a piece of irony. It is not. It is reason; it is founded on the soundest morality. You can nag men into a condition where they will oppose the best thing you can think of. Take this very case. No man of common sense in the world regards it as of the slightest importance to his moral character or intellectual development that he should be able to buy a drink. He may want it. He may resent your interference as some one interfering with his opinion, but if he has any sense at all he knows that it never did him a bit of good to buy it or drink it and that doing without it can not do him a bit of harm. Come right out and tell him so right at the jump and be done with it and argue it out with him; sooner or later you might convince him. But if you approach him in a Jesuistic way, a little bit this year and a little bit more next year, and a little bit more the next, nibbling as you go, after a while he not only can not be convinced that he is not being deprived of a very valuable personal liberty, but he can not be convinced that you are honest and sincere. He gets in a frame of mind where he thinks you are doing it for political purposes; that you are doing it to be popular; that you are doing it to serve yourself at home and make yourself strong, whereas if you stood right square out in the beginning for the whole proposition you would be in the long run stronger.

I should like to see the white race subjected to the experiment for 10 years of absolutely doing without alcohol at all for any purpose or from any source except poisoned alcohol in the arts, which no man would want to drink.

You tell me sometimes that it is good for medicine. It is not. I had a man come to me once and say, "I never take a drink except medicinally; I take it as medicine." "Oh, well," I said, "I have got no patience with you. It is a very enlivening beverage, but it is the poorest medicine in the world. I have tried it for nearly everything that it was prescribed for, and it never did me any good for anything."

I should like to see this experiment tried with the white race. The Arabs tried it; the Turks tried it. It did not make either of them any greater than we are, better morally, smarter intellectually, or stronger physically; but I am inclined to believe that that was because we were a stronger and smarter and more moral race anyhow, and that this thing had nothing to do with it; and that if they had not tried it as a part of the Mohammedan religion, prescribed for them in the Koran, the difference between them and us morally and mentally and physically would have been even greater than it is now.

I know that alcohol, like many other things, while harmful to the individual, may be very useful to the race in the way of cutting out the physically unfit, and leaving the race to be bred up by the physically fit, or the mentally fit, or the nervously fit; but I am not one of those who believe that the law of the survival of the physically fit and the extinction of the physically unfit, is a law which God meant for humanity; it is a law that He meant for the other animals, where physique alone was the important consideration.

I should really like to see the experiment tried, and I should like to be alive at the beginning of it and alive at the end of it, to see what effect it would have upon this great white race of ours, which stands in the fore files of time, carrying first in the hands of one of its subbranches and then in the hands of another the torch of civilization and enlightenment and virility and courage to the uttermost parts of the world, with an eye to scrutinize the inscrutable, to question the Omnipotent, standing as the chief representatives of God Himself and God's purposes on earth, as we believe.

The sooner you bring it to an actual experiment and trial the better for everybody. I have made up my mind to cross the Rubicon. I did it some time ago. I never expect to be again a candidate for the Senate in Mississippi. I may live to the point where I will have good enough sense not to want any office. I do not know that my past career shows that I am capable of that degree of intellectual growth, but perhaps I may be. However, it can not count with me politically; none of it can help or hurt me. Mississippi does not care an iota what I do with regard to this bill; Mississippi would care some, I think, if I put over on an unwilling people, without even consulting them, something which I wanted, but which they did not want.

I am prepared to believe that if you will let the women vote and properly restrict the electorate that this District will vote for prohibition, or, rather, will vote for this bill, which is the first step forward in the line of prohibition.

I think another thing about this sort of legislation—and while I am about it I am going to get it all off my mind—I think that Abraham Lincoln was right when he said we ought not only to consult the District of Columbia about their willingness to abolish slavery, but that we ought to indemnify the slaveholders for the property loss. And I think our English cousins are right. When they make laws of this sort they calculate the loss of property to the man affected by them and pay him a reasonable price for it. That is honest, too. Why, I knew the State of Mississippi once to do this, Senators, just to show you how far this sort of legislation can go: Long years ago she passed a law to provide for a lottery, and a man paid $50,000 into the State treasury to have the privilege of that lottery. Then the next legislature that met abolished the lottery law, and Mississippi kept his $50,000.

I knew Mississippi to do this once: To pass a pint liquor law, and after five men in my own town had paid their annual license for one year in advance, to repeal that law without returning the license money and indict each one of those five men for selling under it. They got out because they plead that they did not know the legislature had repealed the law, and the judge was easy upon them; but they had paid their licenses for a property privilege a year in advance, and the minimum one of them had gotten of enjoyment of the license was, I believe, two weeks out of it, and the maximum about two months. That sort of thing is not honest, I do not care how highly moral it is—geographically moral, quantitatively moral, this-side-or-that-side-of-the-bar moral—it is not plain, old-fashioned English honesty. If you have given a fellow a thing of value for a price and you take the thing of value away from him, you ought to give him back the price, no matter how contemptible you think the calling may be which you by your law invited him to pursue and for which he paid you a price.

I thank the Senate for its attention, and I will call up the amendment on another occasion. I do not desire to call it up this evening, because it is late; but I will call it up when we reach the proper place. I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. WILLIAMS. When will the amendment I have offered to the second section of the substitute be in order? Is the substitute to be read by paragraphs for amendment?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The substitute, as the Chair understands, has been read and the amendments will come up under Rule XVIII, as the Chair understands. There is now an original bill and a motion to strike out and insert, and the amendments to the original bill are first in order.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I thought amendments to perfect the substitute would be first in order.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I understand that the amendments to the original bill have already been passed upon and that the bill has been perfected.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is not aware of that fact. If that is the case, then amendments to the substitute are in order.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I think amendments to the substitute would be in order.

Mr. GALLINGER. And yet other amendments to the original bill can be offered and will have precedence over amendments to the substitute.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is of that opinion.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If that is the opinion, I will offer the amendment.

STOCK-RAISING HOMESTEADS (S. DOC. NO. 641).

Mr. SMITH of Arizona submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 407) to provide for stock-raising homesteads, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 1, 3, 4, 5, and 6.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 7, 8, and 10, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 2, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Page 3, line 12, after the word "areas," insert the following: "of the character herein described"; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 9, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out all of section 9 of the bill; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 11, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

Page 9, line 22, after the word "lands" add the following: "Provided further, That such driveways shall not be of greater number or width than shall be clearly necessary for the purpose proposed and in no event shall be more than 1 mile in width for a driveway less than 20 miles in length, not more than 2 miles in width for driveways over 20 and not more than 35 miles in length and not over 5 miles in width for driveways over 35 miles in length: Provided further, That all stock so transported over such driveways shall be moved an average of not less than 3 miles per day for sheep and goats and an average of not less than 6 miles per day for cattle and horses."

And the Senate agree to the same.

On page 2, line 22, after the word "appeal" add the following: "but no right to occupy such lands shall be acquired by reason of said application until said lands have been designated as stock-raising lands."

M. A. SMITH,
C. S. THOMAS,
REED SMOOT,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
SCOTT FERRIS,
EDWARD T. TAYLOR,
IRVINE L. LENROOT,
Managers on the part of the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, I should like to have the report go over and be printed. It was impossible to understand from hearing it read just what changes are contemplated. I hope the Senator from Arizona will not insist upon going on with it now.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. I simply ask that the conference report be printed and go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will lie on the table and be printed.

STATUE OF JAMES BUCHANAN.

Mr. WILLIAMS, from the Committee on the Library, to which was referred the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 145) authorizing the erection on the public ground in the city of Washington, D. C., of a statue of James Buchanan, a former President of the United States, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 881) thereon.

Mr. LEE of Maryland. I ask that Senate joint resolution No. 93, being Order of Business 152, which is a joint resolution of the same title and character, be taken from the calendar and postponed indefinitely and that the joint resolution just reported by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] be substituted therefor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, that action will be taken.

REPORT OF THE PHILIPPINE COMMISSION (H. DOC. NO. 1774).

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, which was read and referred to the Committee on the Philippines and ordered to be printed:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith, for the information of the Congress, the report of the Philippine Commission for the fiscal year ended December 31, 1915, together with the reports of the Governor General and the secretaries of the four executive departments of the Philippine government, and the second annual report of the governor of the Department of Mindanao and Sulu for the same period.

WOODROW WILSON.

THE WHITE HOUSE, December 18, 1916.

REPORT OF GOVERNOR OF PORTO RICO (H. DOC. NO. 1773).

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, which was read and referred to the Committee on Pacific Islands and Porto Rico and ordered to be printed:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith, for the information of the Congress, the report of the Governor of Porto Rico for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1916, together with the reports of the heads of the several executive departments of the Porto Rican government for the same period.

WOODROW WILSON.

THE WHITE HOUSE, December 18, 1916.

HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED.

H. J. Res. 324. Joint resolution authorizing the payment of the salaries of the officers and employees of Congress for December, 1916, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. STONE. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After five minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 35 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, December 19, 1916, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, December 18, 1916.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

We lift up our hearts in gratitude and praise to Thee, our Father in heaven, for the overtures of peace advanced by one of the belligerent nations and its allies. And we most fervently pray that they may be received in good faith and bring together not only the leading powers of the nations engaged in war but those of all nations, that all differences may be amicably adjusted and peace restored. And grant, O most merciful Father, that the conference of nations may establish a permanent basis upon which all national and international differences may be settled by the wiser and saner methods of arbitration, that war may be relegated to the past as a relic of barbarism, and that peace may reign supreme forever and ay, through Him who taught us love and good will to all men. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Saturday, December 16, 1916, was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate by Mr. Waldorf, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 7095. An act extending the time for completion of the bridge across the Delaware River, authorized by an act entitled "An act to authorize the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. and the Pennsylvania & Newark Railroad Co., or their successors, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Delaware River," approved the 24th day of August, 1912.

DECEMBER SALARIES OF CONGRESSIONAL EMPLOYEES.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the following joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 324) authorizing payment of the salaries of officers and employees of Congress for December, 1916.

Resolved, etc., That the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives are authorized and instructed to pay the officers and employees of the Senate and of the House of Representatives, including the Capitol police, their respective salaries for the month of December, 1916, on the day of adjournment of the present session for the holiday recess; and the Clerk of the House is authorized to pay on the same date the Members, Delegates, and Resident Commissioners their allowance for clerk hire for the said month of December.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was accordingly read the third time and passed.

On motion of Mr. FITZGERALD, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

PATENTS TO CERTAIN INDIANS IN WASHINGTON.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 8092) confirming patents heretofore issued to certain Indians in the State of Washington, which has passed the Senate with certain amendments, and I ask that the Senate amendments be disagreed to and that the House request a conference.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table H. R. 8092, with Senate amendments——

Mr. MANN. To discharge the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

The SPEAKER. To discharge the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union from the further consideration of this bill, disagree to the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference. Is there objection?

There was no objection; and the Speaker appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. STEPHENS of Texas, Mr. CARTER of Oklahoma, and Mr. CAMPBELL.

CALENDAR FOR UNANIMOUS CONSENT.

The SPEAKER. This is unanimous-consent day. The Clerk will call the first bill on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent.

ISSUES OF SECURITIES BY COMMON CARRIERS.

The first business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 563) to amend section 20 of an act to regulate commerce, to prevent overissues of securities by carriers, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, I think it is very evident to all gentlemen interested in this bill that it is not one which should be considered on the Unanimous-Consent Calendar if there is any other way of getting at it.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois objects, and the bill will be stricken from the calendar.

Mr. ADAMSON. I hope it is not necessary to do that.

The SPEAKER. It is necessary to do that under the rule.

Mr. ADAMSON. I will ask unanimous consent that notwithstanding the rule the bill remain on the calendar.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman can put it back on the calendar.

Mr. ADAMSON. I know; but if the House is willing I can request that it remain on the calendar without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia asks unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for five minutes.

The SPEAKER. Now?

Mr. RAYBURN. Now.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN] asks unanimous consent to address the House for five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, this bill, H. R. 563, that has just been objected to—and I do not criticize anybody for objecting to its present consideration—was introduced in this House in 1913, was reported to the House, and passed the House in 1914. Out of all the membership present voting upon it at that time only 12 men in the House voted against it. It was deemed at that time to be very necessary. It has been deemed since that time to be very necessary by the people who have been interested in real regulation of railroads in this country. It contains two principal provisions. One is to follow the recommendations of the Hadley Commission, to give greater publicity to the acts of common carriers in this country. The other is that before railroad companies hereafter shall make new issues of stocks and bonds they shall come before the Interstate Commerce Commission and receive the approval of that commission.

In 1915 the railroad attorneys of this country got busy and they began to agitate a general investigation of all matters pertaining to railway regulation in the country. They interested some mighty good men in their proposition. They interested some Senators; they interested some Members in the House. When that resolution, known as the Newlands resolution, was considered by the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce of the House I objected to it there, and I would have brought my objections to this floor had I not been necessarily out of town at the time it was considered here. I said then—and that prediction has come absolutely true—that that resolution amounted to nothing except to stay all railroad legislation in this House. When it was proposed that that committee should report back here on January 8 I said that it would not be ready to report at that time, but would come back to this House asking for more time. That has happened. A resolution has been introduced into this House to extend the time of that committee. What has that committee done? In July of this year that committee was authorized by this House to go into a general investigation of the railroad question in this country.

And what have they done? In seven months they have heard one witness fully—not more than three others partially—and adjourned until after the 4th of March, 1917. I make this statement for the simple reason of calling the attention of the Members of this House who are friends of real railroad legislation in this country, who want to do something, when this resolution comes up for consideration not to administer another dose of chloroform to all the legislation that we seek to get through in this and succeeding Congresses. If you give this Newlands committee all the time it wants it will be five long years before they are ready to report, because the prime movers of the bill and resolution are against any kind of new legislation with reference to the railroads of this country.

This resolution has some other provisions in it that will surprise you when you read it. It even goes to the extent of saying that the same House committee that was appointed in July, 1916, shall remain the House committee so long as this committee shall live, even though some members of the committee will not be Members of the next Congress. [Laughter.] I want to say, and I choose this opportunity to call upon the friends of railroad legislation in this House, people who are friends of State commissions in this country, who have done so much along this line, friends of any regulation whatever, to join me when this resolution comes up not to give a longer life to this chloroform resolution, but smother it when it comes up for consideration. [Applause.]

CLASSIFICATION OF COTTON.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next bill on the Unanimous-Consent Calendar.

The next bill on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 15913) to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to establish uniform standards of classification for cotton; to provide for the application, enforcement, and use of such standards in transactions in interstate and foreign commerce, to prevent deception therein, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, this is a very important bill, and will probably soon be considered on the call of committees. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

GRANT OF PUBLIC LANDS IN OKLAHOMA.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 15156) granting public lands to the State of Oklahoma.

Mr. McCLINTIC. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that that bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent that that bill be passed over without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

SERUMS, TOXINS, ETC.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 15914) to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to license establishments for and to regulate the preparation of viruses, serums, toxins, and analogous products for use in the treatment of domestic animals, and for other purposes.

Mr. RUBEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that that bill be passed without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri asks unanimous consent that the bill be passed without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

PATENT OF LANDS IN UTAH CONTAINING GILSONITE, ETC.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 43) in relation to the location, entry, and patenting of lands within the former Uncompahgre Indian Reservation, in the State of Utah, containing gilsonite or other like substances, and for other purposes.

Mr. MEEKER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that that bill be passed without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri asks unanimouse consent to pass the bill without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

SIOUX TRIBE OF INDIANS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 4371) authorizing the Sioux Tribe of Indians to submit claims to the Court of Claims.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. I object.

Mr. DILLON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from South Dakota asks unanimous consent to pass the bill without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DILLON. Mr. Speaker, I make the same request in regard to the next bill, H. R. 10774.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from South Dakota asks unanimous consent to pass the bill without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

IMPORTATION OF VIRUSES, SERUMS, TOXINS, ETC.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 199) to regulate the importation of viruses, serums, toxins, and analogous products, to regulate interstate traffic in said articles, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, let the bill be reported.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That it shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporation to prepare, sell, or exchange, or offer for sale or exchange in the District of Columbia, or in the Territories, or in any place under the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, or to ship or deliver for shipment from any State or Territoryr to any other State or Territory or to the District of Columbia, or from the District of Columbia to any State or Territory, or to import from any foreign country into the United States, or to export from the United States into any foreign country, any contaminated, dangerous, or harmful virus, serum, toxin, or analogous product intended for the prevention or cure of diseases of man.

SEC. 2. That no person, firm, or corporation shall prepare, sell, exchange, or ship, or offer for sale, exchange, or shispment, or import or export as aforesaid, any virus, serum, toxin, or analogous product intended for the prevention or cure of diseases of man, unless (a) the said virus, serum, toxin, or analogous product shall have been prepared, in compliance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, at an establishment holding an unsuspended and unrevoked license for the manufacture, barter, and sale of such virus, serum, toxin, or product, issued by the Secretary of the Treasury as hereinafter authorized, or unless (b) each package of such virus, serum, toxin, or analogous product is plainly marked with the descriptive name and laboratory number of the article contained therein, the name, address, and license number of the manufacturer, and the date up to which the contents will, with reasonable certainty, yield their specific results, or in case the standard of potency for the contents has been fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, unless it is plainly marked with the strength of the contents in accordance with the standard so fixed: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury may, in his discretion, permit the importation or carriage of any virus, serum, toxin, or analogous product, although the same is not prepared in a licensed establishment and the packages of the same are not properly marked, when the same is furnished without charge to physicians, hospitals, or institutions of learning solely for scientific purposes.

SEC. 3. That no person shall falsely label or mark any package or container of any virus, serum, toxin, antitoxin, or product aforesaid, prepared or propagated in a licensed establishment, or alter any label or mark on any such package or container so as to falsify such label or mark.

SEC. 4. That any officer, agent, or employee of the Treasury Department, authorized by the Secretary of the Treasury for the purpose, may, during all reasonable hours, enter and inspect any establishment licensed under this act, and licenses shall be issued upon condition that the holders of the same will permit inspections of their establishments.

SEC. 5. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to make and promulgate from time to time such regulations as may be necessary to prevent the preparation, sale, exchange, or shipment as aforesaid of any contaminated, dangerous, or harmful virus, serum, toxin, or analogous product intended for the prevention or cure of diseases of man, and to issue, suspend, and revoke licenses for the maintenance of establishments for the preparation of viruses, serums, toxins, and analogous products, applicable to the prevention and cure of diseases of man, intended for sale, exchange, or shipment as aforesaid.

SEC. 6. That all inspections of establishments and examinations of viruses, serums, toxins, and analogous products made under authority of this act shall be made by the Public Health Service, and if it shall appear that any such product imported from abroad is contaminated, dangerous, or harmful, the same shall be denied entry and shall be destroyed or returned at the expense of the owner or importer.

SEC. 7. That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to enforce the provisions of this act and of such rules and regulations as may be made by authority thereof; to issue, suspend, and revoke licenses for the maintenance of establishments aforesaid, and to designate standards of purity and potency for viruses, serums, toxins, and analogous products applicable to the prevention and cure of diseases of man.

SEC. 8. That no person shall interfere with any officer, agent, or employee of the Treasury Department in the performance of any duty imposed upon him by this act or by regulations made by authority thereof.

SEC. 9. That any person who shall violate, or aid or abet in violating, any of the provisions of this act shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $500, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

SEC. 10. That the act approved July 1, 1902, entitled "An act to regulate the sale of viruses, serums, toxins, and analogous products in the District of Columbia, to regulate interstate traffic in said articles, and for other purposes," and all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and the gentleman from Georgia is recognized for one hour.

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Speaker, I have no disposition to consume the time of the House unnecessarily. This proposition is to secure purity of these drugs, and has been recommended to our committee and to the Congress for several terms. If I am not mistaken, my distinguished friend from Illinois [Mr. MANN] had something to do with the effort to make it a law when he was the chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. I have introduced it twice at the earnest recommendation of the department, and it seems to me that very few things can be more important than securing the purity of the drugs on which we rely for our health. I shall insert here the report of the committee, as follows:

The Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 199) to regulate the importation of viruses, serums, toxins, and analogous products, to regulate interstate traffic in said articles, and for other purposes, having considered the same, report thereon with a recommendation that it pass.

The bill has the approval of the Treasury Department, as will appear by the letter attached and which is made a part of this report:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, January 6, 1916.

The CHAIRMAN COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE,
House of Representatives.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 21st ultimo, inclosing copy of bill (H. R. 199) to regulate the importation of viruses, serums, toxins, and analogous products, to regulate interstate traffic in said articles, and for other purposes, and requesting an expression of the views of the department concerning this bill.

The object of the proposed bill is evidently to remedy the defects of the existing law for the control of the interstate and international traffic in biologic products intended for the prevention and cure of diseases of man. As the use of this important kind of preparations becomes more and more general, it is obvious that all necessary precautions must be taken to safeguard the public health from dangers from this source.

Section 1 would provide authority for the prohibition of the sale, importation, exportation, and interstate shipment of contaminated, dangerous, and harmful serums, toxins, and analogous products intended for the prevention or cure of diseases of man.

Section 2 would prohibit the importation and interstate shipment of unlicensed viruses, serums, toxins, and analogous products. At present the law forbids importation and interstate shipment of the products in question only when they are intended for sale. It does not cover cases where the sale has been completed before importation or shipment. This is a serious defect, and the mischief which the law was designed to guard against can not be prevented as long as an unlicensed manufacturer is able to distribute his products with impunity, provided the sales are completed before shipment. The defect mentioned is not only dangerous to the public, but is also in reality a discrimination against reputable licensed establishments which comply with the law. It is thought this defect will be remedied by prohibiting the shipment of products generally, unless they are prepared in licensed establishments.

Section 2 contains also a proviso that the Secretary of the Treasury may, in his discretion, permit the importation or carriage of any products furnished without charge to physicians, hospitals, or other institutions solely for scientific purposes. This will guard against unnecessary restrictions in particular cases and will not discourage scientific research.

Section 5 confers authority on the Secretary of the Treasury to make the necessary regulations to carry the act into effect.

Section 6 provides that inspections of establishments and examinations of the products propagated therein shall be made by the Public Health Service, as has been the practice ever since the present law has been in operation. This section also provides for the disposal of contaminated, dangerous, and harmful products that may be imported.

The other sections of the bill contain provisions similar to those now in force, and section 7, in addition, authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to fix standards of purity and potency.

In order to provide more effective supervision over biologic products, it is respectfully recommended that in the interest of the public health this bill be enacted into law.

Respectfully,

W. G. MCADOO, Secretary.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ADAMSON. Certainly.

Mr. STAFFORD. The department has certain authority under existing law. Will the gentleman explain to the House wherein the new provisions differ from the existing statute?

Mr. ADAMSON. That would be a rather hard task for me to enter upon.

Mr. STAFFORD. I do not wish to impose any difficult task upon my friend, particularly in view of the approaching Christmas holidays, and I shall withdraw the inquiry.

Mr. ADAMSON. The existing provisions have been held by the department to be entirely inadequate, and these have been formulated with great care and due consideration, and the last section provides that all other provisions be repealed and that this shall constitute the law, if this be enacted into law. Whatever the others may be, this language would be the law if Congress should enact it.

Mr. ESCH rose.

Mr. ADAMSON. Perhaps my friend from Wisconsin [Mr. ESCH] can satisfy his colleague by telling him something of the details, ramifications, and imperfections of the present law.

Mr. STAFFORD. I am quite sure that my colleague will not be fearful of undertaking such a task and will be only too willing to do so.

Mr. ADAMSON. I would be very glad to hear the gentleman.

Mr. ESCH. Mr. Speaker, the question was asked wherein this bill differs from existing law. Will the gentleman from Georgia yield to me?

Mr. ADAMSON. I certainly yield with pleasure.

Mr. ESCH. This bill gives to the Secretary of the Treasury the power of fixing the standard of potency of these various drugs and viruses, a power which is not contained in the existing law. It also provides for regulation of transportation of interstate commerce, and also respecting importations from abroad of these viruses and serums. Then there is a provision that where these viruses, and so forth, are for physicians, hospitals, and institutions of learning, and are solely for scientific purposes, the Secretary of the Treasury may permit the importation, although they may not be prepared in a licensed establishment or properly marked, if they are furnished without charge.

In section 5 there is a radical change from existing law in that the Secretary of the Treasury is given sole power to make and promulgate from time to time such regulations as may be necessary to prevent the preparation, sale, exchange of any contaminated viruses, and so forth.

Mr. STAFFORD. Which, I take it, means through the Public Health Service?

Mr. ESCH. Yes; but under the existing law a board consisting of representatives from the Army and Navy and the Public Health Service make those rules and regulations. Section 6 is also new matter providing for the inspection of establishments, the examination of viruses, and so forth, and then there is a provision that if it shall appear that any such product imported from abroad is contaminated, dangerous, or harmful, the same shall be denied entry and shall be destroyed or returned at the expense of the owner or importer. The existing law made no such provision.

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ESCH. Yes; in the time of the gentleman from Georgia.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia has the floor.

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Speaker, I am quite willing to divide my time with the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. ESCH].

Mr. TOWNER. The provisions of this act have reference only to the diseases of man.

Mr. ESCH. Exactly. There is a bill on the calendar providing for the regulation of viruses and serums applicable to the diseases of domestic animals. We have no jurisdiction over that subject matter.

Mr. TOWNER. That will come up and be considered from another committee—the Committee on Agriculture?

Mr. ESCH. It has already been considered, and the bill is on the calendar.

Mr. MANN. I will state to the gentleman that it is possible that that may be considered on the first Wednesday in January.

Mr. TOWNER. I would like to have the gentleman from Wisconsin explain to the House why it is that this power is given to the Secretary of the Treasury?

Mr. ESCH. The Public Health Service is under the jurisdiction of the Treasury Department, and as this is within the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Treasury we gave him that power.

Mr. TOWNER. As a matter of fact, it would be largely controlled by recommendations from the Health Department?

Mr. ESCH. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Georgia yield for a question?

Mr. ADAMSON. With pleasure. I wish first to thank my colleague from Wisconsin for his explanation of the bill.

Mr. MANN. I want to ask a question with reference to the language of the bill. I do not remember whether this language follows the language of the existing law. Section 2 provides that no person shall sell, exchange, import, and so forth, any virus—

Unless (a) the said virus, serum, toxin, or analogous product shall have been prepared—in a licensed establishment, and then follows "or unless (b)" each package is plainly marked with a descriptive name, and so forth. I did not suppose that it was intended to have those in the alternative, and it seemed to me that the word "or" ought to be "and," that the intention was to have all of these serums prepared in a licensed establishment and then marked.

Mr. ESCH. I have the original law here, if the gentleman from Georgia will yield. The original law uses the words "nor (b) unless," and the bill we are now considering uses the word "or."

Mr. MANN. Yes; but "nor (b) unless" is not alternative. That is an additional requirement. This is purely alternative, and it seemed to me that the word "or" ought to be the word "and."

Mr. ADAMSON. If the gentleman will permit, the way I understand the department views it is that they were willing to allow the liberty to a man to take the responsibility, as they do under the pure-food law, of making direct representation.

Mr. MANN. Evidently not; because the language under the word "or" is that it must contain the descriptive name and laboratory number of the article and also the address and license number of the manufacturer, and the date, and so forth. That plainly contemplates not only serums from licensed establishments, but requires they be—

Mr. ESCH. It should be "nor."

Mr. ADAMSON. It would not permit him to put it up and place it on the market without a license.

Mr. MANN. That is the purpose.

Mr. ADAMSON. I have no objection to that.

Mr. MANN. But being a criminal statute in a way, there ought to be——

Mr. ADAMSON. That appears to be consistent, and I have no objection to it.

Mr. ESCH. Why not insert the "nor" in the place of "or," and then have the law as it is now? Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment. Page 2, line 14, strike out the word "or" and insert the word "nor."

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, on page 2, line 14, by striking out the word "or" and inserting the word "nor."

Mr. ADAMSON. I think that ought to be made, Mr. Speaker.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. ADAMSON, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

OTTAWA INDIAN TRIBE OF BLANCHARDS FORK AND ROCHE DE BŒUF.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 138) for the relief of the Ottawa Indian Tribe of Blanchards Fork and Roche de Bœuf.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I am not opposed to the bill, but I would like to have a couple of amendments adopted. One is to strike out part of line 11 and all of lines 12 and 13. I can see no reason why this little claim should be advanced on the docket of the Court of Claims or the Supreme Court. I also have a further amendment limiting the amount of attorney's fees to 10 per cent of the amount of the judgment that may be rendered in these cases. With those two amendments, I have no objection to the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois objects, and the bill goes off the calendar.

COMMISSION TO STUDY SOCIAL INSURANCE AND UNEMPLOYMENT.

The next business on the Unanimous Consent Calendar was (H. J. Res. 250) to provide for the appointment of a commission to prepare and recommend a plan for the establishment of a national insurance fund and for the mitigation of the evil of unemployment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. I object.

Mr. LONDON rose.

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman wants to be heard——

Mr. LONDON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this resolution be passed without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that this joint resolution be passed without prejudice. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

AVIATION IN THE COAST GUARD.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 15736) to provide for aviation in the Coast Guard.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Speaker, I do not see the gentleman from Virginia, and my understanding is that this provision has already become the law and has been incorporated in the naval bill. I ask that the bill go over for the present without prejudice.

Mr. MANN. Why not strike it off the calendar?

Mr. ADAMSON. I may be in error, and I would like to see the gentleman from Virginia first.

Mr. MANN. If it was not provided for in the naval bill, it is not likely to be provided further.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia asks unanimous consent to pass over this bill without prejudice. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

PAYMENTS OF ASSESSMENTS FOR BENEFITS FOR OPENING STREETS, ETC., DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 15460) to provide for the payment of assessments for benefits for the opening of streets, avenues, roads, and alleys in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask to have the bill passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

CIVIL WAR VOLUNTEER OFFICERS' RETIRED LIST.

The next business of the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 386) to create in the War Department and the Navy Department, respectively, a roll designated as the "Civil War volunteer officers' retired list," to authorize placing thereon with retired pay certain surviving officers who served in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of the United States in the Civil War, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. The bill goes off the calendar.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California asks unanimous consent that this bill may be passed over without prejudice. Is there objection?

Mr. CALLAWAY. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on this bill I may insert the following statement of mine in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California [Mr. RAKER] asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD on this bill. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The statement is as follows:

Civil War Volunteer officers' retired list.

GENERAL LAW AS TO THESE OFFICERS.

Lieutenant general	$11,000
Major general	8,000
Brigadier general	6,000
Colonel	4,000
Lieutenant colonel	3,500
Major	3,000
Captain	2,400
First lieutenant	2,000
Second lieutenant	1,700

I will quote from table of estimates prepared by Col. C. R. E. Koch, now deceased:

Generals and colonels	144
Lieutenant colonels	216
Surgeons (rank of major) Paymasters (rank of major) Majors (rank of major)	360
Assistant surgeons (rank of captain) Chaplains (rank of captain) Captains (rank of captain)	2,520
Adjutants (rank of first lieutenant) Quartermasters (rank of first lieutenant) First lieutenants (rank of first lieutenant)	2,304
Second lieutenants	1,656
	7,200

Quoting further from estimates prepared by Col. Koch, deceased: "Leaving net cost first year of law's operation, from December 31, 1915, $3,642,390."

Estimated loss by death from December 31, 1915, to October 31, 1916, 663; 11 every five days—8 per cent.

This is a reduction of cost of	$19,390
The estimated loss by death for the year beginning Nov. 1, 1916, 8 per cent	26,656
	46,046

Estimated cost for continued payments, $3,596,434.

Pension Office report of October 31, 1916, gives 353,034 as the number of Civil War invalids on the rolls. 1.54 per cent, 663, from 7,200 estimated volunteer officers living October 31, 1916, 6,537

The retired pay provided for by this act shall begin upon the date of the passage of this act and continue during the natural life of the beneficiary; it shall be payable quarterly and shall not exceed, in the case of any surviving officer, three-fourths of the initial active pay now received by a captain in the United States Army.

Generals, colonels, lieutenant colonels, surgeons, paymasters, and majors, would be three-fourths of captain's pay of $2,400, $1,800.

Assistant surgeons, chaplains, and captains would be one-half of captain's pay of $2,400, $1,200.

Adjutants, quartermasters, and first lieutenants would be one-half of first lieutenant's pay of $2,000, $1,000.

Second lieutenant would be one-half of $1,700, $850.

Should the H. R. 386 amendment be adopted, "On page 4, line 17, strike out the word 'captain' and insert in lieu thereof the words 'second lieutenant,'" it would reduce the ratings of the generals down to and include the majors to three-fourths that of a second lieutenant, $1,700—$1,275. It does not change the ratings of captains, adjutants, assistant surgeons, chaplains, second lieutenants, quartermasters, and first lieutenants from the provision of S. bill 392.

HOURS OF SERVICE OF RAILROAD EMPLOYEES.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 9216) to amend sections 2, 3, 4, and 5 of an act entitled "An act to promote the safety of employees and travelers upon railroads by limiting the hours of service of employees thereon," approved March 4, 1907.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. ADAMSON and Mr. COADY rose.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. WINSLOW. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. ADAMSON. My understanding is that this has been fully incorporated in another bill which has already become a law, and I ask unanimous consent that the committee pass it over without prejudice until the author can return to the House.

Mr. STAFFORD. Does the gentleman mean that the increase of wage bill incorporated this provision of law?

Mr. ADAMSON. I do not know that there is any such law.

Mr. MANN. If it had been incorporated in that bill, why not pass it over?

Mr. ADAMSON. I think in the other bill it is completely covered. I ask that it be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

MISBRANDED ARTICLES.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 10496) to prohibit the manufacture, sale, or transportation in interstate commerce of misbranded articles, to regulate the traffic therein, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill go over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

YUMA (ARIZ.) AUXILIARY RECLAMATION PROJECT.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 14825) to provide for an auxiliary reclamation project in connection with the Yuma project, Arizona.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. I object, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin objects.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I do not wish to have the bill stricken from the calendar. When the bill was last reached, at the request of the author the bill went over without prejudice. I ask unanimous consent now that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin asks unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

UNCLAIMED BANK DEPOSITS, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 16070) to dispose of unclaimed bank deposits in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice. Is there objection. [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

BALANCE DUE LOYAL CREEK INDIANS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 9326) to pay the balance due the Loyal Creek Indians on the award made by the Senate on the 16th day of February, 1903.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. VENABLE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this bill carries an item of $600,000 for the payment of these Indians, which, according to my view and the view of the minority, is indefensible and unjustifiable under the facts, law, equities, or natural justice. I think the merits of the measure ought to come before the Members for their consideration, and for that reason I object.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. VENABLE] objects, and the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. HASTINGS] asks unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

SALE OF COAL DEPOSITS TO REPUBLIC COAL CO.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 50) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to sell the coal deposits in and under certain public lands to the Republic Coal Co., a corporation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MAYS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I have objected to the consideration of this bill several times because the bill sought to transfer to the Milwaukee Railroad Co. more land than the law provides may be transferred to any association or corporation, and for the other reason that there was no safeguard in the bill providing that the Milwaukee Railroad Co. should not enter the commercial market with the coal produced on this land. But I understand the gentleman having in charge the bill will offer an amendment which, if it is passed, will remedy those objections. And for that reason I will not object.

Mr. HILLIARD. Mr. Speaker, the reason does not satisfy me, and I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Colorado objects, and the bill is stricken from the calendar.

Mr. STOUT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Montana asks unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

FLANDREAU BAND OF SIOUX INDIANS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 13165), authorizing the Flandreau Band of Sioux Indians to submit claims to the Court of Claims.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. MANN. I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois objects, and the bill is stricken from the calendar.

Mr. DILLON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be retained on the calendar without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from South Dakota asks that the bill be passed over without prejudice. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

RECLAMATION OF CERTAIN ARID LANDS IN NEVADA.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 2519) to encourage the reclamation of certain arid lands in the State of Nevada, and for other purposes.

The title of the bill was read.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill may go over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin asks unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

EXPENSES INCURRED UNDER TREATY OF WASHINGTON.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 649) making appropriations for expenses incurred under the treaty of Washington.

The title of the bill was read.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I shall have to object, but I have no objection to the bill being passed over without prejudice. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin asks unanimous consent that the bill be posed over without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

CLAIMS OF THE STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 3654) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to audit and adjust certain claims of the State of North Carolina.

The title of the bill was read.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I will make a similar request as to this bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin asks unanimouse consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

RETIREMENT PAY OF JUDGES OF UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURTS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 11152) to provide retirement pay in certain cases for judges of the United States district courts in the Territories.

The title of the bill was read.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois objects. The bill is stricken from the calendar.

COL. DAVID DU B. GAILLARD.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 15076) granting to the widow of Col. David Du B. Gaillard authority to place, in his memory, a tablet in the Memorial Amphitheater at Arlington, Va.

The title of the bill was read.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. I object.

Mr. MEEKER. Mr. Speaker, would not the gentleman be willing that this bill should go over without prejudice?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] objects, and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. MEEKER] asks unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

NATIONAL PARK AT GUILFORD COURT HOUSE.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 8229) to establish a national military park at the battle field of Guilford Court House.

The title of the bill was read.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois objects.

Mr. STEADMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT ATTORNEY FOR THE DISTRICT OF RHODE ISLAND.

The next business called on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 10110) to increase the salary of the United States district attorney for the district of Rhode Island.

The title of the bill was read.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. CALLAWAY. I object.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill retain its place on the calendar.

Mr. STAFFORD. That bill is not on the calendar. It has been called out of order.

The SPEAKER. How is it called out of order?

Mr. STAFFORD. This is to increase the salary of the United States district attorney for the district of Rhode Island.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call the next one.

ABANDONMENT OF PINEY BRANCH ROAD.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 12035) to provide for the abandonment of Piney Branch Road between Allison Street and Buchanan Street NW., in the District of Columbia.

The title of the bill was read.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. I object.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois objects and the gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 235) to authorize the President of the United States to convey to the foreign Governments participating in the Panama-Pacific International Exposition the grateful appreciation of the Government and the people of the United States.

The title of the joint resolution was read.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois objects, and the joint resolution is stricken from the calendar.

LANDS OF WINNEBAGO AND OMAHA INDIANS, NEBRASKA.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 11161) providing for the taxation of the lands of the Winnebago Indians and the Omaha Indians in the State of Nebraska.

The title of the bill was read.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. This bill is on the Union Calendar.

Mr. STEPHENS of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska asks unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, how about Senate bill 6116?

Mr. STEPHENS of Nebraska. What is the number?

Mr. MANN. Union Calendar 332, Senate bill 6116. Is it not the same thing?

Mr. STEPHENS of Nebraska. That is the same bill that the amendment is intended to affect.

Mr. MANN. If the subject is going to be considered at all, there is no use in considering the House bill when we have the Senate bill on the same subject here.

Mr. STEPHENS of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that Senate bill 6116 be considered in lieu of House bill 11161.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska asks unanimous consent that Senate bill 6116, Union Calendar 332, be considered in lieu of House bill 11161. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent also that this bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

An act (S. 6116) providing for the taxation of the lands of the Winnebago Indians and the Omaha Indians in the State of Nebraska.

Be it enacted, etc., That all of the lands in the State of Nebraska belonging to the members of the tribe of Winnebago Indians held under patents of allotments, and upon which the 25-year trust period shall have expired, or shall expire, and which trust period shall have been or shall be extended as provided by law, shall be, and the same are hereby, made subject to appraisement and assessment for the purposes of taxation and subject to taxation for local, school district, road district, county, and State purposes, as provided by the laws of the State of Nebraska now in force or to be hereinafter enacted.

SEC. 2. That all of the lands in the State of Nebraska belonging to the members of the tribe of Omaha Indians now held under trust patents of allotments issued in 1885 or subsequent thereto, and upon which the 25-year trust period shall have expired, and which trust period shall have been extended, as provided by law, shall be, and the same are hereby, made subject to appraisement and assessment for the purposes of taxation and subject to taxation for local, school district, road district, county, and State purposes, as provided by the laws of the State of Nebraska now in force or to be hereinafter enacted: Provided, That any of the lands described in section 1 and section 2 of this act, so long as the same shall be held under trust patents, shall not be subject to levy and tax sale, as provided under the laws of the State of Nebraska for the collection of such taxes; but if such tax shall not be paid within one year after the same shall become due and payable, as provided by the laws of the State of Nebraska, then the list of such unpaid and delinquent taxes on the lands of the Winnebago Indians and Omaha Indians, as above provided, shall be certified by the county treasurer of the county in which such lands are situated to the Secretary of the Interior, who shall be authorized to pay the same from any funds belonging to the Indian allottees owning such lands so taxed and arising from the rentals thereof or under his control; and in the event that no such funds shall be in the possession or under the control of the Secretary of the Interior, he shall certify that fact to the said county treasurer, which certificate shall operate as a full release and discharge of the tax assessed against the land of the Indian so without funds.

With a committee amendment, as follows:

On page 2, line 2, strike out the word "hereinafter" and insert the word "hereafter," and, in line 13, strike out the word "hereinafter" and insert the word "hereafter."

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. STEPHENS of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I understand there is no objection to the measure.

Mr. STAFFORD. Does the gentleman think it is worth while to send this bill back to the Senate for these little technical amendments, to change the words "hereafter" and "hereinafter"?

Mr. STEPHENS of Nebraska. I do not know.

Mr. STAFFORD. Why not disagree to the amendments proposed and have the bill enacted at this time?

Mr. MANN. The amendments are essential.

Mr. STAFFORD. I think "hereinafter" is of just the same effect as "hereafter."

Mr. MANN. Oh, no. The word "hereinafter" would refer to this bill. Does the Senate bill read "hereinafter"?

Mr. STEPHENS of Nebraska. It does not in the copy I have.

Mr. STAFFORD. In the copy I have it reads "hereinafter" with a committee amendment "hereafter."

Mr. MANN. It ought to be changed.

Mr. STAFFORD. All right.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendments.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was accordingly read the third time and passed.

By unanimous consent the corresponding House bill (H. R. 11151) was laid on the table.

INDIAN DEPREDATION CLAIMS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 6876) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to provide for the adjudication and payment of claims arising from Indian depredations,' approved March 3, 1891," approved January 11, 1915.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. This bill is on the Union Calendar.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wyoming asks unanimous consent that this bill may be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to provide for the adjudication and payment of claims arising from Indian depredations,' approved March 3, 1891," approved January 11, 1915 (38 Stats., p. 791), be, and the same is hereby, amended as follows:

SEC. 2. Strike out all of the second proviso of the said amendatory act approved January 11, 1915, and insert the following:

That all claims heretofore filed under said act of March 3, 1891, and which have been dismissed by the court for nonprosecution, or want of proof of citizenship, or the alienage of the claimant, shall, upon proof heretofore made or to be hereafter made that the claimants in such cases were not at the date of their losses citizens of the United States be reinstated and readjudicated in accordance with the provisions of this act.

SEC. 3. That all motions to reinstate in accordance with the provisions of this act shall be filed within two years from the date of the passage hereof.

SEC. 4. That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

Mr. MANN. I think we ought to have a statement with reference to this bill. We have had a great many controversies here in reference to these claims for Indian depredations. I do not want even this bill to go through without some statement on the record in addition to what is in the bill itself. It is evident that the intention of Congress was not very clearly expressed before, because this is an act to amend an act, and we do not know what it does do.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the matter may be passed over for a few moments. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. STEPHENS] is the author of the bill, and he is familiar with its provisions. I know nothing about it further than is stated in the report. The report of the committee is unanimous in favor of the measure, and I am informed that a similar bill has passed the Senate.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, we have had a long controversy in Congress in reference to these Indian-depredation claims. A great many of them were filed and dismissed for various reasons, one that the tribes were at war and were not in amity with the United States; and some years ago we reached a practical agreement between gentlemen on both sides of the Chamber that we would authorize the reinstatement of claims where the only reason for their dismissal was that of alienship, lack of citizenship. We attempted to do that, with the understanding that we would not enact legislation opening the door for all other claims. Now, it seems that in that legislation which we did enact, endeavoring to remove the disability of alienship, the language did not cover all of those cases. As I understand this bill, it is simply for the purpose of authorizing the reinstatement of cases where the bar was the fact that the claimant was not a citizen of the United States.

Mr. TILLMAN. It would seem that that is the object of the measure.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was accordingly read the third time and passed.

On motion of Mr. TILLMAN, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

FISH-CULTURAL STATION IN CALIFORNIA.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 11245) to authorize the establishment of an auxiliary or field fish-cultural station on the Klamath River, in the State of California.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, I think the gentleman from California [Mr. RAKER], the author of this bill, succeeded in killing his proposition the other day by inserting it as an amendment to the omnibus fish-hatchery bill. If so, the gentleman ought not to take two chances. I object.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the gentleman I ask that the bill be continued on the calendar.

Mr. MANN. Oh, no. A man ought to take one chance. He can not ride two horses going in different directions at the same time.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. I do not know anything about that, only the gentleman from California is not here, and I thought we might leave the bill on the calendar until he comes into the room.

Mr. MANN. Evidently he did not expect the bill to remain on the calendar or he would be here.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Colorado asks unanimous consent that the bill go over without prejudice. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois objects, and the bill will be stricken from the calendar.

METROPOLITAN POLICE OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 10926) to amend an act approved June 8, 1906, entitled "An act to amend section 1 of an act entitled 'An act relating to the Metropolitan police of the District of Columbia,' approved February 28, 1901."

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. Reserving the right to object——

Mr. VINSON. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. STAFFORD. As I understand, the provisions of this bill were incorporated into law in the last District of Columbia appropriation bill.

Mr. VINSON. Not all of them. There were some provisions made with reference to the police force, but the provisions contained in this bill have never been incorporated into law yet.

Mr. STAFFORD. The salary increase provisions were incorporated, just as carried in this bill?

Mr. VINSON. This bill goes further than that and regulates the length of time before the salaries become available, as provided for. I ask unanimous consent that the bill go over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks that the bill be passed over without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

DONATION OF POWDER-HOUSE LOT AT ST. AUGUSTINE, FLA.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 3699) to donate to the city of St. Augustine, Fla., for park purposes, the tract of land known as the powder-house lot.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. STAFFORD. I object.

Mr. SEARS. Will the gentleman withhold his objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. I will reserve it.

Mr. SEARS. I trust the gentleman will not object to the bill. This is a very small matter. The Government has owned 11 acres of this property since 1849 and 3½ acres since 1899. The property is lying there idle. This bill only asks that it be used by the city for park purposes in order that the people visiting St. Augustine may have a place of amusement. The bill provides that if they cease to use it for park purposes it reverts to the Government. The city will improve the property. There are no buildings on it and no improvements have been made. Recently there was a fire in the hospital at St. Augustine. They are planning to build a new one. If this land remains in the hands of the Government there will be no trouble, but if the Government should dispose of it, sell it to individuals, there will be no way for ingress or egress at the hospital. They are going to construct a new hospital, and the site will depend largely on the passage of this bill. I trust the gentleman from Wisconsin will not object.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I can not understand why the Government, owning property which it has ceased to use for governmental purposes, should donate it to any municipality. In the future there will be numerous instances where homes for disabled soldiers and Army posts are no longer needed for the purpose of the National Government, and if municipalities or other institutions desire them they should pay a reasonable value, just as they do to-day when the Government disposes of an old post-office building that is no longer required for the needs of the service. We dispose of those to municipalities at a reasonable value, and that should be the rule in this instance. I have no objection to the city of St. Augustine obtaining this property, but they should pay for it. Therefore I object.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Florida asks unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

SURPLUS UNALLOTTED LANDS, BLACKFEET INDIAN RESERVATION, MONT.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill S. 793, an act modifying and amending the act providing for the disposal of the surplus unallotted lands within the Blackfeet Indian Reservation, Mont.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. I object. I will ask to have it passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

AVIATION CORPS, WAR DEPARTMENT.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 17020) making an appropriation for the benefit of the Aviation Corps of the Department of War and repealing the provisions of certain acts relating to the acquisition of a site and the erection of a public building at Ripon, Wis.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The bill is on the Union Calendar.

Mr. STAFFORD. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin asks unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the sum of $75,000 be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the benefit of the Aviation Corps of the Department of War, and that the same be expended for such purpose under the direction of the Secretary of War.

SEC. 2. That so much of section 4 of the act approved March 4, 1913, entitled "An act to increase the limit of cost of certain public buildings; to authorize the enlargement, extension, remodeling, or improvement of certain public buildings; to authorize the erection and completion of public buildings; to authorize the purchase of sites for public buildings; and for other purposes," as reads as follows: "United States post office at Ripon, Wis., $75,000," and that so much of the section headed "Treasury Department, public buildings, sites, and construction" of the act approved July 29, 1914, entitled "An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year 1914 and for prior years, and for other purposes," as reads as follows: "Ripon, Wis., post office: For site and commencement, $10,400," be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the first section. Mr. Speaker, considerable publicity was given to the action of the municipality of Ripon a year ago at the time when the country was considering preparedness, by its action in asking that the authorization of $75,000 in the public building act providing for a post office in that city should be rescinded and the money utilized for preparedness purposes.

There we had a concrete instance of money being foisted by the National Government under the pork-barrel public-building bill policy upon a municipality which agreed that there was no need for it whatever. There are other instances which might be cited similar to that of Ripon, of needless authorizations. For my own home city the last public building act carried an appropriation of $100,000 for a post-office site. The Treasury officials that had the administration of the $100,000 did not know whether it was for the establishment of a new post office or whether it was for the purpose of establishing a terminal post office in connection with the railroad station, or what not. They were in the dark. There has been some agitation for years in Milwaukee for a west-side post office. Some years back, about 25 years ago, we erected a very good post-office building, somewhat on the confines of the business district, a location which was not very convenient to the business interests, but there it is.

It has been the policy of the Post Office Department to have but one post-office building in a municipality until the Postal Service reaches that stage when it is no longer large enough to take care of the needs of the Postal Service. It is the experience of persons connected with the postal administration that it is more economical to have postal affairs administered from one central office than it is to have it divided up in numerous stations proximate to the main office.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STAFFORD. In a moment. I am not opposed to Government public buildings. We have adopted the policy here during the last Congress of having special bills brought in for authorizations for public buildings. Those bills were considered upon their merits, and every bill—and as I recollect there have been some dozen of them reported from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds—has passed through this House, because there were many who realized that in order to check this abuse of pork in public-building legislation it was advisable to allow individual bills to come in and be considered on their merits, and if they had merit they would stand on their own feet. I now yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, that is very interesting. Had there been any bills introduced for these sites and appropriations, and if so, who introduced them?

Mr. STAFFORD. Yes; a bill had been introduced by my colleague, but this was during the term I was not here. Some years ago when this question was first agitated in the city of Milwaukee a committee called upon me, and in a frank statement I explained to that committee the situation as I had known postal conditions by reason of my service of six or eight years upon the Post Office Committee. I told them that the Congress had not voted for the establishment of any additional post office in any city where the present post office was able to meet the needs of the Postal Service save in two cities—in Chicago and New York—and then they were not post offices. In New York some 10 years ago we authorized in the Post Office appropriation act an item to rent space from the New York Central Railroad in property adjoining the Grand Central Station. We also, in that same bill, authorized the rental of space for a postal station in conjunction with the Pennsylvania Railroad Station. In Chicago we have had up for consideration, and rightly so, the need of additional ground for a large west side post office, because the present quarters are entirely inadequate to meet the postal needs. That matter has been receiving the attention of the Representatives from Chicago for a good time, and it is a project that has great merit.

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STAFFORD. Yes.

Mr. BENNET. I just want to state to the gentleman that he is mistaken in respect to the Pennsylvania station. We paid $1,700,000 for space from the surface of the earth extending down 20 feet and the right to forever support any building upon the ground beneath that. We did not rent anything.

Mr. STAFFORD. I was speaking from recollection.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has expired.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes more.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. STAFFORD. My impression was that we had authorized in the same bill the leasing of property in connection with the Grand Central and Pennsylvania stations. The gentleman, coming from New York, of course would know better than I.

Mr. BENNET. With reference to the Grand Central Station the gentleman is correct. With reference to the Pennsylvania station he was incorrect.

Mr. STAFFORD. I thank the gentleman for the information.

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Speaker, the history of this public-building program is very interesting, but what we want to know is this: What does the gentleman think about this Ripon bill? We would like to know what he wants done with the bill.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman who represents the district in which Ripon is located is not present. It has never been my good fortune to visit this little community.

Mr. HOWARD. Does the gentleman want this to go to the aviation corps or not?

Mr. STAFFORD. This community of Ripon is noted as a college town in the Middle West. I think we should take the municipality of Ripon at its word and accept their offer—that is, to the extent of doing away with the authorization for the building, but not to the extent of utilizing this money for aviation purposes, and for this reason: During the consideration of the legislative bill the representative of the Signal Corps Service stated that he considered there was a compulsion upon him to expend every dollar of the $13,000,000 that had been voted for aviation purposes in the Army appropriation bill last year. He could not find sufficient aeroplanes to be purchased to cover that enormous amount of $13,000,000, so he has adopted the policy, which to me seems to be rather extravagant and unbusinesslike, of offering to every manufacturing concern in the country that manufactures motors a contract to develop some kind of a motor that will be suitable for aeroplanes. I think that the head of any business corporation who was attempting to establish a great service like the aeroplane service would not distribute millions of dollars in establishing virtual experiment stations in every manufacturing plant throughout the country. I know of his doing that in two establishments in my own city, and perhaps it will result in some good, but I would say that if a business man were in charge of the expenditure of $13,000,000 in an industry which is in a more or less experimental state he would not distribute that in experimentation in every machine shop throughout the country, but would be willing to center the experimentation in a few plants.

But this distinguished officer who has charge of the expenditure of the $13,000,000 says that the Congress has called upon the War Department to expend that money, and they are making their best efforts in every way possible to expend the money. I do not think there is any justification for experimentation being carried on in every machine shop wherever they are willing to accept the Government money. In view of the fact that we voted $13,000,000 to the Aviation Service in the last Army act, I think we can well afford to save this $75,000 in this particular item, and I think the municipality of Ripon, in view of that appropriation having been made, since they made that offer, will be willing to have the $75,000 returned to the Public Treasury.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has again expired.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask for two minutes more.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. STAFFORD. Especially in view of the growing deficit, which is multiplied every day, and which is multiplying, I might say, at almost the rate of a hundred thousand dollars an hour while Congress is in session, I think that that community will approve having the $75,000 go into the General Treasury.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Does the gentleman propose to offer an amendment?

Mr. STAFFORD. I offered an amendment to the bill, striking out the language of section 1, so as to save this $75,000, which was needlessly authorized.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Appropriations I present the bill making appropriations for the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918 (H. Rept. No. 1228), and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill by title.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 19119) making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, and for other purposes.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I reserve all points of order on the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois reserves all points of order on the bill. The bill is ordered to be printed and referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

AVIATION CORPS OF WAR DEPARTMENT.

Mr. QUIN. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD] is in error about some portions of this matter. The Congressman representing that district, my colleague [Mr. REILLY], came before the Committee on Military Affairs with a petition representing the sentiments of the citizens of that city requesting that the money already provided for the establishment of this public building should be utilized in developing interest in and the equipping of an Aviation Corps. At that time, you remember—it was at the last session of Congress—the national-defense act was in process of passing this branch of the Congress. The citizenship of that city displayed more patriotism than any other city in the United States because, of all the different cities of this Republic that had buildings allotted and money authorized, this city of Wisconsin was the only one to ask that the money be used to develop the national-defense act.

Mr. BLACK. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. QUIN. I will.

Mr. BLACK. Was the establishment of this Aviation Corps requested by the Aviation Department of the War Department?

Mr. QUIN. I do not know what steps have been taken, except at that time the War Department agreed with the Committee on Military Affairs of this House that this would be a wise thing to do.

Mr. BLACK. With reference to this particular project?

Mr. QUIN. Yes, sir. They took into consideration none of them, of course.

Mr. BLACK. Does the gentleman have any communication from the War Department on that line?

Mr. QUIN. No; but I know what happened before the committee. The committee agreed to respond to the request of the citizens of Ripon and authorized the passage of this bill. It was reported out. I was requested by the chairman to report it to the House. The bill is here now——

Mr. SLOAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. QUIN. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. SLOAN. How much less money under this bill would be expended in Ripon if this measure is carried out than would have been expended if the old project had been carried out? I only wanted to find out how great a sacrifice this city is making.

Mr. QUIN. I will say to the gentleman from Nebraska if Congress were to expend this money for aviation instead of a public building that the citizenship of this city is going to do everything else. They themselves are going to develop the aviation business. They are going to furnish the young men who would risk their lives to go up in these flying machines.

Mr. SLOAN. I guess the gentleman did not understand me. If the original project for a building had been carried out, what would have been the amount of money expended on that project at Ripon?

Mr. QUIN. Exactly the same.

Mr. SLOAN. Seventy-five thousand dollars?

Mr. QUIN. That is my understanding of it. The public building was to be a $75,000 project.

Mr. SLOAN. So far as the amount of money expended in the city is concerned, there would not be any sacrifice to them?

Mr. QUIN. I contend it would, because this aviation business would call on their own purses. It would call on the resources of the citizenship of that community, and certainly it would take many of their young men to go into the business. You will remember there was great stress in this country because of the lack of aviators, and the evidence before the Committee on Military Affairs showed that we did not have any Aviation Corps worth speaking of; and the citizens of that community were willing to develop an aviation corps in that section of the country and to train men under the direction of the War Department, which seemed to the Committee on Military Affairs, at least, to be a very worthy project. The transfer of this $75,000 from a public building to the building up of an aviation corps not only seemed to be a most useful purpose, but a most patriotic one on the part of those citizens.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of asking some questions with regard to this bill. Although a member of the Committee on Military Affairs, I was not present at the time this bill was reported out, being at that time otherwise engaged.

Mr. QUIN. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. REILLY], who will answer the gentleman.

Mr. TILSON. I should like to ask where is there anything in this bill requiring that any amount of money or any part of this $75,000 be expended in Ripon, Wis.?

Mr. REILLY. Mr. Speaker, in answer to the gentleman I will say that the original appropriation for Ripon was $75,000. A year ago or two years ago——

Mr. MANN. The gentleman means the original authorization?

Mr. REILLY. The original authorization; the gentleman is correct. Two years ago the appropriation bill carried an appropriation for a site of $10,000. Now, that is really all that is appropriated for a public building in the city of Ripon, but in order that the whole matter would be wiped out and this money appropriated for aviation purposes, as the citizens desired, I simply drew the bill to cover the whole subject matter of present appropriations and the authorization of the bill as originally drawn.

Mr. TILSON. The gentleman's bill seems to wipe out the appropriation for the public building all right, but where in the bill does it require this same amount of money to be spent in Ripon, Wis.?

Mr. REILLY. It does not require any amount of money at all to be spent in Ripon. This bill not only wipes out the appropriation, but also repeals the law authorizing the appropriation, and provides that the said sum be devoted to aviation purposes.

Mr. TILSON. That is what it seems to do. Then, what becomes of the contention that the same amount of money is going to be spent in Ripon under this bill if it passes, as under the bill which it repeals?

Mr. REILLY. I will say, Mr. Speaker, that if this bill is passed there will not be any money spent in Ripon until the House authorizes another public building for that city.

Mr. TILSON. To what different or better purpose could this $75,000 here appropriated be put than if it were appropriated in the Army appropriation bill?

Mr. REILLY. The idea of that was as stated by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. QUIN]. At the time this bill was first introduced the House had passed the Army appropriation bill, and the appropriation for the Aviation Board was about $3,000,000, although the Senate afterwards increased the amount to $15,000,000. The people of Ripon were willing to wipe out their chances for a public building at the time and depend on the future, providing the money be specifically devoted to aviation purposes. In other words, they were anxious that the more pressing demands of the national defense be met and considered before the claims of their city for a public building.

Mr. TILSON. Then it is the desire to use this sum, in addition to the sum elsewhere appropriated, for aviation purposes, and not that it be specifically spent in Ripon, Wis.?

Mr. REILLY. Oh, no; there is no money to be spent in the city of Ripon under the terms of this bill.

Mr. BLACK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REILLY. Yes.

Mr. BLACK. Is it not a fact that the War Department got what they were asking for that purpose, anyway, in the regular Army appropriation bill?

Mr. REILLY. I believe the War Department did get under the final bill that was passed all the appropriation it asked for.

Mr. BLACK. Then, does the gentleman think it advisable to go ahead and supplement that with the $75,000?

Mr. REILLY. The action taken by the people of Ripon is unique and unusual, and I believe Congress can do nothing better than to commend such a patriotic move by the citizens of that place, and one way to commend such action is by passing this bill. A year ago this time, or a few months later, when there was a great demand on the Public Treasury for expensive appropriations for Army and Navy purposes, these people of Ripon, who thought at that time that they had $75,000 appropriated for a public building, were willing to waive their right to that appropriation and wipe out their public-building authorizaton bill in order that the sum thus appropriated might be devoted specifically to the public defense. Now, that is the reason for this bill.

I realize there has been a great deal of money appropriated for aviation purposes in both the Army and the Navy, and it might seem useless to pass this law under such circumstances. But the only reason I ask Congress to pass this bill is because of the fact that the citizens of Ripon have exemplified a patriotic spirit that ought to be commended.

The amendment of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD] would in a measure defeat the wishes of the citizens of Ripon. I hope that amendment will not prevail.

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Speaker, I hate very much to differ with my good friend from Wisconsin [Mr. REILLY] about anything, but this is the funniest situation I have ever seen in the House in the six years I have been here. We are dealing here with a $75,000 item like a lot of Fiji Islanders would deal with a basket full of clamshells. It seems that in 1913 we passed a public-building bill in which the citizens of Ripon, Wis., through their most able and insistent Representative, secured an appropriation of $75,000 for a public building. And then all at once everybody in this country decided that the hobgoblins were going to get them, and we went in and spent everything in sight and out of sight for the Army and Navy. And still there is more to come. We have staring us right square in the face, like a spotlight, a deficiency of $284,000,000 at the end of the next fiscal year.

It has to be raised from some source or other and by some method, and usually the method adopted by Congress heretofore has been to wring that sum out of the pockets of the folks back home. Rich and poor, high and low, all share that burden together.

Now, here is $75,000. This is a sort of deferred patriotism on the part of the citizens of Ripon. They are patriotic and I admire them for their patriotism; but they say, "We want to take $75,000 out of the Public Treasurry and spend it for aviation, and we are willing to wait a year, if you will do that, or two years, for another appropriation of $75,000 with which to erect a public building." I hope that the fairness and commonsense of this situation will present itself forcibly to you, gentlemen, and that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD] will prevail for this reason, that the Secretary of War, Mr. Baker, the man whose recommendation we are supposed to follow, says, in referring to this bill:

> The amount referred to ($75,000) can be put to very good use in the purchase of equipment for the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps, but the needs of the Aviation Section are fully covered in the appropriations recommended by the Senate committee in the act making appropriations for the support of the Army, fiscal year 1917; hence the passage of this present bill will be unnecessary.

He says of course it could be used; that they can use it. Of course, they can use it. They could use $10,000,000,000 if you would make it available, and I do not hesitate to say for a minute that they would use it under present public excitement. But here the Secretary of War says, "We do not need it; we are amply provided for." But here are the good citizens of Ripon in their excitement and in their patriotism asking for this when the Secretary of War is telling us that the War Department has no use for it.

Gentlemen, let us cover this $75,000 back into the Treasury. We are going to need it before this Congress is over. We are going to need it worse before the next Congress is over.

Mr. GORDON. Do not argue that with the Republicans. They are stuffing the appropriation bills so far as they can. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOWARD. Well, in my opinion no man is going to spend money indiscriminately without thinking of a day of reckoning. Whether he is a Republican or a Democrat, an Independent or a Socialist or a Progressive, or whatever he is, he is going to hear from it back home. You need not try to get around that. This is a wasteful, useless, foolish throwing away of $75,000 of the folks' money, and if you adopt the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD], that money goes back into the Treasury and is covered back there into the general fund of miscellaneous receipts, and the people get it back into their pockets, thanks be to the patriotic people of Ripon! [Applause.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, when the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds was making up the public-building bill which finally became a law in 1913, our distinguished friend, the gentleman from Wisconsin, made representations to that committee——

Mr. REILLY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN. Yes.

Mr. REILLY. I was not in Congress at that time. It was my predecessor that made the representations.

Mr. MANN. It was your predecessor that I had reference to, although I had not yet named the man. He made representations as to the great need of a post-office building at Ripon, Wis. The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds was finally forced to believe that the post-office business of the country could not properly be transacted, that there would be a failure in the dispatch and handling of post-office matters, if they did not construct a new building at Ripon, Wis. Evidently the people at Ripon were not familiar with the activities of their Member of Congress, because when they heard that a public building had been authorized at the sweet little town of Ripon, Wis., they looked aghast and said, "What? Is this Nation so rich that it throws money to the birds, and builds a building here where we do not need it?" And they were right. They did not need it.

In the consideration of the Army appropriation bill the Committee on Military Affairs brought in a bill providing for an appropriation of half a million dollars for aviation. The House increased the amount to $2,500,000, or some such amount. There was a considerable agitation of the subject in the country, and the patriotic people of Ripon, Wis., who knew that they did not need a public building there and who believed that the country did need an extension of its Aviation Service, gave to the press a good advertisement, one of the best that has ever gone along the wires, that Ripon, Wis., was willing to abandon the proposal for a public building there if the money could be turned over to the Aviation Service ,and our esteemed friend, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. REILLY], accepted the bluff and introduced a bill.

Well, it had a good effect. One of the great effects of that bill was that the Senate agreed to an amendment increasing the appropriation for the Aviation Service by over ten millions. That ought to satisfy Ripon. [Laughter.] The little, paltry $75,000 which they did not have, which never had been appropriated to them, which they were willing to give up the prospect of obtaining, was nothing compared with the $10,000,000 which was added by the Senate and which we agreed to, making a total appropriation of $13,000,000, where it had originally been proposed at half a million dollars—a reasonable increase of 2,600 per cent. [Laughter.]

Now, all the information we have in reference to the people of Ripon is that they think they do not need a public building. I agree with them. I am willing to accept their statement as to that. But how can they ask us now to appropriate money which never had been appropriated to them, in addition to the $13,000,000 which we appropriated last summer, and the Lord only knows how much it will be this winter, for the Aviation Service?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LLOYD). The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask for five minutes more.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes more. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MANN. It only cumbers up the books to make this appropriation in this way. It will probably lessen the amount that the Aviation Corps will receive, because if we take little side bites like this we will get less in the Army appropriation bill, where it belongs.

To me the most instructive lesson about this is not the great patriotism of the citizens of Ripon, Wis., although I admire their patriotism, but the fact that we were led before to authorize the appropriation of money for a public building there which was not needed. If it was needed it is not the business of the people of Ripon to interfere with it. They do not run the post office. They are not the ones primarily interested in the great handling of the mail. They are only a small part of that. The post-office building was not needed there, they say. Likewise we might say that now, with a deficit, according to present income and expected outlay, of $300,000,000 for the next fiscal year—we might say properly to a whole lot of these other small towns—and large ones, too—which do not need the expenditures of the public money for buildings there, that they may go without for a little while. And yet only on Saturday last the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Rules [Mr. HENRY] introduced a rule into the House to make in special order the consideration of the omnibus public-buildings bill—another raid on the Treasury.

Who is to pay the bill? Here is a city that is honest enough to say, "We do not need the money." Let us take them at their word and keep the money where we need it—in the Treasury—and keep it there until it is appropriated in the proper manner.

Mr. REILLY. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] has put the people of Ripon in a wrong light by making a statement which in my opinion the record does not justify. There is absolutely nothing in the petition filed in this House or in any statement made by any person entitled to speak for Ripon that the city of Ripon does not need a post office. That question was not raised. It was not considered by the citizens of Ripon when they asked Congress to take from them the appropriation already given for a public building. The point is this: The people of Ripon, regardless of the fact whether or not they need a post office, desire to make a sacrifice in the interest of governmental economy, and to contribute their mite toward the cutting down of national expenditures.

Now, it is true they only had $10,000 at that time. But if that petition had not come in the Secretary of the Treasury would have incorporated in the appropriation bill for last year a total sum necessary to complete the Ripon building, as is the regular course of proceeding in the Treasury Department; or, at least, if it had not been incorporated in the appropriation bill for last year it would have been in the bill for this year.

But now as regards the question of a bluff. I do not believe there is any ground for thinking that the people of Ripon were bluffing when they asked Congress to devote the funds intended for a building in their city to the national defense. They asked Congress to wipe out entirely all legislation for a public building in their city, and there is no question of a deferred patriotic act about it at all; because whether or not Ripon will get a public building in the future will depend entirely upon what future Congresses may wish to do regarding such a structure in that town. Mr. Speaker, while last year there was a very large sum appropriated for aviation purposes when this bill was introduced, the appropriations for this year for the Army and Navy have not yet been made, and I do not see that it is going to mix matters up, I do not see that it is going in any way to interfere with the development of the Aviation Service at this time to make the appropriation provided for in this bill. The situation as to this bill is most extraordinary; the citizens of a city of 5,000 people, with post-office receipts many times more than those of half the cities included in the public-building bill that will come before this Congress, have patriotism enough and self-sacrifice enough to say to Congress, "Take away our public building. We will not ask for any appropriation at this time, and we will allow the money to be spent for other and more pressing purposes." Such an idea in this day and age of raids on the Public Treasury is something that ought to receive the commendation of Congress and not the ridicule of Congressmen. It would be a great thing if other cities of this land, much smaller than Ripon, would come here and say, "We, too, will defer the pleasure of having a public building in view of the large expenditure needed for the national defense." If such were the case we would not have a public-building bill in this session of Congress.

Mr. TAGGART. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REILLY. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. TAGGART. What rent does the Government pay at Ripon?

Mr. REILLY. I do not know, but I do know that the city has a much larger population and postal receipts than many cities in the United States that have costly public buildings.

Mr. TAGGART. I did not mean to embarrass the gentleman at all——

Mr. REILLY. I do not remember just the amount of rent paid.

Mr. TAGGART. The rent paid might indicate that it would be a real economy for the Government to construct a building of its own.

Mr. REILLY. If you are governed by the question of economy, in the matter of constructing post offices, you will wipe out 90 per cent of the public buildings appropriated for in past Congresses.

Mr. SHERLEY. Will the gentleman yield for an inquiry?

Mr. REILLY. Yes.

Mr. SHERLEY. Why does the gentleman want to reappropriate the money for the Aviation Service?

Mr. REILLY. In answer to my colleague from Kentucky, I will simply say that I am endeavoring to carry out the wishes of the citizens of Ripon.

Mr. SHERLEY. Was not that at a time when there had not been appropriated the amount that was appropriated later? Last year we appropriated a little over $13,000,000 for aviation for the Army. I have just finished a hearing on the matter so far as it relates to fortifications, and this $75,000 carried in this bill is a drop in the bucket compared to what the department has on hand unexpended and what it is going to ask and probably receive from the Congress. Why muddy up the whole business with a little bit of an appropriation at this time, when it is not now needed and there is no reason for it?

Mr. REILLY. In answer to the gentleman I will say that the only excuse is the unique and commendable expression of public sacrifice on the part of the citizens of Ripon.

Mr. SHERLEY. I am willing to consent to the sacrifice and to keep the money in the Treasury, but I see no reason for an appropriation of this kind.

Mr. REILLY. In response to the gentleman, I will say that I am here to-day to present the wishes of the citizens of Ripon, and if the amendment of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD] is carried, as I trust it will not be, the bill should not pass, as it will not, in its amended form, express the complete wishes of the citizens of Ripon. I believe Congress can do nothing better at this time than to commend and put the stamp of its approval on the patriotic conduct of the citizens of Ripon in trying to curtail governmental expenditures in this day of enormous demands upon the Public Treasury.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD] to strike out section 1.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

Mr. REILLY. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the enacting clause of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wisconsin moves to strike out the enacting clause.

The question being taken, on a division (demanded by Mr. SHERLEY and others) there were—ayes 33, noes 49.

Accordingly the motion was rejected.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was accordingly read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question being taken, the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. MANN. I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. Evidently there is no quorum present.

Mr. BORLAND. I move a call of the House.

Mr. MANN. There will be an automatic call of the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill. Those in favor will say aye, those opposed no, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 229, nays 89, answered "present" 3, not voting 112, as follows:

Mr. BLACKMON. Mr. Speaker, I am paired with the gentleman from Missouri, Mr. DYER. I voted "aye." I wish to withdraw that vote and answer "present."

The name of Mr. BLACKMON was called, and he answered "Present," as above recorded.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

The doors were opened.

On motion of Mr. MANN, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the bill was passed was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LLOYD). The Clerk will report the next bill.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 14973) to amend an act entitled "An act relating to the liability of common carriers by railroad to their employees in certain cases," approved April 22, 1908, and amended April 5, 1910.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, I think I shall object to the bill.

Mr. TAGGART. Will the gentleman reserve his objection?

Mr. MANN. I have reserved it.

Mr. TAGGART. Mr. Speaker, this bill is simply to amend two sections of the employers' liability act of April 22, 1908. Under the act an employee who brings an action against a railway company for injuries received while in discharge of his duty will not be held guilty of contributory negligence if the railway company at the time was violating, as the act says, "any statute." The Supreme Court held in the Horton case, Two hundred and thirty-third United States, that that expression "any statute" relates only to any Federal statute, and the only amendment in that respect is to put in three words, the words "State or Federal," so that it will read: "The violation of any State or Federal statute."

The only other amendment of any importance is to leave out of the act the doctrine of the assumption of risk. An employee will not now be held to assume the risk of his employment if the railway company at the time of the injury was violating a statute, which the Supreme Court says must be a Federal statute. The amendment is to leave that entirely out and abolish the doctrine of the assumption of risk so that the defense of assumption of risk will not be available as against an action brought by an employee of a railroad company engaged in interstate commerce.

The only other amendment is a new section which simply provides that in any suit brought against a railway company that is engaged in interstate commerce it shall be presumed, prima facie, that the employee who brings the suit was at the time of the injury himself engaged in interstate commerce. It would be extremely difficult for an employee to prove that he himself might be engaged in interstate commerce. The new section puts the burden on the company to deny that the employee was engaged in interstate commerce.

So that the three points in difference in this bill and the act are first: Contributory negligence having been now partially abolished as a defense in this that it may diminish the amount of damages, will not be available at all as a defense if the railway company was violating a State or Federal statute. The second one is that the doctrine of the assumption of risk shall not be applied to any case where the employee brings suit for damages against a railroad company in interstate commerce. In short, as I said, it abolishes the doctrine of the assumption of risk which many authors have condemned and many jurists have denounced as cruel and inhuman.

The third one is simply to relieve the plaintiff of the burden of proving the character of the commerce he is engaged in, which in some cases might be so burdensome as to cost more than the case was worth, whereas the information is immediately available and well known to the railroad company.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I think I should fully agree with the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. TAGGART] and the committee in reference to the proposed addition to the statute which proposes to make it prima facie evidence that the carrier was engaged in interstate commerce when an injury occurred to an employee; but we have a law now that provides that if the railroads violate the act of Congress which provides for safety devices, and so forth, they are responsible wherever they injure one of their employees. It is thought now to add to that that if they violate a State law the same thing shall hold. I can not quite understand why we, having full power over the safety devices of the railroads, should say that we will punish the railroad company for violating a State law upon the subject. If there is additional legislation needed we can enact it. I do not think there ought to be one rule for a railroad employee in the State of Illinois, another in the State of Iowa, another in the State of Nebraska, and another in the State of Colorado simply because a railroad runs through those States, that rule fixed by us.

Mr. TAGGART. The liability, as the gentleman of course knows, is not and can not be founded on any State statute. The State statute simply may be introduced in evidence as showing that the railroad company violated its duty with respect to the safety of employees.

Mr. MANN. Not at all.

Mr. TAGGART. In accordance with the law of that State. For instance, we do not demand by Federal statute that a certain kind of track shall be maintained, and that it shall be up to a certain standard, but the State is at full liberty to insist upon a certain standard of safety and safety devices, and of tracks and machinery, and of inspection of machinery. If the railroad company violates that, why should it not be proper to go into the court with the statute and with proof that at the time the employee was injured the railroad company was disregarding the law of the State through which its train was passing, and that the employee had a right to rely on the fact that the law of that State would be scrupulously obeyed, and that he did not assume the risk of its violation?

Mr. MANN. He can do that now. There is nothing to prevent that. What the gentleman seeks to do is to make a technical violation of any State law upon the subject absolute proof of negligence on the part of the railroads—not prima facie, but conclusive.

Mr. TAGGART. I do not think the bill so reads.

Mr. MANN. The tendency is to centralize the legislation concerning railroads, because the roads run through a great number of different States, and the tendency is for Congress to assume the control over those matters where we have the jurisdiction. This bill seeks to relegate to the States the control which we do exercise and which we should exercise and probably should exercise to a greater degree than we do.

Mr. TAGGART. This does not stop Congress from going ahead and making any regulation it pleases with reference to interstate commerce, and, as the gentleman said, it does not interfere with the State making any regulation it pleases with respect to safety in that State and holding the railroad company responsible for it; but what did Congress mean when it said the violation "of any statute"? That was the old law.

Mr. MANN. It meant United States statute.

Mr. TAGGART. That is what the Supreme Court found.

Mr. MANN. That is what was meant when it was passed.

Mr. TAGGART. We are trying to make the meaning of Congress explicit.

Mr. MANN. It is explicit now.

Mr. TAGGART. It was not so understood evidently by those who voted for it.

Mr. MANN. I think it was fully understood by those who voted for it.

Mr. TAGGART. When a law says that the violation of any statute shall prevent a railroad company from making the defense of contributory negligence or assumption of risk, it seems to me any statute might be invoked and brought into court and shown to the court, even if it be a State statute. We passed a bill through the House here at the last session of Congress that fixed the measure of expenditures in elections in the different States of Members of the House and Senate according to the State statutes. This does not assume to legislate for any State.

Mr. MANN. No; this assumes to abandon the jurisdiction of Congress over these matters, and have a different rule in each of the 48 different States of the Union. I do not think it is the proper thing to do.

Mr. TAGGART. The gentleman, of course, remembers that that amendment that was enacted in 1910 gives the State court jurisdiction to administer that very statute?

Mr. MANN. Yes.

Mr. TAGGART. The State courts take judicial notice of the statutes of their own States, and the way we have it now a State court can not avoid judicial notice of the statute of its own State, and when it administers that statute what will it say if the railway company was violating a statute of the very State in which it is sitting? Of course, I do not wish to argue with the gentleman.

Mr. MANN. It seems to me the gentleman is arguing himself out of court.

Mr. TAGGART. We are trying to remedy the defect that the Supreme Court found in the statute and amend it.

Mr. MANN. I do not think that there is any such defect in the statute. I helped to pass a number of these safety-device bills, and the main purpose of putting this provision into the law was to force the railroad companies to adopt the safety appliance.

Mr. TAGGART. Leaving that out, has the gentleman any objection to that part of the statute which abolishes the assumption of risk?

Mr. MANN. Well, that is very much the same thing——

Mr. TAGGART. Suppose we take out the State statute feature, preserving the language of the statute almost as it is now, but leaving it so that the doctrine of the assumption of risk shall not hereafter apply?

Mr. MANN. Well, we have jurisdiction over matters over which Congress has authority. We have the authority to require the railroad companies to equip themselves with safety appliances. We have already abolished the assumption of risk where the damage occurs through the failure of the railroad companies to adopt the appliances which we have required. I do not think we have any further jurisdiction over that.

Mr. TAGGART. The assumption of risk is abolished now where a railroad company is violating a Federal statute of any kind at the time the employee is injured.

Mr. MANN. I understand; and I say the two propositions are similar.

Mr. TAGGART. Well, does the gentleman object or not object?

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois objects, and the bill is stricken from the calendar.

COMMUNITY FORUMS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 14819) to provide for the use of public-school buildings in the District of Columbia as community forums, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for five minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent——

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the request temporarily.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and the Clerk will read the bill. This bill is on the Union Calendar.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill may be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Missouri asks unanimous consent that this bill may be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, the Committee on the District of Columbia gave way the other day. I think the intention was to bring up this bill, which is an important measure, and I think it ought to be considered in the committee, and I therefore object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois objects.

Mr. LLOYD. Let it go over, then.

Mr. MANN. We have already given unanimous consent for the consideration of it.

Mr. OAKEY. Mr. Speaker, I would ask that it be passed over, then.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The House has already given unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

Mr. MANN. Objection has been made to the consideration of the bill in the House as in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. And it is in order to move that the House go into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering this bill.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 14816, with Mr. FOSTER in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering the bill the title of which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 14816) to provide for the use of public-school buildings in the District of Columbia as community forums, and for other purposes.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, upon written application so to do, signed by not less than 20 adult persons residing in the vicinity of any public school building in the District of Columbia, all of said persons being parents of children enrolled as pupils in said public school, the board of education shall define and fix the territorial limits within which adult persons must reside to entitle them to participate as members in the organization which may be formed, as hereinafter provided, to use said public school building as a community forum, and shall announce, through publication in one daily newspaper in the District of Columbia, the date and hour of a meeting to be held in said public school building, which date and hour shall be not less than one week nor more than two weeks after the filing of the application, and shall make all necessary arrangements and regulations for the comfort and convenience and good order of the assembly of adult persons for said meeting, and shall direct the superintendent of schools or the principal of the school in which the meeting is to be held to call the meeting to order and to serve as clerk until it shall have been decided by a majority of those present and, by residence in the territory described by the board of education, qualified to vote that the public school building is not to be used as a community forum, or until the organization of adult persons to use the public school building as a community forum shall have been properly constituted as hereinafter provided.

SEC. 2. That if the proposal to use the public school building as a community forum is approved at the meeting provided for in section 1, the adult persons, by residence in the territory described by the board of education qualified so to do may proceed to organize and elect necessary officers and prescribe and adopt by-laws and regulations for the conduct of the meetings of said community forum. The by-laws and regulations as adopted shall show that the primary object of the organization is public education through the open representation and orderly free discussion of public questions, and nothing contained in the by-laws and regulations shall limit the attendance or membership of adult persons otherwise than as provided in section 1. The by-laws and regulations shall authorize and provide for the principal of the school building or a person nominated by the principal to serve as executive secretary of the organization.

SEC. 3. That when an organization of adult persons shall have been formed and by-laws and regulations adopted, as provided in the preceding sections, it shall be the duty of the board of education to make all necessary arrangements and provisions for the weekly, biweekly, or monthly meetings of such organizations at such times as the organization may designate for its meetings. Amendments to the by-laws and regulations not in conflict with the provisions of section 2 of this act may be made from time to time as the organization may deem necessary. No public-school room shall be used under the provisions of this act during such hours as it is in use for the instruction of pupils, and the board of education may make such other regulations as it may deem necessary to protect the physical property from abuse.

SEC. 4. That whenever a public-school building shall have been established as a community forum under the provisions of this act, and upon request to the board of education so to do by the majority of the adult persons present and qualified to vote at any regular meeting, the said board shall designate such building as a community center for the organized training and recreation of the young people of the community, including such activities as may be requested by the said adult organization and approved by the said board, and shall make all appropriate and necessary arrangements for the convenient and proper use of the building for community center meetings and activities at such times as the said adult organization may request and the said board approve. The executive secretary provided for in section 2 of this act shall serve as director of community center meetings and activities and shall be responsible to the board of education for rendering this service. The said executive secretary shall be provided with two assistants, one male and one female, who shall under the said executive secretary be charged with organizing and directing the community center meetings and activities provided for in this section.

SEC. 5. That the executive secretary authorized by this act for each public-school building established and used as a community forum or as a community forum and community center under the provisions of this act shall be entitled to compensation at the rate of $4 for secretarial service rendered at and in connection with each meeting of such community forum and at the same rate for directoral service rendered at and in connection with each meeting of such community center, and the two assistants herein authorized for each building used as a community center shall receive for their services compensation at the rate of $2 for each meeting of such community center: Provided, That not more than $4 shall be paid any executive secretary, and not more than $2 shall be paid any assistant for services rendered under the provisions of this act in any one day, and that compensation shall be paid only for services actually rendered at and in connection with meetings of community forums and community centers.

SEC. 6. That it shall be the duty of the board of education to provide, out of appropriations of public funds authorized for the public schools of the District of Columbia, light, heat, janitor service, and such other incidental expenses as may be necessary to enable the comfortable and convenient use of public-school buildings as community forums and community centers under the provisions of this act; and hereafter the board of education shall include in its annual estimates of appropriations for the public schools such sum or sums as may be required for the payment of compensations and expenses authorized by this act. To provide until June 30, 1917, for the payment of expenses and compensations authorized by the act, including additional compensation for janitors and for extra janitor service when necessary, there is hereby appropriated the sum of $15,000, one-half out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated and one-half from the revenues of the District of Columbia.

SEC. 7. That all laws and parts of laws inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. OAKEY].

Mr. OAKEY. Mr. Chairman, I believe that this is a good bill and ought to become a law. Of course, it is readily seen it is simply another opportunity of education. I had the pleasure of hearing the distinguished Speaker of this House say the other night, quoting, I believe, Emerson, that America was another word for opportunity. This public-forum bill is intended to be written for a community opportunity, for a municipal opportunity. I believe, Mr. Chairman, that the forum of the cross-road grocery store, established in our fathers' time, was a great advantage to the education, enlightenment, and information of the various communities of our land. I believe that the old New England habit of town meetings was one of our greatest and best institutions, where the people of each community could assemble and discuss their difficulties, their troubles, and their problems. If there is any place, it seems to me, in America where such an institution as proposed by this bill would be of great advantage this is the place, this is the municipality, this is the community. We are spending a great deal of money. We are giving a great deal of thought, and I believe wisely, toward making this Capital City of our Republic worthy of a congregation of 100,000,000 people. We are endeavoring to beautify it in every possible way, to render it a monument not only of beauty but in every way fitting for our great Capital home. Naturally many public questions originate in the Capital City, naturally such a city is inhabited, at least a large part of the time, by men and women who inaugurate great public questions, institute great plans for the welfare and consideration of our people. This bill, my colleagues, simply asks that under proper organization, under proper restriction, the men and women of Washington shall have the opportunity to use their schoolhouses for public education, for public instruction, to get together and consider the welfare, the well-being, and the uplift, if you please, of each community. I believe that not only in Washington, but in every community of America such a thing, properly restricted and handled, can not help but advance the public welfare. I hope this bill will pass.

Mr. FOCHT. I would like to ask the gentleman a question before he sits down.

Mr. OAKEY. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. FOCHT. I would like to inquire, with a view to the enlightenment of the House, as to what restriction there is with reference to the use of the public schools on Sunday for these forum meetings?

Mr. OAKEY. I do not think the question of Sunday is embodied in the bill at all.

Mr. FOCHT. Then they would be open for use on Sunday afternoons for various political meetings and other entertainments as might be permitted to be held there?

Mr. OAKEY. Under the restrictions of the organization of the community which would consider that. Of course they would not be open for political meetings on Sunday.

Mr. FOCHT. They could do so, as they have in New York and elsewhere, and up in some New England States, where they have had riots on Sunday afternoons.

Mr. OAKEY. I know of no New England State that has had a community forum where political matters are considered on Sunday.

Mr. FOCHT. I could bring you an account of a riot that occurred up there within the year on Sunday, which was thoroughly discussed in the committee meeting, although the gentleman may not have been present. Would you object to having this bill amended so it would exclude Sunday?

Mr. OAKEY. I certainly would not.

Mr. FOCHT. You do not object to it?

Mr. OAKEY. I do not.

Mr. FOCHT. Would the chairman of the District Committee object to excluding Sunday?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Yes; I would; because I think there are many questions which can be discussed on Sunday without violating the sanctity of that day, and the limitations in the bill are ample.

Mr. FOCHT. You heard the protest before the committee of religious and other bodies against having the schools opened up for public use. You were there, and are the chairman, and therefore you know that there is a strong sentiment against it. Consequently, I feel constrained to say that I shall have to oppose the bill unless you restrict it in the manner in which I have indicated.

Mr. OAKEY. It would be very unfortunate to have the gentleman from Pennsylvania oppose it; but, of course, we have to face such calamities. [Laughter.] He quotes New England, and seems to be familiar with that section. I remember very well only a short time ago when he was trying to illustrate to the House how difficult it was to find in some communities people who spoke the English language, and he was unfortunate enough to cite the city of New Haven, when I told him that I had direct information that they still spoke English in Yale University. And now he cites New England as holding public riots on Sunday. I have lived there for some time and I have never heard of it. My friends, I believe that the New England town meeting was a great institution, simple and plain as was its conduct, where as neighbors sometimes, as political foes at other times, religiously opposed, we got together and discussed our public problems, our public questions, to the enlightenment and advancement of each community.

Mr. MAPES. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OAKEY. I certainly will yield to my colleague on the committee. However, first permit me to state that the chairman calls my attention to section 4, which explicitly states:

The said board shall designate such building as a community center for the organized training and recreation of the young people of the community, including such activities as may be requested by the said adult organization and approved by the said board, and shall make all appropriate and necessary arrangements for the convenient and proper use of the building for community-center meetings and activities at such times as the said adult organization may request and the said board approve.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. And that leaves it under the control of the board?

Mr. OAKEY. That leaves it under the control of the board as to the character of the meetings and the days on which they shall be held.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Chairman, that leaves it to the board, as I understand it, with reference to its use as a community center, not as a community forum. As a community forum it is under the control of the organization; as a community center it is under the control of the board.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. That is true.

Mr. MAPES. The only change in this bill, then, over the operation under the present law, which was passed March 4, 1915, is to authorize communities to open the buildings on Sunday, is it not?

Mr. OAKEY. Oh, no. It is the right of this community organization, when the conditions of the bill are complied with, to insist upon the opening of these schools for regularly organized meetings of this association. It is not whether it is Sunday or Saturday night.

Mr. MAPES. To carry out the suggestion, or the thought, perhaps, of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FOCHT], on March 4, 1915, a law was enacted and approved authorizing the board of education to open the school buildings for certain purposes, and those buildings have been opened by the board of education upon the request of people of different communities for different purposes universally, except in the one refusal to open the buildings on Sunday. Is not that correct?

Mr. OAKEY. I am not informed as to the correctness of that statement. I am perfectly surprised if it is so, because in my experience and thought upon the subject the Sunday question has not been proposed in any way whatsoever. This bill is to give a community forum, under proper organization and restriction, the right to use these buildings for educational, sanitary, and helpful purposes.

Mr. MAPES. I will say to the gentleman that that was the testimony before the committee, but perhaps he was not there at that particular time.

Mr. WALSH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OAKEY. Yes. I am delighted to yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. WALSH. I would like to ask the gentleman from Connecticut if his committee received any information as to the nature and kind of public questions which would be discussed for the purpose of public education in these gatherings? What sort of questions will these people who want to inaugurate this system want to discuss?

Mr. LLOYD. May I answer the question?

Mr. OAKEY. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. LLOYD] will answer the question.

Mr. LLOYD. The testimony before the committee was that it was the purpose to use them for anything they desired, and they can have any speakers they choose and speak on any kind of subject. It is an open forum for the discussion of any public question.

Mr. FOCHT. At any day?

Mr. LLOYD. At any day.

Mr. WALSH. Whether educational or otherwise?

Mr. LLOYD. Yes, sir.

Mr. OAKEY. Of course, the organization has it under control. They will not invite them.

Mr. WALSH. How can you keep them out, according to the provisions of section 2?

Mr. MEEKER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. OAKEY. I can not yield to two men at the same time.

Mr. MEEKER. Does the gentleman believe that the right of free speech still exists in America?

Mr. OAKEY. I hope so.

Mr. MEEKER. And so do I.

Mr. OAKEY. And I hope that our public schools are the places for that.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OAKEY. Yes.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Of course, the gentleman is familiar with the agitation for these forums in the various school centers of the District. Does not the gentleman know that the experiment in holding these forums during the last fiscal year and during the last session of Congress showed that they were all held on Sunday afternoon, and that there has not been one projected for any other day in the week? Or in other words, that the distinct purpose of those having this legislation in charge is to have these meetings held on Sundays?

Mr. OAKEY. I do not think that that is true, sir. I think that they were held for other purposes.

Mr. CROSSER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OAKEY. Yes.

Mr. CROSSER. The fact is, if the gentleman from North Carolina will permit me——

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I am seeking information.

Mr. CROSSER. I have spoken at these meetings on several days in the week other than Sunday, and the chairman of the Committee on the District of Columbia has attended them.

Mr. OAKEY. The distinct purpose, as brought out by those interested in education in Washington—many of them connected with the schools—was the exact opposite of that—that they were to be used every day in the week and for educational purposes entirely.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I did not catch all the answer that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. CROSSER] gave to my question, that he addressed these forum meetings on other days than Sunday, and so did the chairman of the District of Columbia Committee. Perhaps those meetings were held on those days in deference to the views of other gentlemen; but others of us were invited and did address them on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I have never addressed one, but I have attended them.

Mr. KING. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OAKEY. Yes.

Mr. KING. I would like to ask the gentleman if there was any particular activity on the part of the single land taxers in the District of Columbia in behalf of these forums before the committee?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I can answer the question for the gentleman from Connecticut and say the subject was not mentioned, so far as I can recall.

Mr. OAKEY. It may be that the single land taxers will get in and meet in them; probably the prohibitionists will; probably the Socialists will. Possibly our colleague, Brother LONDON, will address Socialist meetings. But, my friends, these things are proposed under this bill to be under proper restriction of the local organization, and they can not help but redound to the enlightenment and advancement of the best thought of this community.

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Does the gentleman from Ohio desire me to yield to him?

Mr. EMERSON. Yes. I would like to have 10 minutes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman 10 minutes.

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Chairman, at the outset I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent to revise and extend his remarks. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the House, in support of the resolutions that I have introduced into this House I now desire to address the House and to call the attention of the Members to the most serious problem that now confronts the American people.

THE HIGH COST OF LIVING.

Four years ago the Democratic Party in its platform called the attention of the country to the fact that the high cost of living was a serious problem in every American home.

If it was a serious problem then, how much more serious it is now. In fact, Mr. High Cost of Living is holding sway now as he never did before. The prices of food products have advanced in many instances more than 50 per cent over what they were four years ago. With our great rural population migrating to the cities it is going to be a very serious problem in the future, unless the Congress of the United States does something to relieve the situation.

After a careful study of the situation, I believe there are several causes that enter into our present unfortunate situation as regards food prices:

First. Cold-storage warehouses, that receive and hold the necessary food products for higher prices, thus keeping these products away from the market. Some legislation should be enacted by Congress to render this impossible. Laws should be enacted that would require these cold-storage warehouses to report to the Government the time of receiving food products; also the kind of food products received and the quantity. Laws should be enacted that would prevent the holding of these necessary food products for a long period of time, thus forcing the placing of such food products upon the market after holding them for a reasonable time.

Second. Large quantities of wheat and other food products are now optioned and held for foreign markets. These food products are now in warehouses in this country and subject to the laws of this Nation. It is the duty of Congress first to use these food products for the benefit of the people of this country. The first duty of the Government of the United States is to the people of the United States, and not to some foreign government or people.

Third. The wrong ideal is held up to the American youth.

The ideal that is held up to the American school boy and girl is the glare of the lights of the great city.

The American schoolgirl has ambitions to shine in the social world.

The American schoolboy has ambitions to shine in the great financial world.

There should be some encouragement by Congress, and even by the legislatures of the several States, to encourage the "back-to-the-farm" idea.

The idea of most men who have lived in the city for many years is to go back on the farm. I have as many demands for information concerning agricultural subjects from people who live in the large city of Cleveland as I do from people who live in the country districts.

If this idea prevails in the later years of our lives, why should it not be encouraged in the youth?

I strongly favor the use of the public lands for this purpose. Take, for instance, persons suffering with lung trouble, who are a burden and expense to society, the Government should provide some place in some western State where the climate is favorable for these unfortunate people to go, and where they could work out of doors and not only improve their health but actually be a help to society.

Make them producers instead of consumers.

The poorer classes the Government should aid by establishing them in homes, with a parcel of land to work.

Immigrants should be encouraged to go to the farm instead of remaining in the cities that are now overcrowded.

One good thing this Congress will do is to pass the vocational-education bill, and I hope that agriculture in its higher and more remunerative form will be encouraged.

More money is made upon the farm, if it is managed right, than is made by over 90 per cent of the people who live in the city.

Fourth. The real great cause of the high cost of living can be settled when we enact legislation concerning the subject of transportation, and I refer to the subject of the transportation of food products. There are in parts of the United States thousands of bushels of apples that are rotting on the ground and never will reach the market. There are thousands of bushels of potatoes that will never reach the market. Why is this necessary? Why is it possible with the prices of potatoes and apples as high as they are?

As an illustration, I desire to compare the price of eggs the same month and year according to the report of labor statistics in some of our large cities.

January, 1915:	Cents.
Baltimore	30
Boston	50
Chicago	37
El Paso	35
Salt Lake City	45
Washington	50
Seattle	32
Newark, N. J.	60
New Haven	32
New York	56
Los Angeles	32
Louisville	30
Kansas City	25

These figures are per dozen.

I also wish to submit the price of potatoes, in accordance with the same report in January, 1915, in different sections of the United States:

North Atlantic division	$0.84
South Atlantic division	.91
North Central division	.78
South Central division	.93
Western division	1.40
United States	.91

These figures show conclusively that transportation could at least go a long way in solving the high cost of living.

Congress must enact some legislation making it possible for the man in the city to send out into the country and have his food products shipped in to him by parcel post.

I wish to submit, at this point, a letter from Frank S. Krause, of Cleveland, Ohio, who has studied this question as much as any person in this country.

Letter from Frank S. Krause, of Cleveland, Ohio:

NOVEMBER 24, 1916.

Congressman EMERSON, Washington, D. C.

DEAR EMERSON: I started on the 22d to dictate a letter covering the contents of this one, but press of business prevented its going forward until now.

On the evening of the 22d we formed what I consider the nucleus to a national campaign for a remedy of the conditions of prices and supply of necessities. It took the form of an organization to be known as the Government Control of Necessities Club, and its officers are as follows:

Frank S. Krause, president; J. W. Ruthenberg, vice president; H. S. Wood, director; T. J. Jackman, director; Grover Hasford, legal adviser.

The name of the club sets forth clearly its object, and it is our belief that the greatest present benefit possible to the largest number of people must come from clear-headed application by the Government. It covers not alone the control of cold storage and other store houses, but necessities in general.

Our idea also embodies Government assistance in districts where overwhelming crops happen by supplying packages and help so that every iota may reach some district where they were less fortunate.

Government control of cold-storage food warehouses means the gaining of the confidence of the farmer, and they will soon learn as individuals or as groups to pack there at that time unmarketable at a profit products direct to the storage house, receiving a certificate therefor, which would enable them to make sales when the market is right.

Under these conditions everything would be saved and a normal price maintained. The advantage to the Government itself would be that any time the President of the United States desired to know just what necessities we possess he could do so from a central point at Washington or elsewhere by getting a report from his men in charge. These men in a way would for the Government be the builders of the greatest foundation for preparedness that ever was thought of, for with plenty upon which to subsist the matter of other preparations is very simple.

I hope you get my idea, and it is broadly this: It will do away with foodstuff gambling, protect the people against uneatable and unhealthy food; it will equalize by distribution and give equal chance to everyone to get his share; and, above all, it will carry out the dream of the inventor, Charles Tellier, that everything good of the world could be had everywhere in the world no matter where produced. Pages might be covered with the advantage of this move to the people, but I think the aforegoing is sufficient to create thought.

I would be pleased to keep you informed from time to time and trust you will put your best efforts forward at Washington along this line.

Respectfully, yours,

FRANK S. KRAUSE.

Cooperation between the producer and the consumer should be encouraged by the Government in every way possible.

Every agency of the Government should be used to bring the producer and consumer more closely together.

The market house does this to a great extent, but all farmers can not go to market. Those who live near the market can easily haul their produce to market; but the farmer who lives a long way from the market, and especially where the roads are bad most of the year, can not so easily bring his produce directly to the consumer. Good roads have done a great deal to bring the farmer and city man more closely in touch with each other.

But the greatest agency the Government has to bring these remote farmers in touch with the consumer in the city is our Parcel Post System.

A system could be worked out whereby the city man could write the country postmaster and be placed in touch with a list of farmers whose names have been left with the postmaster who have produce to sell. Newspapers could be used for this purpose. In a short time communication would be easy between the people in the city and those in the country.

The middle man, who gets the larger part of the profit, would soon be a relic of other days, as things would soon adjust themselves along these lines.

The zone system could be enlarged or abolished, the cost of transporting could be reduced, and the size of the parcel increased.

I wish at this point to submit a short article from the Alfalfa Journal on the egg situation:

$2,500,000 EGG LOSS.

From a quarter to half of the eggs laid in the Middle West during the summer time are a total loss, amounting to $2,500,000 loss for the State of Missouri alone. This may easily be saved under ordinary farm conditions, according to the test recently made at the Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station. Eggs should be given practically as good care and careful marketing as butter, although they do not show the effects of poor handling quite as plainly.

Also a report on the condition of the cattle in this country:

[From report issued by the United States Secretary of Agriculture.]

Year.	Number of cattle per 100 population.	Number of sheep per 100 population.	Number of swine per 100 population.	Pounds fresh beef exported by United States.	Pounds fresh beef imported by United States.	Number of cattle lost by disease and exposure.

1909	13,611,422	6,515,976	91.7	8.2

If a foreign foe had landed upon our soil, the Government would easily and hastily enact legislation to resist their advance. Why should not the Government, which is the people, now enact legislation to prevent this continued increase of the high cost of living? And here I desire to submit a report of the Bureau of Labor Statistics on the subject of the increase in food prices in the last five years.

The following table shows the average money prices and the relative prices of the same 26 articles on June 15 of each year from 1912 to 1916:

Average money retail prices and relative retail prices of food on June 15 of each year, 1912 to 1916.

[The relative price shows the per cent that the average price on the 15th of June in each year was of the average price of the year 1915.]

A comparison of prices on June 15 from year to year shows an increase in the price of all food combined of 14 per cent from June 15, 1912, to June 15, 1916. There was approximately no change from June 15, 1912, to June 15, 1913; 2 per cent from June 15, 1913, to June 15, 1914; no change from June 15, 1914, to June 15, 1915; and a jump of 11 per cent from June 15, 1915, to June 15, 1916.

Potatoes declined 2 per cent from June 15, 1912, to June 15, 1916, being the only article which was not higher on June 15, 1916, than on the same date five years earlier. Flour, corn meal, prunes, and coffee were the only articles lower in price on June 15, 1916, than on the same date one year earlier, although corn meal and coffee were but slightly lower.

Meats advanced in the year from June 15, 1915, to June 15, 1916, from 7 per cent for bacon to 16 per cent for hens. Other articles which made marked advances during this period were beans, 27 per cent; sugar, 26 per cent; onions, 35 per cent; and potatoes, 68 per cent.

A nation that does not protect its people in their food supply can not expect the people to protect it in the time of danger. Underfed nations are always weak nations, and this Nation should see at least that the younger generation that is now growing up and will soon take our places is well fed, well clothed, and well housed. This is especially true if we are to hold our heads erect among the nations of the earth.

But food products are not the only articles that have advanced, but the price of coal has also advanced.

I wish to read a short article on this subject from the Public:

While a shortage in supply and consequent high prices of some things may be explained by the European war, the explanation does not apply to others. The war could not have affected the coal situation, for instance. Coal is not imported from Europe nor exported to any great extent. The coal fields are in the United States. A shortage in supply means some interference either with work at the mines or with transportation. Monopolization of coal fields and means of transportation makes such interference possible. Upon monopoly must be placed the responsibility for the suffering, inconvenience, and loss sure to result from the high price of coal.

I hope and trust that the Members of this House, who are the representatives of all the people of the United States, will see that some legislation is enacted at this session of Congress to relieve the present situation, so that the reduction of prices of food products, as far as the Government is concerned, may be made possible. I wish here to submit a letter sent out by the National Live Stock Shippers' Protective League, which shows that they at least realize what effect transportation has on the prices of meat:

NATIONAL LIVE STOCK SHIPPERS' PROTECTIVE LEAGUE,
Union Stock Yards, Chicago.

HONORABLE SIR: I hand you herewith copy of resolution that was passed at the meeting of the executive committee of the National Live Stock Shippers' Protective League held in Chicago November 14, 1916.

It is evident to our association that there is grave danger to the live-stock industry should the power of regulating all rates be concentrated in the hands of the Federal commission. This was shown conclusively in the decision of the Shreveport case, in which, as you know, the Interstate Commerce Commission ordered intrastate rates on live stock increased to the level of interstate rates, which, in that case, would result in the rates being higher than the carriers had themselves proposed.

The injustice of this decision is evident, inasmuch as the movement of live stock to Shreveport from Texas is practically nil and should not, in our estimation, govern the enormous movement of live stock within the State of Texas. The same situation may exist at other places.

It is therefore our hope, and we urge upon you as representative of your people, especially those interested in the movement of live stock and its products, that a law be enacted so as to define and limit the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission so as not to interfere with the rates on intrastate commerce.

Respectfully,
NATIONAL LIVE STOCK SHIPPERS' PROTECTIVE LEAGUE,
EDWARD F. KEEFER, Secretary.

I wish to conclude my remarks by reading an article on the price of butter:

[From the World, Tuesday, Dec. 5, 1916.]

THREE ILLINOIS MEN EVERY WEEK SET PRICE OF BUTTER FOR THE UNITED STATES—CAREFULLY PROTECTED BY LEGAL SAFEGUARDS, ON ONE SALE OF 25 TUBS OF 60 POUNDS EACH WEEKLY, THEY ESTABLISH THE AVERAGE ANNUAL COST OF 60,000,000 POUNDS OF THE PRODUCT VALUED AT $18,000,000, APPROXIMATELY—PREMIUM PAID BY A FEW CHICAGO DEALERS, BASED ON THE ELGIN STANDARD, TO A FEW CREAMERIES THE BANE OF THE TRADE, SAYS REFORM MEMBER OF THE ELGIN BOARD.

[The World presents below the second installment of the results of its investigation of the food situation in the West, the first installment of which, dealing with speculation in grains and meats in Chicago, was published yesterday. This second chapter shows that three men in weekly sessions at Elgin, Ill., fix the basic price of butter throughout the United States. It shows also that these quotations are based on a single sale of 25 tubs of butter each containing 60 pounds. By this system is fixed the average yearly price for the annual sales of 60,000,000 pounds of butter having a wholesale valuation of approximately $18,000,000.]

[By S. S. Fontaine.]

CHICAGO, December 4.

Three men travel every Saturday morning from Chicago to Elgin, Ill., 39 miles on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway. There at noon in the assembly room of the Elgin Board of Trade they fix the weekly quotation for Elgin creamery butter. The telegraph and cable carry their decree to every merchandising center in the country and to every market in the civilized world to which the export trade of the country extends, and it forms the basic prices for all grades of table butter until these food arbiters meet again.

CAREFULLY HEDGED ABOUT TO AVOID COLLISION WITH LAW.

So carefully have these men hedged themselves about with legal safeguards that investigators of the Department of Justice and representatives of the United States district attorney at Chicago, who have for weeks maintained a close espionage upon their deliberations and the system by which they arrive at their valuations, have been unable so far to find any evidence that there has been any violation of the Sherman antitrust law.

The investigation, moreover, has revealed no legal proof apparently that there has not been observed to the letter the permanent injunction handed down April 28, 1914, by United States District Judge K. M. Landis in the suit of the Government against the Elgin Board of Trade prohibiting that institution—

"From appointing or authorizing the appointment of any officer, agent, or committee of said Elgin Board of Trade, whether of one or more persons, to fix or suggest the price of butter;

"From maintaining a quotation committee or any other committee or agency of said Elgin Board of Trade or its membership which shall fix a price or prices of butter;

"From quoting or publishing any price or prices of butter purporting to be 'market prices,' 'Elgin prices,' or the prices obtaining upon the board of said defendant corporation, unless and except such prices be those which have actually obtained upon said board in bona fide sales of butter.

"From fixing or determining by contract, combination, or agreement the bids or offers which members of said Elgin Board of Trade shall make with respect to purchases or sales of butter in advance of the making of said bids or offers.

OTHER PROHIBITIONS.

"From requiring, compelling, or demanding by board rule, by-law, or otherwise that the members of said Elgin Board of Trade use the quotations or prices of butter which are made by means of transactions upon said Elgin Board of Trade as a basic price in contracts for the purchase or sale of butter in interstate commerce.

"From making fictitious or washed or pretended sales or purchases of butter for the purpose of misleading any person or persons as to the actual price at which butter is being sold upon said Elgin Board of Trade, or which are intended to be used in any way as a basis for the making of quotations of prices on said Elgin Board of Trade.

"From making or participating in or knowingly permitting on said Elgin Board of Trade at any time any sale or purchase of butter that is not a bona fide transaction in which the seller in good faith intends to deliver the commodity and the purchaser in good faith intends to accept and pay therefor.

"From making or participating in or knowingly permitting to be made any sale or purchase of butter on said Elgin Board of Trade in pursuance of any combination or conspiracy by or between any two or more persons or corporations to raise or lower or affect the price of butter on said Elgin Board of Trade, and thereby to raise or lower or affect the price of butter in interstate commerce.

"From making or causing to be made any offer to buy or sell butter on said Elgin Board of Trade at a price which has been agreed upon by any two or more of the members of said board or by any one or more of said members and any other person or persons prior to the making of said offer."

BOARD REORGANIZED.

After the issuance of this decree the entire official personnel of the board was changed at the succeeding annual election, Charles H. Potter of the reform element replacing as president John Newman, who had held that position for nearly a quarter of a century; Frederick Grell supplanting G. H. Gurler as vice president, and W. W. Sherwin and L. L. Taylor succeeding as treasurer and secretary J. P. Mason and Colwin W. Brown, respectively. These men, with the addition of E. C. Hawley and Frederick R. Moles, have since formed the board of directors.

Singularly enough, it was almost wholly through the efforts of and information furnished by Frederick R. Moles, the last mentioned of these men, with whom an interview is given below, that the Government was able to obtain the evidence of collusion in price fixing by which it won its suit.

In obedience to the injunction the Elgin Board of Trade amended its charter and abolished its price committee, substituting therefor the present system, by which an informal committee of members, consisting of three or more—three being necessary for a quorum—meet every week and fix the quotation on an actual sale of butter. These members volunteer for the task. In theory the committee may embrace the entire membership of the board, consisting of 275 men—creamery men, agents, brokers, and dealers—but in practice it consists generally of the three men, seldom the same, who journey each week from Chicago for their self-appointed task.

Preparatory to their deliberations the secretary of the Elgin board of trade posts on the call board the amount of butter offered for sale at a minimum price and the amount for which there is a bid at the maximum price. A transaction is invariably effected at a level between these prices satisfactory to the producer and the bidder, and this sale, apparently bona fide, so far as the observations of the Federal authorities go, constitutes the basis upon which every wholesale and retail dealer in every city and every hamlet in the country fixes the price upon which butter goes into consumption. Elgin creamery butter, extra, grading at least 93 per cent of a possible 100 per cent of flavor, body, color, salt, and packing. This being the standard from which all other creamery products are graded downward from the following scale, which is a sample report of an Elgin board of trade inspector, giving the minimum requirements of Elgin creamery extra.

THE ELGIN BOARD OF TRADE,
BUTTER INSPECTOR'S DEPARTMENT,
Elgin, Ill.

I hereby certify that I have inspected the following lot of butter, with the following result:

Flavor	45 per cent less 2	43 points
Body	25 per cent less 2	23 points
Color	15 per cent less 1	14 points
Salt	10 per cent less 1	9 points
Package	5 per cent less 1	4 points
Totals	100 per cent	93 points

APPARENTLY MEETS REQUIREMENTS.

To the extent as outlined above the system now in use meets apparently all the requirements of the law and the injunction, but in practice the sale of 25 tubs, each containing a maximum of 60 pounds, fixes the price week in and week out for the 60,000,000 pounds of so-called Elgin creamery butter, having a wholesale valuation of $18,000,000, annually produced, according to the records of the Elgin board of trade—and all other grades as well.

That this investigation may be eminently fair, the representative of the World obtained the records of the weekly sales on the board during the season of the maximum butter production in the Elgin district—June and July. During these two months of last summer the greatest number of sales made at the weekly price-fixing session, were as follows:

Saturday, June 17	175 tubs
Saturday, July 1	250 tubs
Saturday, July 8	275 tubs
Saturday, July 15	175 tubs

So taking this total, reached in a season when the creamery men of the Elgin district send their maximum output to the market, only 875 tubs passed through the price-fixing medium of the board of trade, while the minimum total of receipts in Chicago is about 124,000 tubs a month.

During October last the maximum weekly sales on the Elgin board of trade exceeded 25 tubs only once, when on Saturday, October 28, the aggregate amount contracted for on the call board was 50 tubs.

Here we have the main objection to the system in practice at Elgin, assuming that there is no collusion whatever between any of the parties in interest in these small weekly sales. It will be seen that, taking them at their maximum, they constitute an infinitesimal unit upon which to fix the price of millions of pounds of butter that go into annual consumption.

HOW THE METHOD CHANGED.

Gradually abuses crept into the method of fixing the quotations until the Government found by its investigation that these prices were being arbitrarily arranged and that they bore only a remote relation to the operations of the law of supply and demand. Then came the injunction.

"The greatest detriment to the butter trade in general and the bane of all honest dealers," said Mr. Moles yesterday to the World representative, "is the practice of a few Chicago dealers of paying premiums to a few creameries which have exceptional facilities for manufacturing butter and shipping it to market. This premium, based on the Elgin standard, really fixes the basis for the general buying of cream and butter fat throughout the United States.

"The reason why this premium paying should be prohibited is that it is misleading to the butter consumer in general and unfair to 95 per cent of the butter producers. The quotations thus fixed are too high for the quality produced in general.

"As a matter of fact, the whole system is wrong. To fairly establish a market value all of the butter actually coming into the market daily should be reported in pounds or tubs at prices it is actually sold for.

"For instance, the quotation at the week's close for creamery extra is 42½ cents and the daily receipts in Chicago were approximately 6,000 tubs. A very small percentage of this grades an extra, and remittance upon that premium basis is actually made to only a few creameries, but the price thereof actually establishes the value for butter throughout the country. This causes an artificial price to the consumer, because he is led to believe that all good table butter is worth the maximum quotation, whereas 95 per cent of it is actually selling in the wholesale trade below that price. The actual quotations to-day in the trade, but not published for the consumer, for as good butter as most people ever have on their tables range from 35 to 42 cents a pound."

Mr. DILLON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EMERSON. Yes.

Mr. DILLON. Has the gentleman any suggestion of remedies?

Mr. EMERSON. My suggestion is that we use the parcel-post system as a foundation. The Government should use every agency in its power to help the people of this country in reducing this present high cost of living. I feel that temporarily the Government should abolish or enlarge the zone system, or reduce the rate, or by some law take the products in one part of the country, where they are plentiful, and send them to another part of the country, where they are scarce.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this bill be concluded in one hour.

Mr. MANN. I think we can get through in one hour, but I do not think we ought to close the debate in one hour.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. I object.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. CROSSER] 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. CROSSER] is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. CROSSER. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, the theory upon which this Government was founded is that government derives its just powers from the consent of the governed. It is important, therefore, that we should have a sound public opinion. The passage of this bill would do much to establish a really sound, healthy public opinion.

That is the main purpose of this bill. There is nothing about it which would shock any man who has sound common sense and is in sympathy with our American institutions; nothing whatever. It simply proposes that these buildings known as public-school buildings shall be made use of as nearly as possible to the fullest extent. At the present time they are used about 5 or 6 hours a day out of the total 24.

It seems to me that if from no other standpoint than that of plain common sense economy the public could make better use of their buildings than that. This bill simply proposes to permit the adult population of this particular community, the District of Columbia, to hold meetings and discuss any subject they see fit to discuss, so long as they do not advocate violently overthrowing the Government. I frankly say there is no limitation upon the subjects which we propose may be discussed, and I am glad there is not.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CROSSER. Yes.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I noticed yesterday at the public forum meeting a woman advocated the abolition of the cookstove. [Laughter.] Does the gentleman from Ohio think that a discussion of that sort will overturn the Government itself? [Laughter.]

Mr. CROSSER. I will answer the gentleman in this way, that any forum, any number of people, any community getting together and organizing as this bill proposes they may organize, before they hold any meeting, if they are really interested in the question of whether or not the cookstove is to be abolished, I say by all means let them discuss it.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. It may have a bearing on solving the problem of high cost of living.

Mr. CROSSER. The chairman suggests that it might help to solve the problem of the high cost of living.

Mr. OAKEY. I think the abolition of some of the cookstoves in Washington would not be a bad thing. [Laughter.]

Mr. CAMPBELL. This cookstove that the woman wanted to abolish was in the home.

Mr. CROSSER. Gentlemen, the proposition that the people shall be limited to the discussion of this subject or that subject in the meetings held in the public-school buildings of this city outside of school hours is one that I did not suppose would ever be seriously made in the Congress of the United States. I would not expect to find the objection made by the most obscure official in the land, that we should say that they must confine their discussions to this subject or that subject, while the people might prefer to discuss some other subject.

Mr. BENNET. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CROSSER. Yes.

Mr. BENNET. Then does the gentleman uphold the action of the American embassy in Paris in refusing to Charles Edward Russell permission to go to the front in France because he criticized the President of the United States?

Mr. CROSSER. I do not think I understand the gentleman's question.

Mr. BENNET. On the 6th of September Charles Edward Russell wrote to the secretary of the American embassy in Paris, France, asking permission, as the representative of 295 newspapers, to go to the front in France. He and another newspaper man asked simultaneously for the ordinary formal permission to go to the front. The other newspaper man was given his permit, but because Mr. Charles Edward Russell had exercised his right to criticize the President of the United States the American embassy refused him that permission. Does the gentleman think it strange that under an administration that denies the right of criticism——

Mr. CROSSER. I do not know that that has the slightest thing to do with this public forum bill.

Mr. BENNET. If the administration lays down a principle like that, is it not perfectly natural to find others attempting to limit the right of public discussion?

Mr. CROSSER. What other people may do or be compelled to do because of their official position, I do not know. I am talking about the principle involved in this bill.

Mr. BENNET. That is exactly the principle of it—an attempt to limit public discussion.

Mr. CROSSER. I stand here to advocate the proposition that any man ought to be given the right in this country to discuss any proposition which does not mean the overthrow by violent means of our present Government.

Mr. BENNET. I want to ask the gentleman if he agrees with that idea of this administration of the law? I have no doubt the gentleman knows Mr. Charles Edward Russell.

Mr. CROSSER. I know him.

Mr. BENNET. He wrote a letter to the Paris edition of the New York Herald, in which he criticized the action of the President of the United States in sending his congratulations to the then Emperor of Austria upon his birthday. He said he did not think that the character of the Emperor of Austria was such that the Chief Executive of a Government like ours ought to congratulate him on anything, and because Mr. Russell had exercised the right of free speech Mr. Bliss, in charge of the American Embassy at Paris, denied him the right to go to the front as a representative of American newspapers.

Mr. GARDNER. Is that the worst he could find to say about President Wilson? I could have helped him.

Mr. BENNET. That was enough, it seems.

Mr. CROSSER. I do not undertake to say what the administration of President Wilson has said or done on that subject——

Mr. BENNET. Yes; but the gentleman criticizes other gentlemen here because they wish to limit the right of free speech, and I call his attention to the fact that they are simply following an example set them in high places.

Mr. CROSSER. Well, I am speaking about what we ought to do, and not about what others may have done. If the gentleman knows of some violation of the right of free speech with which I am not acquainted, well and good. I say whether or not that be true, we ought to have absolutely free speech so long as it does not permit the advocacy of violent means for the overthrow of our Government.

Mr. BENNET. May I ask the gentleman another question?

Mr. CROSSER. Yes.

Mr. BENNET. This bill proposes, in a rather aristocratic way it seems to me, to let an organization composed of 20 adults—that is what it is boiled down to—establish one of these public forums.

Mr. CROSSER. Oh, no.

Mr. BENNET. Oh, yes.

Mr. CROSSER. Go ahead with your question.

Mr. BENNET. Does not the gentleman think it would be far better to provide, as they do in the city of Chicago and in the city of New York, that any persons or any organization only limited by the precedence of their applications, may use the school buildings for purposes of public discussion? Here you turn over a school building to 20 people——

Mr. CROSSER. They do not turn it over to 20 people.

Mr. BENNET. Oh, yes; they do.

Mr. CROSSER. If the gentleman will listen for a moment what is really proposed is that on the written application of 20 people the question as to whether or not a community forum shall be organized is then submitted to the public of the section of the city in question; that is all. The 20 people do not have the right to organize it. On the application of the 20 people the question is submitted to a vote of the people of that section, and 500 or 1,000 people may attend and vote down the 20 people, and there will be no organization. It simply proposes to give to these 20 people the right of petition, so to speak, to the Board of Education, to have the question submitted to the people of that district, whether or not there shall be a community forum established and a community center established. That is all there is to it; nothing more than we have in our State, where 10 per cent of the people may petition and have submitted to the people the question whether the constitution of the State of Ohio shall be changed. It would be just as reasonable to say that the 10 per cent of the people signing that petition could change the constitution of the State of Ohio, when as a matter of fact it requires a majority of those voting on the proposition to say whether the proposed change shall be submitted, as it would be to say that these 20 people could establish the proposition that they should have a community center and a community forum.

Mr. BENNET. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CROSSER. Yes.

Mr. BENNET. I do not think the gentleman honored me with his attention while I was asking my question.

Mr. CROSSER. Yes; I did.

Mr. BENNET. Why all this machinery? If they want to hold a meeting on a public subject, they do not have to organize a community forum. All they have to do is to provide that there shall be no admission fee charged, and by simply filing an application they can hold a meeting for the consideration of any subject they please. Why all this red tape, why a secretary and assistant secretary and salaries?

Mr. CROSSER. They must have some such organization as we have provided in this bill.

Mr. BENNET. No; in Chicago one night they hold a Bohemian sangerfest——

Mr. CROSSER. Who authorizes them to do that?

Mr. BENNET. Any resident in the city of Chicago under the law.

Mr. CROSSER. Who gives them the authority to hold their meeting?

Mr. BENNET. The park board. What I am criticizing in this bill is that it makes it exclusive and provides unnecessary machinery.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I yield the gentleman five minutes more.

Mr. CROSSER. I want to say in reply to the gentleman from New York that so far from making this exclusive it gives the broadest kind of a latitude possible; it allows any man in the neighborhood who is so inclined to come in and take part in the discussion, and to help determine whether or not they are to have a forum or not; and whether or not it is for the discussion of anarchism or socialism or health laws, they may make application to the secretary and have a day set aside for their meetings.

Mr. MANN. Can a boxing club get in?

Mr. CROSSER. Well, I probably made that a little too broad.

Mr. MANN. I am asking for information, because there is one place in the bill where it says that the object is public education through the open representation and orderly free discussion of public questions.

Mr. CROSSER. I think I was a little too broad in what I first said.

Mr. BENNET. I recollect that Mr. Willard and Mr. Johnson had an orderly and free discussion of a public question in Cuba some time ago.

Mr. CROSSER. I think I stated it a little too broadly when I said that a boxing club might get in. There is no limitation put on the questions they may discuss. The real truth about the opposition to the bill is that it comes from people who have decided that you shall have a certain kind of religion, observe the first day of the week, and who have decided that nobody else shall discuss questions which do not meet with their approval. It is going back to the old blue laws which your ancestors and some of mine upheld to some extent.

Mr. SMITH of Idaho. Those meetings are held at the expense of the participants while these are to be held at the expense of the Government.

Mr. CROSSER. Now, I can not yield further. It seems to me that it is going back to a condition of barbarism—to provide that we must only think as so-and-so wants us to think. We can not go to any church except such as Tom, Dick, or Harry may specify; we can not on Sunday discuss a political subject, no matter how religious in its nature a man like Mr. LONDON or others may think it to be when these powers that be say no.

Now, it is true that at the present time we may possibly have discussions on some subjects in schoolhouses, but only after the board of education says that we may do so. The board of education has found it convenient in certain cases to refuse the privilege to discuss public questions on the first day of the week. Some gentlemen here have commented that most of the meetings have been held on the Sabbath day. That is true for the very good reason that men engaged in business pursuits and men who have to work week days from early morn till late at night can not go to participate in discussions except on the Sabbath day. For that reason Sunday is the day best adapted for the discussion of public questions by these men. Certainly if they are citizens they ought to be allowed to develop themselves to the highest possible degree for the duties of citizenship.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. MEEKER].

Mr. MEEKER. Mr. Chairman, I think the one principle involved in this bill is indeed desirable and wholesome. I want to say now I am in no sympathy with some of our good friends from the blue-laws country who would like to make even a man's soul salvation by law if they could. That is coming to be rather popular in this Government. How far we are going in that direction before we are through, nobody at the present can tell. We are doing our best to legislate everybody into heaven. But, so far as one feature of the bill is concerned, it seems to me it is not quite as it might be for the best interests of those who would constitute the organization in that forum. Even though it is only $2 or $4 for a meeting, I would like to see the people who want to hold the meetings pay the fiddler if they are going to dance. I am not quite in sympathy with the Government providing $4 for a secretary for some group who might desire to hold that meeting. It seems to me the friends of the bill—and I am friendly to the bill—should be willing to put that little obligation upon those who are interested in that propaganda. I think it is not so much the amount of money as the principle involved. Regarding the use of the school buildings for public discussion, I found some few years ago in a series of investigations in the city of St. Louis that aside from some small halls that were erected for such purpose to be rented there were no community centers. The taxpayers had erected the great buildings; they were the property of the people; but the people could not get into them. I think that, so far as the District of Columbia is concerned, the citizens of this District should be willing to assume that small cost of providing the expenses of their meetings, and it is only fair and right that they should pay for their own dance and for whatever fiddler they choose at that particular time.

So far as the Sunday afternoon or the Sunday feature of it is concerned, I think that should be repugnant to every man who believes in a free America, when it comes to the affairs of government. We are interjecting too much into our governmental system our own ideas as to what men must do as regards their own conduct, and it would be indeed a most regrettable thing if the Members of the American Congress should hark back to the days when you accepted your religion and everything else from the powers of the State and put into such a bill as this, which is intended primarily for the purpose of opening up our public buildings for public discussions of public questions, any suggestion whatever that a group of citizens in the District of Columbia shall be so restricted.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MEEKER. Yes.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Does the gentleman from Missouri believe that any considerable number of the people would avail themselves of the opportunity to discuss public questions upon the Sabbath day in the schoolhouses or public buildings in the District of Columbia? Just one political organization would avail itself of the opportunity.

Mr. MEEKER. Be that as it may, they may all have the opportunity so far as I am concerned. If they do not wish to take advantage of it, that is their lookout. I think I am not in sympathy with the political organization to which the gentleman refers, but I am perfectly willing that that organization should talk itself out all it pleases.

Mr. CAMPBELL. So am I, but I am not willing that they should hold the meetings at public expense in a public building on the Sabbath day.

Mr. MEEKER. I am suggesting that change. There is nothing said that the other parties can not hold meetings.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MEEKER. Yes.

Mr. FESS. I think the bill says only the citizens of the community so desiring to form the forum shall do so.

Mr. MEEKER. Yes.

Mr. FESS. Would that embrace all of the citizens?

Mr. MEEKER. Twenty, I think, is the provision of the bill.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Twenty or more; there is no limit as to number.

Mr. FESS. Suppose twenty would call for an expression of the people, and twenty only would come out?

Mr. MEEKER. Yes.

Mr. FESS. They would have the forum?

Mr. MEEKER. Yes.

Mr. FESS. It would not be the vote of the citizens, but just the vote of the people whose chose to vote upon it?

Mr. MEEKER. That is the same on any of your referendums or constitutional changes. If only 50 per cent of your citizenship vote, then that settles it.

Mr. RAKER. After the forum has been organized, is it not a fact that every adult man and woman in the District can become a member of it?

Mr. MEEKER. He thereby is a member of it—the very fact that he lives in that community makes him a member. It seems to me that the attitude of some of the people who are members of the powers that be in the city of Washington toward the citizens of the District of Columbia is positively pusillanimous.

We treat these people as if they were wards, and here is a little bit of a start toward letting them have a little something to do in a very small way—to even talk about public affairs in a public building, and we are afraid to trust them even to that extent.

Mr. KING. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MEEKER. Yes.

Mr. KING. Why is the colored race discriminated against in the first section and not permitted to participate in these community forums? I refer to lines 6, 7, and 8.

Mr. MEEKER. The gentleman refers to the language:

> Or persons who, if parents, would be entitled to enroll their children in said school.

Mr. KING. Yes.

Mr. MEEKER. Would not the colored people hold their forums in the colored schools?

Mr. KING. They would be required to hold their forums in the colored schools and the whites in the white schools, but no colored people would be permitted to participate in the question of whether a certain schoolhouse in their locality, if it be a white school, should be used as a community forum, even though they may pay taxes there.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. They would go to their own schoolhouses, just like their children do.

Mr. KING. If you are in favor of free speech, why not permit them to come in and discuss the question individually?

Mr. MEEKER. It is not a question of the men who talk, but of the men who organize the forum.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. Is a colored man permitted to sign this application?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. He is, to establish a forum at his own school.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. For any school?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Only for his own school.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. Does it say so?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Yes.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. Where?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. On the first page, lines 7 and 8.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. That expressly excludes them.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. No; it includes them.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. I understood it differently.

Mr. MEEKER. As I understand it, anyone in that school community who is a patron of the school can constitute the forum, but as to who speaks in the forum there is nothing said about that at all.

Mr. KING. They would have to send their children to that school in order to become qualified to be of the 20?

Mr. MEEKER. Yes.

Mr. BORLAND. Is not that perfectly right, when we have appropriated for schools for colored people? The white people are not permitted to organize a forum in a colored school.

Mr. MEEKER. No. I think there is no restriction as to who may speak in the forum. It is simply who organizes it. I hope that some member of the committee, before we come to a vote on this bill, will explain why it is that the Government is called upon to pay even this small sum of $4 to some secretary for these meetings.

Mr. RAGSDALE. Will the gentleman permit me?

Mr. MEEKER. Yes.

Mr. RAGSDALE. Does the gentleman think it is right to enact legislation to require the taxpayers of the District of Columbia to be taxed to create institutions of learning and then permit any people who temporarily reside here and who pay no taxes to come in against the wishes of the board and take charge of these school buildings?

Mr. MEEKER. Would the gentleman amend this bill by requiring them to be taxed?

Mr. RAGSDALE. That is what this bill provides. Is that right?

Mr. MEEKER. If this is Government property; yes.

Mr. RAGSDALE. Does the gentleman think it is right to turn over Government property, for which the people of the District are taxed to create and maintain here, to nontaxpaying individuals?

Mr. MEEKER. Is the gentleman willing to vote for a referendum on the prohibition issue in the District?

Mr. RAGSDALE. If the gentleman would confine it to white people and to males; yes.

Mr. MEEKER. I am glad to hear it.

Mr. RAGSDALE. Is the gentleman?

Mr. MEEKER. Yes.

Mr. RAGSDALE. Is the gentleman willing to make that restriction?

Mr. MEEKER. I am willing for any referendum.

Mr. RAGSDALE. That is what I thought the gentleman would be for.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, may I inquire how much time I have left?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky has eight minutes remaining.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I think it would be well for the Members of the House to understand what the bill provides, what the present law is, and what the occasion for this bill is. The last Congress enacted a law, which was approved on the 4th of March, 1915, giving the board of education very broad authority to open the school buildings of the District. That law provides——

Mr. RAGSDALE. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of no quorum.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina makes the point of no quorum——

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Chairman, can I be taken off my feet for that purpose?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and five Members are present—a quorum.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Chairman, as I was about to say, we have a law on the statute books now which seems to me to go as far as we need to go in this matter—at least as far as we ought to go until the board of education and the people of the District have had an opportunity to work it out. As I was saying when the point of no quorum was raised, there has been a law on the statute books since the 4th of March, 1915, which reads as follows:

> That the control of the public schools in the District of Columbia by the board of education shall extend to, include, and comprise the use of the public-school buildings and grounds by pupils of the public schools, other children, and adults, for supplementary educational purposes, civic meetings for the free discussion of public questions, social centers, centers of recreation, playgrounds. The privilege of the use of said buildings and grounds for any of said purposes may be granted by the board upon such terms and conditions and under such rules and regulations as the board may prescribe.

Mr. BENNET. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAPES. I will.

Mr. BENNET. This report says that this bill is the unanimous expression of the Committee on the District of Columbia. Is the gentleman in accordance with that view?

Mr. MAPES. I will answer that in just a moment. This is the second bill on this subject which was introduced. The first bill was referred to the subcommittee on education, of the Committee on the District of Columbia, of which I am a member. We had extensive hearings on that bill. After those hearings the subcommittee was never called together to consider the bill, but this bill was introduced. It was never referred to, or considered by, the subcommittee, but was reported out, I believe, at the last meeting of the District Committee at the last session of Congress. I was not present at the meeting. I do not know who was there, although I know several who were not. The hearings we had were on a different bill. That bill made no provision whatever for the control of the physical property of the schools, amounting to several millions of dollars, by the board of education. The control of the property was taken entirely out of the jurisdiction of the board of education and left to these community forums, with no responsibility on the part of anyone. Now I call your attention to the operation of this law which was enacted in 1915. In the hearings on the other bill the president of the board of education, Mr. Blair, said:

> Now, we have been, with the utmost freedom of which we are capable, using all our public-school buildings for public purposes, under the terms of this act and under the supplementary educational purposes clause; and I have prepared a statement showing the community use of public-school buildings as it obtains to-day.

Then he goes on and tells the uses which have been made of the buildings under permission given by the board of education since this law went into effect:

> The white schools have been used by mothers' clubs and other parent-teacher associations, 48 times; citizens' associations, 9 times; other civic and community associations, 54 times. Membership represented by above associations, 9,286.
> Colored schools: Mothers' clubs and other parent-teacher associations, 35 times; citizens' associations, 7 times; other civic and community associations, 4 times. Membership represented by above colored associations, 3,355.
> Total for all schools: Mothers' clubs and other parent-teacher associations, 83; citizens' associations, 16; other civic and community associations, 58. Membership represented by above associations, 12,641.

Mr. FESS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAPES. I will yield.

Mr. FESS. Does that mean the number of associations that use the buildings under the present law?

Mr. MAPES. That means, I think, the number of different meetings that have been held, and not that there were that many different associations; but the buildings have been opened to everyone who requested it, except in one case.

Mr. FESS. In other words, under the present law there is not much restriction?

Mr. MAPES. The chairman of the board of education testified that the board had not refused the use of the public buildings to any community or refused any request that was made to it, except the request made by the Grover Cleveland community to hold meetings Sunday afternoon. They held meetings for two Sundays. They made all the arrangements to hold some of them before securing the consent of the board of education, and the board allowed them to go ahead with those, but refused to grant permission to hold any more on Sunday afternoons, for the reason, as Mr. Blair said, that the school board did not think it was the sentiment of the people of the District, taken as a whole, that their school buildings should be thrown open Sunday afternoons for all sorts of meetings.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAPES. I yield.

Mr. CAMPBELL. The meetings held do not include any political meetings held on Sunday afternoons. And does the gentleman believe that that omission on the part of the board of education to let these school buildings for that purpose laid the foundation for the campaign that resulted in the preparation and report on this bill?

Mr. MAPES. The testimony before the committee by the proponents of this legislation was that the occasion for the introduction of this bill, and the only occasion, I think—at least, that was the testimony of some of them—was the refusal of the board of education to throw open the Grover Cleveland school building on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. CAMPBELL. What kind of meetings were they that were held in the Grover Cleveland School? Were they political meetings?

Mr. MAPES. I am not familiar with the nature of them. I think they were discussing economic questions, and I believe some Members of the House of Representatives appeared and addressed the meetings.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Chairman, there was no purely political question discussed at any of these meetings, was there?

Mr. MAPES. I am not able to answer that.

Mr. LLOYD. They were social and economic and moral.

Mr. MAPES. I think the gentleman from Missouri knows.

Mr. LLOYD. As far as I know anything of the meetings that were held at the Grover Cleveland School and afterwards in the Public Library, not any of them were what you might term political.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I am quite familiar with the political organizations that hold their meetings on Sunday afternoons, and they say they are not political but social and for the uplift of the people of the community generally. One of them was held in Baltimore, and a woman who addressed that meeting advocated the abolition of the cook stove in the home.

Mr. LLOYD. I was referring to what happened last year. I am sure that in the meetings last year there were no purely political questions considered.

Mr. CAMPBELL. It was not a purely political question at all, but it is a rather rotten one.

Mr. RAGSDALE. Whatever may have transpired as to the last meeting, there is nothing in this law that prevents there being political discussions in the future.

Mr. MAPES. There is no limitation in this law.

Mr. STEENERSON. Is not the effect of this bill to take the control of the school buildings and the property of the District out of the board of education and turn it over to this self-constituted and self-elected forum?

Mr. MAPES. I will say to the gentleman that in my opinion the first bill did that very thing. It was very loosely drawn, and I opposed that bill largely on that account. This present bill, it seems to me, might be clearer and more definite in that particular, might leave the control of the buildings to the board of education a little more definitely than it does. If it would do that, I would have no serious objection to the passage of the bill, although I do not think it is at all necessary in view of the present law.

Mr. STEENERSON. If the former bill was more vague or obscure than this is, I am sure it was a masterpiece. This takes the control of the schoolhouses and property of the District of Columbia from the board of education and turns it over to the forum.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I will say that Dr. Van Schaick, the president of the board of education, a Christian minister, is in favor of the bill.

Mr. STEENERSON. It does not make any difference who favors it.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. He is president of the board of education, and this bill does not take it out of his hands.

Mr. MAPES. He has been the president for the last few months only. When the hearings on this subject were held in the summer Mr. Blair was president. But, if the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. STEENERSON] will permit, on page 3, at the bottom of the page, there is an attempt to cover the objection which he raises, although, as I have said, I think the language might be more definite. It reads:

> The board of education may make such other regulations as it may deem necessary to protect the physical property from abuse.

Mr. STEENERSON. Oh, yes; but it provides specifically that the forums shall control the buildings when they are using them for these purposes.

Mr. MAPES. Except under that limitation.

Mr. STEENERSON. I would like to ask if there is any limitation in this bill against their being turned over and used for religious purposes?

Mr. MAPES. No limitation at all.

Mr. STEENERSON. So that they might draw these salaries, amounting to $15,000 a year, and we would be contributing by taxation to religious services?

Mr. MAPES. If the community desires it.

Mr. RAGSDALE, Mr. MADDEN, and Mr. WALSH rose.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield, and to whom?

Mr. MAPES. I reserve the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. RAGSDALE], who is a member of the committee, will be recognized.

Mr. RAGSDALE. Mr. Chairman, in my opinion no greater invasion of the rights of the taxpayers of the District of Columbia has been attempted, in so far as their educational system is concerned, than has been attempted in this particular bill. When we speak of the rights of the people of the District of Columbia, when we refer to what opportunity ought to be given them as a matter of right to settle this question, the first move that we make in this bill is to take away from them some of their rights.

We do not say in this bill that if a majority in any particular section nearly associated with the building geographically are opposed to the establishment of one of these social centers that they shall have any rights in the matter, but we say that a majority of the people of the District of Columbia shall have no voice in the establishment or development of this institution. We do not say that any particular section in the District of Columbia where they propose to establish one of these social centers shall have any voice in it other than those in favor of it; and whenever any legislation denies anybody who is opposed to a thing the right to be heard, and looks only to that side that is in favor of an institution, it is manifestly unfair.

Mr. CROSSER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from South Carolina yield to the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. RAGSDALE. No; I am sorry I can not yield. I will give the gentleman time later.

Mr. CROSSER. I have had my time.

Mr. RAGSDALE. I do not propose to be interrupted in my argument here from time to time by the gentleman. When I get through I will answer any question that may be propounded.

I say whenever any legislation proposes to deny a right to all except on one side of a proposition, it is manifestly unfair legislation.

This bill does not propose to say that the people adjacent to a school building shall get up two petitions, and that whichever one has the majority of the people in that community, their wishes shall control. This bill does not say that those who pay taxes in the District of Columbia are the only ones that shall have the right to be heard. This does not say that they shall be citizens of the District of Columbia. It says that when "20 adult persons"—not citizens—"residing in the vicinity of any public-school buildings in the District of Columbia, all of said persons being parents of children enrolled as pupils in said public school, or persons who if parents would be entitled to enroll their children in said school, the board of education shall define and fix the territorial limits within which adult persons must reside to entitle them to participate as members in the organization which may be formed, as hereinafter provided."

Now, here is an organization that is created by 20 people—an organization of 20 people, not one of whom need be an American citizen. Of not one of them is it required that they have any status in this country. If they are residents of the community, that is all that is required. Then they may form a social center proposition here under this law. That is my construction of it. If I am wrong I hope that somebody will show me that I am wrong. Here are 20 people who can come in here, or move in here from any other country in the world, and become temporary residents of the District of Columbia, and the only limitation imposed upon them is that they shall be adults, and that their children shall have the right to go to school, or that they must be persons who if parents would be entitled to enroll their children in the school.

Now, if a man is born abroad and he comes here as a temporary resident of the District of Columbia, he can send his children to school here. Therefore it does not require him to be a citizen of this country. Twenty foreigners, with no American citizenship, with no obligations of any kind to the people of the District of Columbia or to its form of government or to the General Government as a whole, may come in here and take away from the taxpayers of the District of Columbia the right to regulate and control the buildings which the people here are taxed to construct, control, and maintain. Would you stand for that in your own community? Is there a man here who would advocate legislation of this kind in the community from which he comes?

Mr. LLOYD. Right there, Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Yes.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Chairman, I am sure the gentleman wishes to state the matter exactly and fairly. What he says, I think, is true with reference to the 20 persons.

Mr. RAGSDALE. Yes, sir.

Mr. LLOYD. But those 20 persons when they present their petitions to the school board do not organize at all. They merely fix the limit. After the school board has fixed the limit of the district any qualified person may vote at that meeting.

Mr. RAGSDALE. Qualified in what way?

Mr. LLOYD. That the public school shall not be used as a community forum. They determine those in that district who are entitled to send children to that school, who are entitled to participate in that meeting; and when they are entitled to participate in that meeting they have the right to determine whether there shall be a forum meeting or not.

Mr. RAGSDALE. All right. Therefore, if 20 people living near a school building sign a petition and attend a forum meeting, those 20 people, if nobody else went there, could organize a forum meeting, even if every one of them was a foreigner, and they could take charge of the building. Is not that correct?

Mr. LLOYD. That is correct.

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Yes.

Mr. BENNET. Is the gentleman a member of the Committee on the District of Columbia?

Mr. RAGSDALE. I am.

Mr. BENNET. I notice this report says that the bill was unanimously reported.

Mr. RAGSDALE. This bill was reported, I think, when I was engaged in my campaign in South Carolina. I have always been opposed to it, and I wrote a letter which I sent from South Carolina stating that there were no influences that could make me support it.

Mr. BENNET. Then this is not, in fact, a unanimous report?

Mr. RAGSDALE. No. In so far as it applies to me, it is not correct, because I am not in favor of the bill, and never have expected to be in favor of it.

Now, I want to ask these gentlemen who are going to vote on this proposition if anyone in your own community would go before his people and advocate the erection of handsome buildings at the enormous cost of such buildings as have been erected in the District of Columbia, as, for example, the Central High School, that stands in front of my home, and which, I understand, is one of the largest and handsomest structures of its kind in the world, would anyone of you go to your home people and advocate taxing them to erect a structure of that kind and put in that law a provision to the effect that any 20 foreigners could come and reside within a certain radius of that particular school and divest your legally constituted trustees of all their authority over that building and have any gathering they wanted in that building? I ask you, would you do it in your own community? If not, is it fair to do it here, where the people have no vote? You tax your people at home in part for these educational institutions, to build them and to maintain them, and when you create these institutions by this taxation and maintain them by the taxation of your own people in part and of the people of the District of Columbia, I ask you if it is fair under these conditions to take the property you have created with the money you have forcibly taken from them under the power you have in this Government and then turn it over to a lot of irresponsible people, who may be here this week and gone next week, and let them take these buildings here and utilize them for purposes to which the taxpayers who created them are absolutely opposed?

Mr. BENNET. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Certainly.

Mr. BENNET. In the judgment of the gentleman, has the board of education exercised its present power unreasonably?

Mr. RAGSDALE. On the contrary, if you will look into the hearings they will disclose the fact that the only contest between the people who are behind this measure and the board of education has been the question whether or not these buildings should be utilized on Sunday rather than on week days. The hearings developed the fact that every single request that has been made for the utilization of these school buildings in the District of Columbia, in so far as their use on week days was concerned, has been granted, but that the board of education objected to the use of these buildings for secular matters, for political debates, and things of that kind on Sunday, and that was the only exception that they made to the use of the buildings under any circumstances.

Mr. BENNET. Does the gentleman mean to have it understood that persons desire to have political debate on Sunday afternoon?

Mr. RAGSDALE. The bill itself provides——

Mr. BENNET. I know what the bill provides, but I refer to the applications that have been made.

Mr. RAGSDALE. They did not state that specifically, but there was no limitation on the subjects to be discussed. They wanted to take these educational institutions and utilize them for their own purposes—and they were not religious purposes—on Sunday, and the board very properly objected to that; and the answer to the board in its desire to use these educational institutions for educational purposes, and to close them on Sunday and allow the school teachers to have a day of rest, was the introduction of this bill, which provides for the compulsory attendance of a part of the school force and for the utilization of these school buildings for secular matters on the holy Sabbath.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Why, certainly.

Mr. BENNET. In regard to the Sunday proposition, on page 153 of the hearings Miss Wilson stated:

> Some of those points are absolutely at issue. The Sunday question is not involved in any way in the bill.

Mr. RAGSDALE. Yes; but let me read from another page of the hearings.

Mr. GORDON. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. RAGSDALE. I can not answer both gentlemen at once. I am trying to find something here to read to the gentleman from California (Mr. RAKER).

Mr. MAPES. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Yes.

Mr. MAPES. The gentleman will recall that other witnesses testified that the occasion which brought forth this bill was the failure to open the schools on Sunday.

Mr. RAGSDALE. On page 24 of the hearings, if the gentleman will turn to that page, he will find that I asked Miss Wilson this question:

> The only instance in this District is where you wished to use the building on a Sunday, and the school board refused permission for its use on Sunday. At all other times you have been permitted to use it?

To that question Miss Wilson replied:

> The first time that a community forum was called the very first question that came up was when they should meet, and that question was decided by the school board and not by the people. Now, that is simply typical of what may come up and what will come up. And, no matter whether you think that it is possible or may come up again or not, the principle should be established, to my mind, that a majority of the people should decide.

Then I asked her:

> But as it is now, the only time that it has been refused to you is for use on a Sunday afternoon?

Miss Wilson replied:

> The only time that the question ever came up, and the first time, as between the people and the board of education, the board of education did not carry out the wishes of the people.

I asked her:

And that particular time was as to the use of the school buildings on Sunday?

She replied:

Yes.

I asked her:

And for no other time?

And Miss Wilson replied:

Yes.

Mr. MEEKER. Why should the State object to a political discussion in a schoolhouse on Sunday when the church has political discussions on Sunday?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Why should the State deny the right of the board of trustees to run an educational institution when it does not deny the right to the board of trustees of a church to run it, when it does not deny the right to the board of directors of a bank to run it, and when it does not deny the right to the board of directors of a railroad to run it? Why do you not turn over to an irresponsible rabble your telephone system, your railroad system, your postal system, and every other organized system? Why do you go and strike at the educational system, which means more to your homes, to your children, to everything that is good in your community? Why do you strike at that first and turn it over to an irresponsible rabble of un-American persons, who know nothing of our form of government and who care less? [Applause.]

Mr. CROSSER. Did any of these un-American people appear before the committee?

Mr. RAGSDALE. No; I do not think they did. They had more potential political influence that they brought forward. The un-Americans would not have counted for anything.

Mr. CROSSER. The nonvoting people are the only ones that would have anything to do with the forum; no persons in the District can vote.

Mr. RAGSDALE. The bill does not say residents; it says, "residing in the community." It does not say that they shall vote. Everybody who knows this bill, who has studied the bill, knows that it is a clear effort to take away from the board of education of the District of Columbia their right to control these institutions of learning because they will not vote to use them on Sunday for political or any other improper purposes. Everybody who has studied the situation, and everybody who went to the meetings, everybody who has read the hearings, knows that if the board had permitted them to use these educational institutions for a forum on Sundays there never would have been a bill of this kind introduced into the House.

Mr. HUSTED. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Yes.

Mr. HUSTED. How many organizations, in the gentleman's opinion, could be created in any one district?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Only one.

Mr. HUSTED. That would deprive every other citizen of the privilege of forming a forum in that district.

Mr. RAGSDALE. Yes; they would have to belong to this particular organization. Now, I would like to call attention to one star witness who came before the committee.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Why does the gentleman say that only one community forum can be organized for a certain building?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Because the bill provides that.

Mr. MANN. Not at all; there is no such provision.

Mr. RAGSDALE. The bill says that upon written application so to do signed by not less than 20 adult persons residing in the vicinity of any public-school building in the District of Columbia, and then it goes on and provides that they shall be organized, but it does not provide for any more, and as the provisions are limited to this organization, how can you get any other?

Mr. MANN. The bill provides that the board of organization can fix the territorial limits. They may fix a limit of a block, and there may be another block, and still another block, and there may be 40 blocks. Of course, they could not all hold meetings in the same room at the same time, but there is nothing in the bill which limits the authority of the board of education to grant permission to various forums to meet in the same school building.

Mr. RAGSDALE. It provides that when the organization is formed the board of education shall make all necessary arrangements and provision for the weekly, biweekly, or monthly meetings of such organization at such times as the organization may designate for its meetings. There is no provision for the use of more than one such gathering.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Yes.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. There is nothing to prevent, however, every adult person in that community joining this one organization?

Mr. RAGSDALE. No.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. If these forums are organized, they could hire halls for their meetings, could they not?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Certainly.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Why should the Government be expected to pay $15,000 a year for rent of buildings for private organizations?

Mr. RAGSDALE. I think it is absolutely wrong that the Government should be required to do it.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Would it not be taking $15,000 out of the Treasury and giving it voluntarily to these associations for paying the rent which they ought to pay on their own account? Is not that the fact?

Mr. RAGSDALE. According to my view it is worse than that. It is not a question of dollars and cents, but we create a board of education who accept the duties devolving upon them to do something for the district in which they reside. One of the responsibilities with which they are charged is the proper care of educational institutions which we have furnished by taxation of all the people. These boards generally take a great deal of pride in the public institutions; they give their time to them, inspect them, and go around to see that proper conditions exist at the schools. Now, in the face of their objection to that which they believe is inimical to the best interest and welfare of the schools, they are divested of authority and it is put in the hands of 20 unknown, irresponsible beings the only qualification of whom is that they must reside within certain territorial limits adjacent to the public school and that their children could attend the school.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Is it not a fact that if this bill is passed we put the public schools in competition with private halls which are erected by private invested capital for the purpose of rental?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Certainly.

Mr. BORLAND. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Yes.

Mr. BORLAND. The gentleman speaks about Sabbath meetings. What is the objection to political meetings on Sunday? What is the real objection?

Mr. RAGSDALE. I think that whenever any set of people who are engaged in politics for a living or otherwise——

Mr. BORLAND. Or otherwise.

Mr. RAGSDALE. I am going to answer your question—desire to have a Sunday meeting, they ought to go to the proper local authorities and secure permission to have it. How would you, Mr. BORLAND—in the city from which you come, against your protest and the protest of the ministers in your immediate community, and of the best citizens of your community—like to have 20 irresponsible people or 20 people of any type hold a political meeting right-across the way from the church—in the face of this opposition?

Mr. BORLAND. If they are patrons of the school I have no right to limit their religious views.

Mr. RAGSDALE. I am not talking about any religious views.

Mr. BORLAND. They are supporters of that school.

Mr. RAGSDALE. The gentleman and I ought not to talk about religious views. Let us talk about politics. We are better qualified for that. [Laughter.]

Mr. HUSTED. As I understand it, if these meetings were held on Sunday this bill provides that a school-teacher would have to attend those meetings on Sunday?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Yes.

Mr. HUSTED. And I further assume that three of these organizations could be created in one of these school districts, and if they were allowed to hold two meetings a week, why would not those three organizations practically preempt that school building to the exclusion of everybody else who might want to use it for a public meeting?

Mr. RAGSDALE. There is no question that the minute these organizations are effected, the minute their powers come into play under this bill, the school trustees and the taxpayers of the community, in anything that comes in conflict with them for Sunday use or other than the regular use of the building for educational purposes, are absolutely divested of authority.

Mr. BENNET. Is there anything in this bill that prevents these 20 men from going to the Central High School district and organizing one forum, and then a month after that moving into some other school district and getting up another petition and organizing another forum, and so on, until that little coterie is in control of every school building in the city of Washington?

Mr. RAGSDALE. I do not think there is anything in this bill which prohibits that, and the fact is that one of the chief workers for this bill was brought here, as I understand it, from another city for the purpose of bringing about this organization. He was given a place over here in the department of education, and when I asked him what his salary was he told me that it was $1 per year. That is to be found in these hearings here. His name is Ward. He was brought here specifically for the purpose of pulling off this school-forum propaganda. That was his particular work. He was given a commission as a United States officer, and he was allowed to use the frank in the Department of Education, and he was given a room and there engaged to send out his propaganda, although paid the salary of only $1 per year by the Government for his services. When I asked him whom he served—the Government who paid him this princely salary of $1 per year or the people who paid him his real salary—his answer was that "the man who pays the piper has the right to call the tune." Therefore we find that some unknown party is paying Mr. Ward a salary, and that this same man Ward is drawing $1 from the Government and admittedly serving some other interest, in preference to that of the Government, in putting forward this school-forum propaganda.

Mr. KING. And is it not a fact that he is a member of the single land-tax organization and is paid out of Cincinnati? Does the gentleman know that?

Mr. RAGSDALE. I do not know that, but I have heard some talk about it.

Mr. BENNET. Is there any provision in this bill for discontinuing these forums once they have been organized? In other words, if 20 people, citizens or otherwise, once attach a particular forum to a particular school, that is perpetual, is it not?

Mr. RAGSDALE. In so far as this legislation is concerned. Of course the House in the future would have the right to amend any legislation; but other than that it would be effectual.

Mr. BENNET. It would take an act of Congress to dissolve that forum?

Mr. RAGSDALE. That is my understanding of it.

Mr. GARDNER. Does the gentleman mean to say that if 20 of these single taxers got together in each one of these school districts in the city of Washington, you could not get them out without an act of Congress?

Mr. RAGSDALE. There is absolutely no power in this bill to do it otherwise. The board of trustees, in so far as they have authority over this particular institution, is absolutely divested of all rights and powers over it and it is put in the hands of this bunch in perpetuity. Now, I represent a people who are taxed along with the other people of this country. I have no sympathy with this idea of making a dog of the District of Columbia and trying any kind of vague, wild, harum-scarum kind of ideas on the dog. I do not approve this idea of putting bad legislation upon the people of the District of Columbia because they have no right to vote, because they have no voice in legislation, having no representative here.

This is a great city, the most beautiful city I have ever seen. My people love this city as the Capital of our country. My people want the District of Columbia, and the people in it, to have every single right that there is consistent with good government. They are willing to be taxed to a reasonable extent for the perpetuity of the best institutions here. They are not willing to undertake to allow people to come in here and with no responsibility absolutely control the institutions which they have been taxed to create and which they are now being taxed to maintain. The whole idea is absolutely antagonistic to everything in which I have been raised to believe. We believe in our schools, we love our schools, but we want nobody other than the properly constituted authorities in control of our schools. [Applause.]

Mr. KEATING. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAGSDALE. I will.

Mr. KEATING. The gentleman has referred to irresponsibles who are taking control——

Mr. RAGSDALE. Who could take control.

Mr. KEATING. I want to ask the gentleman if he feels that the United States Commissioner of Education is in league with these irresponsible people?

Mr. RAGSDALE. I want to say the Commissioner of Education has commissioned a man in his office at a dollar a year for the purpose of carrying on this propaganda. I think much less of him since I learned he gave that commission for that purpose.

Mr. KEATING. The gentleman thinks he is in the conspiracy——

Mr. RAGSDALE. I would not say this is a conspiracy; that is the gentleman's language.

Mr. KEATING. The gentleman appreciates it was the gentleman's language, but I was trying to state the gentleman's views in understandable language.

Mr. RAGSDALE. My views in understandable language are these: That Mr. Ward was sent here——

Mr. KEATING. I am not talking about Mr. Ward.

Mr. RAGSDALE. Well, I am, and it is my time and therefore if the gentleman wants to understand, he must take it in my time.

Mr. KEATING. I will bear with the gentleman in his own peculiar way.

Mr. RAGSDALE. That is very kind; it is a consideration the gentleman extends to so few, that I am surprised.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. KEATING. Permit the gentleman to answer the question which I have propounded, please. The gentleman is so courteous, I want him to proceed.

Mr. GARDNER. After the Alphonse and Gaston proceedings——

Mr. RAGSDALE. I am sure it will not embarrass the gentleman.

Mr. KEATING. It will not embarrass me except when it comes from the gentleman.

Mr. RAGSDALE. I am sure anything coming from me to the gentleman would be embarrassing.

Mr. KEATING. Courtesy will be the most surprising thing.

Mr. RAGSDALE. Then I am surprised the gentleman is asking for consideration out of my time.

Mr. KEATING. I am not surprised at the treatment I am getting from the gentleman when I asked the question.

Mr. RAGSDALE. Nor am I surprised that the gentleman should ask anything to which he did not expect to get a reply. [Applause.]

Mr. KEATING. Will the gentleman, under the circumstances, answer the question?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Now, if the gentleman will kindly propound the question—which one?

Mr. KEATING. The question which I asked originally was, the gentleman suggested certain irresponsibles——

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Chairman, I protest against this sanguinary conflict and reckless use of the personal pronoun.

Mr. KEATING. We have not used the personal pronoun. What I want to know is this: According to this report the bill has received the indorsment of the United States Commissioner of Education.

Now, in all reason does the gentleman mean to say that this Commissioner of Education has indorsed a plan which would turn the schools of Washington over to a crowd of irresponsibles?

Mr. RAGSDALE. I want to say this, that I do not care who has indorsed it, however much respect I may have for him, from the President of the United States down. The bill speaks for itself, and says that any 20 residents of a community under certain conditions there can take charge of a building and use it on Sundays and other days for secular purposes, divesting the proper authorities from the control of that building. And if the Commissioner of Education lends himself to the plan, I am only sorry that he should take the position; but it does not alter my position as a Member of this Congress at all.

Mr. GARDNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Certainly.

Mr. GARDNER. I want to see if I understand the gentleman correctly. Suppose that the National Saloon Keepers' Association were to get possession of each one of these forums, and it would pack a meeting in regard to the referendum, where they put out a lot of money among the colored voters of the District, does the gentleman mean to say there is no power by which they could be dispossessed of the control of the schoolhouse?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Nothing except a further act of Congress.

Mr. GARDNER. That is an astounding statement.

Mr. RAGSDALE. It is not more astounding than the bill. [Laughter.]

Mr. KELLEY. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield to the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. RAGSDALE. I yield.

Mr. KELLEY. I should like to inquire of the gentleman whether if this bill is enacted into law it will divest the school board entirely of authority to allow others to use the school buildings besides the organized forum?

Mr. RAGSDALE. No. They would have the right to grant the privileges they now have, except where the school forum wishes to utilize them, so that they can utilize the school buildings in opposition to the wishes of the board, while others not belonging to the school forum would have to come in and get consent of the board. In other words, a set of citizens living near a school building would have to belong to the school forum or they would have no rights in the building except by the consent of the board of trustees; but the minute you join the school forum you belong to a social, political institution which can go around at will, unless it interferes with the educational handling of the school building, and utilize it in any way they think wise.

Mr. BENNET. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Certainly.

Mr. BENNET. Inasmuch as this bill states for its primary object the use of the public buildings as community forums, would it not be perfectly possible for one of those community forums to stage a rather interesting fistic encounter, if they wanted to do so, on the days when they were not being used for public education or orderly free discussion?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Well, I think possibly the commissioners might be induced to get the police to stop that as a breach of the peace.

Mr. BENNET. Could they do so?

Mr. RAGSDALE. I think so; yes. They could prevent a breach of the peace, for the pounding of each other's hides is a breach of the peace. I doubt very much if you could call that an educational purpose.

Mr. BENNET. It is physical culture.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield just for another suggestion?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Yes.

Mr. MANN. I had hoped that we could finish this bill to-night. We have a long and arduous day before us to-morrow, and I think it is the intention to meet early in the morning, hoping that we will be able to finish all the roll calls on the legislative bill to-morrow. Will the gentleman be willing to yield the floor temporarily in order that a motion may be made for the committee to rise?

Mr. RAGSDALE. I shall be very glad to do so. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. FOSTER, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 14816) to provide for the use of public-school buildings in the District of Columbia as community forums, and for other purposes, and had come to no resolution thereon.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, the beauty of American politics is that we accept the results and retain friendly personal relations. Mr. Wilson has been reelected President of the United States. I did not contribute in that direction. But to-day, I am informed and believe, is the anniversary of a very important day in his life, and I wish to felicitate him and Mrs. Wilson on the happy union which occurred one year ago [applause] and to wish for them a continuance of that happiness and a long and pleasant life. [Applause.]

STOCK-RAISING HOMESTEADS.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado, from the Committee on Public Lands, submitted for printing, under the rule, the conference report on the bill (H. R. 407) to provide for stock-raising homesteads, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill by title.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 407) to provide for stock-raising homesteads, and for other purposes.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT (NO. 1231).

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 407) to provide for stock-raising homesteads, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 1, 3, 4, 5, and 6.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 7, 8, and 10, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 2: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 2, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Page 3, line 12, after the word "areas," insert the following: "of the character herein described"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 9: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 9, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out all of section 9 of the bill; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 11: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 11, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out all line 22, after the word "lands," add the following:

"Provided further, That such driveways shall not be of greater number or width than shall be clearly necessary for the purpose proposed and in no event shall be more than 1 mile in width for a driveway less than 20 miles in length, not more than 2 miles in width for driveways over 20 and not more than 35 miles in length, and not over 5 miles in width for driveways over 35 miles in length: Provided further, That all stock so transported over such driveways shall be moved an average of not less than 3 miles per day for sheep and goats and an average of not less than 6 miles per day for cattle and horses."

And the Senate agree to the same.

On page 2, line 22, after the word "appeal," add the following: "but no right to occupy such lands shall be acquired by reason of said application until said lands have been designated as stock-raising lands."

STATEMENT.

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 407) to provide for stock-raising homesteads, and for other purposes, submit the following written statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conference committee:

Amendment No. 1: Senate recedes. This amendment dispensed with the requirement of residence and improvements, which modified the general homestead law. This had never been done in any preceding legislation except in lands that could not be supplied with water even for domestic use.

Amendment No. 2: House recedes with an amendment. This amendment, No. 2, relates to additional entries and requires the original entryman to first enter contiguous lands if any there be, before he can enter noncontiguous land. The amendment added to amendment No. 2 provides that the character of land must be as herein described.

Amendment No. 3: Senate recedes. This amendment dispenses with residence.

Amendment No. 4: Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 5: Senate recedes. This amendment permits all former entrymen to have another entry irrespective of character of land formerly entered.

Amendment No. 6: Senate recedes for same reason set forth in amendment No. 5.

Amendment No. 7: House recedes. Amendment does not change purpose of act, and Senate amendment was deemed preferable.

Amendment No. 8: House recedes.

Amendment No. 9: Senate recedes with an amendment striking out section 9.

Amendment No. 10: House recedes.

Amendment No. 11: House recedes with an amendment. The House provision was too restrictive; the Senate amendment too broad. The substitute amendment will protect both the stock interests and the homesteader.

On page 2 the proviso deals with method of initiating right of entry. All through the proposed legislation the House and Senate have struggled to adjust their differences as to methods of entry, additional entries, and residence. The adoption of the amendment harmonizes the differences, prevents fraud, speculation, and aids in the administration of the law.

There was no difference of opinion between your conferees as to the advisability of extending the 640-acre unit to the dry, arid, nontimbered, nonirrigable, nonmineral lands of the West.

EDWARD T. TAYLOR,
IRVINE L. LENROOT,
Managers on the part of the House.

BRIDGE ACROSS DELAWARE RIVER.

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Speaker, there is a little Senate bridge bill on the Speaker's desk, with a similar House bill on the calendar. I would like to have the Senate bill laid before the House.

The SPEAKER. The Chair lays before the House the bill S. 7095, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read the bill as follows:

An act (S. 7095) extending the time for completion of the bridge across the Delaware River, authorized by an act entitled "An act to authorize the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. and the Pennsylvania & Newark Railroad Co., or their successors, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Delaware River," approved the 24th day of August, 1912.

Be it enacted, etc., That the time for the completion of the bridge now in course of construction across the Delaware River, which the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. and the Pennsylvania & Newark Railroad Co., or their successors, were authorized to construct, maintain, and operate by an act entitled "An act to authorize the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. and the Pennsylvania & Newark Railroad Co., or their successors, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Delaware River," approved the 24th day of August, 1912, be, and the same is hereby, extended for a period of three years from the 24th day of August, 1916: Provided, That in all other respects said bridge shall be completed and shall be maintained and operated in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the third reading of the Senate bill.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, a similar House bill (H. R. 18085) will be laid on the table.

There was no objection.

On motion of Mr. ADAMSON, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the Senate bill was passed was laid on the table.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. GRIFFIN, by unanimous consent, was granted leave of absence indefinitely, on account of illness.

HOUR OF MEETING TO-MORROW 11 O'CLOCK A. M.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Would it be too early to meet at half past 10?

Mr. FITZGERALD. The Committee on Appropriations has a meeting at 10.30 to-morrow to report a deficiency bill.

Mr. KITCHIN. I suggest that it be 11 o'clock.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina that the House meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning?

There was no objection.

PAINTING OF THE BATTLE OF GETTYSBURG.

Mr. STEDMAN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 8223) to purchase a painting of the Battle of Gettysburg.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois makes the point of order that there is no quorum present, and the gentleman from North Carolina moves that the House do now adjourn. The Chair will request the gentleman from Illinois to withdraw his point of no quorum and the gentleman from North Carolina to withhold his motion to adjourn until the Chair can lay before the House a message from the President.

Mr. MANN. I will withdraw it.

Mr. KITCHIN. I withhold my motion, Mr. Speaker.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

Sundry messages, in writing, from the President of the United States were communicated to the House of Representatives by Mr. Sharkey, one of his secretaries.

REPORT OF GOVERNOR OF PORTO RICO (H. DOC. NO. 1773).

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read and, with the accompanying documents, was ordered printed and referred to the Committee on Insular Affairs:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit for the information of the Congress the report of the Governor of Porto Rico for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1916, together with the reports of the heads of the several executive departments of the Porto Rican government for the same period.

WOODROW WILSON.

THE WHITE HOUSE, December 18, 1916.

REPORT OF PHILIPPINE COMMISSION (H. DOC. NO. 1774).

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read and, with the accompanying documents, was ordered printed and referred to the Committee on Insular Affairs:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith for the information of the Congress the report of the Philippine Commission for the fiscal year ended December 31, 1915, together with the reports of the Governor General and the secretaries of the four executive departments of the Philippine government, and the second annual report of the governor of the Department of Mindanao and Sulu for the same period.

WOODROW WILSON.

THE WHITE HOUSE, December 18, 1916.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. LAZARO, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bill of the following title, when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 1788. An act for the relief of Thomas M. Jones.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 58 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned, pursuant to the order previously made, until to-morrow, Tuesday, December 19, 1916, at 11 o'clock a. m.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copy of a communication from the Secretary of War, transmitting an urgent deficiency estimate of appropriation required by the War Department for the support of dependent families of enlisted men of the Army and National Guard during the fiscal year 1917 (H. Doc. No. 1759); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

2. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting reports of the bureaus and offices of the War Department showing exchanges of typewriting machines and other labor-saving devices made during the fiscal year 1916 (H. Doc. No. 1760); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

3. A letter from the Acting Secretary of War, transmitting letter from the Chief of Engineers with a statement prepared from data received from officers in charge of the different engineering districts, showing name, time employed, and compensation of civilian engineers employed between July 1, 1915, and June 30, 1916 (H. Doc. No. 1761); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed.

4. A letter from the Secretary of Commerce, transmitting a statement of the expenditures in the Coast and Geodetic Survey for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1916 (H. Doc. No. 1762); to the Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Commerce and ordered to be printed.

5. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers of the United States Army with copies of reports on a preliminary examination and survey, respectively, of Mobile Harbor and Bay, Ala. (H. Doc. No. 1763); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with illustrations.

6. A letter from the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, transmitting information regarding purchase of typewriting machines and exchanges made in part payment therefor by the Government branches under the direction of this Institution during the fiscal year 1916 (H. Doc. No. 1764); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

7. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a deficiency estimate of appropriation for the support of dependent families of enlisted men of the Regular Army and of the National Guard in the service of the United States (H. Doc. No. 1765); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

8. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting information relative to deficiency estimate of appropriation for the United States mint at Philadelphia (H. Doc. No. 1766); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

9. A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting report of engineer of the Indian Service and of the Reclamation Service on the Wind River, Wyo., project (H. Doc. No. 1767); to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed, with illustrations.

10. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a tentative draft of a bill to reimburse officers, soldiers, and civilian employees of the Army and their families and dependents, and military organizations, for losses sustained as a result of the hurricane which occurred in Texas on August 16, 17, and 18, 1915 (H. Doc. No. 1768); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

11. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copy of a communication from the Acting Secretary of War, dated the 12th instant, submitting statements of all money arising from proceeds of public property received by the War Department during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1916 (H. Doc. No. 1769); to the Committee on Expenditures in the War Department and ordered to be printed.

12. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copy of a communication from the Secretary of Commerce, submitting the following claims for damages, which have been considered, adjusted, and determined to be due the claimants by the Commissioner of Lighthouses (H. Doc. No. 1770); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

13. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copy of a communication from the Secretary of War submitting an urgent deficiency estimate of appropriation in the sum of $140,000 for printing and binding for the War Department for the fiscal year 1917 (H. Doc. No. 1771); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

14. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copy of a communication from the Secretary of War submitting urgent deficiency estimates of appropriation required by the War Department for the service of the fiscal year 1917 (H. Doc. No. 1772); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

15. A letter from the President of the United States, transmitting report of the governor of Porto Rico for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1916 (H. Doc. No. 1773); to the Committee on Insular Affairs and ordered to be printed.

16. A letter from the President of the United States, transmitting report of the Philippine Commission for the fiscal year ended December 31, 1915 (H. Doc. No. 1774); to the Committee on Insular Affairs and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. BARKLEY, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 191) to amend an act entitled "An act to change the name of the Public Health and Marine-Hospital Service to the Public Health Service, to increase the pay of officers of said service, and for other purposes," approved August 14, 1912, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1229), which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. MILLER of Delaware, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 3681) for the relief of the owners of the steamship Esparta, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1230), which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. A bill (H. R. 19119) making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, and for other purposes; to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

By Mr. TEMPLE: A bill (H. R. 19120) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to accept a title to a site for the post office at Donora, Pa., which excepts and reserves natural gas and oil underlying the land; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. MUDD: A bill (H. R. 19121) to provide for the reimbursement to the emigrant Cherokees by blood for lands allotted to the negro freedmen (Cherokees) from the lands granted to the emigrant Cherokees by blood under treaty of 1835; to the Committee on Indian affairs.

By Mr. ROGERS: A bill (H. R. 19122) to amend the act of Congress of February 17, 1911, entitled "An act providing for the purchase or erection, within certain limits of cost, of embassy, legation, and consular buildings abroad"; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

SENATE.

TUESDAY, December 19, 1916.

The Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, give us such a sense of the Divine greatness and power and glory that we may always approach Thee with reverence and godly fear. We bless Thee that in the revelation of the great plan of life that Thou has given to men there is no conflict between the facts of Thy kingdom and the facts of human life, that there is no conflict between the forces that make for the establishment of the everlasting kingdom and the forces that are for the welfare and the uplift and the refinement and the highest achievement of life in this world. We know that only through the refinement of spirit can we have the far-reaching vision of the things of God, and that the pure in heart see Thee, the great God of us all. So we pray that Thou wilt give to us that vision of spiritual things that will illumine our minds and hearts and lead us in the discharge of the duties of this day. For Christ's sake. Amen.

The Vice President being absent, the President pro tempore [WILLARD SAULSBURY, a Senator from the State of Delaware] took the chair.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

DEPENDENT FAMILIES OF ENLISTED MEN (H. DOC. NO. 1759).

SENATOR FROM NEW MEXICO.

Mr. CATRON. I present the credentials of A. A. JONES, duly chosen by the qualified electors of the State of New Mexico a Senator from that State to represent that State in the Senate of the United States for the term of six years beginning on the 4th day of March, 1917, which I ask may be received.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The credentials will be printed in the RECORD and placed on the files of the Senate.

The credentials are as follows:

To the PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES:

This is to certify that on the 7th day of November, 1916, A. A. JONES was duly chosen by the qualified electors of the State of New Mexico a Senator from said State to represent said State in the Senate of the United States for the term of six years, beginning on the 4th day of March, 1917.

Witness: His excellency our governor, William C. McDonald, and our seal hereto affixed at Santa Fe, this 7th day of December, in the year of our Lord 1916.

[SEAL.] WILLIAM C. McDONALD,
Governor.

By the governor:

ANTONIO LUCERO,
Secretary of State.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by J. C. South, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 7095) extending the time for completion of the bridge across the Delaware River, authorized by an act entitled "An act to authorize the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. and the Pennsylvania & Newark Railroad Co., or their successors, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Delaware River," approved the 24th day of August, 1912.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 6116) providing for the taxation of lands of the Winnebago Indians and the Omaha Indians in the State of Nebraska with amendments, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House had passed the following bills, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 199. An act to regulate the importation of viruses, serums, toxins, and analogous products, to regulate interstate traffic in said articles, and for other purposes;

H. R. 6876. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to provide for the adjudication and payment of claims arising from Indian depredations,' approved March 3, 1891," approved January 11, 1915; and

H. R. 17020. An act making an appropriation for the benefit of the Aviation Corps of the Department of War, and repealing the provisions of certain acts relating to the acquisition of a site and the erection of a public building at Ripon, Wis.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (H. R. 1788) for the relief of Thomas M. Jones, and it was thereupon signed by the President pro tempore.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a petition of the Society of Colonial Wars of the District of Columbia, praying for the enactment of legislation to protect the flag of the United States, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. GRONNA. I submit a memorial and ask that it be read and printed in the RECORD with the name of the first signer.

There being no objection, the memorial was read and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, as follows:

Senator A. J. GRONNA:

DEAR SIR: We, the members of the Cleveland Farmers' Club, hereby petition you to protest against the proposed embargo on foodstuffs for the following reasons:

1. That the farmer on account of the short crop is not receiving a high enough price to make up for the shortage.

2. That the farmer should receive an increased price for the products which he sells when he has to pay an increased price for everything he buys.

3. That we believe the proposed embargo, if passed, would result in decreased acreage, and, of course, decreased supply.

W. E. CAMPBELL,
(And others).

Mr. KENYON (for Mr. WEEKS) presented petitions of sundry citizens of Massachusetts, praying for national prohibition, which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also (for Mr. WEEKS) presented a memorial of Local Union No. 482, Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paper Hangers of America, of Somerville, Mass., remonstrating against the high cost of living, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also (for Mr. WEEKS) presented petitions of sundry citizens of Massachusetts, praying for the enactment of legislation to regulate the price of coal, which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. KERN presented petitions of sundry citizens of Indiana, praying for the establishment of a national park among the sand dunes of northern Indiana, which were referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

He also presented a petition of the Sladalberts Catholic Congregation, of South Bend, Ind., praying for prohibition in the District of Columbia, which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. OVERMAN (for Mr. SIMMONS) presented petitions of sundry citizens of North Carolina, praying for national prohibition, which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. FERNALD presented petitions of sundry citizens of Maine, praying for an increase in the salaries of postal employees, which were referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

Mr. WARREN presented a petition of Local Branch No. 555, Letter Carriers' Association, of Cheyenne, Wyo., praying for an increase in the salaries of postal employees, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

Mr. PHELAN presented a petition of the Chambers of Commerce of San Jose, Mayfield, Sunnyvale, Mountain View, and Santa Clara, all in the State of California, praying for the establishment of an aviation base in the Santa Clara Valley, Cal., which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE—FORAGE CROPS.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Senate bill 7343 appropriating the sum of $5,000 to be expended by the Secretary of Agriculture in cooperative work in forage-crop investigations in the State of Washington was referred to the Committee on Appropriations. It should have gone to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. I ask that the Committee on Appropriations be relieved from the further consideration of the bill and that it be referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, that course will be taken.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. FLETCHER, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 5386) for the relief of James Campbell, reported adversely thereon, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 5318) for the relief of Frederick Chateau, reported adversely thereon, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 18181) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent children of soldiers and sailors of said war reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 884) thereon.

PAY OF EMPLOYEES.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I send to the desk House joint resolution 324, which has passed the House of Representatives and has been informally considered by the Senate Committee on Appropriations. The joint resolution I am sure will have the support of every Senator. It simply provides that on the day of adjournment for the holiday recess the clerical force shall be paid then the amount that would be payable on the 1st day of January. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution.

There being no objection, the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 324) authorizing payment of the salaries of officers and employees of Congress for December, 1916, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

COMMERCE COURT.

Mr. CHILTON. By direction of the Committee on the Judiciary I ask that the bill (S. 6843) to amend an act entitled "An act to create a Commerce Court, and to amend an act entitled 'An act to regulate commerce,' approved February 4, 1887, as heretofore amended, and for other purposes," approved June 18, 1910, being Order of Business 717 on the calendar, be recommitted to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the bill will be recommitted to the Judiciary Committee.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED.

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and by unanimous consent the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. JONES:

A bill (S. 7477) for the relief of the heirs of Ko-mo-dal-kiah, Moses agreement allottee No. 33; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. FLETCHER:

A bill (S. 7478) to regulate radio communication; to the Committee on Commerce.

A bill (S. 7479) granting an increase of pension to Lavina A. E. Rogers (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. STERLING:

A bill (S. 7480) granting an increase of pension to Aletha E. Reynolds (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. KERN:

A bill (S. 7481) for the relief of Simon Bollinger; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. FERNALD:

A bill (S. 7482) granting an increase of pension to James R. Eaton (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey (for Mr. O'GORMAN):

A bill (S. 7483) granting a pension to Elizabeth Du Hamel; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. ASHURST:

A bill (S. 7484) to divide the State of Arizona into two judicial districts; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SWANSON:

A bill (S. 7485) to permanently renew patent No. 24917; to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. WADSWORTH:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 186) authorizing the Secretary of War to issue temporary permits for additional diversions of water from the Niagara River; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILL (H. R. 18453).

Mr. McCUMBER submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $10,000 for the erection of an assembly hall at the Wahpeton Indian School, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to accept the application of Richard Daeley to enter lot 8, section 31, township 147 north, of range 30 west of the fifth principal meridian, Cass Lake (Minn.) land district, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed.

Mr. STERLING submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $15,000 for general repairs and improvements to the present building at the Indian Boarding School for Girls, Springfield, S. Dak., etc., intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $7,500 for repairing and improving the road leading from the asylum for insane Indians to the city of Canton, S. Dak., etc., intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed.

Mr. WARREN submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $12,000 for acquiring the Hawaiian Volcano Observatory, at Kilauea Volcano, Hawaii, and to establish in Hawaii, California, and elsewhere volcano recording under the Weather Bureau, intended to be proposed by him to the Agricultural appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed.

Mr. SMITH of Maryland submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $4,140 to pay Thomas W. and Alice M. Kellar for ground taken and damages on account of condemnation proceedings in square No. 2838 in the city of Washington, D. C., intended to be proposed by him to the District of Columbia appropriation bill (H. R. 19119), which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

AMERICAN EXPORT TRADE.

Mr. FLETCHER submitted the following concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 28), which was read and referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the report entitled "Cooperation in American Export Trade," issued by the Federal Trade Commission, be printed as a Senate Document, and that 6,000 additional copies be printed, of which 1,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate, 2,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 3,000 copies for the use of the Federal Trade Commission.

LANDS IN WASHINGTON.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8092) confirming patents heretofore issued to certain Indians in the State of Washington, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendment and agree to the conference asked for by the House, the conferees on the part of the Senate to be appointed by the Chair.

The motion was agreed to; and the President pro tempore appointed Mr. PITTMAN, Mr. LANE, and Mr. CLAPP conferees on the part of the Senate.

INDIAN LANDS IN NEBRASKA.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 6116) providing for the taxation of the lands of the Winnebago Indians and the Omaha Indians in the State of Nebraska, which were, on page 1, line 13, to strike out "hereinafter" and insert "hereafter." On page 2, line 11, to strike out "hereinafter" and insert "hereafter."

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

H. R. 199. An act to regulate the importation of viruses, serums, toxins, and analogous products, to regulate interstate traffic in said articles, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

H. R. 6876. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to provide for the adjudication and payment of claims arising from Indian depredations,' approved March 3, 1891," approved January 11, 1915, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Indian Depredations.

H. R. 17020. An act making an appropriation for the benefit of the Aviation Corps of the Department of War, and repealing the provisions of certain acts relating to the acquisition of a site and the erection of a public building at Ripon, Wis., was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PROHIBITION IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The morning business is closed.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1082.

Mr. SMOOT. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Utah suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Brandegee	Clapp	Curtis
Bankhead	Bryan	Clark	Dillingham
Beckham	Catron	Colt	Fernald
Borah	Chamberlain	Culberson	Fletcher
Brady	Chilton	Cummins	Gallinger

Mr. PHELAN. I desire to state that the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] is detained in a committee meeting.

Mr. THOMAS. I wish to announce the necessary absence of my colleague [Mr. SHAFROTH] on account of illness. I will let this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. FLETCHER. I desire to announce that the senior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. RANSDELL] is still confined to his room by illness, and also that the junior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. BROUSSARD] is absent on account of illness. I will let this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. OVERMAN. I wish to announce that my colleague [Mr. SIMMONS] is absent to-day on account of illness in his family.

Mr. KIRBY. I desire to announce the unavoidable absence of my colleague [Mr. ROBINSON] on account of illness. I will let this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I wish to announce that the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS] is detained at home through illness.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Seventy-six Senators have answered to their names. There is a quorum present. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD] to take up Senate bill 1082.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 1082) to prevent the sale and manufacture of alcoholic liquors in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I present a telegram, which I send to the desk and ask that it be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read the telegram, as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 18, 1916.

Senator MORRIS SHEPPARD,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Resolutions unanimously adopted December 18, 1916, by the Disciples and Baptist Ministerial Association of Washington, D. C., representing more than 14,000 members and nearly as many adherents:

"1. Resolved, That we earnestly oppose the proposed referendum amendment to the pending bill before the Senate of the United States providing for the prohibition of the legalized liquor traffic.

"2. Resolved further, That we appeal to the Congress of the United States, and especially to the Senators and Representatives from the dry States, to give their aggressive support to the Sheppard bill in order that the present opportunity so long fought and prayed for by the good men and women of the District of Columbia to give to the Nation a clean, moral, law-abiding, Christian Capital City may be no longer deferred."

WALTER S. DUNLOP, Chairman.
F. PAUL LONGHORNE, Secretary.

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. President, I am exceedingly anxious for the passage of the pending bill, for I know of no better Christmas present that could be given to the people of Washington and to the people of the Nation than the passage of this bill. Ever since I have been in the Senate I have been interested in prohibition for the District of Columbia and in prohibition throughout the Nation, for I came here from a prohibition State, where that issue has been one of the most vital from the time of the adoption of our State constitution. We have had, perhaps, longer and better experience with prohibition than has any other State in the Union. It became a part of our constitution as far back as 1880 and has ever since remained such. The opposition to prohibition have never been able to even have the subject resubmitted to the people of my State for a vote.

In the Sixty-third Congress I introduced Senate bill 6865 and in the Sixty-fourth Congress Senate bill 1352, providing for prohibition in the District of Columbia. These bills are fashioned largely after the Kansas law, with which I am more familiar than with the laws of any other State. The amendment offered by the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] contains many of the provisions of those bills, and they are a little more drastic, perhaps, than is the bill introduced by the distinguished Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD].

I, therefore, believing in the laws of my State and the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors for any purpose, voted for the Smoot amendment. I would, of course, champion legislation such as is embodied in my own bills, but I am firmly of the opinion, after consultation with my fellow Senators, that those bills are more drastic than it would be possible to pass for the District of Columbia, or for the Nation, at the present time. I am therefore heartily in favor of the bill now pending, offered by the distinguished Senator from Texas.

I want to answer, first, the argument offered by the opposition—by the distinguished Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MARTINE] and by some of the other Senators—that prohibition is a failure; that is, that it does not prohibit; and that it is economically and morally wrong. I think those are the principal charges that the opposition make relative to legislation of this kind, and I also think that, after 30 years of experience with this problem in my State in various capacities, I am able to say something that may clear the mind even of the distinguished Senator from New Jersey relative to this issue.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Mr. President, will the Senator from Kansas yield to me for just one moment?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. THOMPSON. I do.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Since the Senator from Kansas has made reference to me and to the immaculate and spotless State of Kansas, I ask him what he has to say to this: According to information gathered from statistics there was in Topeka—I believe that is in Kansas, is it not?

Mr. THOMPSON. I think so.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Topeka, which had a population of 40,000 inhabitants, approximately——

Mr. THOMPSON. The population is a little more than that, I think.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. A little more possibly now; but during the month of September, 1913, there were imported into the city of Topeka 90,062 gallons of whisky, to say nothing of beer. How does the Senator account for that if Kansas is a prohibition State?

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. President, I will simply answer the distinguished Senator in this way: I know not where he gets his figures——

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I get them from the official returns.

Mr. THOMPSON. But I wish to say that you can prove practically anything you want to by statistics. There is an old saying that "figures never lie, but sometimes liars figure." However, the statement that is made as to the shipment of liquor into the State has nothing whatever to do with the question of its unlawful manufacture or sale. That is the question in our State. There is no law in my State prohibiting the shipment of liquor nor the personal use of liquor, but after 36 years' administration of this law we have advanced from a condition where there were saloons of the worst character, passed through the era of "speak-easies, joints, and blind tigers," which are things of the past, down to the present time, when there is not a place in the State where it is commonly known that intoxicating liquor is sold as a beverage. We have seen no necessity for any law prohibiting the shipment of liquor into the State or its personal use in the household. A law of that kind would be superfluous.

Mr. REED and Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Kansas yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. THOMPSON. I yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. REED. I want to ask the Senator from Kansas how long it is since the breweries of Missouri regularly delivered in their wagons beer from house to house in the city of Kansas City, Kans., the largest city in the State of Kansas?

Mr. THOMPSON. In answer to the question of the Senator from Missouri, I will say that is one of the problems that has disturbed the people of Kansas a great deal, and I have introduced a bill, which is before the Committee on the Judiciary of which the distinguished Senator from Missouri is a member, which bill has never been favorably reported, to prohibit absolutely the shipment or the delivery of beer from Missouri or from the border in any way, shape, or form. We have been battling against that evil ever since the establishment of the prohibitory law, and expect to keep it up until even Missouri can not ship liquor or send it over in a wagon or an automobile and sell it unlawfully to the people on the streets of Kansas City or elsewhere in my State.

Mr. REED. Mr. President——

Mr. THOMPSON. We have been vigorously enforcing our laws against this outrage and trying to remedy that condition for the last four or five years, and have finally succeeded in practically eliminating the practice. I am going to be frank, open, and fair about this matter. We have not had absolute prohibition in Kansas for all the 36 years it has been on our statutes.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Then, prohibition has not prevailed there.

Mr. THOMPSON. But we have in the last 10 or 12 years enforced the law vigorously; and I challenge the Senator from Missouri, or any other Senator, to point out to me any place anywhere in the State of Kansas where liquor is knowingly unlawfully sold for beverage purposes.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. THOMPSON. Yes, sir.

Mr. REED. First, the Senator states that he has a bill to prohibit the shipping or hauling of beer or liquor from Missouri to Kansas, and that that bill is before the Judiciary Committee, of which, as he truthfully states, I am a member, and that the bill has not been reported. He seeks thereby to leave the impression that I am in some way responsible for the failure to report out the bill. Now, I want to ask the Senator two questions. First, I ask when did his bill reach the Judiciary Committee?

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator that I introduced the bill early in the session, and I think the Senator is a member of the subcommittee—at least I think I received a letter to that effect——

Mr. REED. Well, you introduced the bill at this December session?

Mr. THOMPSON. Early in the first session.

Mr. REED. Do you know what day?

Mr. THOMPSON. No; but I can look it up.

Mr. REED. Do you know when it reached the Judiciary Committee?

Mr. THOMPSON. I will be glad to look that up.

Mr. REED. Now, I want to ask the Senator another question. I am going to look it up since this insinuation is made. I ask whether the Senator has ever appeared before the Judiciary Committee or asked any action whatsoever on his bill?

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. President, I have spoken to the chairman of the subcommittee several times relative to the matter.

Mr. REED. And you just said I was the chairman of the subcommittee.

Mr. THOMPSON. No; the Senator is mistaken. I have not said that he was chairman of the subcommittee; but I do know that he is a member of some of the subcommittees of the Judiciary Committee before which some of my bills are pending. I do not know that he is the chairman of the subcommittee.

Mr. REED. Oh, yes, Mr. President. The Judiciary Committee has no regular subcommittees, as the Senator would know if he were familiar with the work of that committee. Subcommittees are created at every meeting, for special purposes, and when they have discharged those special purposes cease to exist. So the fact that I am on subcommittees does not indicate that this bill is before any subcommittee of which I am a member. I am a member now of probably 10 or 15 subcommittees.

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. President——

Mr. REED. But I want to say——

Mr. THOMPSON. Will the Senator permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. REED. Now wait until I get through with this.

Mr. THOMPSON. I think I have the floor, Mr. President.

Mr. REED. Will you not permit me to finish?

Mr. THOMPSON. I permitted you to ask me a question, but not to make a speech.

Mr. REED. But I want to correct a statement, and if I am not permitted to correct it now pleasantly, I will correct it in a much more forcible manner in a few moments.

Mr. THOMPSON. I care not how forcibly you correct it right now.

Mr. REED. Well, that is what I want to do right now. I say that, if I am a member of any such subcommittee as the Senator refers to, I have no knowledge of it, and the Senator has never in the world mentioned the fact to me nor asked me to take any action. When he does so, I am prepared to say now that I am in favor of any bill that is drawn in a manner in conformity with law and that has common sense in it, of course, that will prohibit the shipment of liquor into "dry" territory. If the Senator has a bill of that kind, he will have no difficulty in getting it reported out. Now, we have disposed of that matter. The Senator said he wanted to ask me a question.

Mr. THOMPSON. That was the question I was going to ask the Senator, if he would be favorable to my bill?

Mr. REED. I do not know. I do not know whether your bill is soundly drawn, but I will be favorable to a bill that soundly expresses the principle to which I refer.

Mr. THOMPSON. I am glad to know that the Senator will contribute his able experience in that direction to my bill.

Mr. REED. We were on a theme, the matter of the sale of liquor in Kansas. Is it not true to-day that, by common consent, agreement, and arrangement, liquor is regularly delivered in Kansas City, Kans., by the brewers and distillers from house to house; that they haul it in their wagons through the streets of Kansas City, Kans., with practically the same regularity as they do through the streets of Kansas City, Mo.?

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. President, I am glad to say that is not true; there is no agreement or arrangement of that character. We have been bothered a great deal by things of this character in the past, but have practically stopped that sort of business by proper court proceedings.

Mr. REED. Is it not done?

Mr. THOMPSON. The breweries of Missouri, in open violation of the law, sometimes do that thing; and we are endeavoring in every way to fight that evil. I am very glad to know that even the people of Kansas City, Mo., from whence the distinguished Senator from Missouri now hails, have recently decided by a vote on prohibition in a way that will aid Kansas materially in the enforcement of its valued law in the future.

Mr. REED. What law does the Senator refer to?

Mr. THOMPSON. The prohibition law submitted in the State of Missouri at the last election. If I am reliably informed by the returns from the newspapers, prohibition carried in the city of Kansas City or in Jackson County, the county in which Kansas City is located.

Mr. REED. That is true.

Mr. THOMPSON. And I understand that there was a majority for State-wide prohibition throughout the State, leaving out only the city of St. Louis.

Mr. REED. It is true that——

Mr. THOMPSON. I do not care to carry on a controversy with the Senator relative to this matter.

Mr. REED. Well, I can readily see why the Senator does not want to be pinned down to any concrete facts. I will talk about it later.

Mr. THOMPSON. The Senator can ask me any question and I shall be very glad to answer it; but I am glad that the good people of the State of Missouri are fast falling into line for this great reform, which is vital to the civilization of the Nation. The breweries of Missouri have given us more trouble in the enforcement of our prohibitory law than all the other people on the face of the earth, and I hope the time will soon come when that condition will not prevail.

While I am talking on this question I will state that I have here an article from the Joplin Journal, in the Senator's own State, relative to how prohibition has operated in Kansas. It is headed "Prohibition killed Kansas." I should like to send it to the desk and have the Secretary read it, so as to let us know how the people of Missouri feel toward this beneficient law which has been enacted and enforced in my State except for the imposition of the breweries from the State of Missouri.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

[From the Joplin Journal.]

PROHIBITION KILLED KANSAS.

The grape industry is not the only thing ruined by the prohibition in Kansas. In fact, prohibition has killed about every industry in Kansas, excepting the raising of wheat and corn, alfalfa, and fruit, and live stock, and potatoes, and peas, and cabbage, and garden sass, and chickens, and ducks, and geese, and horses, and mules, and blooded cattle. It busted up quite all of our flourishing saloons and beer gardens and paralyzed many of our prominent gamblers. It absolutely killed the bartenders' union. Where once the thriving saloon sent the clamorous odor of its prosperity out upon the sidewalks and clear across the street we find nothing but shoe stores, dry goods stores, meat markets, clothing stores, grocery stores, and other sordid activities of an unhappy people. Where once you saw the long strides of men on Saturday night going joyfully into the rooms where the doors were locked securely, where there was sawdust on the floor and a merry crowd at the mahogany bar treating all around, and a man could get his salary check cashed and spend it all right on his boon companions and go enthusiastically home and break up furniture and give his wife a black eye, instead of all these manifestations of a prosperous and thirsty citizenship, as in our saloon days, we see men go quietly into butcher shops and grocery stores and then go home lugging great bundles of supplies for their wives and children—beefsteak for supper, Sunday dinner, etc. Ah, what a sad result of the banishment of saloons. Prohibition has left little of Kansas except her fields, and factories, and schools, and stores, and pens of fat cattle, and her sober and happy and prosperous people.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. THOMPSON. I yield.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I should like to ask whether that is an editorial or a paid advertisement for the Antisaloon League of Kansas?

Mr. THOMPSON. That is an editorial appearing in the Joplin Journal, a Missouri newspaper.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. The Senator is sure that it is not a paid-for article?

Mr. THOMPSON. I feel sure that it is not.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. How does the Senator know, let me ask?

Mr. THOMPSON. Well, I think it is not. I know of no one who has paid for it.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Well, I do not know.

Mr. THOMPSON. I think they have profited somewhat by a little bit of the good results of prohibition just spreading over into the State of Missouri, all along the line.

Mr. President, before proceeding further I wish to call attention to a certain propaganda against this bill conducted by the National Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association of this country and to certain telegrams and communications which have been sent to various people of my State in an effort to defeat this legislation. In this connection I want to call attention also to the way in which this effort has been received by the people of my State who have been operating for so many years under this law. I send to the desk copies of a couple of telegrams, one from the National Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association to Charles E. Gehring, of the New York Hotel Review, who, I understand, is at the head of the hotel association, where they expect to get some sympathy even in prohibition States, and Mr. Gehring's reply to the telegram, which I should like to have read as part of my remarks.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

CINCINNATI, OHIO, January 28, 1916.

Mr. CHAS. E. GEHRING,
New York Hotel Review:

Senate Judiciary Committee has reported out favorably bill to make the District of Columbia dry. Will you please assist by sending telegrams to the officers of every hotel men's association in the United States, urging them to take immediate action to have thousands of telegrams and letters sent to the United States Senators from their States urging them to vote and work against this bill? Request the hotel men to have telegrams sent also to merchants from whom they purchase supplies. Please use utmost endeavors and draw on us up to $100 to pay for expense of your telegrams. Wire us what it will cost to have you send a letter to every hotel in the United States along same lines. Many thanks for your cooperation. Wire us what you are doing.

NATIONAL WHOLESALE LIQUOR DEALERS' ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA.

MR. GEHRING'S REPLY.

NEW YORK, January 30, 1916.

NATIONAL WHOLESALE LIQUOR DEALERS' ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA,
Cincinnati, Ohio:

Telegrams have gone out to every hotel association of record in the United States to-day. Will mail you copy. A letter to every hotel man individually in the United States would cost, for postage, letterheads, envelopes, duplicating, filling in, addressing, and mailing, complete, approximately $350. While a big task, we are prepared for the good of the cause to proceed forthwith if deemed advisable by you. You will have our undivided cooperation to the exclusion of matters of paramount importance until fight is won.

CHARLES E. GEHRING,
New York Hotel Review.

Mr. THOMPSON. A telegram was sent to Mr. J. M. Bradbury, proprietor of the Madison Hotel, Madison, Kans.; and he wrote me February 5, 1916, as follows:

Hon. W. H. THOMPSON,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Inclosed please find a letter I have received which has been sent out broadcast to all the hotel men. I am not with this party, and believe a great majority of the hotel men in Kansas are for the bill. Push it through if possible. We are here solid for the bill. You can see what the liquor men are doing. This is an insult to the hotel men as a class.

Trusting the bill will go through, I remain,
Yours, very truly,
J. M. BRADBURY.

Here is one of the letters from Mr. Gehring, written to Mr. W. F. Briggs, proprietor of the hotel at Pratt, Kans., and another one written to Mr. James Murphy, at Newton, Kans., proprietor of a hotel there. These were returned to me, the one to Mr. Briggs with this comment:

Make her as dry as hades.

[Laughter.]

I should like to send that letter to the Secretary's desk and have it read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the Secretary will read the communication.

The Secretary read as follows:

NEW YORK CITY, February 10, 1916.

Mr. W. F. BRIGGS, Pratt, Kans.

MY DEAR SIR: The Senate Judiciary Committee in Washington has reported out favorably the bill to make District of Columbia dry. Do you realize the tremendous importance and effect of this bill if passed and signed? Immediate action on your part only can defeat the measure.

Will you please deluge your Senators with an avalanche of telegrams and letters urging their staunchest and most powerful opposition? Every one of your employees and every merchant you trade with should send a telegram or letter, or both, at once to your Senators.

Will you please urge every member of your association to enlist in this most important battle at this very moment being waged against you? Please do not delay. Immediate action is the watchword.

If this bill passes, the National Senate will be on record for national prohibition. Don't overlook this!

I am writing you at the suggestion of the hotel men of Washington and the District of Columbia, and trust that you will come to their aid, whether or not your State is "dry." If you are opposed to prohibition, confiscation, and the other un-American practices which follow in the wake of this agitation, won't you please put your shoulder to the wheel and have your friends and employees do likewise? Write your letters to-day, please.

Yours for true liberty,
CHAS. E. GEHRING,
Managing Editor Hotel Review.

Mr. REED. What is the date of that?

The SECRETARY. The date is February 10, 1916.

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. President, with that letter evidently there has been inclosed to me the envelope which was transmitted with it, all printed "Hon. W. H. THOMPSON, Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.," and evidently stamped and ready to send out. He returned that letter to me with the comment I have mentioned.

The letter from Mr. Murphy, calling my attention to this propaganda, is as follows:

NEWTON, KANS., March 4, 1916.

Hon. W. H. THOMPSON,
Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: In regard to the inclosed circular, which I had been instructed to send you by the Hotel Men's Association, would like to say that I am very much opposed to the sale of liquor in any community or in any State, and I sincerely hope that the United States Senate will go on record as being in favor of national prohibition. This is contrary to what the Hotel Men's Association are advocating; but, as I have already stated, I am bitterly opposed to the sale of intoxicants in any form, and will spend money to that end.

Yours, truly,
J. W. MURPHY.

Mr. President, a number of years ago—about 1910, as I remember—the brewery interests of the country were circulating literature over the Nation when prohibition was ripe in various other sections of the country, and particularly in the State of Illinois and in the city of Chicago, willfully slandering the State of Kansas as to the enforcement of this law, and our people as to how we conducted ourselves in the administration of the law. It reached such a point that the governor of our State, to refute those slanderous charges, wrote to practically every district judge of the State, every mayor, and every police officer, and received something like 200 letters showing how the law was enforced, and how it operated in every section of the State. This governor—Gov. W. R. Stubbs, who opposed me in the senatorial contest four years ago—took the letters with him to Chicago and made a notable address there in the Great Northern Theater on March 27, 1910. I desire to call attention to various letters that were written by those in official positions having charge of the enforcement of this law, to the governor at that time, and which were later collected by the Kansas State Temperance Union, and then let us see whether the foreign breweries are correct in their charges, or the men on the ground who hold high official positions and are intrusted with the responsibility of the enforcement of the law.

I desire first to call attention to a letter from the chief justice of our State, Hon. W. A. Johnston, which was written March 24, 1910, to the governor:

I will say that, judging from litigation before our court, the prohibitory law was enforced at first with some difficulty. Public opinion and greater experience, however, appears to have overcome that difficulty, and the law, although transgressed occasionally, is now effectually enforced, and with no more opposition or difficulty than any other law prohibiting and punishing ordinary offenses.

The closing of the saloons and the joints has had an excellent effect upon the morals and material interests of the people of the State. Among the consequences of prohibition are better homes, happier families, higher standards of intelligence and education, and, of course, a great reduction in crime. No statement or proof is needed to support the claim that these results follow the closing of saloons and the effective enforcement of the prohibitory law. They are the natural and inevitable results, and these have been realized in Kansas.

Yours, very truly,
W. A. JOHNSTON,
Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Kansas.

I also wish to call attention to a letter from that brilliant editor William Allen White, who is the author of many books of note, including A Certain Rich Man and many articles of prominence. The most recent that I can remember is Who Killed Cock

Robin, published in a late number of Collier's. This is what he states under the heading "Emporia, Kans., October 22, 1909."

The letter is rather lengthy, Mr. President, and I will simply ask that it be printed as a part of my remarks.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, it is so ordered.

The letter referred to is as follows:

EMPORIA, KANS., October 22, 1909.

MY DEAR SIR: I have your very kind letter of the 1st asking me something about prohibition in Kansas. I have grown from childhood to the age of 42 years in Kansas, and I probably am greatly prejudiced in its favor. As a young man, from the time I was 16 years old until I was 22, I never saw an open saloon. I know of thousands of children in the State who never saw a saloon. The law was adopted in 1881 and has been enforced ever since. Of course it is enforced better now than it ever was before because a generation has grown up under the law that knows nothing else. The State never was as clean as it is to-day. The liquor law is enforced as well as the law against horse stealing, which does not mean that there are not more or less thieves in the jails for horse stealing and that there are not more or less men in the jails for selling liquor. These laws are violated and will be violated until the end of time.

If there were no violations of the law, the law would not be needed. It happens just now that during the month of August our jails are empty. There is not an able-bodied man or woman in the poorhouse. We have never had any trouble at all to keep our town and county and State going. The town of Emporia is being paved from one end to the other with brick and asphalt without a dollar's worth of liquor money in it. The revenues of Kansas for nearly 30 years have been raised without liquor licenses, and we have built the best system of schools in the world. Taxes are low because the average workingman owns his own home, and thus the taxes are spread out upon thousands of working people who are thrifty, honest, and hard working rather than upon hundreds of landlords who are taxed to maintain the criminal costs in the courts. The average district court criminal docket of Lyon County is five or six cases. And it costs no more to enforce the prohibitory law than it does any other law on the statute books. The taxes last year were as follows:

	Mills.
County tax	3.5
City tax	6.48
School tax	5
	14.98

There were 100 cases in city police court from January 1 to September 1. Of these 17 were for drunkenness and 2 for bootlegging. The rest were for crap shooting, violating gas fitters' ordinance; 19 were for throwing manure in alleys, and other minor charges. I trust that I have answered your questions, and if there is anything further that I can say, kindly let me know.

Truly and sincerely, yours, W. A. WHITE.

Mr. THOMPSON. I desire also to call attention to a letter written by Hon. F. D. Coburn, secretary of the State board of agriculture for many years, and who has the distinction, perhaps, of being the only man in my State, and in any other State I have ever heard of, who refused an appointment to the United States Senate in order to hold that distinguished position as the head of our agricultural department, and a man who has been favorably mentioned at various times in Republican administrations for the high position of Secretary of Agriculture.

Hon. F. D. Coburn, secretary of the State board of agriculture, says:

Prohibition was never before so popular in Kansas as now, after a 30 years' trial. Its effects upon all phases of society's welfare have been helpfully wholesome and the aforetime noisy threats of resubmission are no longer heard, even in whispers.

"Prohibition is in the very air; its invincible hosts on the way are being augmented by reinforcements at every crossroads. Ably led, the forces of rebellion made a long and stubborn resistance to our national authority, but their banners trailed in defeat at Appomattox before the blue-coated legions of Grant. The forces behind the saloon are in rebellion against society and morality and are facing their Appomattox, for which Chicago may be but another name.

This is written in connection with the Chicago campaign.

I desire also to call attention to a letter from the mayor of my old home town, Garden City, relative to the enforcement of the law there, in which he says:

GARDEN CITY, KANS., March 22, 1910.

Hon. W. R. STUBBS,
Governor of Kansas, Topeka, Kans.:

Replying to yours of the 19th relative to the liquor business in our city, will say that there is not a saloon or joint in the city and has not been for 25 years. That there is not a business house vacant in the town and we are compelled to build. Real estate is higher than ever before, and our streets are well lighted. Little or no drunkenness on our streets, and our taxes are not burdensome. Our city never collected one dollar of taxes from a saloon or joint keeper during all its history.

ZEPH ROBERTS, Acting Mayor.

In this connection I desire also to call attention to a letter from the marshal of the same town, which I will simply have made a part of my remarks without reading, written by Mr. A. Lincoln Logan, city marshal.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The letter referred to is as follows:

GARDEN CITY, March 21, 1910.

Hon. W. R. STUBBS,
Governor State of Kansas, Topeka, Kans.

DEAR SIR: I received your inquiry to-day in regard to enforcement of the prohibitory law, and in reply will say that I have been deputy marshal here since May 24, 1909, and was appointed city marshal January 13, 1909.

I find that crime and disorder diminish accordingly with the strict enforcement of the prohibitory law, or even by the employment of officers that are known to favor the strict enforcement of the law. Where there is no secret detective force, as is the case here, actual convictions are hard to secure. Garden City has a population of perhaps 4,500 persons and there is but the one city marshal. Have had only one drunk before the police judge in four weeks, and would also state that when the sugar mill closed here in January, throwing perhaps 400 men out of employment, not a single arrest was necessary for any city ordinance or State law. No extra police or extra help has been required through this time.

Hoping that the above will be satisfactory, I remain,

Yours, respectfully,

A. LINCOLN LOGAN,
City Marshal.

Mr. THOMPSON. I have here a letter from the mayor of Winfield, Kans., in the southwestern section of the State, that I desire to have made a part of my remarks, and one from Salina, Kans., in the north central section of the State, and from the mayor of Wellington, from Independence, from Parsons, Hiawatha, Fort Scott, Emporia, Ottawa, Concordia, and Beloit, coming practically from every section of the State, which I ask to have included in my remarks.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the letters will be included in the Senator's remarks.

The letters referred to are as follows:

WINFIELD, KANS., March 22, 1910.

Gov. W. R. STUBBS, Topeka, Kans.:

In reply to your telegram will state that I believe that there is less liquor sold in Winfield than there has been at any time in my knowledge of the town, which has been about 32 years. We have an occasional bootlegger that will sell bottles of liquor from his pocket, but the first man that gets drunk gives him away and causes his arrest. In that way we elliminate the bootlegger. Joints are things of past in our city. As to vacant property, we have none; on other hand, we have erected about 75 residences each year for past two years. Property values have increased at least one-third and rentals at least one-fourth. Bank deposits past two years have increased 33⅓ per cent. Laboring men are all employed and invest their money in necessaries of life and purchase homes for themselves and betterment of their families. At least 90 per cent of our people favor prohibition laws in State; in fact, you can hardly find anyone that would want to go back to the old system.

CHAS. M. WALLACE, Mayor.

SALINA, KANS., March 22, 1910.

W. R. STUBBS, Topeka, Kans.:

For several years after prohibition amendment was adopted Salina collected fines from joints. Quite a revenue was derived, but it was all expended in court costs and care of criminals and destitute poor, made so from the effect of the liquor traffic. No relief for the taxpayer was had under this system. Every municipal election was fought on the issue of wet or dry and no thought given to the business interest of city. This plan has been abandoned. No man can now be elected to office who is known to be in sympathy with the liquor business. The results are very gratifying. We have time to give attention to the business interests of the city. It is very rare a drunken man can be seen on our streets. The laborers are buying and building homes, and Saturday nights the streets are crowded with them and their families enjoying the benefits of an industrious life. Public improvements are going forward as never before. No empty rooms or buildings in the city. Building permits this month aggregate $80,000. Over $2,000,000 on deposit in our banks and the town full of boys grown to manhood who have never seen an open saloon. I look for national prohibition within 10 years' time.

C. B. KIRTLAND, Mayor.

WELLINGTON, KANS., March 22, 1910.

Hon. W. R. STUBBS, Topeka, Kans.:

Wellington has not had a saloon for 25 years, nor an open joint for 10 years. There has been more material prosperity and a greater increase in population than ever before in the history of the city. No decent citizen, no person worth having as a citizen, would permit a saloon or joint to run or even open in their city.

GEO. H. HUNTER.

INDEPENDENCE, KANS., March 22, 1910.

Gov. STUBBS, Topeka, Kans.:

This is one of the cities of Kansas that strictly enforces the prohibitory law of the State. We have no empty storerooms. No empty houses. Real estate has not decreased in value. Taxes are not burdensome. Crimes and misdemeanors are scarce and all conditions are better because of said enforcement.

F. C. MOSES, Mayor.

PARSONS, KANS., March 22, 1910.

Gov. W. R. STUBBS, Topeka, Kans.:

Since prohibition our arrests for crime have been reduced over 50 per cent. Decrease in the sale of liquor has been over 75 per cent. No increase in taxes. No vacant business houses in our city. Real estate has doubled in the past four years.

J. L. WAITE, Mayor.

BELOIT, KANS., March 21, 1910.

Hon. W. R. STUBBS, Topeka, Kans.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR: Answering your letter of the 19th instant, as to the charges made by the liquor and brewery interests in the Chicago fight for prohibition, in which they charge that prohibition in Kansas has worked great havoc with our business and caused more drunkenness and crime than prevailed under the open saloon.

You say they charge also that more liquor is being sold in Kansas than ever before; that it makes taxation burdensome; that our business houses are vacant; and that it has reduced the value of real estate all over the State.

Now, so far as Beloit and Mitchell County are concerned these charges are not true, but on the other hand are absolutely false. Since I was elected mayor of Beloit nine years ago there has not been an open saloon in our town. The wholesale liquor dealers and brewers of Kansas City and St. Joseph, Mo., by their Richard Roe & John Doe C. O. D. Express Co. shipments made us lots of trouble, but they can't do it any more, under the present law. Now and then a bootlegger causes us some trouble yet, but we get him first or last, and he don't bootleg any more. Now for the truth of their charges. Nobody's business has been wrecked or gone to havoc except it be the saloon man. There are no vacant business houses in our town, but we are building many new and larger ones to-day. Real estate has more than thribbled in value in the last six years, both in the city, and the country surrounding it; our banks are full to overflowing with the people's money. Drunkenness is almost unknown in our city; the man now to get drunk must go to Kansas City, or St. Joseph, Mo., or send his money there and have it shipped to him here, and that's most too much trouble for so little gain. Our city taxes may be a trifle higher since we quit licensing the saloons, but nobody complains; our people prefer prohibition as we now have it to-day, no matter how high you put the license.

Yours, very truly, W. M. MITCHELL, Mayor.

HIAWATHA, KANS., March 21, 1910.

W. R. STUBBS,
Governor, Topeka, Kans.

DEAR SIR: We have not had any saloons in Hiawatha for 35 years and would not have them under any conditions. Our tax is as low as any other State with saloons; our sidewalks are better than in many other cities; our homes are better kept than in many cities, and all without the saloon license; very little bootlegging, and what there is is very soon picked up and punished. We have not one business house empty, everything full, and all doing well, and not any empty residence houses, and not any poor from the saloon business, as we have the best fed and housed and clothed people in any State where they have the rum trade; we have better schools and churches and society than any country where they have saloons, and property is not running down in price, but on the boom; city property is high and farms close in sell very high; one sold last month for $350 per acre, not very well improved. That does not look as if things are running down very fast, and I know by talking with our people that 90 per cent are solid for prohibition.

Yours, very respectfully, J. T. GRIMES, Mayor.

FORT SCOTT, KANS., March 22, 1910.

Gov. W. R. STUBBS, Topeka, Kans.:

Every business house occupied by from 10 to 15 saloons under nonenforcement of the prohibitory law now occupied by legitimate mercantile business; new business houses built and none vacant. Rents have advanced materially. Public expense of sustaining poor families reduced one-fourth or more. Percentage of crime reduced materially and cost of policing city diminished proportionately. My judgment is the people of Fort Scott would vote 3 to 1 against opening saloons here after being without them and their revenue.

W. F. BROOKS, Mayor.

EMPORIA, KANS., March 17, 1910.

W. R. STUBBS,
Governor State of Kansas, Topeka, Kans.

DEAR SIR: Replying to your message of March 11, 1910, will say that the city of Emporia is in better shape at present than it has ever been. About 100 houses were built last season, and practically there are no vacant houses in town at present, rents are as high as they have ever been, and when residence property changes hands it brings nearer what it cost to build than it ever has. There is very little crime and almost no drunkenness. We do not pick up a drunk once a month. The bank deposits are at a very high state, and the people are generally prosperous. I believe that 90 per cent of the people favor prohibition and its enforcement.

Yours, truly, FRANK MCCAIN, Mayor.

OTTAWA, KANS., March 20, 1910.

W. R. STUBBS,
Governor, Topeka, Kans.

DEAR SIR: In reply to your inquiry, will say that drunkenness has diminished 25 per cent, and I know we have at least 50 per cent less cases in police court growing out of liquor than we had before the prohibitory law was strictly enforced. While I have been an officer here for four years, I have given this question very close attention. Our people are highly in favor of the prohibitory law and its enforcement.

Yours, very truly, F. T. BRUNER,
Chief of Police.

CONCORDIA, KANS.

W. R. STUBBS,
Governor, Topeka, Kans.

DEAR SIR: Replying to your letter of inquiry, 19th instant, as to increase or decrease of drunkenness, will say that in my 11 years' work with the sheriff's office and police force here drunkenness has decreased 75 per cent and crimes usually brought about by drink have decreased in about the same proportion. To explain: In February, 1898, our county jail had in it 11 prisoners, 7 charged with felony. During the three years and four months which I had charge of the jail, beginning at above date, the average number confined therein was 5, since which time the average has fallen to 1, the jail being empty one-half the time. In 1899 the average Saturday sales of booze, as reported by the three joint keepers, was $150 each, or $450 by all of them. It is safe to say that sales by drug stores and other sources amounted to $50 more.

BELOIT, KANS., March 20, 1910.

Hon. W. R. STUBBS,
Governor, Topeka, Kans.

DEAR SIR: In reply to yours of the 19th, will say that in my opinion the percentage of drunkenness and crime has decreased fully 90 per cent under the strict enforcement of the prohibition law. I have occupied the office of city marshal for the past 16 years and am therefore in a position to make a close estimate; our chief trouble here is from liquor that is shipped in by private parties.

Very respectfully, yours,

SAMUEL BANKS.

Mr. THOMPSON. As far as Kansas is concerned the question of prohibition is absolutely settled. There is no political party there which can place in its platform even a hint at a resubmission of the question and hope for success at the polls. Only two years ago a distinguished man of ability, who has many virtues and had been generally successful politically, got it into his head that a resubmission of the proposition, after 35 years, would be popular as an issue in a race for governor of the State. As you know, there are a great many people who believe that this question, like every other question, ought to be submitted to the people for their consideration at various times; and although many people believe that who would finally vote for prohibition if it was resubmitted, voted for this candidate for governor on a resubmission issue, out of a vote of 528,206, including those who simply believed in the submission of the question, as well as those who were opposed to prohibition, all the votes that could be mustered for resubmission during that campaign from every political party—and there were four or five parties in the field at that time—were 47,201, less than 9 per cent of the vote at that election.

As I said in the beginning, I want to be absolutely fair and frank and tell the whole truth about this matter. It is true that we did not have absolute prohibition in Kansas during all these years, for, greatly to our shame and chagrin, in the early existence of the law there were but few people who felt that it could be enforced strictly to the letter. It is true the saloon was put out of business, but there were many well-meaning and law-abiding people who felt that after all, perhaps, this liquor business was a necessary evil and had to exist in some form or another, and they more or less winked at a violation of the law behind closed doors, in "speak-easies," and "blind tigers," and "joints." But that day has passed. That condition existed more or less throughout the State, principally in the large cities, however, until the memorable crusade of Carrie Nation with her little hatchet along about 1900, or 15 years ago. By the forcible use of the hatchet, as you remember, she entered the barrooms operated behind closed doors and broke the mirrors and the glasses and the beer bottles and things that were in sight. She announced the doctrine that it was not unlawful to resort to unlawful means to destroy an unlawful business.

No matter how much we may criticize that doctrine, this forcible crusade brought the attention of the thinking people of Kansas to the unlawful business, those who did not have it pointed out to them before, and it then became an issue as to whether the lawless element of the State was greater than the State itself; and on that issue with the honest, earnest, and law-abiding people which I claim for the State of Kansas, you may well know the result. Instead of permitting the officials to wink at the loose enforcement of the law as in the past, they called the officers on the carpet and asked for a vigorous enforcement of the law, and against every man who failed they instituted proceedings in court and removed him from office, or waited until they got a chance at him at the polls. So we got officials in every department charged with that duty to enforce the law strictly to the letter.

For the benefit of the business men, the only men of high standing whom I have found in the city of Washington who fear prohibition for the District, claiming that it would be ruinous to the business interests of the city, that there never was a greater business mistake made in the world. We learned from actual experience that the more vigorously we enforce this law the greater was our prosperity in Kansas. They seem to forget that the many hundreds of dollars spent for liquor unnecessarily by people who can not spare it will be spent in the dry goods stores, the grocery stores, and for things of necessity which they have to offer, and that they will receive the money instead of the saloon, which has been receiving it for these many years in this city and District.

On that point I wish to call attention to the fact that after 35 years of experience with this law, Kansas, on January 1, 1916, paid the last dollar of its State indebtedness. But few States in the Union are so well favored. When the saloon was in force our State was indebted nearly $2,000,000, and in January last we paid the last cent of this indebtedness. Instead of being one of the poorest States in the Union financially, as formerly rated, we have gradually advanced until now we are the richest State per capita in the entire United States. We have in the banks in Kansas, I know from a recent statement of December 12, 1916, over $290,000,000, deposited by the people of my State, being an average deposit for every man, woman, and child of over $170. In addition to this, practically every bank in my State has an account with the banks of Kansas City, Mo., where millions of dollars go every year. It is safe to say that, including the deposits in Kansas City, Mo., belonging to the people of Kansas, we have to our credit $500,000,000, or at least $300 per capita—greater than can be claimed by any other State in the Union.

Mr. REED. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. VARDAMAN in the chair). Will the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. THOMPSON. Certainly.

Mr. REED. The Senator referred to a bill he had introduced which was before the Judiciary Committee. I wish to ask the Senator if it is the bill entitled "An act to amend section 242?"

Mr. THOMPSON. That is, relative to labeling articles?

Mr. REED. Yes, sir.

Mr. THOMPSON. That is one of the bills.

Mr. REED. Is that the one the Senator said I was on the subcommittee to consider?

Mr. THOMPSON. No. I think you were on the subcommittee upon the joint resolution.

Mr. REED. For a constitutional amendment?

Mr. THOMPSON. I think so.

Mr. REED. To clear it up, there never has been a subcommittee appointed.

Mr. THOMPSON. I have a letter to that effect.

Mr. REED. The joint resolution the Senator introduced is identical with a joint resolution that was introduced by some half dozen other Senators. There was never a subcommittee appointed on the Senator's joint resolution.

Mr. THOMPSON. I am not charging any dereliction of duty to the Senator or making any insinuation against him.

Mr. REED. The Senator said I was holding up his bill, and his statement ought to be now withdrawn.

Mr. THOMPSON. I withdraw the insinuation, Mr. President, if there was such. I did not mean to say anything to the discredit of the Senator from Missouri in any way. I am glad to know that he is favorable to the bill to which he has called my attention, for I know I will have his help now.

Mr. REED. I have not committed myself to your bill. I said that I was favorable to the principle.

Mr. THOMPSON. I will be glad to have the Senator's help on the subcommittee. I shall try to get him appointed on the subcommittee.

Mr. REED. I thank the Senator, but I suppose the Judiciary Committee will be able to attend to that, and I shall not need the Senator's distinguished and able assistance; but——

Mr. THOMPSON. The Senator is more fortunate than I am. I do need his assistance to get this bill out of the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. REED. The Senator will allow me to finish my sentence.

Mr. THOMPSON. Did the Senator find my resolution for national prohibition while he was searching around the committee?

Mr. REED. I found your resolution for an amendment of the Constitution prohibiting the sale of liquor. That is the one that was introduced December 10, 1915, over a year ago, and no subcommittee has been appointed on that, evidently for the reason that it is identical with some five or six, or perhaps more, resolutions introduced by other Senators, and upon some of which subcommittees were appointed. However, on none of those am I a member of a subcommittee. So that I may not be misunderstood, I will state that I am favorable to the proposition of stopping the shipment of liquor into dry territory to be disposed of contrary to and in violation of the laws of that dry territory. That may and may not be a very different thing from saying that I am for the Senator's particular proposition, because I have not examined that particular proposition, and I do not know just what it is.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Wyoming?

Mr. THOMPSON. Gladly.

Mr. CLARK. In the absence of the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, and in order to clear up the situation a little at least, it may be proper to say that the Judiciary Committee has not been neglecting the various bills to which the Senator has referred, but, on the contrary, has given the whole subject matter careful and studious attention from time to time. I will say to the Senator now that a special meeting of that committee has been called for the present week to consider this identical subject and no other. So it shows that at least the Judiciary Committee is exhibiting some activity along the line.

Mr. THOMPSON. I thank the Senator for his suggestion that progress is being made in the consideration of this matter by the committee. I am very glad indeed to know it. If I have said anything which indicates that the committee has been derelict in its duty in any way, I will withdraw that statement gladly.

I am glad to know that I have the cooperation of the distinguished Senator from Missouri in a matter which is vital to my State, and I hope that he will be a member of any subcommittee that will have consideration of that bill.

Now, Mr. President, I have extended these remarks longer than I anticipated when I took the floor. I have called attention to a great many things in a financial way simply to answer the charges which are made that economically prohibition is a failure, for I think I can safely say that measured by dollars and cents it is the best investment that the people of Kansas have ever made. If I were to be asked the question what law we are more firmly wedded to than all others upon our statute books—I am speaking now of those things which are malum prohibitum, that are made crimes by law—I would unhesitatingly answer the prohibitory liquor law, for I believe it will be the last one, if it comes to repealing of laws, that our people would give up.

Dollars and cents do not mark the greatest benefit. It is true that nowadays almost everything is measured in dollars and cents; if it pays, then it is said to be a good thing; if it does not pay, it is not a good thing; but I believe, after all, the greatest benefit of prohibition to my State is the fact that we have over a half million boys and girls in the State who have never seen a saloon, or at least have never had an opportunity to visit one. I hope they never will. We have now "dry" territory to the west of us and to the south of us, and, thank Heaven, Nebraska to the north of us just recently voted for prohibition; Missouri is fast falling in line, and we hope that before many years pass we shall not be surrounded by any of what are termed "wet States."

Mr. OWEN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Oklahoma?

Mr. THOMPSON. I yield.

Mr. OWEN. I merely wish to suggest to the Senator from Kansas that the prohibition States now extend from Texas to Canada.

Mr. THOMPSON. I am glad to have the suggestion of the Senator from Oklahoma. When Missouri is included we shall all be satisfied.

If I were asked what law has been the greatest educational benefit to my State, I would have to answer the prohibitory liquor law. When that law went into effect the illiteracy of the State was 49 per cent. It has decreased since that time to less than 2 per cent—the lowest of any State in the Union, excepting one.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. How many years——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senators must address the Chair before interrupting a speaker. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. THOMPSON. I do.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. How many years has the prohibition law of Kansas been in effect?

Mr. THOMPSON. For about 36 years. We expend annually $12,000,000 for educational purposes. We now have 27,000 pupils in our own colleges.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I want to ask the Senator from Kansas if I heard him aright——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. THOMPSON. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. REED. Did the Senator from Kansas state that before the prohibitory law was passed in Kansas the illiteracy was 49 per cent?

Mr. THOMPSON. My understanding is that prior to 1880 the illiteracy was 49 per cent.

Mr. REED. Oh, there never was a community in America which was so ignorant as that—not even in Kansas.

Mr. THOMPSON. That may be; but that is my understanding of the records. I have seen the statement printed at various times, and the books published by the Antisaloon League give this figure. I am glad now to say that at the present time the illiteracy is less than 2 per cent. If I have made a mistake in my statement, I shall be glad to correct it if the Senator from Missouri will call my attention to it. I have, however, seen that statement in various statistics and in various publications and speeches which have been made upon this subject, and have used it with the understanding that it was admitted to be correct. I do know that we have now 27,000 students in the colleges of our own State, which is the largest college attendance in proportion to population in the Union. The statistics show that there are 54 counties without an idiot, 87 counties without an insane inmate, and 96 counties without an habitual drunkard. Tell me that prohibition does not prohibit—with 96 out of 105 counties without an inebriate or an habitual drunkard. I regret to say that the few drunkards we have are along the borders of Missouri and Nebraska, and now there will not long be many on the Nebraska side and I hope there will not long be many on the Missouri side.

Then, as to our health, if I may boast of that, we have the lowest death rate of any State in the Union—7½ per 1,000 annually.

Mr. REED. I want to ask the Senator a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. THOMPSON. I yield.

Mr. REED. I want to ask the Senator how he knows that? I notice, in looking through the Statistical Abstract, that Kansas does not even report to the Federal Government as to its vital statistics. It is one of the two or three States that evidently have no vital statistics.

Mr. THOMPSON. It probably had no deaths.

Mr. REED. It is impossible that such a blessing as that should have fallen upon the country, that all Kansans should live forever.

Mr. THOMPSON. Some live longer than they ought to, perhaps.

Mr. REED. That is a fact which is generally admitted outside of Kansas.

Mr. THOMPSON. Yes, sir; but I am reliably informed by those who make the statistics that they were so astonished that they checked up two or three different times to ascertain whether or not that was really true. Of course, that might not be considered by some people as worthy of consideration, but I think it is. While other things may have contributed to all these good results, it is fair to say that prohibition has done something toward that end.

Mr. President, in closing I wish simply to say that in a country like this, that is acknowledged to be the greatest and richest country in the world, with the greatest natural resources of any country, where there is a single man, woman, or child anywhere under the Stars and Stripes suffering for the necessaries of life, there must be something wrong somewhere. I wish, sir, simply to offer the suggestion that if the hundreds of millions of dollars that are unnecessarily expended every year for intoxicating liquor were devoted to useful purposes, the time would come when there would not be suffering anywhere, and those who are now homeless and suffering for the necessaries of life would have plenty. If we eradicate the liquor traffic not only in the District of Columbia, but in the Nation, we shall have struck down the greatest enemy to the country and the worst enemy to humanity, and will have taken the longest step that we have ever taken toward bringing about comfort, prosperity, patriotism, and happiness everywhere.

Mr. REED and Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I shall take only a moment. I do not intend to discuss the prohibition question. I asked the Senator from Kansas in rather a jocular spirit this morning if it were not true that beer and whisky were regularly delivered in the city of Kansas City, Kans., openly at the present time?

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. President, will the Senator submit to a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. REED. Yes.

Mr. THOMPSON. The Senator's question involved the further statement that it was knowingly done and with the consent of some official authority?

Mr. REED. Well, I do not care to cavil about the form of the question. The Senator has made that the occasion of a sort of attempted diatribe about Missouri and Missouri people, and he has had some very loosely constructed figures and statements introduced into the RECORD. I think that there is no looser statement than the one he made about his own State, that before the prohibitory law was passed in Kansas, which was only a few years ago, the degree of illiteracy was 49 per cent; that is to say, that nearly one-half of the population could not read or write. Of course, that is not possible. There never was a State in the Union populated by white people, as Kansas is, where any such lamentable condition as that existed. So also the statement that the degree of illiteracy is now the lowest of any State in the Union is equally loose and needs careful revision.

However, I do not stand here to attack the State of Kansas. Her schools are good schools; her colleges and universities are good colleges and universities. As long as I have known of Kansas intimately this has been true, and I have known of Kansas, through living in the immediate neighborhood, for nearly 30 years.

I do not know what effect the prohibitory law may have had in Kansas as a whole, but I want to say to the Senator that no man can candidly claim that there was any real enforcement of that prohibitory law for many, many years after it was passed. I remember a good many years ago trying a case in a court, which was presided over by the Senator's distinguished father, I think, in a small town in Kansas.

Mr. THOMPSON. Hiawatha.

Mr. REED. At Hiawatha. It seemed to me that there was not a lawyer at the bar who was not a common drunkard, and they had prohibition there, but it did not prohibit.

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. REED. Yes.

Mr. THOMPSON. The Senator will acquit me of that. He knows I had not been admitted to the bar at that time. That was in 1891, when I first became acquainted with the Senator from Missouri, and we have been good friends ever since.

Mr. REED. The Senator was not at that time a lawyer, and I am stating this to cast no aspersions upon the Senator's State or town. I had a good deal of business for a good many years in Kansas, and I say now, without desiring to reflect upon the Senator's State, that there were more drunkards to the square acre in Kansas than in any place I ever was, and that, too, under a prohibitory law.

Mr. THOMPSON. Would the Senator object to stating how many years ago that was?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. REED. My travels back and forth there——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator declines to yield.

Mr. REED. Oh, no; I yield.

Mr. THOMPSON. The time to which the Senator refers was 25 years ago, was it not?

Mr. REED. Oh, no; not that far back. Formerly I frequently had legal busines in the State of Kansas.

Mr. OWEN. May I suggest——

Mr. REED. I will ask the Senator to wait until I have concluded this sentence. That business dropped off very largely something like 12 or 15 years ago, and I have not been there very much since. I am going to state this case fairly before I get through, so that I do not think the Senator from Kansas can object to it; but the facts ought to be stated. Did the Senator from Oklahoma desire to ask me something?

Mr. OWEN. I merely desired to remove the doubt as to whether the period referred to by the Senator from Kansas, when the Senator from Missouri was practicing law in Kansas, was 45 years ago or 55 years ago?

Mr. REED. Well, hardly that long ago. It was about the period when the Senator from Oklahoma was rising to national fame; and I presume that is not more than 20 years back.

I only know from reading the press that up to very recently—and, I think, up to the present time—liquor was regularly delivered in the largest city of Kansas by the breweries of Missouri or elsewhere from house to house, just as it was delivered in Kansas City, Mo.; and the press have stated that it was by agreement and arrangement, and that there was to be no interference with it. I think, however, to state it fairly, it was claimed that this was done in interstate commerce and was within the law, the liquor being transported across the State line. But we can not escape the conclusion that there were people there still drinking it or they would not have been buying it.

Now, since the Senator has had occasion to refer to Missouri as though it were some dark and benighted spot existing just outside the golden sunshine that glorifies Kansas——

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. REED. When I finish the sentence. I desire to offer a few observations on that question. I now yield to the Senator.

Mr. THOMPSON. I hope the Senator will acquit me of making any charge against the good people of the State of Missouri. I have made none. I have the very highest admiration for the people of Missouri generally. A great many of them, especially in Kansas City, Mo., went there from Kansas. The only charge I have made is against the brewery interests of that State as the only ones who have given us any trouble in the enforcement of our prohibitory law. They are the only people I have referred to as the element that comes across and helps to violate the laws of the State and then get back home unharmed.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, there are two elements that cross the State line. There is the brewery agent from Missouri with his load of beer going to Kansas to sell drinks, and there is a large, constant, and never-decreasing stream of Kansans coming across from Kansas to Missouri to get a drink. It is mutual. They have the thirst over there, and there are a few institutions in Missouri that have the wherewithal to satisfy their thirst.

Mr. THOMPSON. Does not the Senator think it rather hard to keep tempting us in that way all these years? Why not put down the business?

Mr. REED. "Tempting us!"

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senators will not interrupt a Senator when he is speaking without permission from the Chair.

Mr. REED. Interruptions are entirely agreeable to me. "Tempting us!" Poor children, without sufficient stamina or manhood so that they can maintain themselves in the face of temptation.

Mr. THOMPSON. Well, we have been able to take care of ourselves fairly well regardless of the temptation.

Mr. REED. Tempting a Kansan! Leading a Kansan astray! Why, out in that State the Kansas fellow jumps up and kicks his heels together three times before he alights, and declares that he is "the bad man from Bitter Creek," and that he knows more and can do more than any other individual on God's earth. He ought not to be whining around about temptation. They are a smart and a capable people, a very independent people, a people very hard to manage; but the cold truth about the situation ought to be told. I have not the figures, but they are sending into Kansas to-day, not alone from Missouri but from every point in the United States where liquor is made, liquor in astounding quantities, and it is being sent there to be drunk up, and it is consumed; and I will make the assertion now that you will find as many drunken men in any city in Kansas as you will find in any city of the same size in Illinois, in Arkansas, in New York, or in Missouri. When the Senator says there are 90 counties in his State in which there is not a drunkard that is like his figures of 49 per cent of illiteracy before prohibition took effect.

The Senator's State has not become purer and better than other places. I recall that when we drove the public gambling houses—I hope the Senator will wait to hear this—out of Missouri, they took refuge in Kansas City, Kans., and ran openly in violation of the law for over 15 years and flourished as the green bay tree, and sent their agents to sell their lottery tickets surreptitiously across the State line. Virtue may make its home in Kansas, but it is not the exclusive inhabitant of that delightful territory.

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. President, if the Senator wants to tell all about it, he certainly is free to admit that that condition does not exist in Kansas City, Kans., now. We are enforcing the law there. The gambler and the saloon go together, hand in hand.

Mr. REED. No.

Mr. THOMPSON. And when we do away with the saloon we are through with the gambler.

Mr. REED. Until about five or six years ago, or perhaps seven years ago, they had innumerable whisky and beer joints in Kansas City, Kans. They openly defied the law in the city of Leavenworth. The hotel bars and saloons were as open there as they were in the State of Missouri, and drunkenness was a very prevalent disease, or habit, or whatever it is called. Five or six years back they elected a man attorney general of the State who undertook to enforce these laws. He had a desperate time in accomplishing his undertaking, but he prosecuted the "joints." The open saloon, I think, he absolutely eradicated. Finally the law was so enforced that open gambling was stopped, and I think they have a very fair condition of public and private morals in the State of Kansas; but they have as much drunkenness, in my opinion, in that State to-day as they have in the State of Missouri, and I think a little more.

The Senator has spoken about Missouri. I have always been a believer in the doctrine, first, that you can not successfully enforce any law unless the moral sentiment of the community is back of it, and that the only way to get good results is to create the moral sentiment and then enact the law. I may or may not be mistaken in that view. Accordingly, however, I have been a believer in the doctrine of local option, because when the people of a local community really desire to expel the saloon and are back of a law which they themselves helped to enact it has nearly always been proved that the law can be enforced.

There is another reason, which I do not urge in favor of the saloon but which I simply state as a fact: That a saloon in a small neighborhood may be a very much greater nuisance than it would be in the business district of a large city, because it more immediately affects the life and the comfort and peace of the small community. Those two considerations, taken together, have convinced many people who, like myself, are opposed to intemperance and would like to see the day when there is not a single victim of intemperance on the earth that the best way to get results is to proceed along the line of permitting local communities to prohibit the sale of liquor within their borders; and proceeding upon that line the temperance forces have been able in my State to have local option adopted in all but a very few of the counties except where there are large cities, and even in those counties the parts outside of the cities have been voted dry. Thus these people are able to protect themselves against what they consider an evil. When you come to the question of the city, I am in favor of the city exercising exactly the same right. When it has exercised it, then its mandate ought to be obeyed.

The difference is one of viewpoint. One man, having succeeded in carrying prohibition in his community, thinks that it is his duty to carry it to the State. Other men think it is then their duty to force their views and opinions upon the people of other States. It has invariably happened when this is done that evil has resulted. The prohibitory law in Kansas undoubtedly was enacted before there was a sufficient sentiment to support it, and accordingly they had an intolerable, a fearful condition in Kansas for many years. When public opinion overtook the law, then they had, as they have now, quite a different condition. How long it will continue I can not say; perhaps always.

But the Senator from Kansas must not overlook the fact that Kansas can not be taken as an example for all parts of the country, and for the very patent reason that Kansas is absolutely an agricultural State. The largest city in Kansas does not exceed forty to forty-five thousand in population.

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. President, those figures should be corrected, I think. Wichita has some sixty-five to seventy thousand, and Kansas City, Kans., 100,000. The Senator remembers that.

Mr. REED. I think the Senator is correct and that I have understated the population of those cities. I was thinking of Topeka as the largest town. Kansas City, Kans., is larger than Topeka, and Wichita is larger than the capital, Topeka. The probabilities are that the largest city in Kansas has approximately 100,000 people, but the State is essentially an agricultural State, and a good State. The conditions there, however, and the conditions that exist in a State like that represented by the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MARTINE], or the State of New York, are different. The conditions that obtain in Kansas are not the conditions that obtain in the District of Columbia.

I am perfectly willing to let the people of the District of Columbia or the city of Washington vote upon this proposition, and if they vote for it let it be enacted into a law. But no greater mistake was ever made, in my judgment, in any moral movement, than to undertake to drive it along at such a rate that public sentiment is arrayed against it. Always there ought to be care taken not to addle the egg in your haste to hatch it.

The Senator has spoken about the morality of Kansas, the schools of Kansas, and the money of Kansas. Comparisons are odius, but Kansas is not a whit ahead of Nebraska, not a whit.

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. REED. Yes.

Mr. THOMPSON. The Senator is aware that Nebraska has just passed favorably on State-wide prohibition.

Mr. REED. Exactly; but I am talking about conditions. The fact that Nebraska on the 7th day of November passed a prohibitory law has nothing to do with its previous condition. That law has not been in force, if indeed it is in force to-day. I do not think it is in force. They still have open saloons. So I am comparing this wet State with the State of Kansas, and I say that in every respect it will rank favorably with Kansas, and that is no reflection upon Kansas. But the fact that I state points the fallacy of arguments that attribue a condition to one cause when it is the result of thousands of causes.

So, too, the State of Kansas is not one whit ahead of the State of Missouri, which the Senator seemed to speak of with such contempt. Nay, it is not comparable with the State of Missouri in many respects. Its morals are no better and not so good. Its credits are not so sound nor so well taken. Its courts do not stand so high. Comparisons are odious. The State of Kansas is no better in any one of these respects to which the Senator has called attention than the great State of Texas, neither has her increase in population or wealth been so rapid as that of the great State of Texas. Her women are no better looking, and her men no braver and no more patriotic.

All these questions ought to be settled according to the facts and not according to the excited imagination of men who attribute everything on earth to one reason.

If I were asked to tell the principal reason for the prosperity of Kansas, I would have no difficulty in citing the reason and in proving it. The State of Kansas, of course, to begin with, was populated by ordinary American citizens, except a few extraordinary ones who went there under the excitement of a great international contest which was impending. They settled upon these great prairies; they had many years of adversity; they had droughts; they had bad crops; they had grasshoppers; and they had other troubles which fell upon them through no fault of the people. But for some reason or other God Almighty has sent generous rains to the State of Kansas for the past 10 or 12 years.

The arid region has been shrinking up and the agricultural region has been extended farther and farther to the west until to-day and for the last 10 or 12 years at least the Kansas farmer has been practically sure of his crops. Those great fields of corn have stretched away until they touch the horizon's brim and their golden wheat fields wave in the sun and have brought to the farmer bounteous results. Just in proportion to the wheat and corn crop of Kansas has Kansas prospered. Whenever she has had a bad crop she has had hard times. Whenever she has had a good crop she has had good times. Her people have been frugal and industrious and improved the happy conditions which God Almighty has sent to Kansas, and they are prosperous to-day.

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. REED. In a moment. I am not so ungenerous as to take away from God Almighty His share of credit for prosperity in Kansas.

Mr. THOMPSON. The Senator will then admit, even after all this argument, it was water after all that helped out our people, not liquor?

Mr. REED. Yes; water helped you out. I do not say that liquor ever did you any good. I have always thought the worst combination on earth was a Kansan and a quart of Bourbon. It seemed to me he never did know how to take a drink.

Mr. THOMPSON. We never had sufficient experience.

Mr. REED. He had a thirst that apparently was like the thirst of the earth in the arid counties of the West; it could not be satisfied. It drinks all that falls upon it and opens its mouth and cries for more. If there ever was a place on the earth where they did need to regulate the habits of the people it was in Kansas.

Now, the State of Oklahoma has always had a kind of prohibition, legal prohibition. It has more drugs than any other place except Kansas that I know of, but Oklahoma does not owe its prosperity to that. Before I leave Oklahoma let me not be understood to reflect upon that State. To my mind it is the magic State of the Union. It does have some people who drink liquor and prohibition does not seem to have stopped it. That is all that I am intimating. But Oklahoma had some years of wonderful prosperity. Then she had some years of very hard times. Apparently this last year business and enterprise have again revived. Seek for its cause. Just as long as Oklahoma had enough rain and had big crops her granaries were filled; when the railroad trains were bearing the wealth that had been produced by her soil to the East and bringing back gold to Oklahoma she had prosperity. Just the minute the heavens looked down cloudless and the vault resembled a sheet of blue steel, the sun burned into the soil, vegetation shriveled, and Oklahoma had bad times. It was not prohibition; it was rain, or lack of rain; it was weather. Yet I do not claim that this settles the question against prohibition. But let us talk about these things as they are.

Mr. LANE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. REED. I do.

Mr. LANE. I have enjoyed listening to the discussion by the Senator from Missouri in his reference to Kansas. Missouri was always on the back of Kansas. That was the case in the early history of that Territory in the old days of John Brown and Jim Lane, who was a very distant relative of mine. Kansas had to bear with them or fight them.

But as to the experience of States which have gone dry, and I say it in all seriousness without any joking, in the State of Oregon conditions are far better on the average with the people for the reason of its having gone dry. The men who had spent their money for liquor, who burned up their wages on Saturday nights in barrooms, took it home when the State went dry and bought shoes for the little children who had formerly almost gone barefoot, took home food for their wives to eat and clothing for them to wear.

The merchants in every county throughout the State state freely that their bills are better paid and that they do more legitimate business and have less trouble to collect their bills than they did when we had the license system of selling liquor. There is no doubt of it.

It rains in the western part of Oregon regularly every year. There is an average of 44 inches, plenty of it, and in some places we have to put in tiling to get rid of it, so weather has nothing to do with it; the result has been as an economic improvement. There is not a doubt in the world that the people are more prosperous and the communities throughout the State and the wives and children and the little homes are better off because the State is "dry."

Mr. STONE. When did the State of Oregon go dry?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to his colleague?

Mr. REED. Certainly.

Mr. LANE. We had local option. It has been going dry for about 10 years.

Mr. STONE. I say the State.

Mr. LANE. Several years ago; about four years ago.

Mr. STONE. I was in the State a year ago last summer and in Portland I saw open saloons at the hotels.

Mr. LANE. There was an exception in favor of hotels at one time, but the barrooms have been closed now.

Mr. STONE. These were barrooms.

Mr. LANE. In hotels?

Mr. STONE. Yes, sir; they are the only ones I saw.

Mr. LANE. We had a law in Oregon which permitted saloons to run at full blast. That was changed at the election two years ago, and if the Senator——

Mr. STONE. I am not entering into any controversy; I was asking for information, for it was only a little over a year ago when I was in Oregon, and in browsing about in the great and beautiful city of Portland I happened to observe that there were saloons. I did not think anything about it; I just supposed it was common there, as it was in other places; but I saw them; in fact, I peeped into one or two of them just to see what was going on.

Mr. LANE. Last year?

Mr. STONE. Last year. Let me see, I want to be accurate about it. It was the year of the World's Fair at San Francisco.

Mr. LANE. That was last year. The Senator then did better than even the officers of the law, for the State was dry then. No saloons were in existence.

Mr. STONE. There were friends of the Senator and men who have a right to be present in the Senate Chamber who accompanied me on one or two occasions. I am giving no names, but that is what occurred. Those saloons were there. If they were there a year ago or a little more, and the Senator says now that everybody is happier and more prosperous and doing better, and I am not disputing it, I am just wondering how in so short a time my friend, the distinguished junior Senator from Oregon, being here, spending his time in Washington, attending with great assiduity and value to his country to the services imposed upon him, would know just how many people were paying their debts, more or less, than they did before, and all that sort of thing.

Mr. LANE. Now, Mr. President, the State went dry——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the junior Senator from Missouri yield further to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. REED. I yielded for a question. I did not want to lose the floor. The Senator has occupied some time, but I do not want to deny him the privilege of concluding.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The junior Senator from Missouri yields further to the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. LANE. After the genial and whole-souled remarks of my esteemed friend, the senior Senator from Missouri, I will say that the State went dry in 1916. This is the end of the year 1916.

Mr. REED. Let me ask the Senator when the law went into effect.

Mr. LANE. In 1916.

Mr. REED. How soon after the election?

Mr. LANE. It went into effect immediately following the passage of the law. The next year, 1915, then——

Mr. REED. So there has been only one year for this prosperity to spring up.

Mr. LANE. Prosperity did not spring up, but the result was the paying of debts to merchants. I had that information from them directly, from the larger merchants of the city of Portland and reports from other portions of the State. In 1916 the State went what they call bone dry; that is, something after the manner of the bill introduced by the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT]. Prior to that time anyone could import 2 quarts of whisky each month and a certain amount of beer, I do not know how much. So if the Senator was there during the year 1915 and he was procuring whisky, he was entitled to import a couple of quarts, I suppose; but there were no saloons.

Mr. REED. The Senator ought to quote my colleague accurately. He did not say that he procured liquor; he said he saw open bars.

Mr. LANE. If he saw open barrooms they were conducted contrary to law, for it is against the law.

Mr. LEE of Maryland. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. LEE of Maryland. With the permission of the junior Senator from Missouri, I should like to offer an amendment to the pending bill and have it printed and lie on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be printed and lie on the table.

Mr. REED. I really desire to conclude my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri declines to be further interrupted.

Mr. REED. No; I do not want to take the Senator from Oregon off the floor, but I want to admonish him that I should like to conclude.

The Senator from Kansas said that the prohibition law worked so well in Kansas there was not a single idiot or insane person in some of the counties of the State. That is another remarkable statement. Wild statements of that kind do no good. They have had prohibition in Kansas, I have forgotten how long, but I think for 20 years.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. The Senator from Kansas said for 30 years.

Mr. REED. Here is the Statistical Abstract the United States Government puts out giving the number to the 100,000 of population who are in insane hospitals, which, of course, does not include all the insane. I notice that in Kansas there are 88.4, whereas in the wicked State of Florida there are only 51.6. In the State of Georgia, which up to the time these statistics were prepared was a wide-open State, there were only 81.1. In the State of Idaho, which was not dry until long after this book was printed, 74.4. In the State of Indiana, 82; the State of Louisiana, 54; the State of Mississippi, 52.9; the State of Nebraska, 60.6; the State of Texas, 46.7; Tennessee, 45; South Dakota, 57; South Carolina, 57; Utah, 59; and Wyoming, 37.9, to 100,000 of population.

Of course, the Senator from Kansas would say that figures do not lie, but liars figure. But liars are not confined to those who figure. Here are the official tables prepared by the United States Government. If they be not true, I do not know where we would go for our authority. Now, all this is to the point that the question which is now before the Senate ought to be settled just according to its merits. I would be the last man on the floor of the Senate to claim that drinking liquor is a benefit to a man, to claim that the saloon is a moral institution, to assert that whisky or beer is an essential to civilization and progress; but, on the other hand, it would be equally wrong and it is equally wrong for men to affirm that all ills humanity suffers from grow out of this one thing. People are in the habit of finding a scapegoat. Old Adam blamed it on the woman. "The woman beguiled me and I did eat." If Adam had been a prohibitionist in his day and wanted to prohibit women circulating in the Garden of Eden, if that had been his theory, he would have proven his case conclusively by his charge against Eve. And yet the fact is old Adam would never have eaten the apple if he had not had the old Adam in him. It was the weakness of the man, not the generosity of the woman, that caused Adam to put his teeth into the forbidden fruit.

Every man who has committed crime almost invariably looks around to find somebody or something to blame it on. One man blamed it upon fast horses, forgetting that the horse was not to blame, but that it was only his foolish self when he went to the race track and bet his money on the wrong horse. It was a defect of his own judgment and his own morals, not the horse that was to blame. Another man blames his downfall to cards, but the cards were inanimate things; they could do no man harm. But a poor, weak, miserable individual could take those inanimate things and employ them to his own harm. He was to blame, not the cards. Another man looking around for an excuse for his own evil deeds or shortcomings or failures charges it to liquor. Yet the real culprit was the man himself.

The truth is that the reason why these various causes for human downfall are assigned is that some human being wants an excuse for his own weakness, and if you were to take these various causes away—not in all cases, but in many cases—the individual will develop some other defect.

Nevertheless, while I state that side of the case I frankly say that many a man might have gone through the world and not ruined himself financially if it had not been for the fast horse, and it may have been an argument to take the fast horse away from the man who would not ruin himself in order to protect the poor, weak fellow who does. And so it is with liquor. There may be a sound and logical argument for taking it away, abolishing it, in order that men who have these weaknesses shall be protected, but it is utterly a mistake to assume that all the ill there is in this world can be charged to any one of these causes.

So, in my own humble judgment, recognizing liquor as a thing that is frequently used by people in a way to injure themselves, recognizing the right, whenever the moral sentiment of a community is in favor of its abolition, of that community to be permitted to abolish the evil, and believing that no law can be adequately and properly enforced unless there be a moral sentiment back of it, I have always adhered to the doctrine of letting the people express the opinion of the community to which they belong; and then if the people determine in favor of prohibition, let it be prohibition. Let it not be any of these miserable makeshifts for prohibition. Let it not be a law that permits two quarts to be sent to a man every month, and which will allow that individual to get outside of the two quarts all at once and get drunk in his own home and break up the furniture and beat his wife. That sort of drinking, to my mind, may be worse than drinking in a saloon.

Neither let it be the miserable makeshift of this bill which I have already spoken of, a makeshift bill that permits alcohol to be made in unlimited quantities within the District of Columbia and shipped to any part of the United States, with a pretended limitation which I have undertaken in other remarks to demonstrate will amount to nothing, a limitation to the effect that the alcohol shall not be sold to be used as a beverage, when everyone knows that alcohol is never employed as a beverage. So the limitation amounts to nothing, and the alcohol can be sold and employed as a raw material in making whiskies or any other kinds of liquors that people do use as a beverage.

I believe, sir, in the doctrine that a community has the right to express its opinion, and then I believe in the doctrine of protecting that community. I do not think that it has the right to say to the people of the State of Idaho or Colorado, represented by my two distinguished friends who I see opposite me, you have the right to prohibit the sale and use of liquors within your State, and then under a Federal law to practically nullify the laws of those States by permitting the liquor to be shipped in there contrary to the laws the people of those States enact.

Now, we have been progressing in this country very splendidly along the lines of temperance and sobriety every year, as witness the advance of the movement. There are many men and many women who have devoted their lives to the great propaganda of temperance who believe that hasty and inconsiderate action may be in the end detrimental to the cause.

I have taken very much more time than I expected to take. I really rose simply to call the attention of the Senator from Kansas to the fact that he was getting on rather dangerous ground in employing his time in abusing the States lying around about him.

Mr. OWEN. Mr. President, I wish to make a few comments upon the proposed amendment of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] to Senate bill 1082, proposing a substitute therefor. The substitute in effect is a referendum to a certain number of classified voters in the District of Columbia.

Mr. President, I have for many years strongly favored the initiative and referendum as a policy of government, of permitting the people of the various States by initiative petition to initiate the laws they do want, and by referendum permitting them to have the right to exercise a veto on laws which they do not want, which have been passed by their Representatives in the legislative branch. The purpose of the initiative and referendum, broadly, is to make more representative our representative Government and to compel those who appear as the representatives of the people to really and in truth represent the people.

In this case the Congress of the United States is representing the people of the United States in declaring a policy with regard to a small tract of land, less than 10 miles square, on which the Capital of the Nation is located. The people of the United States, who are represented by Senators on this floor, have voted with regard to the question of prohibition in 2,543 counties, and there remain only 355 counties where intoxicants are yet permitted to be sold.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oklahoma restate those figures?

Mr. OWEN. There are 2,543 counties in the United States which have voted on the question of prohibition, and only 355 counties remain; and the 355 counties include Utah and Florida, which recently upon the question of prohibition elected State legislatures and State governors overwhelmingly committed to the policy of prohibition. All of the Southern States now, except Louisiana and Texas in part, are committed absolutely to prohibition, and very much the larger part of Texas is committed to it.

I call attention to this, because the Senate of the United States in its representative capacity ought in good faith, I think, to recognize as a national policy the declaration of nine-tenths of the people of the United States.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me to interrupt him?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. OWEN. I yield.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator from Oklahoma gave us the comparison by counties. In my State we have never taken a vote on this subject by counties, but we take it by what are termed in New England towns and cities. Aside from three or four of the cities, almost the entire State of New Hampshire has voted "no license." So that action would add something to the force of the Senator's argument.

Mr. OWEN. It would add to the force of my observation; but out of 48 States, here are all except 11 States—37 States of this Union—which have declared in favor of the policy of prohibition. If the Senate of the United States desire to represent the will of the people of the United States, they are bound to establish prohibition at the National Capital, just as the Senate found it necessary to do so within the confines of the Senate and as the House of Representatives found it necessary to do so in the confines of the House of Representatives.

The proposal to refer this matter to a referendum I regard as unfriendly to the act. It is proposed by one who, as I understand, is unfriendly to the act. This referendum, if it were permitted, would leave the voter subject to the use of money corruptly by the liquor interests of the surrounding territory, which is now domiciled within the confines of this city.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. OWEN. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. KENYON. If there should be a referendum at all on this subject along the lines of the Senator's argument, should it not be a referendum to the people of the entire Nation?

Mr. OWEN. I think it should be a referendum to the people of the entire Nation, because the District of Columbia is the seat of the government of the people of the United States. I feel that the people of the United States have given an imperative mandate to the Senate of the United States in this matter, and I shall govern myself accordingly.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me to ask him a question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. OWEN. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. GALLINGER. I have hurriedly examined this proposed substitute. I find that in several instances the language is used "the qualified voters of said precinct." Does the Senator from Oklahoma know how we are going to ascertain who are the qualified voters of the District of Columbia?

Mr. OWEN. There are no such qualified voters. The act itself must state the qualifications, and make them qualified voters before they will come within the description of "qualified voters."

Mr. GALLINGER. But I do not find any such designation in the proposed substitute.

Mr. TOWNSEND. That is found in the second section of the proposed substitute.

Mr. GALLINGER. Then, perhaps I am mistaken about that. Oh, yes; I have found the language to which the Senator from Michigan refers.

Mr. OWEN. I am opposed, Mr. President, to the referendum for the reasons which I have stated. They are controlling with me and, therefore, I do not deal with the details.

Mr. GALLINGER. There is a qualification in section 2 of the proposed substitute which is rather a loose one, but it is better than none. Now, I want to ask the Senator from Oklahoma, who has taken great interest in securing a corrupt-practices act for the country, if there is anything in our statutes which would prevent the use of money in elections in the District of Columbia?

Mr. OWEN. In my judgment there is no adequate protection. The law of conspiracy, which might prevail, will not be available if an individual does not appear in conspiracy with others. The law of conspiracy therefore is no adequate protection.

Mr. GALLINGER. Of course we in New England know that when we have attempted to get "no license" legislation how freely money has poured in from Boston and New York from men who were engaged in the liquor traffic. It seems to me that the District of Columbia would be peculiarly subject to that bad influence if this matter were submitted to the people here for their ratification.

Mr. OWEN. Mr. President, I fully agree with what the Senator from New Hampshire says in that respect. I would go further, and say that where we have 37 States of this Union committed to prohibition, and their efforts to carry out their laws are nullified by the corrupt practices of individuals remaining in this traffic in the States which have not yet prohibited it, the Congress of the United States ought to cooperate with the 37 States, and make it a criminal offense to transport across the State line of a prohibition State any liquor from the nonprohibition States.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. If Congress has the power to do so.

Mr. OWEN. Congress has the power to do so; and it ought to exercise it.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, the State which I in part represent in this body enacted a prohibition amendment to its constitution in 1914, to become effective on the 1st day of January, 1916. It has therefore been in operation nearly 12 months. Of course that is a comparatively short period of time upon which to base a permanent impression of the good or evil involved in its operation, but it is perhaps sufficiently long to justify me in laying before the Senate some of the results, not perhaps of prohibition, but for the period in which it has been effective, upon the material and moral condition of the Commonwealth.

I was much impressed not only during that but in previous campaigns for prohibition with some of the practical arguments or assertions that were made in opposition to it. Consequently I cast my vote against the amendment. Had it been an amendment confined strictly to the abolition of the saloon, I would without question have supported it, but I felt that it would be well for us, inasmuch as we had adopted some other experiments in legislation in advance of the experiences of other States, prudence required that we wait and see the effect of the practical operation of prohibition in States which had preceded us in adopting it before finally crystalizing it into our own constitution.

Some of those arguments or assertions, Mr. President—and perhaps I should call them "assertions" rather than "arguments"; "predictions" possibly might be a still better term—were that prohibition would result in a general business depression in all lines of commercial and industrial activity; that it would result in throwing thousands of people out of work and leaving many of the store and business buildings of our large cities vacant, practically creating an atmosphere of surrounding depression that would not be at all conducive to our growth or to our well-being with tourists and travelers; that the drinking of liquor bore no relation to crime; and that there would be more crime and more arrests for crime under prohibition than under license.

To that was added the assertion that the revenues necessary for the transaction of the State's affairs and for the payment of the expenses of local administration would be largely reduced as a result of prohibition, thus requiring an increase in our rates of direct taxation in order to meet the disbursements necessary in the discharge of public business.

Whatever else may be said, Mr. President—and there were some other assertions—I think enough has occurred to justify the conviction that none of the prophesies to which I have called specific attention have materialized in practice. On the contrary, the development of the State during the year 1916 in all the elements of material and moral growth and well-being practically stands without precedent in our previous history.

This may be, and probably is, largely due to the prevailing prosperity, and therefore founded, of course, upon other conditions than prohibition. It may be also largely due to an indirect consequence of the war, by means of which easterners are beginning to visit and become familiar with their own country, not through preference but through necessity, because the tourist travel in the Rocky Mountain region last year outdistances and outclasses all previous records, and indicates that the people of the United States will derive one unexpected benefit from the holocaust in Europe, and that is a more intimate and familiar acquaintance with the beauties, the attractions, and the wonders of their own Republic.

There has been no general business depression in Colorado since prohibition went into effect; on the contrary, as I have stated, we have enjoyed more prosperity, and wider extended and more widely diffused prosperity, than we have ever known. That is verified in many ways; for example, by the weekly reports of Dun and Bradstreets on every line of business, by the bank clearings in the city of Denver, which is the metropolis of the State, and which have practically doubled, and by the unprecedented industrial activities throughout the State.

We have practically no empty stores in Denver. The places which were hitherto devoted to the liquor business have either been converted into places of legitimate amusement and recreation, where what are called "soft drinks" are sold or other lines of business have been substituted for them. After an absence of some 10 or 11 months from my home, I observed, upon returning last October, that there were fewer unoccupied buildings in the business part of the city than when I left my home in November of 1915; that the crowds upon the streets seemed to have increased; that the hotel lobbies were as full, if not more full than ever, of both transients and citizens; and that the general round of activities was quite as satisfying and quite as promising as before. Of course these observations might not in themselves be convincing since the conditions might be the result of transient causes of which, as a virtual stranger, I had no knowledge.

Now, one of the side arguments, so to speak, or assertions which was made in the campaign of the "wets," in 1914, was that without the opportunity of purchasing stimulants of all kinds everywhere, the tourist traffic, which is very considerable in our country, would practically disappear. It was argued that unless the average visitor coming to the State could secure intoxicants at his own sweet will be would instead of coming to Colorado go elsewhere, and that, as a consequence, we would drive away from the State a very desirable influx of travelers, carrying with it the revenues which always attend upon their incursions. That has not only not been verified by events, but, as I stated a few moments ago, the tourist traffic of the State has not only doubled but has virtually quadrupled within the last 11 or 12 months, and all of the beneficent results of that character of travel have been multiplied in proportion.

Regarding the question of its effect upon the people, I may say that of those who opposed prohibition in 1914 I think I am within bounds when I affirm that 60 per cent of them would to-day, if the question were again presented for consideration, vote for, instead of against, prohibition. Mr. President, the prohibition wave which has swept over this country during the past few years has as its actuating cause not the moral but the material aspect of the question. Of the immorality of excesses in strong drink there never was much question; there can hardly be said to be two sides to the proposition; but the advocates of prohibition, upon humanitarian grounds, have beaten their wings against the doors of the opposition for years in the vain effort to break them down, and it was only when the materially beneficial effect of abstention became apparent from its practical operation that a majority of the public ranged itself upon the side of prohibition.

The question was before my State a number of times before it finally succeeded. Formerly the material and practical benefit of prohibition was scarcely emphasized; or, if so, the argument did not command approval. We had, as the country remembers, and as we have occasion bitterly to regret, a widely extended industrial strike in Colorado in 1913–14. The coal camps, as they were called, were in insurrection, and the southern part of the State virtually, therefore, was in a condition of actual warfare. One of the first acts of the governor, after taking possession of the so-called infected districts, was to close all the saloons in the coal counties and to keep them closed by the strong arm of military power. Notwithstanding the industrial turmoil, which menaced law and order in every direction, the beneficial effect of that order upon the industrial classes, upon the commercial classes, upon the women and the children in those coal camps and in the cities—I was about to say more than offset the losses and the horrors of the strike itself, but that perhaps would be going too far. It unquestionably, however, minimized them very materially, and directed the attention of the industrial interests of the State to the practical business benefits and industrial improvements consequent upon the close of the saloon. Hence the employers and the great employing companies, prompted by purely selfish business considerations of the tremendous advantages of the new over the old régime, joined the ranks of the prohibitionists, and carried their cause to success in 1915; and the local benefits so apparent in these so-called infected counties, producing this accession to the ranks of the prohibitionists, seems to have justified the application of prohibition to the entire State.

Now, I do not wish to be misunderstood. I draw a distinction between "prohibition," as the term is used, and that "dry condition," which is supposed to be its equivalent. The two things, to my mind, are entirely dissimilar. Colorado is prohibition; it is not dry; and no State will be dry or can be dry so long as prohibition laws and constitutional amendments contain exceptions, through the gates of which liquor can be introduced and consumed as a beverage; indeed, I do not believe, if those gates were wholly closed, until the appetite and characteristics of mankind shall have profoundly changed that there can be such a thing as the successful prohibition to the individual of the use of intoxicants. But the prime outstanding beneficial feature of prohibition in Colorado is the abolition of the saloon, an institution that is a curse to any community, State, and Nation, particularly when it is practically without restriction, as it generally is through the political power which it always wields. It is a trap for the unwary; it leads the unthinking and the youthful into indiscretions and induces habits and companionships which are apt to prove destructive. They are an unmitigated curse in every particular to the communities where it exists. So that the abolition of the saloon, or, if you please, the driving of it from the ground floor, is an incalculable benefit wherever prohibition effects that consequence. When the saloon, if it exists at all, must take refuge behind closed doors, and in second or third stories or in basements; it may be pernicious, but the injurious consequences of its existence are largely minimized by reason of the fact that it is no longer public and no longer immediately accessible.

Politicians are always prone to indorse those things which seem to be successful or the indorsement of which may lead to success. That may, Mr. President, be an ambiguous compliment to the politician, but it is human nature nevertheless, and a phase of human nature, the operation of which we recognize everywhere, not excepting legislation in the Senate of the United States. The fact that prohibition is practically successful in my State is perhaps emphasized as strongly as in any other way by the circumstance that both the great parties in 1916, for the first time in our political history, unequivocally indorsed the proposition. They did so because an amendment to the constitution was then proposed, declaring beer not to be an intoxicant in the meaning of the prohibition clause of the constitution, the object, of course, being apparent; that is to say, to exempt beer and all malt liquors from the prohibitive effect of the amendment. That proposed modification was repudiated by both the great parties and rejected by the people by a majority, as I recall, of about 85,000. If it is true that in politics we recognize and act upon the thing which leads to success, the highest possible tribute that can be paid to the result of prohibition in the State from which I hail is shown and reflected in the action of the two great political parties of the State.

Of course, in the great cities there is always a larger proportion of antiprohibitionists than are found in the rural and remote districts. I think that may be accepted as a generally true statement, except in mining communities. Hence the city of Denver, like other great cities, was at all times the State stronghold of the "wets." Whenever the prohibition question was submitted to a vote of the people its opponents could confidently rely upon the overwhelming adverse majority of cities like Denver and Pueblo, whatever the result in the outside counties might be. This is reflected in the vote of Denver since 1910, at which time that city voted "wet" by a majority of 17,000, in 1912 by 22,000, in 1914 by 8,500, in 1915, upon a so-called home-rule amendment, by 3,500; but in 1916 the majority vote of the city and county of Denver against the so-called "wet" amendment was 10,960. In the State the majority against prohibition in 1912 was 40,000; the majority for the amendment in 1914 was 11,500; the majority for prohibition in 1916 was 85,789.

Mr. President, I can perhaps summarize what I have to say regarding specific evidences of benefit to our State, and thereby impose myself for a briefer space of time upon the Senate, by quoting from an article upon the subject published in one of the papers of my city during the present month, the 12th day of December, and which is the summary of what I am told was a careful ascertainment of the actual facts, so that they could be properly and truthfully presented for consideration. I give these statistics by reading directly into the RECORD the statement of the paper itself:

Taxes have decreased.
Finances of the municipality never were so good.

The license taxes which the city of Denver relied upon very largely for its revenues, and which, I think, constituted far more than one-third of its actual revenues, of course now have to be supplied elsewhere, and they have come from two directions—partly in the increase of taxation through the raising of rates, but more largely through the decrease of expenses, consequent perhaps upon other reasons than prohibition, but due, nevertheless, to something, and coincident with the period of time during which prohibition has been in effect.

Business is better than it ever has been.

There is a sign in my city over the entrance to one of the most extravagantly decorated saloons of the old era. It reads: "Buy shoes instead of booze." It is filled with a stock of shoes. None of the ornamental fixtures had been removed, and they were crowded with merchandise, which attracts by the novelty of its display.

Every man who wants work can get it.
There are fewer vacant houses and stores than ever before.
Building permits, especially for the last six months, show a decided gain, particularly in the matter of small homes.
Collections are 40 per cent better.
Savings accounts in Denver banks have broken all records.
Hotels, whose proprietors predicted they would be driven out of business within three months, are planning extensions, and two new million-dollar hostelries are assured within a year.
Divorce suits filed show a decrease of 40 per cent.
Arrests, for all causes—

Of course this is within the city—

Have decreased 31 per cent.
Arrests for drunkenness have decreased 59 per cent.
Arrests for vagrancy have decreased 55 per cent.
The cost of maintaining the city jail has decreased 28 per cent.
The cost of maintaining the county jail has fallen 27 per cent.
The number of murders, suicides, and burglaries has fallen off at an astonishing rate. There have been only two murders in Denver in 1916.

Prior to that time, Mr. President, the number of tragedies of that sort occurring in my city was far greater than I would care to acknowledge.

One of these was so clearly a case of self-defense against a demented man that the jury reached a verdict of not guilty in less than 20 minutes. The other case has not come to trial. At least a dozen murders a year formerly was Denver's average.
Police Chief Hamilton Armstrong says crime is decreasing at a phenomenal rate. He attributes this to prohibition.
District Attorney John A. Rush stated in open court recently that the work of his office has decreased 50 per cent since the city went dry.
Every newspaper in Denver has cut its staff of police reporters from one-half to two-thirds.

NOT SO MANY PRISONERS.

The State penitentiary has one-fourth fewer prisoners than formerly, and about February 1 will close one whole wing of its chain of buildings.

Then follow statistics showing that some 317 persons have been arrested for what is popularly known as "bootlegging."

It is said that an attempt has been made to discredit these figures, and that the corrections have been sent broadcast throughout the United States in bulletins—

In which official reports of Frederick R. Knight, police court clerk, were so cleverly garbled that the casual reader got the impression arrests for drunkenness had increased heavily under prohibition.
Just before Denver went dry saloon interests predicted that property occupied by saloons would remain vacant, as the locations were fit for nothing but saloons; that saloon men, brewery workers, and others dependent upon the liquor trade would move away from Colorado, causing houses to become empty and real estate values to depreciate; that ice plants, which were supposed to rely upon the saloons as their best customers, would reduce their output at least 50 per cent, consequently laying off many workmen; that merchants in every line would encounter the worst times in the history of the city; that taxes would be heavily increased to make up the loss of the $341,000 annually paid by saloons in licenses.

Then follows a statement of what has actually happened, to which I have already adverted, but which I think will perhaps bear repetition:

The best of the saloon locations were rented even before the bars moved out. Proprietors of other businesses had their fixtures built in advance; saloons closed and moved out Saturday night; new concerns installed fixtures and stock Sunday, and opened for business Monday.
Merchants in all lines are commenting on the increased business during 1916. Their customers pay their bills promptly, they say. Denver is not a manufacturing city and therefore is not affected by any abnormal increase in business that can be attributed to the war.
Nearly every big merchant tells of accounts owing so long he had "written them off the books"; since the saloons closed the men who owed these bills have drifted, unsolicited, into the stores and commenced to pay up on the installment plan.
The Denver Gas & Electric Light Co., which serves as something of a barometer for financial conditions in the city, reports its collections are 40 per cent better since prohibition.

While at home I discussed this subject, Mr. President, with several leading business men of my city whom I knew to be opposed to prohibition in 1914. With one exception, all these gentlemen informed me that they had been agreeably disappointed as to the practical results of prohibition in the city and county of Denver; that their business had increased; that payments were made more regularly and more promptly; and one of them emphasized the fact that the accounts in the savings banks had practically doubled in number, and, if I remember rightly, in amount as well.

As a man who once opposed prohibition, and who feared that some of the evil consequences predicted of its adoption might be verified, I am obliged in the face of these conditions to announce a change of view, and assert that if the experiences of my own State for this short time are a standard, instead of injuring in any way—materially, morally, industrially, or economically, even temporarily—the interests of a great city, its progress and its growth, those interests and progress and growth will be accelerated, and accelerated along lines that must commend themselves to every man who believes that civilization, comfort, and prosperity are essential to human happiness.

Mr. President, I do not pretend to believe that prohibition or any other change as the result of legislation can bring about that perfection in human affairs for which we should all strive, but which we can never hope to reach. I do not regard it as a panacea for all human ills, nor, as I have said, as something which will expel the drink habit from the habitations of mankind. But that the abolition of the saloon is one of the things which from a moral and practical standpoint is desirable I believe is established and demonstrated not alone by the experiences to which I have adverted in my own State but by those of every other State where the system has been tried.

I confess to much sympathy with that view which protests against legislation that must result in confiscating the goods of others which have been acquired for the prosecution of a business recognized and encouraged by the law. In other words, while the business of saloon keeping and the manufacturing of liquors is not the highest occupation in the world, while it is one that justly incurs the reproach of our people, we must recognize that it is and has been a legitimate calling, one which has been not only tolerated but encouraged by legislation and by communities; one for which there has been a demand, and which is one of the justifications for its existence. It is not right, it is not just, it is not fair, it is not American, to adopt a system of laws which, going into immediate effect, must necessarily result in the virtual confiscation of the goods of the saloon keeper. I do not think that is right.

That condition was met in my State by providing for a postponement of the time when the prohibition amendment should become operative. It was enacted in November of 1914. It went into effect on the 1st of January, 1916, giving 13 months to all those possessed of property, of leaseholds, or other acquisitions essential to the carrying on of the business either to dispose of them or to convert their occupations into other pursuits. I have no doubt that some injustice was done there, that some confiscation or destruction of property values resulted. I know that immediately after the amendment went into effect the bartenders and those previously employed in the breweries had a mass meeting in the city of Denver. They appointed committees to wait upon the governor and to demand employment as compensation for the jobs that had been taken away from them. I sympathized with that movement very largely. I felt, and I still feel, that there was upon the State a duty—a moral duty, at least—of looking after and doing something for these unfortunates. Nothing was done, however. Time passed. The movement disappeared. It resolved itself into nothingness, and the conclusion which I necessarily drew was that the demand for labor at that time was so active and so widespread that no necessity existed requiring the State to make extraordinary efforts in the way of securing other lines of employment for these people.

Mr. President, I have detained the Senate longer than I intended, but I felt that it might help to clarify the situation here to give some of the brief experiences of my State, and particularly of my city, under the active operation of prohibition, as an offset to the same assertions, the same arguments, and the same predictions which are being advanced here as the result of the establishment of a similar condition of affairs in the Nation's Capital.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Mr. President, I have here an article that I clipped from the New York Herald of December 17, showing whither we are drifting if we adopt the prohibition amendment. It refers to the city of Boston, which has an election to-day, I believe, on this question. I desire to send this to the desk and ask to have the Secretary read it. The Senator from Kansas [Mr. THOMPSON] a little while ago stated how business prospered under prohibition in his State. I want to give to the Senate an evidence of the judgment of the Boston people; and I am assured that the gentleman whose name is mentioned therein is a gentleman of the highest type and character. I conferred with the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] as to his standing in the community, and he said it was par excellence.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator desires this read from the desk as a part of his remarks?

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Yes; I should like to have it read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

[From the New York Herald of Dec. 17, 1916.]

REAL ESTATE MEN JOIN IN LIQUOR FIGHT IN BOSTON—ASSERT $10,000,000 YEARLY RENTALS ENDANGERED BY "DRY" CAMPAIGN.

BOSTON, MASS.

Real estate owners have joined with the liquor interests in the fight to keep Boston from voting its saloons out of existence on Tuesday. Circulars calling upon them to work for license have been sent to all members of the Real Estate Exchange by the president of the organization, Mr. Francis R. Bangs, and it is known that many wealthy real estate men have contributed liberally to the already large fund that has been raised by the brewers and liquor dealers.

"Your directors feel that it is their duty to call your attention to a grave danger that threatens the real estate interests in Boston," Mr. Bangs says in his circular.

"It is a critical situation, for the reason that a few thousand votes might turn the scale either way," he warned, and asserted that $10,000,000 in gross rentals will be endangered if the city goes dry.

"Large amounts of capital employed in the liquor business would be rendered useless, wasted, or withdrawn. More than 10,000 people would be thrown out of employment, and not only put to great hardships themselves, but their landlords and all other persons with whom they deal would suffer.

"Apart from the foregoing considerations, which primarily affect real estate," the circular concluded, "it is obvious that great damage would be done to general business and to the standing of the city in relation to other cities of equal size if Boston should be put in the list of no-license municipalities."

Most of the Boston newspapers have been editorially urging the retention of licensed saloons, and thousands of circulars are being sent among the voters by the liquor advocates. The liquor dealers in large front-page advertisements in the Boston newspapers also denied responsibility for vicious attacks on the Rev. "Billy" Sunday that have appeared in a recently established newspaper and in circulars sent all over the city.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Mr. President, I beg to say further that Senators proclaim in loud terms and tones as to the results of prohibition in their States. I have noted here the fact that in the case of Topeka, Kans., as I stated this morning, the statistics show that in the month of September, 1913, 90,062 gallons of liquor were imported into that city. It has a population of about 40,000.

In Portland, Me., in the year 1913 the arrests for drunkenness were 4,006.

In the city of Greensboro, N. C., a prohibition State, 5,279 gallons of liquor were imported in December, 1913, being 195 gallons per day.

In the case of Tennessee I have not the figures.

I state further that I have gathered from the statistics that these dry, prohibition States are not the El Dorado of the world. Prohibition has not brought all peace, nor all happiness, nor all quiet. Prohibition has not prevented crime, but crime goes on just the same.

The number of persons in penal institutions in the State of Maine in the year 1913 was 5,252; in Iowa, 13,108; in Kansas, 3,878; in Virginia, 12,534; in West Virginia, 6,033; in Georgia, 12,981; in Texas, 10,399; in Arizona, a dry State, 6,841; in Washington, 10,198; and in Oregon, 6,431.

The percentage per 100,000 of persons committed to penal institutions in the wet State of New York was 502; in New Jersey, a wet State, 402; in Delaware, half dry and half wet, 983; in South Carolina, dry, 498; in Tennessee, dry, 456; in Texas, dry, 267; in Florida, half wet and half dry, 1,312; in Alabama, 412; in Montana, that was pictured here in such glowing terms the other day, 3,348; in Arizona, 3,348; in Utah, 481; in Oregon, 956; and in Colorado, of which the Senator has just spoken, 609.

It seems to me that these figures very seriously and flatly contradict the statements that have been made by our friends on the prohibition side.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from New Jersey yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Yes.

Mr. GALLINGER. In connection with the article with reference to the city of Boston, that city is to-day voting on the question——

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I realize that. I so stated.

Mr. GALLINGER. Boston is to-day voting on the question as to whether or not it shall be a so-called "dry" or "wet" city——

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Yes, sir.

Mr. GALLINGER. Terms that I think are absurd to use in this connection. I will ask the Senator if he thinks it was a very valuable contribution to this discussion to put in the RECORD the fact that the liquor interests and the owners of real estate where the saloons are located have raised a large fund for the purpose of influencing the action of the——

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I will ask the Senator——

Mr. GALLINGER. I hope the Senator will let me finish the sentence—for the purpose of influencing the action of men who are supposed to be able to formulate a correct judgment on public questions?

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I will answer the Senator. I presented that, as I stated, in contradiction to the statement of the Senator, who declared that business interests and all had been promoted. I introduced these figures to show the very fact therein stated, that the business interests would be very seriously detrimented and deterred. I stated, furthermore, in connection with my remarks that I had consulted with the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] as to the character and stability and truthfulness of the gentleman whose name was presented—I have forgotten now what it was—and the Senator from Massachusetts assured me that he was a gentleman of the highest character.

Mr. GALLINGER. Oh, I have no doubt of that.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. In answer to the Senator's final proposition as to whether there was money raised to defend these men and the business in which they were directly and financially interested, I do not question it. No man does question it. Neither will the Senator deny the fact that the prohibitionists have raised large sums of money to press their theory and their claims.

Mr. GALLINGER. I never——

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. There is no more evil on one side than evil on the other.

Mr. GALLINGER. If the Senator has knowledge as to the prohibitionists raising money to corrupt the franchise, I know of no such instance.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I do not say "corrupt"; neither can the Senator say that this is corrupt.

Mr. GALLINGER. It is the only way they could do it, inasmuch as the election occurs to-day, and this dispatch is only a few days old. That is what they raised the money for, just as they do everywhere, and the Senator knows it.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Well, that is very nice as a broad and general assertion without any proof. There is no doubt money is raised. In every election that I have ever known of since I was 18 years old there has been money raised. God knows that the Senator from the State of New Hampshire, as a member of the great Republican Party, can not here with good grace cry out against the raising of money. You have flooded the country with money for all sorts of propaganda that was dominated over by your Republican creed; and in the last controversy——

Mr. GALLINGER. I have not flooded anybody with money. I have not had money to flood anybody with.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Well, I was not talking of the Senator. I have a very kindly regard for the Senator. Aside from a few of his idiosyncrasies, I think he is one of the most lovable persons in the world. [Laughter.]

Mr. GALLINGER. Well, Mr. President, the matter of idiosyncracies must answer for itself.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I have no qualification, I will say to the Senator——

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator will not allow me to utter a sentence. I asked the Senator once before to restrain his impetuosity. Once I had to appeal to the Presiding Officer to protect me from the Senator as he approached my desk with outstretched arm. [Laughter.]

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Whatever I might have done in the past, my impetuosity at least has been harmless to the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GALLINGER. Yes.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. There is something like 60 feet between us, and there is nothing but wind to-day intervening. [Laughter in the galleries.]

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair must admonish the occupants of the galleries that if there is any disorder he will order them cleared.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator is always entertaining, and sometimes is amusing, and he never disturbs me in the least degree, notwithstanding his aggressiveness and his apparent desire to pick a quarrel with somebody. [Laughter.]

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Oh, never!

Mr. GALLINGER. Now, Mr. President, the Senator may take his seat just for a moment, if he pleases.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. The Senator will hear you, but he will not take his seat until he has yielded the floor.

Mr. GALLINGER. Well, the Senator can do just what he pleases about that.

Mr. President, the Senator has presented to this body something with which most Americans are familiar, and that is the fact that whenever the attempt is made to regulate the liquor traffic—even to regulate it—the liquor dealers raise an immense sum of money for the purpose of preventing the legislation of which they do not approve.

In the letter that came from Boston, signed by a reputable gentleman, the Senator says—I do not know who it was—it is stated that a large loss is to accrue in rentals; that is, the rentals of buildings to the liquor sellers of Boston. Those gentlemen strike hands with the liquor dealers to raise large sums of money to control the election that is taking place to-day in Boston. That is a fact that I wanted to have appear in the RECORD as a fact. We will see what the result will be. Very likely, with the aid of a large sum of money, Boston will remain in what is called the wet column. I presume that will be the fact, although I hope it will not; but it will go down into history that this fund was raised for the purpose of influencing the votes of the people as it shall be expressed at the polls to-day in that great city.

Mr. BORAH obtained the floor.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Mr. President, I want to answer the statement made by the Senator from New Hampshire directed to myself.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Let me say just a few words, and then I will yield the floor.

Mr. BORAH. Very well.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. The Senator from New Hampshire charges that I am desirous of trying to pick a quarrel. Those were his words. God knows no man in this body dislikes to quarrel more than I do. That is just contrary to my whole disposition. Heaven knows the Senator from New Hampshire is the last man I would like to quarrel with. I have no desire to quarrel with anybody.

Mr. GALLINGER. That was not said seriously on my part. I said the Senator appeared to desire it.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Oh, I would appear in the wrong rôle. My heart is not in it. I am not quarrelsome, but I do answer that it is very plain that those who are raising money are doing it in a legitimate effort to prevent the destruction of their business. On the other side, I say without fear of contradiction, and I think the Senator is too practical a politician in all these years not to know it, that prohibitionists have raised money to press their propaganda, whatever the question might be. I am pressing this. I am in earnest in everything I do. That which I like I love and that which I dislike I hate, and I am very positive and prompt in saying so.

But my controversy is not with any individual. My controversy is not with the Senator from New Hampshire or the Senator from Texas or the Senator from Kansas, but my controversy is with the proposition that is being proposed here, and that is interference with personal rights and personal liberties. The great progress this country has made has been upon a broader line, a broader base, a broader and more American system, and I hold that this proposition is narrow, contemptible, and un-American. I say that advisedly. The Senator speaks of Colorado. I do not know how earnestly Colorado has become a prohibition State. It was not so the last time I was there. I desire to say to you that it was very open on the street corners, and so it was in very many other places, and so it was in Georgia, and so it was in South Carolina.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I should like to ask the Senator if he ever found a place that was prohibition against him.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I am not more specious in my plea nor better looking than the distinguished Senator who represents Georgia, but just as an ordinary citizen, under the hospitality of a public domicile owned by the Senator from Georgia, I am told, I saw it floating freely.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I had intended to submit some remarks upon the amendment which is proposed by the Senator from Alabama, but I understand that there is a possibility of getting a vote, and if a vote can be arranged for and the debate would only be continued through my efforts, I desire to submit the question, as far as I am concerned, without taking up the time of the Senate. In other words, if the Senate is ready to vote so as to dispose of this matter this afternoon, I should like to have a vote taken.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. As far as I am concerned, I would not like to put off the vote until late this afternoon because a great many Senators would be away. If the Senator from Texas is willing to have the vote taken on my amendment now, I am willing to have the roll called.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Let us do that.

Mr. BORAH. A great many Senators want to get away for the holidays, and that is the reason why I made the suggestion.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Two or three amendments have been introduced to this amendment and they have not yet been voted on. I suppose they will be first in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The pending amendment is that offered by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] to the substitute of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD].

Mr. SMOOT. I wish to ask the Senator from Kansas [Mr. THOMPSON] if he intends to offer his amendments to the original bill. I have on my desk copies of the two amendments that he presented to the Senate and asked to have printed. I wish to know of him whether he is going to offer them or not.

Mr. THOMPSON. I wish to offer an amendment to the original bill and also an amendment to the substitute. As I understand it, the amendment can be offered now to the substitute, as the original bill is a part of the substitute.

Mr. SMOOT. Of course under the rule the original bill is to be perfected before amendments are offered to the substitute. I understood that the bill itself had been perfected, but before any other amendments were offered I wanted to ask the Senator from Kansas whether he intended to offer his amendment to the bill.

Mr. THOMPSON. I do not want to offer it, but I understand that I can offer the amendment to the substitute because it contains the original bill.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair recognized the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] and understands that the exchange of views on the subject of a vote has been going on while he has the floor. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. BORAH. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. HUGHES. I was just going to submit a unanimous request that we vote on the Underwood amendment. That is what the Senator wants to vote on and what everybody wants to vote on, and I ask that we vote upon it at 4 o'clock.

Mr. BORAH. That is perfectly satisfactory to me.

Mr. HUGHES. We do not need a roll call for that agreement, because it is a vote on the amendment. If we can have unanimous consent to take the vote on it, we will get that much out of the way.

Mr. BORAH. The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] has an amendment pending to the Underwood amendment.

Mr. HUGHES. It will be offered and voted upon in the meantime, I will say to the Senator, and that will bring us to a vote speedily on the substitute.

Mr. BORAH. I am perfectly willing to yield the floor for the purpose of proceeding with a vote upon the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi to the amendment of the Senator from Alabama. If the debate is to cease, as I said, I do not want to be instrumental in continuing it. Then, as soon as that vote is taken, we can proceed to vote upon the amendment of the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I hope that course will be adopted.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I should like to suggest to the Senator from Mississippi that as there are some Senators in the Office Building who probably would want to vote, would it not be well to make the point of no quorum so that they can be called in.

Mr. HUGHES. May we have unanimous consent to vote immediately upon the appearance of a quorum on the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi to the amendment of the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. We do not have to call for a quorum.

Mr. HUGHES. We do not have to call for a quorum in order to get unanimous consent to vote on an amendment, but that is required simply for an agreement to vote on a bill. If we get unanimous consent to vote on the amendment, we will have made that much progress. My experience is that after a quorum is called we do not make any progress.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair did not understand whether the Senator from Alabama suggested the absence of a quorum or made a suggestion to the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am willing to agree, if the Senator from Mississippi desires to make a request for a quorum, that as soon as a quorum appears his amendment shall be voted on. But that is of course within the power of the Senator from Mississippi. I do not care to make the point of no quorum myself.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, I have desired to express my opposition to the amendment of the Senator from Alabama, occupying not over 10 minutes in my statement. I have been waiting for some time. I shall not take over 10 minutes and perhaps not over 5 minutes.

Mr. HUGHES. Does the Senator want to include that in the unanimous-consent agreement?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I made that statement before unanimous consent was asked for. I would be glad to see a vote taken at 4 o'clock.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Georgia for 10 minutes?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I will not ask the Senator to do that.

Mr. VARDAMAN. With the consent of the Senator from Idaho, I will say if the discussion is to be opened again why not fix a definite time for voting on the bill, say at half past 5 o'clock, or not later than half past 5 o'clock to-day? There are other Senators, not myself, who wish to say something, but will forego that in order to bring about a vote. If the Senator from Georgia speaks, other Senators may be drawn into the discussion. We are very anxious to dispose of the matter this afternoon, and if it can be generally agreed that we shall vote at 5 o'clock we can dispose of it.

Mr. KENYON. I should like to ask the Senator from Mississippi if he means to vote on the bill and all amendments this afternoon?

Mr. VARDAMAN. Yes; that is what I want.

Mr. KENYON. I am in the same position as the Senator from Mississippi. I wanted to speak on the bill, but I am perfectly willing to waive it if we can take a vote on the amendments and on the bill and dispose of it this afternoon.

Mr. VARDAMAN. All I desire is to fix an hour at which we may vote on amendments and on the bill. I do not care to go to the trouble of having the roll called if it can be understood by the Senate that we will vote, say, at half past 4 or 5 o'clock.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent, and I think this will suit everybody, that not later than 5.30 the Senate shall proceed to vote upon the substitute and all amendments to the substitute and then upon all amendments to the bill and upon the bill.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. THOMAS. Would not that require under the rule a roll call?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Of course.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It does.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, I want to say that some Senators who are in favor of the substitute have to leave the Chamber at half past 5 this evening who will be here in the morning. If we can have an immediate vote, I am willing; but if not, I am willing to agree to a time to-morrow—1 o'clock or 2 o'clock—at such an hour to-morrow as can be agreed upon; but I am not willing to agree to vote at half past 5 o'clock this evening; I can not agree to half past 4 o'clock, when I know there would be some Senators absent who are here now.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I ask unanimous consent that we vote immediately.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I have no objection to that.

Mr. HUGHES. There is where we are. We can not vote on the amendment of the Senator from Alabama until after we vote on the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi. I have asked unanimous consent to have the vote taken, which can be agreed to without a roll call, that we proceed to vote immediately on the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi. We can then ask for consent to vote immediately on the amendment of the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. If the Senator from Texas asks for an immediate vote I will withdraw my purpose to make some remarks in opposition to the amendment of the Senator from Alabama and consent to the immediate vote.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan and others. Regular order!

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands the request of the Senator from New Jersey to be that the Senate agree to an immediate vote upon the pending amendment, and that agreement can be made without a roll call.

Mr. JONES. That would not prevent the offering of an additional amendment?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It would not. Is there objection to an immediate vote being taken on the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] to the substitute proposed by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD]? The Chair hears none.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Let the amendment be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 2, line 8, strike out the word "male." On page 2, line 14, after the word "election," insert "and who can read and write and who have paid all taxes and assessments due from them and unpaid by them to the Federal Government and the government of the District of Columbia," so that the section will read:

SEC. 2. That all resident citizens of the District of Columbia who are over the age of 21 years, of sound mind, and have not been convicted of an offense involving moral turpitude, and who have been residents of the District of Columbia and the voting precinct in which they reside for more than one year prior to the date of the holding of said election, and who can read and write and who have paid all taxes and assessments due from them and unpaid by them to the Federal Government and the government of the District of Columbia, shall constitute the qualified voters at said election. The managers of the said election shall be the sole judges of the qualifications of the voters.

Mr. HARDWICK. I raise a point of order that the question ought to be divided, it involving two separate and distinct propositions.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks the point is well taken.

Mr. HARDWICK. I request that it be divided, then.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It contains undoubtedly two propositions. The question then is on the first amendment proposed by the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. GALLINGER. Which is?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will state it.

The SECRETARY. On page 2, line 8, strike out the word "male."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. On that question, in order that absentees may be notified and may be here, I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Let the amendment be stated again.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The roll call has been begun, the Chair will state.

Mr. PENROSE and others. Regular order!

The Secretary resumed the calling of the roll.

Mr. CHILTON (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. FALL], who is absent. If I were permitted to vote, I would vote "nay."

Mr. CLAPP (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SIMMONS]. Not knowing how he would vote and not being able to obtain a transfer, I am constrained to withhold my vote. If at liberty to vote, I would vote "yea."

Mr. GALLINGER (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from New York [Mr. O'GORMAN]. The Senator from New York has left a memorandum stating that he is against the bill itself and in favor of the Underwood referendum. I am for the bill and against the referendum, but I do not know how the Senator from New York woud vote on the amendment pending, so I withhold my vote.

Mr. McLEAN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Montana [Mr. MYERS]. On this question I am at liberty to vote, and I vote "yea."

Mr. OVERMAN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN]. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON], and vote "nay."

Mr. OVERMAN (when Mr. SIMMONS's name was called). I wish to announce that my colleague [Mr. SIMMONS] is absent on account of illness and that he is paired with the junior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. BROUSSARD].

Mr. CHILTON (when the name of Mr. SMITH of South Carolina was called). The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] is absent on account of illness in his family. He asked me to state to the Senate that upon this proposition he is in favor of the referendum, but wants it confined to male whites of the District of Columbia. I do not know how to pair him or transfer his pair on the question.

Mr. THOMAS (when Mr. SHAFROTH's name was called). My colleague [Mr. SHAFROTH] if present on this amendment would vote "yea."

Mr. TILLMAN (when his name was called). I wish to give my reason for my vote.

Mr. GALLINGER. Not now.

Mr. TILLMAN. Not now, but in a few minutes. I vote "yea."

Mr. WALSH (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. LIPPITT] which I transfer to the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH], and vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. CLARK. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Missouri [Mr. STONE] who is absent. I therefore withhold my vote. If he were present and I at liberty to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. CURTIS. I was requested to announce the following pairs:

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. FALL] with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. CHILTON];

The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. GOFF] with the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. LEA];

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. SMITH]; and

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CATRON] with the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. OWEN].

Mr. DILLINGHAM (after having voted in the affirmative). I have already voted, but I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Maryland [Mr. SMITH]. I wish to say that I am relieved from the obligations of the pair on this question, and I therefore allow my vote to stand.

Mr. CLAPP. Since my name was called I have been relieved of my pair and I now desire to vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. CATRON (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. OWEN]. As he has not voted and does not seem to be present, I withdraw my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 54, nays 15, as follows:

YEAS—54.

So Mr. WILLIAMS's amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The second amendment of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] will be read by the Secretary.

The SECRETARY. On page 2, line 14, after the word "election," insert:

And who can read and write, and who have paid all taxes and assessments due from them and unpaid by them to the Federal Government and the government of the District of Columbia.

Mr. JONES. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CATRON (when his name was called). I am paired generally with the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. OWEN]. If he were present, I would vote "nay" on this proposition. He being absent, I withhold my vote.

Mr. CHILTON (when his name was called). I make the same announcement as to my pair as I did before. If permitted to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. CLARK (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the senior Senator from Missouri [Mr. STONE] and withhold my vote.

Mr. DILLINGHAM (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the senior Senator from Maryland [Mr. SMITH] and withhold my vote.

Mr. GALLINGER (when his name was called). I repeat the fact that I am paired with the senior Senator from New York [Mr. O'GORMAN], who is absent. For that reason I withhold my vote.

Mr. OVERMAN (when the name of Mr. SIMMONS was called). I again announce that my colleague [Mr. SIMMONS] is absent on account of illness in his family and that he is paired with the junior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. BROUSSARD]. I will let this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Colorado [Mr. SHAFROTH], and will let that transfer remain for the balance of the day. I vote "yea."

Mr. WALSH (when his name was called). I make the same announcement of the transfer of my pair as announced on the recent vote and vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a memorandum which has been furnished me with reference to the attitude of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] on the Williams amendment. He desires it known that if he were here he would vote for it; that he wished to be paired in favor of the amendment. I really paired him against it, but it makes no difference unless some Senator can pair him for it.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I rise to inquire if the junior Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED] has voted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. He has not.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Then I withhold my vote as I have a pair with that Senator. If I were permitted to vote, I should vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 44, nays 25, as follows:

YEAS—44.

So the amendment of Mr. WILLIAMS to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KERN. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk to the substitute amendment which has been proposed by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD].

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. After section 37 of the substitute amendment proposed by Mr. UNDERWOOD it is proposed to insert the following four sections, to be designated, respectively, as sections 37a, 37b, 37c, and 37d:

SEC. 37a. Whoever for the purpose of influencing or controlling the vote of any person entitled to vote at such election shall pay or offer or promise to pay to any such voter any sum of money or who shall deliver or promise to deliver to such voter anything of value, or who shall promise such voter any position or office or employment of any kind, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined in any sum not less than $100 nor more than $1,000, and imprisoned not less than 3 nor more than 12 months.

SEC. 37b. Whoever shall vote or attempt to vote more than once at such election, or whoever shall advise, counsel, or attempt in any way to induce any person to so vote more than once, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and be fined not less than $100 nor more than $1,000, and imprisoned not less than 3 nor more than 12 months.

SEC. 37c. Whoever shall contribute or pay out any money to be used for any purpose in connection with said election, except for printing and publishing facts and arguments relating to the same, or for the necessary expenses of public meetings called for the purpose of considering and hearing discussed the issues involved in such election, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and fined not less than $500, to which may be added imprisonment for a period of not exceeding one year.

SEC. 37d. Any manager, clerk, or returning officer, or any other person who shall destroy, change, mutilate, or falsify any paper, record, or return required by this act to be kept or made out, or who shall do any act the effect of which will be to defeat the will of the voters of said District as expressed at said election, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction shall be fined in any sum not less than $100 nor more than $1,000, and be imprisoned in the District Jail or workhouse for not less than six months nor more than one year.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If I have a right to do so under the rules of the Senate, I am willing to accept that amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will rule that the Senator has a right to modify his amendment until after a vote shall have been taken upon it.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Then, I accept the amendment to my amendment offered by the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. THOMPSON. I desire to offer a slight amendment to the substitute offered by the Senator from Alabama, which I have submitted to him. My amendment to his amendment might as well be acted upon now.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 5, at the end of line 4 of the substitute, it is proposed to add the following:

And shall order that all bars, saloons, and other places where intoxicating liquors are sold in the District of Columbia shall be closed on the days of elections for any of the purposes prescribed by this act.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, I understand the amendment offered by the Senator from Kansas is for the purpose of closing all barrooms and saloons on election day, and I am willing to accept the amendment to my amendment.

Mr. JONES. I desire to ask what the last words of the amendment—"for any of the purposes prescribed by this act"—mean?

Mr. THOMPSON. Where a vote is taken upon anything prescribed in the act.

Mr. JONES. They ought to be closed entirely.

Mr. THOMPSON. That is, for any purposes under the act.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I understand the proposition of the Senator from Kansas is to close the saloons on election day, the day the vote is to be had under this act, and I am willing to agree to that.

Mr. JONES. I should like to have the words "for any of the purposes prescribed by this act" stricken out.

Mr. THOMPSON. That is entirely satisfactory to me.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Let the amendment be again stated, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will again state the amendment to the amendment.

The SECRETARY. On page 5, at the end of line 4 of the substitute proposed by the Senator from Alabama, it is proposed to insert:

And shall order that all bars, saloons, and other places where intoxicating liquors are sold in the District of Columbia shall be closed on the days of elections for any of the purposes prescribed by this act.

Mr. THOMPSON. I desire to modify my amendment in line 5, after the word "elections," by striking out the words "for any of the purposes prescribed by this act." The prohibition will then apply to any other election day.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I suppose it would apply to any election day in the District of Columbia. I have no objection to that, and I accept the amendment to my amendment.

Now, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent, if there are no further amendments to be offered to my substitute——

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, on yesterday the Senator from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] stated that his substitute included the Sheppard bill as it was completed up to Saturday night. On Monday morning the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. GRONNA] offered an amendment including the words "or gift" after the words "import for sale," which was agreed to by the Senate. I notice that is left out of the Senator's substitute. The word "gift" where it appears in the bill as amended last Saturday is also left out. I ask the Senator from Alabama if he will not consent to insert in his substitute, on line 2, page 7, the words "or gift," so that the bill will contain the amendment agreed to Monday morning?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the Senator from Kansas that the amendments which I have accepted relate to the referendum which I propose. I have not attempted to change the Sheppard bill. If the Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD], who is the proponent of the original Sheppard bill, desires to place those words in the substitute I shall not object; but I have not attempted to alter, and do not propose to attempt to alter, the Sheppard bill. The amendments which I have accepted relate to the referendum.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I should like the attention of the Senator from Texas having charge of the bill. The Senator from Alabama has just stated that if the Senator from Texas is willing to have the bill amended so as to insert the words "or gift" after the words "import for sale," the same being the amendment agreed upon last Monday, that he would be satisfied to accept it, so far as he is concerned.

Mr. SHEPPARD. As I understand, only the words "or gift" are added after the words "import for sale." The words "or gift" should be added after the words "import for sale."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Texas submit that as an amendment to his bill?

Mr. SHEPPARD. The Senator has offered the amendment to the original bill.

Mr. CURTIS. I suggest to the Senator that the amendment was agreed upon yesterday morning, and I think it ought to be in the bill, as the substitute is supposed to embody the Sheppard bill.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I will say that the words "import for sale or gift" have been incorporated in my bill.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The Senator from Texas did not hear my colloquy with the Senator from Kansas. The Senator from Kansas asked me to accept an amendment, and I said to him that I disclaimed any responsibility for the original Sheppard bill, that if the friends of the bill were willing to accept the amendment as a part of the bill I was willing to accept it as a part of the substitute.

Mr. SHEPPARD. As I stated to the Senator from Kansas, I think the amendment ought to be confined to the words "import for sale or gift."

Mr. CURTIS. That is right.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am willing to accept it that far if the Senator from Texas takes the responsibility of accepting the suggestion made by the Senator from Kansas.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will state the proposed amendment as it is now modified.

The SECRETARY. The first amendment accepted by the Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD] appears on page 7, line 2, of the last print of the bill, after the words "import for sale," to insert the words "or gift."

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I suggest that the Senator from Texas can not accept amendments without the question being submitted to the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will state that this amendment was to the original bill.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, I desire to say to the Senator from Texas that the amendment referred to by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. CURTIS] was inserted in the bill by a vote of the Senate on yesterday, and it was to the original bill.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I so stated.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I have accepted the amendment as indicated by the Senator from Texas. What I desire to submit is a referendum provision to the bill that he has proposed in the Senate as agreed to. I do not take the responsibility of changing the Sheppard bill, but I accept the suggestion under those conditions as a part of my substitute.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, I would like to inquire what that is designed to accomplish. Would that prevent an individual from importing liquor for household use and then prohibit him from giving it to his guests?

Mr. CURTIS. It would not. It is intended to prohibit the importation of intoxicating liquors for sale or gift for beverage purposes in violation of this act.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Let me make a violent supposition and suppose the Senator from Kansas should import a case of beer from Milwaukee. Would he then be violating the law if he served it to his guests?

Mr. CURTIS. He would not, if he did not do it with intent to evade the law. [Laughter.] The Supreme Court of Kansas has passed upon that question and has held that the owner of intoxicating liquor who has purchased it in good faith has the right to give it to his guests without violating a statute similar to this.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Question!

Mr. SHEPPARD. I wish to say to the Senator from Alabama that in the same line, line 2, page 7, after the word "manufacture," the words "for sale or gift" should be added.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The Senator is responsible for his own bill, and if he desires that change made, I will consent to it.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment to section 2 of the referendum portion of the substitute. I will merely say, in a word, that there are many residents of this District who have maintained their voting residence in the States from which they come. Those persons ought to be permitted to vote on this question, and that is the purpose of the amendment which I offer.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will state the amendment.

The SECRETARY. In section 2 it is proposed to strike out the words "resident citizens," in line 8, page 2, and to insert the word "residents"; and after the word "election," in line 14, page 2, to insert the words "whether they maintain or have maintained a voting status elsewhere or not."

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President, I should like to ask whether under that amendment a man may come to Washington, take up his residence here for a month, and vote at this proposed election?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Oh, no; under the bill he must have resided here 12 months. It covers the nearly 40,000 citizens of other States who are compelled to reside here by reason of the civil-service rules and their official position, and who are just as much entitled to vote on this question as resident citizens, and have more rights under the Constitution.

Mr. THOMPSON. I have a further amendment to offer.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Washington a question. In the bill as it now stands are there any property qualifications for voters or qualifications in regard to tax paying?

Mr. JONES. The amendment of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS], which has been adopted, does not require people to have property, but simply requires when taxes have been assessed against the property that the taxes shall be paid; that is all.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Washington a question. As I understand his amendment, it will allow men and women who now claim their residence in other States to vote here, provided they have resided here 12 months?

Mr. JONES. It entitles them to vote on this particular proposition if they have lived here for 12 months.

Mr. POMERENE. Just a moment further. Is the Senator able to state what effect voting here in the District would have on the right of a citizen of a State to vote in his own State?

Mr. JONES. I take it that, under the language which I have submitted here, it would not affect his right in his own State.

Mr. POMERENE. The right to vote in the States is controlled by the laws of those States and not by the laws of the District.

Mr. JONES. That is true.

Mr. POMERENE. So that the amendment in that behalf would not affect the residential rights of men in their own States?

Mr. JONES. I do not think it would.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. This amendment—and I have prepared and intended to offer a similar one—would simply allow Government clerks and officials in Washington who retain their citizenship at home, but who by reason of their holding office here live here and have their families here, to participate in this election relating to a municipal regulation.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I will state that I believe the adoption of such an amendment would disfranchise a good many people in their home States. The question of politics arises in States and cities when men come to vote, and when a charge is made that a man has voted in the District of Columbia, I doubt very much whether he would be allowed to vote at home.

Mr. JONES. I want to suggest to the Senator that they do not have to vote if they do not want to run that risk.

Mr. GALLINGER. They do not have to vote, but they are invited to do so, and I simply wanted to point out the danger there is of disfranchising men in the several States if they vote in the District of Columbia.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, it can not possibly disfranchise them. We propose to adopt this provision in such shape as distinctly to say that they do not claim citizenship here. We strike out any claim of citizenship here and let them vote here when they are simply residents by reason of their office, retaining their citizenship at home.

Mr. GALLINGER. I have had some experience in trying to get men on voting lists in my own State, and I know how technical both parties are when perhaps a single vote will determine an election, and I say that, in my judgment, if these men vote here, they will be disfranchised in many instances.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, I have the same thought in my mind as that expressed by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER]. I do not have the Ohio statute before me at the present time, but I do know that when it comes to determining the question as to whether or not a man who presents himself at the ballot box has a right to vote in his precinct in Ohio the fact as to whether or not he has voted in another State is very often determinative of his right.

Mr. GALLINGER. Certainly.

Mr. POMERENE. And I have not any doubt but the exercise of the right to vote in this District would seriously jeopardize his right to vote in his home State.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, this provision entirely excepts the question of citizenship. Furthermore, this is really a Federal question, and any citizen of the United States ought to be permitted to vote upon it, because it affects the interests of the Capital of the Nation. Certainly no one can be disfranchised in his own State for voting upon any proposition of that kind.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, I want to ask the Senator from Washington whether the language he proposes confines the voting privilege to citizens of the United States?

Mr. JONES. It confines it to residents of the District of Columbia, male and female, of the age of 21 years, and so forth.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I have not the bill before me, and that is the reason I asked the question.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I should like to suggest to the Senator from Washington that it might be well to make the provision read "resident citizens of the United States."

Mr. JONES. I accept that.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I think there should be some such provision.

Mr. JONES. I accept that suggestion.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. If we use the words "resident citizens of the United States," that will show even more clearly that the purpose is to permit a vote here on this question without affecting their status as citizens of the respective States.

Mr. JONES. I accept that suggestion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. One moment, so that we may keep the RECORD straight. The Chair understands that the Senator from Washington has accepted the suggestion of the Senator from Georgia and modifies his amendment in that respect.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, before that is accepted, that is exactly the point I wanted to inquire about. What does the Senator from Georgia mean definitely by the expression "a citizen of the United States"?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I mean just what the term implies, a person who in a State would be allowed under the laws of the State to vote. If he were foreign-born, he would have to be naturalized.

Mr. CLARK. That was not the point to which I directed attention. The point to which I wish to direct attention is, What is a citizen of the United States? Of course, there is no such thing as a voting citizen of the United States, and, therefore, if the amendment is to be made, the word "citizen" ought to be so defined as to carry a voting qualification.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I think we have fixed the voting qualifications in this bill.

Mr. CLARK. We have not fixed the voting qualifications of citizens of the United States. The voting qualifications of each citizen is fixed by the State in which he resides.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, I think a constitutional amendment prescribes the qualifications of a citizen of the United States as one born in the United States or duly naturalized.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. That is what I understand. I thank the Senator from Minnesota. That is my view of the matter.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote!

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Washington will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 2, line 8, of the substitute, after the word "citizens," insert the words "of the United States and," so that it will read "that all resident citizens of the United States and of the District of Columbia"——

Mr. JONES. No; that is not the amendment. The amendment strikes out the words "resident citizens" and inserts the words "residents, citizens of the United States." The words "residents who are citizens of the United States" would perhaps be better, and I suggest it be changed in that way.

The SECRETARY. On page 2, line 8, it is proposed to strike out the words "resident citizens" and insert the words "residents, citizens of the United States."

Mr. JONES. After the word "residents," insert the words "who are citizens of the United States."

The SECRETARY. "Residents who are citizens of the United States."

Mr. JONES. In line 14 there is a further amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 14, following the amendment heretofore agreed to, it is proposed to insert the words "whether they maintain or have maintained a voting status elsewhere or not."

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I desire to make a suggestion to the Senator from Washington. It occurs to me that very much confusion may arise by the use of the words "resident citizens." I think residence is universally the test of the right to vote, and, strictly speaking, all of these people to whom we desire to extend the right to vote by this amendment—and I am with the Senator from Washington upon that—vote in the States from which they come, because they are residents not of the District of Columbia, but of those States; and they are not, as it seems to me, appropriately described at all as "resident citizens of the District." They are resident citizens of the States from which they come, and in which they claim the right regularly to vote.

Mr. JONES. The word that I used was "residents."

Mr. WALSH. I understand.

Mr. JONES. If the Senator can suggest anything that he thinks will cover the matter I shall be very glad to accept it. I thought that I would save time. This matter will go to another body, and I suggest that it can be taken care of all right.

Mr. WALSH. I was going to suggest to the Senator that the language "citizens of the United States domiciled within the District for the period of 12 months prior to such election" would express the idea, I think, better than the language used.

Mr. JONES. I would suggest that probably it would be well to let this matter go, and then it can be taken care of in the other body.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington to the substitute offered by the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, I should like to have that portion of the section read as it will appear if the amendment is adopted.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will state the section as amended, or that portion of it.

The Secretary read as follows:

That all residents who are citizens of the United States and of the District of Columbia who are over the age of 21 years, of sound mind, and have been not convicted of an offense involving moral turpitude——

Mr. SUTHERLAND. That is sufficient for my purpose. It seems to me the language would be very much confused by that provision. As I understand it, it provides that all residents who are citizens of the United States and of the District of Columbia—that is, citizens of the District of Columbia——

Mr. JONES. No; the words "of the District of Columbia" ought to be stricken out.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. What the Senator intends to do is to provide that all persons who are domiciled in the District of Columbia, and who are citizens of the United States, shall be permitted to vote, irrespective of the fact that they have a voting status in some other place?

Mr. JONES. Yes; and if I can have that language, I——

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Why not say that?

Mr. JONES. I would be glad to have that said, but I am trying to save as much time as possible in getting to a vote, and not to strike out any more of the bill than is necessary; that is all.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. The Senator from Montana is exactly correct about it.

Mr. JONES. I agree to that.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. When we provide that residents of the District of Columbia shall be permitted to vote, we thereby exclude from voting the very persons whom the Senator desires to have vote, because a person can not be a resident in two places. A person may be domiciled in Washington and have a residence in the State of Washington or in the State of Utah.

Mr. JONES. The Senator and I are agreed, if he will suggest the language.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I suggest, as the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH] has substantially already suggested, that it be made to read "That all persons domiciled in the District of Columbia, who are citizens of the United States, over the age of 21 years," and so forth.

Mr. JONES. That is all right. I accept that.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to amend the language so that it will read:

SEC. 2. That all persons domiciled in the District of Columbia who are citizens of the United States—

And so forth.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. It will then be necessary to change the word "residents" farther down, in line 11, so that it will read "who have been so domiciled in the District of Columbia."

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out, on line 11, the words "residents of," and insert "so domiciled in," so that that part will read:

And who have been so domiciled in the District of Columbia.

SEVERAL SENATORS. For what length of time?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. For more than one year.

Mr. JONES. That is already in the section.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Washington, as now agreed upon, to the amendment of the Senator from Alabama.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, on page 1, in line 2, I move to strike out the word "male." I offer that as an amendment.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I understood that that had been adopted. Has it not?

Mr. BORAH. No; it was in section 2, on page 2, that that was adopted.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Oh, well, as the Senate has already fixed the suffrage with males and females, I am perfectly willing to accept the suggestion of the Senator from Idaho and let the same provision extend to the petition. I accept that.

The SECRETARY. On page 1, line 2, before the word "taxpayers," it is proposed to strike out the word "male."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BORAH. On page 4, after the word "his," in line 1, I move to insert "or her."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I accept that.

The SECRETARY. On page 4, line 1, after the word "his," it is proposed to insert "or her," so that it will read:

The ballot issued in said election shall have printed thereon such phraseology as will enable each voter to express intelligently and clearly his or her choice on the issue to be voted upon.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BORAH. On the same page, line 8, after the word "he," I move to insert "or she."

The SECRETARY. On page 4, line 8, after the word "he," the second word in the line, it is proposed to insert "or she."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I accept that.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BORAH. And on the same page, on line 11, after the word "his," I move to insert the words "or her."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I accept that.

The SECRETARY. On page 4, line 11, after the word "his," it is proposed to insert the words "or her."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BORAH. And in line 12, after the word "his," I move to insert the same words, "or her."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I accept that.

The SECRETARY. On line 12, after the word "his," it is proposed to insert the words "or her."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, I move to amend by striking out, on page 2, lines 15 and 16, the words "The managers of the said election shall be the sole judges of the qualifications of the voters."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 1, lines 15 and 16, it is proposed to strike out the following words:

The managers of the said election shall be the sole judges of the qualifications of the voters.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Before agreeing to that, Mr. President, I should like to know who is to determine the qualifications.

Mr. WORKS. I do not know; but certainly the managers of the election ought not to remain the sole judges, the exclusive judges. It is possible that the courts might be called upon to determine that question at some stage, and I think it is not wise to make them the sole judges.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. The way the bill is being framed somebody ought to judge, of course.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, when a voter presents himself at the polls and his vote is contested somebody has to determine whether or not he is entitled to cast his vote. This proposition is perfectly fair. I do not see how anyone who favors prohibition can object to it, because two of the commissioners of the District, I understand, are prohibitionists. They will appoint these judges, one on each side of the question, and they will pass on the question as to whether or not the contested vote should be cast. If we strike this out of the bill, then we do not leave it for anybody to determine as to whether a vote shall be cast or not, whether it is a legal vote. So I hope the amendment will be voted down.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, the trouble about it is that this provision makes the managers the sole judges. Usually where a vote is challenged the voter is required to make affidavit of his qualifications, and that, of course, permits his vote. But the question may arise later on as to his qualifications if there should be any contest of the election, and certainly that door ought not to be closed.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. This bill provides that the District Commissioners may adopt such rules and regulations for the conduct of this election as they may prescribe. They can provide in their rules and regulations for the taking of an oath; but at the election somebody must determine whether the voter shall vote. I do not know how it is in other States, but in my State the judges of election determine that. This is not a final determination. It is the determination under the qualifications prescribed in this bill.

Mr. HARDWICK, Mr. SUTHERLAND, and Mr. THOMPSON addressed the Chair.

Mr. WORKS. Well, Mr. President, the commissioners could not make any rules or regulations in violation of the express terms of the bill that these managers shall be the sole judges.

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield to me for just a moment——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. WORKS. Yes.

Mr. HARDWICK. I think I can make a suggestion which will avoid this trouble. It is to strike out the word "sole."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. All right. I am perfectly willing to consent to that.

Mr. HARDWICK. They must be the primary judges.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will consent to strike out the word "sole," leaving it to read that they shall be the judges of the qualifications of the voters.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, I do not think the Senator from Alabama ought to consent to striking out the word "sole." As I understand the rule which prevails in the various States, it is that the judges of election in the first instance constitute the sole judges of the qualifications of the voters who present themselves. If a man comes to the polls to vote, and his vote is challenged, he has the right under some statutes to make an affidavit, to swear to the facts which constitute his qualifications, and then the judges determine whether or not he shall cast his vote. If they determine against him, that is the end of the matter so far as the right of a person to vote is concerned. If, however, the judges under some circumstances deny the right to vote to a man who has such a right, then he has his action at law. That is the remedy which he has.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I agree with the Senator from Utah; but I do not think and did not think that to strike out the word "sole" affects the matter one way or the other, so I let it go out.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, while the election officers may determine whether or not the proposed voter shall cast his vote, they have no right to determine conclusively what his qualifications are. This provides not only that they shall undertake to determine whether or not he shall cast his vote, but that they are the sole judges of his qualifications, which I understand to mean the exclusive judges. It will cut off any inquiry in the future. Certainly the Senator from Utah does not maintain that that ought to be done.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I consent to the amendment on those terms. If the referendum is adopted, I have no doubt that between the two Houses this question will be straightened out.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary is unable to determine just the terms of the amendment which is proposed to be offered, and is accepted.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out the word "sole" on page 2, line 16, before the word "judges."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That is correct.

Mr. WORKS. That is correct.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. President, I have one other amendment to the original bill. I have submitted it to the Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD], and he is willing to accept it. Before the vote is taken I should like to offer it.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I should like to get a vote on this referendum. The Senator can take up that matter later. If we go into the amendment of the Sheppard bill again, we will not get a vote this afternoon.

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. President, I should like to know whether I will have a right to offer this amendment at a later time if the substitute is adopted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will have an opportunity in the Senate to amend anything done as in Committee of the Whole. The question now before the Senate is the adoption of the substitute, as amended, offered by the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, before the vote is taken, just one other suggestion with reference to the phraseology. On line 12 of page 2, in line with the amendments which have already been made, the words "in which they reside" should be stricken out and the words "of their domicile" should be inserted. I suggest that amendment.

The SECRETARY. On page 2, lines 12 and 13, after the word "precinct," it is proposed to strike out the words "in which they reside" and in lieu thereof to insert "of their domicile."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. As I understand, that is to make the bill conform to what has already been done, and I accept it.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] as amended. The yeas and nays have been called for and ordered. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CATRON (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. OWEN]. I am assured that the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS] would vote as I will vote. I therefore transfer my pair to him and vote "yea."

Mr. CHILTON (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from New Mexico [Mr. FALL], who is not present. I therefore withhold my vote. If at liberty to vote, I would vote "nay."

Mr. GALLINGER (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the senior Senator from New York [Mr. O'GORMAN]. If the Senator from New York were present, he would vote "yea" and I would vote "nay."

Mr. McLEAN (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Montana [Mr. MYERS]. In his absence I withhold my vote.

Mr. OVERMAN (when Mr. SIMMONS's name was called). Making the same announcement as previously made as to my colleague, I am requested by him to state that if he were present he would vote "nay."

Mr. WALSH (when his name was called). Making the same transfer of my pair as on the former vote, I vote "nay." I wish to announce that the absence of my colleague [Mr. MYERS] is due to illness. If he were present, he would vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, I have been requested to state that the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], with whom I have a pair, which I transferred to the Senator from Colorado [Mr. SHAFROTH], were he present, would vote for this amendment. The Senator from Colorado would vote against it.

Mr. KERN. I have been requested to announce the unavoidable absence of the senior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. LEA] on account of illness in his family. If the Senator from Tennessee were present, he would vote "nay."

Mr. SMITH of Michigan (after having voted in the negative). I did not hear the announcement of the Senator from Georgia. Was it concerning the senior or the junior Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. The senior Senator.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Has the junior Senator from Massachusetts voted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. He has not voted.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I have a pair with him on this question, and I therefore withdraw my vote. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I arise to announce that the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS] is absent owing to illness and that were he present he would vote for the amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. CURTIS. I have been requested to announce that the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. GOFF] is paired with the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. LEA].

The roll call resulted—yeas 38, nays 38, as follows:

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On the amendment of the Senator from Alabama as amended the yeas are 38 and the nays are 38. The amendment is therefore rejected. The bill is still as in Committee of the Whole and open to amendment.

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. President, I have one other amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 17 of the bill, after line 2, it is proposed to insert a new section, to be known as section 13a, and to read as follows:

That the treating or giving of intoxicating liquors to any minor by any person other than the father, mother, or guardian of such minor, or a physician for medical purposes, shall be unlawful; and any person violating the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished therefor as provided in section 1 of this act for unlawfully selling intoxicating liquors.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I have no objection to that amendment.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator that this is the first time the question of treating has come into this bill. It does not stop at the treating of minors by the father or the mother or the guardian or the physician, but it goes on to say that the gift to minors by the guardian, the father, the mother, or the physician is lawful. It seems to me there can be nothing that will make the bill more ridiculous than if that proposition is accepted and made a part of this so-called prohibition bill .

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I will ask the Senator from Kansas to strike out the words "treating or." It is incomprehensible to me that the father or mother is going to treat the son. Then it will cover simply the giving of intoxicating liquors.

Mr. THOMPSON. Very well; I will consent to that. I will simply say to the Senator from Utah that this is the language of the Kansas statute on the same subject.

Mr. SMOOT. That does not make any difference as to the remarks which I have made.

Mr. THOMPSON. It has met with success in the administration of the law in Kansas, and I hope it will here.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out the words "treating or," so that it will read:

That the giving of intoxicating liquors to any minor by any person—

And so forth.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Kansas as modified. [Putting the question.] By the sound the noes seem to have it. [A pause.] The noes have it, and the amendment is rejected.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I rose before the vote was announced to make an inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair did not so understand, but will now hear the Senator.

Mr. REED. I want to know whether the Chair has decided upon the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair has decided that the amendment was rejected.

Mr. REED. I ask that that particular part of the language be read as it now stands in the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment was not adopted.

Mr. REED. I want to have the language of the bill to which this amendment was offered read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will state the section.

The SECRETARY. It is a new section, to be known as section 13a, that was offered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill is still in Committee of the Whole and subject to amendment. If there are no further amendments as in Committee of the Whole the bill will be reported to the Senate.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. On account of there being a tie vote on the question of the referendum, I desire to reserve the amendment so that we may have a vote in the Senate on my amendment. If it had been otherwise I would not do so. I desire to ask the Senator from Texas if he is not willing to agree to an adjournment. I am willing to agree to a time to vote to-morrow.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I do not feel that I would be justified in agreeing to an adjournment.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am sure the Senator understands that we can not get a vote this evening.

Mr. REED. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Certainly.

Mr. REED. It is necessary to have a short executive session in order that numerous appointments may be referred to proper committees and be passed upon before the holidays. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion made by the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. VARDAMAN and Mr. GRONNA called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CHILTON (when his name was called). I announce my pair with the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. FALL] and withhold my vote.

Mr. GALLINGER (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the senior Senator from New York [Mr. O'GORMAN] and withhold my vote.

Mr. OVERMAN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN]. He is not present, and I withhold my vote.

Mr. WALSH (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. LIPPITT] to the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] and vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. CATRON (after having voted in the affirmative). I transfer my pair with the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. OWEN] to the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS] and allow my vote to stand.

The result was announced—yeas 32, nays 41, as follows:

YEAS—32.

Bankhead	Hardwick	Lee, Md.	Reed
Brandegee	Hitchcock	Martine, N. J.	Saulsbury

So the Senate refused to proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. LEE of Maryland. In view of the Senator from Alabama having reserved the right to offer his amendment in the Senate, I desire to give notice of an amendment to his amendment. I reserve the same right. I submit the amendment and ask to have it printed in the RECORD.

The amendment was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Add at the end of section 4 of the Underwood substitute:

"At the said registration each person registering and so desiring shall be allowed to designate the national party to which he or she belongs, and the initial letter or letters of such party shall be put down in an appropriate column opposite the name of each person so designating his or her party for the purpose of showing the voter's party affiliation, and at an appropriate time prior to the conventions of the various parties for nominating candidates for President and Vice President of the United States, upon the written request of 25 per cent of the voters in any national party so registered and so designating their national party, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia shall hold a primary election for delegates from the District of Columbia to all the national conventions under the terms of this act of the national parties that may have so many as 5 per cent of the total number of voters voting upon the issue to be voted upon under this act, and that such candidates for election as delegates to such conventions as shall in writing notify the said commissioners of their candidacy shall be voted upon in such primary, and those candidates in each party having the largest number of votes and to the number of delegates allowed to the District of Columbia in the several party conventions shall be certified as elected to the proper officials of such conventions by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia; and after the first general registration provided for in this act the Commissioners of the District of Columbia shall retain custody of the registration books and shall give notice of times when persons desiring to register and designate their party affiliations or to change their party affiliations may do so at the office of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia. Voting and candidacy in such primary elections shall be confined to the members of each party, and no registration or changing of affiliation shall be permitted save at a date or dates not less than six months prior to the date of the national convention of any party affected."

Mr. REED. I offer the following amendment. On page 2, lines 5, 6, and 7, I move to strike out the words "for beverage purposes or for any other than scientific, medicinal, pharmaceutical, mechanical, sacramental, or other nonbeverage purposes" and to insert in lieu thereof:

No alcoholic or other prohibited liquors shall be exported from the District of Columbia into any State or Territory of the United States.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If the Senator from Missouri will allow me to interrupt him, I think we can reach an agreement to vote on the bill.

Mr. President, I have no desire whatever to delay a vote or final action on this bill. If there had not been a tie vote in the Senate, I would have allowed the bill to go through without further objection. The Senate has itself expressed no conclusion except a conclusion on the parliamentary situation. Some days ago I might by my own vote have delayed action on this bill and put some other bill in its place. I want to say to the Senator from Texas that I have no desire in the world to postpone action or to hinder the passage of the bill if he demonstrates that a majority are in favor of his proposition.

Mr. SHEPPARD. If the Senator will pardon me, he said he wanted a vote this afternoon.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I did.

Mr. SHEPPARD. And on that account Senators on the other side refrained from speaking, having understood that he and I agreed to a vote this afternoon on the bill and amendments.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. On my amendment.

Mr. SHEPPARD. On the amendment and on the bill.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; it was on my amendment that I was asking for a vote. What I agreed to was a vote on my amendment.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I did not so understand it.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That is what I understood. I was not concerned about the bill. Now, we have a tie vote in the Senate. The Senate ought to express its will. I think we will expedite the passage of the bill by reaching an agreement to vote on this amendment and all other amendments and the bill to-morrow at an hour to be fixed. I am willing to make that agreement and hope that the gentlemen in favor of the bill will agree to an hour to-morrow. I would say 1 or 2 o'clock, whichever is most agreeable. I ask unanimous consent——

Mr. POINDEXTER. I object, Mr. President.

Mr. BORAH. Is the Senator submitting a proposed agreement?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I desire to submit a proposition. I desire to ask unanimous consent that at 1 o'clock to-morrow the Senate shall proceed to vote upon the substitute proposed by myself and all pending amendments and on the bill.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I object.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Say 5 o'clock

Mr. GALLINGER. Objection has been made.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I would rather not agree to as late an hour as 5, because at that hour a great many Senators are away. I will agree to 4.

Mr. LEE of Maryland. Make it 4 o'clock.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Washington [Mr. POINDEXTER] has made an objection, so that a roll call for a quorum would be productive of no result. The Chair will order a roll call, however, if the Senator presses his request for unanimous consent.

Mr. GALLINGER. An objection has been made.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. An objection having been made a roll call is not necessary.

Mr. REED. Did the Senator object to 4 o'clock?

Mr. POINDEXTER and others. Regular order!

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri is entitled to the floor.

Mr. REED. I had just concluded offering an amendment. I ask the Secretary to read it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will state the amendment proposed by the Senator from Missouri.

The SECRETARY. On page 2, lines 5, 6, and 7, after the word "liquors," in line 5, strike out the words "for beverage purposes or for any other than scientific, medicinal, pharmaceutical, mechanical, sacramental, or other nonbeverage purposes," and in lieu insert:

No alcoholic or other prohibited liquors shall be exported from the District of Columbia into any State or Territory of the United States.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I am not offering this amendment as a matter of delay. It is the amendment which I offered in substance yesterday morning. It was stated at that time that the amendment as drawn would affect liquors sold within the District as well as liquors sold outside of the District, and would bar the sale within the District of liquors used for medicinal purposes. At the time it was suggested that I should withdraw the amendment and allow the Senator from Alabama to offer his substitute. I did so and the time from that hour to this has been occupied with the consideration of the substitute. This is the first opportunity I have had to present this amendment.

Mr. President, I will state the sole effect of the amendment. Under the bill as it stands alcohol can be manufactured in the District of Columbia and sold in unlimited quantities in any State of the Union unless the local laws prohibit it. There is in the bill the language that it can not be sold outside of the District for beverage purposes, but I have already called attention to the fact that large quantities of alcohol are manufactured within the District, and that the sale of that alcohol outside of the District is not limited by the words "for beverage purposes," because alcohol is never used for beverage purposes; it is a raw material which enters into many kinds of drinks, and it is a raw material from which whisky is made.

Mr. STONE rose.

Mr. REED. Does my colleague desire to interrupt me?

Mr. STONE. If my colleague will permit me, it seems to me so perfectly patent and clear that it is in the interest of the business before the Senate and the general business of the Senate that this matter should be postponed until to-morrow——

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator might add in the interest of the Western Union Telegraph Co.

Mr. STONE. Possibly so. Senators are leaving the Chamber, as will be seen, and in a little while we shall be without a quorum; and if we can get to an agreement to vote at some hour to-morrow, why continue this controversy when we shall be presently without a quorum? I was about to move, if it is agreeable to the Senator in charge of the bill, that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business, and I make that motion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Missouri that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After five minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 25 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, December 20, 1916, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate December 19, 1916.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT JUDGE.

Kimbrough Stone, of Kansas City, Mo., to be United States circuit judge for the eighth circuit, vice Elmer B. Adams, deceased.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE.

Duval West, of San Antonio, Tex., to be United States district judge, western district of Texas, vice Thomas S. Maxey, resigned.

CONFIRMATION.

Executive nomination confirmed by the Senate December 19, 1916.

UNITED STATES ATTORNEY.

William F. Wolfe to be United States attorney for the western district of Wisconsin.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, December 19, 1916.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Lord God, our Heavenly Father, help us, we beseech Thee, to fulfill the longings, hopes, and aspirations of our hearts by resisting the allurements of sin and yielding to the demands of our better self, that we may satisfy our conscience, merit the full confidence of our fellow men, and enjoy the sweet and holy communion with Thee which is Life Eternal, the fruits of which are peace, joy, and righteousness in the Holy Ghost; and all praise be Thine, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

CONDITIONS RELATING TO INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE.

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Speaker, I desire to bring to the attention of the House a very important matter, and being unable to assert that it is a privileged matter I ask unanimous consent for three minutes to make a statement about it.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent for three minutes to make a statement. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Speaker, the Members of the House will remember that last July Congress enacted a joint resolution raising a joint special committee to investigate conditions of transportation, expecting that that committee would work during the approaching recess of Congress; but the recess did not approach as early as we expected. The session was protracted into the fall, and the committee found themselves unable to accomplish much. They worked 14 days, I believe, before the meeting of the present session; but all the members of that committee from the two Houses are interested in legislation and are compelled to be present in their own committees and at the sessions of their respective Houses, and they have found it impossible to do justice to that investigation without neglecting their legislative duties. Therefore they have determined to ask the Congress, before proceeding any further, to extend the time in which that committee have to report, and they have instructed me to present to the House a resolution to that effect. In conformity with that instruction, I have introduced House joint resolution 323, extending the time from the second Monday in the approaching January until the succeeding year in which that committee may report. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of that joint resolution, discharging the committee to which it has been referred.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it by title.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 323) to amend a joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution creating a joint subcommittee from the membership of the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce and the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce to investigate the conditions relating to interstate and foreign commerce, and the necessity of further legislation relating thereto, and defining the powers and duties of such subcommittee," approved July 20, 1916.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I should like to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. ADAMSON. With pleasure.

Mr. RAYBURN. Does the gentleman really think that from the beginning this committee was necessary?

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Speaker, I assume that that question was concluded when Congress last summer determined to raise the committee for that investigation. I do not want to impeach the wisdom of the two Houses of Congress in ordering the investigation. We have done our best under that order to investigate. We have worked diligently, and we have not finished the work. If it was ever necessary, it is necessary yet.

Mr. RAYBURN. How long does the gentleman think it would take a committee of this character to investigate all the propositions contained in the Newlands resolution, with any degree of satisfaction, or to give any information which would be valuable to the country or to the House?

Mr. ADAMSON. We discussed that very question in the committee at the last meeting, and some of the members of the committee thought 60 days, and I thought 30 days. I believe in 30 days of real work we can complete the hearings.

Mr. RAYBURN. The committee has been organized for six months.

Mr. ADAMSON. It was organized before Congress adjourned, but you know the members of that joint subcommittee are also active members of their respective committees and of the House, more or less, and that it is impossible for us to be in two places and to do two things at once. I myself have a sort of a one-track, narrow-gauge mind, and I can not do more than one important thing at a time. We found that during the session of Congress we could not do justice to the subject.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. RAYBURN. I object.

URGENT DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. FITZGERALD, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported a bill (H. R. 19178) to supply urgent deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, and for other purposes (H. Rept. 1232), which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I reserve all points of order on the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] reserves all points of order.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. MANN. About what, just for information?

Mr. ALLEN. On the instability of human institutions.

Mr. MANN. What is that?

Mr. ALLEN. In other words, on the attempt to abolish the Subtreasury at Cincinnati.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SMITH of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the subject of the conservation of our natural resources.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks on the conservation of our natural resources. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. MCCRACKEN, until January 12, on account of important business.

To Mr. CAREW, for the remainder of this week, on account of a death in his family.

Mr. SMITH of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my colleague [Mr. ANDERSON] be excused on account of sickness.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent that his colleague [Mr. ANDERSON] be excused on account of sickness. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

LEGISLATIVE, EXECUTIVE, AND JUDICIAL APPROPRIATIONS.

On motion of Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 18542) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, and for other purposes, with Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is now in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the legislative bill, of which the Clerk will read the title.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 18542) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, and for other purposes.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will proceed with the reading of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 6. That to provide, during the fiscal year 1918, for increased compensation at the rate of 10 per cent per annum to employees who receive salaries at a rate per annum less than $1,200, and for increased compensation at the rate of 5 per cent per annum to employees who receive salaries at a rate not more than $1,800 per annum and not less than $1,200 per annum, so much as may be necessary is appropriated: Provided, That this section shall only apply to the employees of the Library of Congress, the Botanic Garden, and the executive and judicial establishments, who are appropriated for in this act specifically and under lump sums or whose employment is authorized herein: Provided further, That detailed reports shall be submitted to Congress on the first day of the next session showing the number of persons, the grades or character of positions, the original rates of compensation, and the increased rates of compensation provided for herein.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the section.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I do not know whether it is the desire of the committee to consider this section under the rule or as it stands in the bill. I should suppose they would want to consider it under the rule although they voted against the rule.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. We will consider it under the rule.

Mr. MANN. Not unless it goes out on a point of order. The rule authorizes an amendment to be offered and this is the original language. If the original language of the bill does not go out on a point of order the rule has no application whatever. I have reserved a point of order.

Mr. FITZGERALD. We are not going to make a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois make the point of order?

Mr. MANN. No, Mr. Chairman; I withdraw the point of order.

Mr. STAFFORD. I will reserve a point of order for the time being.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, may we have the amendment again reported?

The CHAIRMAN. There is no amendment. Section 6 was read and the gentleman from Wisconsin has reserved a point of order. Does the gentleman from Wisconsin make the point of order?

Mr. STAFFORD. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment to the original section in the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state to the gentleman there is no original section in the bill.

Mr. MANN. I desire to offer an amendment.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment as a new section:

Page 142, line 15, insert the following, a new section, as section 7:
"That to provide, during the fiscal year 1918, for increased compensation at the rate of 10 per cent per annum to employees who receive salaries at a rate per annum less than $1,200, and for increased compensation at the rate of 5 per cent per annum to employees who receive salaries at a rate not more than $1,800 per annum and not less than $1,200 per annum, so much as may be necessary is appropriated: Provided, That this section shall only apply to the employees of the Library of Congress, the Botanic Garden, and the executive and judicial establishments, who are appropriated for in this act specifically and under lump sums or whose employment is authorized herein: Provided further, That detailed reports shall be submitted to Congress on the first day of the next session showing the number of persons, the grades or character of positions, the original rates of compensation, and the increased rates of compensation provided for herein."

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The Chair sustained the point of order. Under the ruling, has not section 6 gone out?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes; but this is offered as a new section—section 7.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Will not that leave a hiatus?

The CHAIRMAN. That can be changed later on.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that while a member of the Committee on Appropriations has the prior right, the Chair did recognize the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KEATING] to offer an amendment.

Mr. CANNON. I am a member of the committee, and I offer an amendment to the amendment of the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I submit that when the gentleman from Colorado took the floor to offer an amendment there was no member of the committee asking for recognition by the Chair.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Nobody is entitled to offer an amendment at present. The gentleman from Tennessee has offered an amendment and is entitled to the floor under the five-minute rule. I suggest that we endeavor to make some arrangement for debate and have the proposed amendments submitted in advance so that Members will know what we propose to discuss and what they will be called to vote upon. We can arrange the time and take the vote after the discussion is over.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair wishes to state that he should have recognized the gentleman on the committee, but had already recognized the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KEATING]. The gentleman from Tennessee has now offered an amendment and is entitled to the floor.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Chairman, I think that the suggestion of the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] is a good one.

Mr. FITZGERALD. How much time is desired to discuss these questions?

Mr. CANNON. I would like a little time on an amendment I propose to offer to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. MANN. I do not see how we can arrange time now.

Mr. FITZGERALD. If Members will indicate what their amendments are, we can arrange for it.

Mr. MANN. It is now 25 minutes past 11 o'clock, and we will probably not do any more than to finish this bill to-day. This is the last section of the bill. I do not think you can get much idea of how much time is necessary or desired until debate has run for a while.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Members would know what the different propositions are that they are called upon to vote on.

Mr. MANN. But there is no way of limiting the number of amendments.

Mr. FITZGERALD. We frequently do it by agreement.

Mr. STAFFORD. I suggest one hour on a side.

Mr. MANN. Oh, we can not get through this by half past 1 o'clock.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I am not suggesting any limit of time, but trying to find out how much time is wanted.

Mr. MANN. I think you had better run for a while.

Mr. FITZGERALD. We might ascertain how many amendments there are.

Mr. MANN. You can not, because some Member may offer an amendment later growing out of the situation. After the House has listened for a considerable length of time to this matter I think it will be disposed to close it up.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, when would it be in order to offer an amendment to the proposition submitted by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS]?

The CHAIRMAN. As soon as the gentleman from Tennessee has yielded the floor on his amendment it will be in order to offer an amendment to the amendment.

Mr. CANNON. We are operating under the five-minute rule?

The CHAIRMAN. We are.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer a substitute for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee is entitled to the floor, and then the Chair has promised to recognize the gentleman from Colorado.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I ask for the regular order.

The CHAIRMAN. The regular order is the gentleman from Tennessee to discuss his amendment.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I do not care to discuss this amendment at length now, and certainly not until after some of the amendments which certain Members have indicated they propose to offer have been presented. The committee felt, in view of the general sentiment which seems to exist, that some recognition ought to be taken of the fact that there is now and has been an unprecedented increase in the cost of living. The committee could not expect to bring in a proposition which would meet the views of every individual Member. There were various suggestions made in the committee, some involving a slightly greater increase, some involving a less increase. The matter was discussed and considered for several days in the committee, and after a very thorough discussion and consideration of all the questions arising, both as to the necessity for an increase and as to the condition of the Treasury, the committee finally agreed on the proposition reported in the bill, which has been re-presented as an amendment.

I submit to the gentlemen of the House that it is a fair and liberal increase under all of the circumstances and conditions. There is a sentiment existing in many portions of the country in favor of increases of the wages paid to employees, but I dare say there are few, if any, cases, certainly none which have been brought to my attention, where a greater increase has been allowed than 10 per cent, and the Department of Labor has reported that the usual rule in those cases where increases have been allowed is 10 per cent, among those factories and large employers in the various textile mills in New England and other portions of the country, and I wish to call the attention of Members to the fact that in all those mills nearly all of the employees receive less than $1,200 per annum. This committee has recommended that, in so far as the employees of the Government in this bill are concerned, there shall be an increase during the year 1918 of 10 per cent of the salary or wages paid to those employees who draw less than $1,200 a year and 5 per cent to those who draw from $1,200 to $1,800 per year. Gentlemen must not forget the fact that when we undertake to establish a rule or precedent in this bill the same rule and precedent will be invoked when other appropriation bills come before the House. You must not forget the fact that this bill covers less than one-twentieth of the employees of the whole United States Government, and that in establishing this rule and precedent for less than one-twentieth of the employees of the Government you will later on be confronted with the question of whether or not you will be equally fair and equally liberal with the other nineteen-twentieths of the employees of the Government. I am speaking in round numbers and terms. It is impossible even with this amendment to determine accurately exactly what this amendment will mean in the way of an increase in the expenditures of the Government, due to the fact that many of the employees are employed under lump sums, and for an indefinite length of time; but as can best be determined the increase which would be brought about by the amendment proposed will mean from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 for the employees in this bill alone, and, as I have just suggested, the same rule will be invoked as to all of the other employees of the Government. So, you see that in establishing a rule of precedent here in this bill you may, if you adopt some of the propositions which will be presented later on in the day, and which I have heard privately discussed, establish a precedent that will increase the expenditures of the Government from fifty to one hundred millions of dollars, or even more.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Tennessee has expired.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, I want to ask the gentleman whether or not the same reasons that impelled the raising of the wages of the clerks under $1,200 by 10 per cent would not extend to the employees of the House and the Senate, who are compelled to live here in the District, and whether the committee recognized the fact that this bill carried appropriations for employees of the House and Senate, and whether the committee would not be willing to include the employees of the House and Senate in those entitled to the 10 per cent increase?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. That was considered in the committee, but there is this distinction between the Capitol employees and the employees in the departments of the Government. This Congress will adjourn in March next. It is true the bill does not go into effect until July 1, 1918, but the next session of the House will not begin until next December. That session will probably be completed by June or July of the following year, or at the latest August. In other words, the employees of the Capitol are actually on duty about 12 out of the 24 months of the term, and therefore there is a distinction between the services performed by the Capitol employees and those who work in the departments from one year to another. As the gentleman knows, during the recesses of Congress the employees are given vacations, and probably half of them—I know in some particular cases that many—remain here while the other half go home or go about other business.

Mr. BORLAND. I think there is a large number of them who are unable to engage in any other business. Some of them are here, and those who go home are home only for a brief time, and possibly when they go home and come back it is in the end an expense instead of an advantage; so that it does seem to me that the same rule that would apply to clerks in the departments would apply to the employees of the Senate and House, and I desire to submit that proposition to the House.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. The gentleman will be able to discuss that when it is considered. I do not want to discuss this matter at length now, as I said, but I hope to be given the opportunity to say something else on the subject later on, after some of these amendments are offered. But I do want to repeat that the committee having this bill under consideration gave this matter the most serious and most deliberate consideration, and the committee was unanimously of the opinion that the increase proposed was most liberal, especially when you take into consideration the fact, as the chairman of this committee stated yesterday, that we are facing a great deficit in the Treasury next year. The papers upon yesterday and to-day called the attention of Congress and the country to the fact that unless something is done, unless some measure is adopted which will increase the taxes and burdens of the people, it will become necessary to issue bonds next year.

Now, I have always been in favor of those who labor. I belong to that class myself, and I have never failed to cast my vote in favor of legislation looking to their welfare and to their interests; but, gentlemen, in passing upon this measure to-day we should think of the laboring man back home who will have to pay such increases as you place upon this bill and other appropriations. This money can not come out of the air; it does not grow upon trees; somebody has got to pay it; and those who will pay it are the laboring men back home and all over this country—the farmers and the business men. I think we should be fair to those who pay as well as to those who receive, and in our desire to serve the one we should not forget the other. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I hope this amendment will be adopted without amendment.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 142, line 16, after the word "provide," insert "during the remainder of the fiscal year 1917 and."

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the amendment is not germane.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order.

Mr. CANNON. Will the gentleman from New York state his point of order?

Mr. FITZGERALD. The pending amendment provides for increase of compensation during the fiscal year 1918, for which this bill makes appropriation. If it were proposed to increase the salary of some one place in the bill and an appropriation were carried to do so, it would not be seriously contended that a provision would be in order appropriating enough money to increase the compensation of that place during the remainder of the current fiscal year. The gentleman from Illinois will not make that contention. If that be true as to one it would be true as to two, and it would be true as to all positions in the bill. This bill makes appropriation for the executive, legislative, and judicial departments of the Government for the fiscal year ending 1918. The compensation for places during that year is provided, and this provision is not inconsistent with the purposes of the bill. It merely provides a scale of increase during the period for which the appropriations are made. The gentleman proposes to introduce a matter that is not germane, in that it would enact legislation proposing increases of compensation during the balance of the current fiscal year. I submit it is clearly subject to the point of order.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, I think it is not subject to the point of order. I refer to Rule IX, paragraph 3, page 293, of the manual:

To appropriation of the revenue for the support of the Government as herein provided, viz, for legislative, executive, and judicial expenses; for sundry civil expenses; for fortifications and coast defenses; for the District of Columbia; for pensions; and for all deficiencies—to the Committee on Appropriations.

So that the jurisdiction of that committee to report to the House for its consideration is covered by that rule without regard to which general appropriation bill the amendment might be offered.

Mr. FITZGERALD. If the gentleman will yield?

Mr. CANNON. Certainly.

Mr. FITZGERALD. In order to report a deficiency that is in order it must be authorized by law.

Mr. CANNON. Oh, the special rule authorizes the legislation.

Mr. FITZGERALD. But it must be authorized by law. There is no authority for any increase of compensation for the balance of the current fiscal year.

Mr. CANNON. No authority. If the point of order was made upon this provision and sustained, that brings us to the consideration of this provision the same as if no point of order had been made.

Mr. FITZGERALD. That is true; but the amendment must be germane to be in order.

Mr. CANNON. Precisely; and it is germane.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Oh, no.

Mr. CANNON. Oh, well, the gentleman says, "Oh, no." I would be glad indeed if the gentleman would point out anything in the rule that prohibits the Committee on Appropriations from reporting upon a sundry civil bill or any other general appropriation bill a deficiency for the present fiscal year.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I admit that deficiency appropriations are in order on this bill, but a deficiency appropriation can not be in order unless the service or compensation is already authorized by law. The gentleman from Illinois is proposing to legislate fixing the compensation. The compensation for these places is fixed by law for the current year.

Mr. CANNON. Precisely.

Mr. FITZGERALD. And the appropriation has been made——

Mr. MANN. And has been fixed by law for the next fiscal year.

Mr. FITZGERALD. The appropriation has been made to the extent of the law, and there can not be any deficiency.

Mr. CANNON. The gentleman, it seems to me, fails to realize what the rule provides.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Oh, no; I do not.

Mr. CANNON. Very well. I disagree with the gentleman. This amendment is authorized by the special rule. The original proposition is not authorized by law. It seems to me it is perfectly plain that the very object of the rule was to enable us to consider this amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee, notwithstanding that it is not authorized by law. Very true this is not authorized by law, but it provides by this amendment to affect the same employees that are affected by the original amendment as offered by the gentleman from Tennessee. I do not know that it is necessary, if I may be indulged for a moment, to show the propriety of this amendment. If without amendment the gentleman from Tennessee succeeds in having the amendment agreed to, the increase of pay to the employees does not begin until the 1st of July next. God knows what the price of wheat, corn, and meats will be on the 1st day of July. We do not know when the war in Europe will close. It may be that the salaries proposed by the amendment by the gentleman from Tennessee will buy 25 or 50 per cent more of the necessities of life than the salaries would buy during the remainder of this fiscal year.

In my judgment, the rule makes this amendment in order. And even without the rule I believe this amendment to be germane. It treats of the same parties and the same officials that the amendment of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS] covers.

Mr. MANN and Mr. BENNET rose.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] is recognized.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee, of course, is only under the special rule, and would not be in order, as the Chair rules, to strike out of the bill because it is an appropriation not authorized by law. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS] provides for an increase in the compensation during the fiscal year 1918. If an item in the bill in some place provided for an appropriation for the fiscal year 1918 for a particular officer who was authorized by law, and there was a deficiency for this year, it would be in order to offer an amendment on this bill.

Now, the other appropriating committees frequently bring in bills providing that appropriations shall be immediately available. That language is always subject to a point of order because the other appropriating committees do not have jurisdiction over deficiencies, but the Committee on Appropriations does have jurisdiction over deficiencies, and an item making immediately available an appropriation carried in one of the bills reported from the Appropriations Committee, offered by the gentleman from Tennessee. I think it proper to call the attention of the Chair to the rule and also to a colloquy which took place in the House when the rule was proposed.

When the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY] reported this rule from the Committee on Rules I asked him the distinct question whether an amendment of this character would be in order under the rule reported from that committee. Of course, while his opinion does not control the Chair, still it was upon his statement that the House acted. He said that such an amendment under the rule would be in order. I call the attention of the Chair to the rule:

Resolved, That no amendment shall be in order in the consideration of the foregoing amendment changing existing law beyond the fiscal year 1918.

Is the Committee on Rules trying to fool the House—I think not—by bringing in a rule stating that no amendment shall be in order beyond the fiscal year 1918? Are they endeavoring to fool the House into the belief that under that an amendment would be in order providing for any time between now and the end of the fiscal year 1918? I do not believe the Committee on Rules would be guilty of endeavoring to fool the House by bringing in such a rule. Here is a rule reported from the committee and adopted by the House which provides that no amendment shall be in order relating to the time after June 30, 1918. Certainly that, by implication, provides that an amendment any time prior to that time would be in order, as expressly stated by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY], who reported the rule. But the amendment is germane. If a similar item had been in the bill relating to the next fiscal year, any deficiency relating to the item would be in order on this bill or any other bill reported from the Committee on Appropriations.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule.

Mr. SISSON. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would like to hear the gentleman from Mississippi. [Laughter.]

Mr. SISSON. Mr. Chairman, after the remark which the Chairman just made, it is very much like the justice of the peace, who by vocation was a blacksmith, who heard all the testimony in a case, and told the lawyers who had examined the witnesses, "Now, you have a pretty good crowd here. Get up now and make your argument. I have got to go and do some work. Open up this drawer and you will find my written judgment. Do not lose this opportunity to make a speech."

So, inasmuch as the Chair has stated that he is ready to rule, I am rather in that attitude. Of course, there is no intimation as to which side of the question he is to rule on, and the gentleman now addressing the Chair is also in this unfortunate position, namely, that the gentleman occupying the Chair is a member of the Committee on Rules which reported the bill, and perhaps is in a better situation to understand what the Rules Committee had in mind at that time.

But I wanted to call the Chair's attention to the fact that this whole resolution provides for appropriation for a certain fiscal year. There is no item in the bill, no item in the amendment now offered, except for the fiscal year which is specifically set forth in the resolution, stating that this rule is for the purpose of making an item for the year, which the committee offered for the year 1918, in order. There is nothing in the rule, no line or syllable in the rule or in the body of the resolution, that provides for any other year than the fiscal year 1918.

Mr. MANN. Does the gentleman seriously contend that there is nothing in this bill applying to any fiscal year except the fiscal year 1918?

Mr. SISSON. Nothing in this rule, I say. In other words, if you take the wording of the rule——

Mr. MANN. What the gentleman said was "the bill."

Mr. SISSON. But take the rule——

Mr. MANN. I was speaking of the bill.

Mr. SISSON. The rule applies to the bill. The language of the rule is this——

Mr. MANN. I understand.

Mr. SISSON. I understand, but since the gentleman raised the question, I wanted him to understand what is in my own mind. It says:

That to provide during the fiscal year 1918 for increased compensation at the rate of 10 per cent per annum to employees who receive salaries at a rate of compensation less than $1,200.

That is for the year 1918. The resolving portion of the resolution, on page 2, limits it so that you can not get beyond the year 1918. But the appropriation here——

Mr. MANN. We are observing that, too.

Mr. SISSON. But the appropriation here in this bill does not cover the item for 1917. We are legislating only for 1918. Now, you might put upon this bill, if you please, items providing for salaries and fix the salaries, if you please, but it would be germane for all time to come until that salary was changed; but you are not doing that now. The only thing we are doing is making provisions for the salaries that shall be drawn during the year 1918. That is the specific appropriation. Now, the fact that you say that you shall not go beyond 1918 is a limitation only as to the future. It does not in anywise affect the law which this bill affects, to wit, that of appropriations commencing for the year 1918, and making appropriations for the year 1918 the rule only contemplates it would not go beyond the year 1918, and can not antedate that year. That is my contention under the rule.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks that the object of the special rule is to provide for these increases for certain classes of employees for the fiscal year 1918, and that if the proviso in the special rule cited by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], namely—

Resolved, That no amendment shall be in order in the consideration of the foregoing amendment changing existing law beyond the fiscal year 1918, nor shall any amendment be in order relating to the compensation of employees not appropriated for in H. R. 18542—

were not in the special rule, an amendment would not be in order that would have extended it beyond the fiscal year 1918. It would not, in that event, be germane to this section. There is quite a difference, in the opinion of the Chair, between an amendment making an appropriation immediately available and in an amendment that provides for increasing the appropriation during the remainder of the year 1917. The Chair can not agree with the argument of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] that there is any deficiency to be taken care of in this amendment. It proposes, on the other hand, to increase an appropriation and change existing law. The amendment, in the opinion of the Chair, is not germane to the provision and sustains the point of order.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I respectfully appeal from the decision of the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois appeals from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, I move to lay the appeal on the table.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the committee?

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I ask for tellers. I do that so that the Chair will not be put to the embarrassment of counting.

Mr. FITZGERALD. The gentleman from Illinois asks for tellers.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. GLASS). The gentleman from Illinois asks for tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chairman appointed Mr. MANN and Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee to act as tellers.

The committee divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 96, noes 79.

The CHAIRMAN. The decision of the Chair is sustained. [Applause.]

Mr. KEATING and Mr. BORLAND rose.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. HARRISON). The gentleman from Missouri is a member of the committee. The gentleman from Colorado will be recognized later.

Mr. KEATING. I had the assurance of the Chair, as the Chair knows, that I would be recognized, and I feel under all the circumstances that the Chair should make good on the proposition.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that under the practice here the members of the committee will have the prior right.

Mr. KEATING. Is it possible, Mr. Chairman, that when a Member has been struggling for the floor for the better part of an hour a member of the committee, who has an eleventh-hour inspiration, can come in and take him off the floor? Can the thing continue without limit?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would state to the gentleman that it does seem to be unfair, but he will recognize the gentleman in a moment.

Mr. SISSON. I believe it is the rule of the committee and not simply a practice.

Mr. BORLAND. It is not in the discretion of the Chair. I offer an amendment, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BORLAND: Page 142, line 18, after the word "employees," insert the words "including the Capitol police and employees of the Senate and House of Representatives."

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order on that.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, I do not think the point of order is well taken, because the rule under which the original amendment was offered provides that it shall extend only to employees covered by this bill. An amendment which included employees not covered by this bill would be subject to a point of order, but these employees are covered in this bill, and in no other bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would like to ask the gentleman this question: Are these employees that the gentleman proposes to include in this section provided for in this bill?

Mr. BORLAND. They are provided for in this bill. There is no question about that.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would like to hear the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS].

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, the amendment offered simply applies to the employees covered in the bill. I think it is specifically stated in the rule that it shall apply only "to the employees of the Library of Congress, the Botanic Garden, and the executive and judicial establishments who are appropriated for in this act specifically and under lump sums or whose employment is authorized herein." The rule reported by the Committee on Rules and adopted by the House provides—

That no amendment shall be in order in the consideration of the foregoing amendment changing existing law beyond the fiscal year 1918, nor shall any amendment be in order relating to the compensation of employees not appropriated for in H. R. 18542.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, I only want to say this, that it seems to me that the same reasoning which applies to a raise of 10 per cent to employees drawing less than $1,200, on account of living conditions here in Washington or on account of living conditions throughout the country at the present time, would apply with the same force to the employees of the House, with the same force to the Capitol police, and to the watchmen and doorkeepers and others who must live here in Washington and under the same conditions of living.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. GORDON. These employees covered in the amendment will all have a vacation from the 4th of March until the 15th of December on half pay.

A MEMBER. Full pay.

Mr. GORDON. That is so much worse. Why do you say this would apply to these clerks in Washington that would apply to these appointees?

Mr. BORLAND. I will answer the gentleman. This bill is for the fiscal year 1918. It has nothing to do with the 4th of March. It goes into operation on the 1st day of July, 1917. It embraces the long session of Congress, beginning in December, 1917, and extending probably, as we know, during the balance of that fiscal year. During the time from the 1st of July until the convening of Congress most of these employees will be engaged. A large number of them certainly will be engaged. The men in the folding room, the men in the various clerical offices here, the Capitol police, all of them will be engaged. There will be scarcely any vacation, and so far as I am able to ascertain, the expenses of these men in going back and forth to and from their homes for a short vacation are a part of their expenses, and they do not get any opportunity to engage in other business. The vacation, in other words, does not result in any addition to their pay.

Mr. SIMS. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. BORLAND. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. SIMS. Does this amendment cover those employees in the House Office Building who are under the Superintendent of the Capitol, who are carried on the pay rolls of the Secretary of the Interior?

Mr. BORLAND. I intended that it should cover them.

Mr. SIMS. It ought to.

Mr. BORLAND. And if the gentleman is not clear about it, let him offer an amendment to cover it.

Mr. SIMS. Oh, I want the gentleman to cover it.

Mr. BORLAND. My impression is that the description "employees of the House and Senate" embraces them all.

Mr. SIMS. These gentlemen to whom I refer are on the pay roll of the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. BORLAND. If they are on the pay roll of the Secretary of the Interior they are embraced in the main proposition. Now, what we are trying to embrace is those who are not on the pay rolls of any of the executive departments, but who are on the pay rolls of the legislative department.

Mr. SIMS. That is my understanding.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BORLAND. I yield to the gentleman from Rhode Island.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. I agree with the gentleman from Missouri, and I want to ask him if his amendment includes the folders in the House Office Building?

Mr. BORLAND. It does. It covers all of these low-paid employees.

Mr. BURNETT. Will it include the messengers to committees?

Mr. BORLAND. I think so.

Mr. BURNETT. I think it is very just that they should be included. I have a messenger who gets only $60 a month, a white man, a very competent man, and I am going to lose him unless something is done to increase his salary.

Mr. BORLAND. That only emphasizes what I have to say, It is a question of simple justice. I concur with the committee in believing that if we give an increase at all in the pay of the great army of Government employees, we ought to be very moderate in the increase. We ought not to be swept off our feet by some proposition to increase them 25 or 33⅓ per cent, or some such increase that we can not justify according to the increase of industrial wages throughout the country; but when we give an increase of even 10 per cent, I think we ought to be perfectly uniform about it, and I think it ought to embrace all the employees who receive these low salaries, and whose conditions of employment are similar. Therefore, I think we ought to adopt this, in common fairness, if we adopt any provision increasing the salaries of employees.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Is the gentleman absolutely certain that under his amendment all would be included?

Mr. BORLAND. I am not absolutely certain, but I would like to make it certain that the increase would be uniform.

Mr. MANN. I think the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] proposes to offer an amendment which would make that absolutely certain. This bill divides itself into various branches under the titles "Legislative," "Executive," and "Judicial."

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. MANN. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee uses the language "executive and judicial establishments." If you add "legislative," then you include everybody covered by the bill; but when you attempt to cut out the general term "legislative" and to specify certain things, I do not know whether you cover them all or not. The gentleman from Pennsylvania proposes to offer an amendment to strike out the words "Library of Congress, the Botanic Garden, and the" and to insert "legislative," so that it would apply to the employees of the legislative, executive, and judicial establishments who are appropriated for in this bill. That covers everybody whose salaries come within the limits covered by the proposition.

Mr. BORLAND. If the gentleman will yield, I suppose it would be a good thing to say that this increase shall apply to all employees appropriated for in this act.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. MANN. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman have five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND] be extended five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MANN. You will find on the second page of the bill the heading "Legislative." That covers every appropriation for the legislative establishment of the Government. You will find on page 28 the heading "Executive." That covers all the appropriations for the executive establishments of the Government. You will find on page 137 the heading "Judicial." That is the heading that covers all the appropriations under the judicial establishment, and the three combined cover all. Now, that is a simpler way to do it, I think, and not leave it a matter of construction as to whether certain employees under the Superintendent of the Capitol are covered, and so forth.

Mr. BORLAND. Would that cover the Capitol police?

Mr. MANN. They are all appropriated for under the legislative establishment.

Mr. BORLAND. I personally have no objection to that amendment. I want to cover exactly what the gentleman from Illinois has outlined. I think we ought to make this raise uniform within those limits of salary.

Mr. MANN. I think whatever we do to-day ought to apply to all the employees of the Government, here and elsewhere.

Mr. BARKLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BORLAND. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. If the gentleman will yield, I wish to ask him whether he has any objection to accepting an amendment, which I shall send to the desk to be read for information. The idea is to cover all of those that would be affected by the bill.

Mr. BORLAND. I will yield to the gentleman.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania: Pages 142 and 143, after the words "employees of the," in line 24, strike out the words "Library of Congress, the Botanic Garden, and the" and insert in lieu thereof the word "legislative."

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. That would make it comprehensive and cover everyone that is to be covered in this bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. Would not that be broad enough to cover the various committees of the House and the Senate and the clerks of Members whose compensation has already been increased?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. It covers all those receiving not more than $1,800 and not less than $1,200.

Mr. BARKLEY. It covers employees whose compensation has been increased under previous action.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I think not; it would apply as in other cases.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes.

Mr. MANN. The clerks to Members are not employed under the legislative establishment, but are the employees of Members.

Mr. BARKLEY. But it would cover clerks to committees.

Mr. MANN. Undoubtedly.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, I am going to ask leave to modify my amendment on the lines suggested and carefully analyzed by the clerk of the committee. I want to move to amend so as to strike out the words in line 24, page 142, after the word "employees," extending down to the word "establishment," in line 2, page 140. That strikes out all reference to the Library of Congress, Botanic Garden, executive, and judicial. And it would read: "Provided, That this section shall only apply to the employees who are appropriated for in this act specifically and under lump sums or whose employment is authorized therein." That amendment is absolutely clear.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. That covers everybody intended to be covered in the executive and judicial departments?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes; it covers what the gentleman has in mind.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment as modified.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. BORLAND: Pages 142 and 143, after the word "employees," in line 24, page 142, strike out the words "of the Library of Congress, the Botanic Garden, and the executive and judicial establishments," so as to make the line read as follows: "This section shall apply only to the employees who are appropriated for in this act specifically and under lump sums," etc.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, the committee should understand why the employees of the Senate and House were not included in the recommendation by the Committee on Appropriations. It was due to the fact that the compensation of employees of the two Houses of Congress is not only liberal but very generous and much in excess of that paid for similar services in any department of the Government or in private life. An employee who is engaged in the business of operating an elevator in the Capitol or the House Office Building receives $1,200 a year. In private establishments in the city they receive $60 a month, and $720 a year as a rule in the executive departments of the Government. The page boys employed on the floor of the House receive $75 a month. Compensation for other services is on a similar scale.

I do not criticize the scale, because it is something inherent in the conduct of legislative bodies. The employment is not of a permanent character; it is what may be termed somewhat hazardous in that it is apt to terminate unexpectedly and without much notice. And so the custom exists in every legislative body of the United States to compensate upon a generous scale their employees. When it is proposed to give an increase to take care of temporary conditions those facts can not be ignored.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Certainly.

Mr. MANN. The salaries for the employees around the Capitol have been carried for a number of years at practically the same amount?

Mr. FITZGERALD. A great many of them.

Mr. MANN. Congress having now acted on the idea that these salaries were proper at that time, if an emergency does exist does not the emergency hit these employees just as hard as it does any other employees?

Mr. FITZGERALD. They are as well off relatively and much better off than anybody else relatively.

Mr. MANN. Considering the fact that many will go out in the cold before long, does not the gentleman think that this should apply to them?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I do not think that many will go out at the close of this Congress. It is a matter that affects Members on this side of the House by whom they are appointed. If any of the employees of the Capitol are dissatisfied because of the compensation they are receiving and no longer desire the places, if I am given an opportunity I can bring a regiment of applicants, competent persons, who are not only willing but very anxious to fill the places. What I have said, Mr. Chairman, is simply in explanation of the action of the committee in eliminating these employees. It was the desire of the committee to try and meet as far as could be the needs of employees of the Government under existing conditions.

Consideration had to be given to many things. I have just had a computation made by competent persons, and their estimate is that if a provision similar to the one carried in this bill is incorporated in every appropriation bill it will require $25,000,000 to meet the added expense to the Government. It seems to me that that is as far as we are justified in going under the present circumstances. While I am willing to be just, I am not willing to be lavish in attempting to take care of the situation.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I received a letter this morning which seems to me to contain a most effective argument in favor of the general proposition properly to increase the wages of Government employees. This letter was written by the postmaster in a city of about 15,000 people in my district, and, with the permission of the House, I shall now read it:

DECEMBER 16, 1916.

MY DEAR MR. COOPER: I wish to write you about a circumstance that has happened here and the condition that exists. We have here at this building a janitor who receives $55 per month. He is 55 years of age and has a family. He is a handy man, is a pretty fair mechanic. He does many odd jobs of repairs that if he did not do would cost the Government a considerable amount to have done. He has had sickness in his family, and has been ailing himself because of a nervous disorder, induced, I think, by his financial condition. Yesterday he would have destroyed himself had the gun which he was about to use not been taken away from him—

Mr. Chairman, I ask for order. It is true that this is merely the case of a janitor who is being paid $55 a month; but, nevertheless, he is entitled to have his case presented here inasmuch as he is only one of quite a large class of Government employees who are trying to exist—forced to exist—in these times of extravagant prices on what are practically starvation wages. For the benefit of gentlemen who apparently did not wish to hear the letter I shall repeat some of what I have read:

Yesterday he would have destroyed himself had the gun which he was about to use not been taken away from him. This man can not reasonably support himself, or even support himself at all, on $55 a month.

I do not write you to urge any legislation, but simply to acquaint you with a condition that exists here and, I think, in many other places.

As a citizen I have to say that, in my judgment, the Government ought to pay a living wage to even its most humble employees, and, further, in my judgment, such legislation ought to be enacted as would permit or require the payment in these times of high prices of a larger amount to janitors.

I beg to remain,
Yours, very sincerely, ——— ———.

Then follows the signature of the postmaster.

This is the richest Government in the world, Mr. Chairman, and in times like these it is not justified in compelling an employee with wife and children dependent upon him for support, for whom he is obliged to buy food and fuel and clothing and to pay physicians, as this sick man has been, to try to exist on $55 per month. Gentlemen have repeatedly said that the Government must be just before it is generous. Mr. Chairman, it must be just before it is niggardly. [Applause.] I have not a constituent, I am thankful to say, but who, if it should become necessary for the Government to raise money by bonds in order properly to pay janitors in these times, will not consent to the issue of bonds.

As I have before said on this floor, the Government ought not to determine its duty by what private employers sometimes do in the matter of wages, but it ought to make itself a model employer, as it is abundantly able to do, and always pay all of its employees a living wage. [Applause.]

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND] and now under discussion may or may not be understood clearly by the membership of the House. The purpose of the amendment is to include in this increase of pay the employees of the two branches of Congress; no one else. Every other person appropriated for in the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill is provided for in the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS]. I want to call the attention particularly of the majority side of this House to the fact that these men hold their positions largely as patronage at their hands. They are paid a wage sufficient to induce them, many of them, to come from your districts to the Capital to accept this job. There is not a single man of you who has one of these places at your disposal who can not to-day fill the place of any man you have named five times over by men who are beseeching you for the place. [Applause.] And yet you stand here seriously considering squandering the public money in order that these men who work little more than half the time, may have a bonus paid to them on a wage that they are not only glad to have, but that 40 other men are standing at your elbow to take away from them, if you shall designate them.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes.

Mr. BORLAND. I will ask the gentleman whether that is not exactly true of every other employee in the bill whose pay is raised? Is not that exactly the fact in the case of all these employees?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Except that possibly the person out of employment who would take the place of the employee in the Government service can not take it because of the civil-service obstacle that is in his way; but that is not true in the case of these employees.

Mr. BORLAND. Is there not a big civil-service waiting list now?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Oh, certainly; and I might argue that, in support of the moderate increase that has been provided in the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee. I have no hesitation in saying, and it can be proven by the most reliable figures that have been tabulated in respect to a comparison between the wages paid clerical employees by the Government and those salaries paid in private employment for like service, and in every instance a fair comparison will show that the very people for whom we are providing an increase of 5 or 10 per cent under the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee are receiving greater pay than are men who are performing not only a like service but who work much longer hours in private employment.

The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER] alludes to the "richest Government on earth." How long would we be so if we pursued the course marked out by some gentlemen? The gentleman is consistently willing that we should increase these wages, even if we issue bonds to meet the increased amount. This is temporary, but we must pay for it by additional taxation.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I can not yield just now.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. The gentleman wants to be fair?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I want to be fair.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman yield now?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Certainly.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I feared it possible that the gentleman might put that construction upon my remarks. I limited that specifically to the increased wages of janitors.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. It would not take many bonds to do that.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I said my constituents, if they had to do it in order to pay these poor men more than $55 a month——

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I accept the gentleman's statement, because I value the time more than my statement. I want to say this one thing further in connection with this matter: Other gentlemen have alluded to this as being the "richest Government on earth." You can not get your money except out of the people by taxation, and I want to say there are gentlemen in this House, some on this side and more on the other side, who have voted for every expenditure that has been proposed, but who refused to vote for the bill raising the amount necessary to pay it, and I say that in good faith, whatever may be your political affiliation, you can not afford to vote obligations upon the Government and then refuse to vote for the money that is necessary to pay them; and that is what you are doing here in this proposition. [Applause.]

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I belong to that committee which is charged with the duty of suggesting bills to this House to pay the tremendous expenses of this Government. The London Economist five or six weeks ago contained a most interesting article estimating the amount of the budgets of the warring nations after the present awful war is ended. If the war ends one year from the 1st of next March, England will have an annual budget thereafter of $1,200,000,000, according to this publication. Germany will have a budget of $1,300,000,000; Austria-Hungary will have a budget of $1,400,000,000; Russia, with a budget always the largest in the world, will have a budget of $1,600,000,000. I wonder if gentlemen who compose this body realize that for the year mentioned by the London Economist, for the fiscal year 1918, the expenses of this Government—and we have been in no war—will be $1,655,000,000, the largest budget in all the world, a larger budget than any nation in the world was ever compelled to meet. Increase the salaries of all these Government employees 10 per cent and you add to the expenses of this Government $60,000,000 every year. How are you going to meet it? The cry all over this country is, "Cut out the 'pork'!" and by "pork" they mean appropriations for public buildings; by "pork" they mean appropriations for rivers and harbors; by "pork" they mean appropriations for this Government's distribution of vegetable seed, and that is all. The average annual expenditure for public buildings for the last two decades amounted to $9,000,000. We spend $25,000,000 or $30,000,000 on rivers and harbors every year. Cut this out, cut both out, cut out the $250,000 which is expended for vegetable seed each year and you would have half of what these 500,000 Government employees are seeking to saddle on this country. I am not willing to see our rivers and harbors permitted to fill up nor to discontinue entirely the expenditure of money for Government buildings in order that Government employees may have their demands on the Treasury satisfied. The real pork-barrel propositions with which this country is confronted are the demands of these Government employees on the Treasury. We have a deficiency staring us in the face. Gentlemen need not deny it.

The deficiency in 1918 will amount to nearly $280,000,000. How are you gentlemen going to meet that when the time comes? Is the country going dry? Those who advocate nation-wide prohibition are boasting of the fact that Pennsylvania and Nevada are now the only really wet States in the Union. I am not discussing the moral question, but I am discussing the condition which will confront us when this country does go dry. If that should happen during the next year—an impossible premise, though—we will be called upon by taxation to collect from some source or other $237,000,000 more in money each year thereafter. In other words, we are confronted right now in this country with the possibility of being compelled in the near future to levy more than $500,000,000 of new taxes. How are you going to do it? Restore the rates of the Payne-Aldrich bill? That is the proposal many of you make. You can not, to save your life, frame a tariff bill which will yield over $350,000,000 a year. Restore those oppressive rates and you will add to the present tariff law $100,000,000 in tariff taxes. If you restore this obnoxious stamp tax, you have only $33,000,000 more. Can you get it from taxing the large incomes more? Why, you have in this method of taxing reached the very highest notch. We tax large incomes now as much as any other civilized nation in the world ever attempted to tax them in time of peace. You are face to face with the necessity of lowering the income exemption——

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Illinois may proceed for five additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York that the gentleman from Illinois proceed for five minutes? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. RAINEY. We are face to face with the proposition of lowering the income exemption to $1,000, and even if you do that also you will not raise this enormous sum of money. You can not progress here by proceeding along the line of least resistance. You can not conceal your head in the sand and flounder around here helplessly listening to the demands of 500,000 Government employees who want their salaries raised.

I wish we could raise their salaries. I wish we could pay everybody more money. I wish this janitor mentioned by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER] could get more money than he is receiving now. Is he getting any more or any less than janitors receive for similar service in other sections of this country and in private employment? If he is getting less, he ought to have more; if he is getting more, he ought to have less. That is the way to adjust these matters. How much is he getting? He is getting $55 a month, perhaps also apartments in which to live, with the tips that go with services of that kind in a great city—$660 per year. That is not a large amount, but it is $100 more than the average rate of wages paid in the gentleman's district, the gentleman who suggests now the monstrous proposition that we issue bonds for the purpose of paying the current expenses of this Government in order that these salaries may be raised.

Mr. SIMS. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. RAINEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. SIMS. I fully agree with what the gentleman says, but is it not a fact that the estimates for military and naval expenditures this year are $300,000,000 more than they were last year?

Mr. RAINEY. That is exactly true.

Mr. SIMS. And all the world talking peace and permanent peace.

Mr. RAINEY. And when we discuss lowering those expenditures for the Army and Navy, from every metropolitan paper in this country comes the charge that we are guilty of treason against this Government. You can not lower those estimates.

Mr. DALLINGER. I would like to ask the gentleman from Illinois if he did not vote on the fish hatcheries bill——

Mr. RAINEY. Yes; I did.

Mr. DALLINGER (continuing). Carrying $800,000?

Mr. RAINEY. I voted for the fish-hatcheries bill. They add largely to the wealth of this country. I voted for those hatcheries because they help provide food for the 100,000,000 people who live in this country. [Applause.] We have one river in Illinois which, under the fish-hatchery system conducted there, yields every year per acre for all the land in its bed which is covered with water, $15. Is not that an industry worthy of being taken care of? Is any private individual going to hatch out fish and turn them out for fishermen to catch, when they mature, in our streams in order to reduce the high cost of living in this country?

These Government positions do not go begging. Last year we had 185,000 applicants for these places. Six times as many people took every examination as there were jobs to distribute. They are desirable places. I wish it were possible to pay them more money. I wish it were possible to pay every wage earner in this country more money—every man who works upon a small salary more money. In this country there are 6,600,000 men who work all day long amid clanking machinery, in the close air of great factories, who received on an average in 1909—the last year for which reliable statistics are available—$519 per year. If their salaries have been increased since then by 20 per cent, which is hardly possible, they would get less now than this janitor gets. The farmers of this country who produce foodstuffs for this Nation enjoy an average income of less than $600 per year, and that includes what their wives and children are able by their labor to contribute.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. RAINEY. May I have five minutes more?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent for five minutes more. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAINEY. Employees here in the District of Columbia work seven and a half hours a day, some of them, and some of them work eight hours a day—none of them more than that—and they receive an average compensation of $1,200 per year. Two millions of these wage earners in our factories, who get an average wage of less than $600 per year, work over 10 hours a day, and only 500,000 of them work 8 hours or less. The remaining 6,100,000 work 10 hours and more than that every day.

How much time are they allowed each year on full pay for sick leave? They do not get 30 days. How much time are they allowed for vacations on full pay? They do not get 30 days. All these Government employees get 30 days' sick leave and 30 days' vacation on full pay all the time. These Government positions are desirable ones. They are sought after. You need not fear that they are not going to be filled. The humanitarian side of the question, of course, appeals to all of us. We would like to give them more money if we could, but this money in the Treasury does not belong to us. The Republican side usually votes for every charge on the Treasury, and gets enough votes on the Democratic side to carry it through. The money you are spending does not belong to you. It belongs to the 100,000,000 people who are being taxed to place it there. It does not flutter down from heaven to fill up these vaults of the Treasury. It is there as a result of a system of taxation. We are not here for the purpose of generously giving it away. We are here as trustees of this enormous fund for the people who sent us here, to protect their rights, and not to give it away to Government employees who want their salaries increased. The time has not come to increase salaries, as many gentlemen in this House think they ought to be increased. But the time will come when everyone of us will be compelled to go home and face our constituents. You can not escape responsibility because you sit on that side of this aisle and say that we on this side are responsible because we have control of this House, and Democrats can not escape responsibility, either. This trust fund must be administered conscientiously and not given away. Of course, these employees want their salaries raised. We know they do. They hold every day meetings in this city, here where $46,000,000 in Government funds are distributed every year in salaries, here where there are 42,000 Government employees. They hold their meetings here every day, creating a public sentiment, a tremendous sentiment among themselves, for this increase. And it is announced that a petition to contain 500,000 names is about to be presented to this Congress, asking that we boost these salaries until we make an additional charge on the Treasury on account of this subject alone of $60,000,000 per year.

Already here in this committee—and I am unwilling to believe the propositions will ever pass the House—you have increased your allowances. You have given yourselves session stenographers at $75 a month, and you have increased your allowance for clerical hire to $2,000. You insist these additions are necessary, because you have to pay some of these expenses out of your pockets. Of course we all do that. But those of you who represent country districts, how many third-class postmasters have you got who do not pay something out of the pittance that the Government gives them to conduct the Government's business and employ additional help in their offices? Why, nearly every one of them does, and we are not here demanding that their allowances be increased. And if you increase your allowances here you will simply take the lid off the Treasury of the United States and invite every Government employee to come in here and help himself.

The time has come when the taxpayers of this country, the men who meet these enormous burdens, ought to be consulted. Every day bill after bill is introduced into this House for the purpose of getting money out of the Treasury. But I can count on the fingers of one hand the bills which Members introduce here in a whole session of Congress for the purpose of getting money into the Treasury. What we need in this country is some method of getting money into the Treasury, not so many heroic, patriotic methods of getting money out. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I can not quite agree with all of the argument of my colleague [Mr. RAINEY] against the Byrns amendment. I think the Byrns amendment ought to be agreed to, and that the pending amendment ought also to be agreed to.

Just for a moment let us see what the situation is in the country. Since the war in Europe began we have imported more than a thousand million dollars of gold. That of itself would add considerably to the cost of articles and help very materially to make prosperity in the country, because no country in the history of the world ever yet has imported great quantities of gold without prosperous times following the importation. We are exporting immense quantities of munitions of war, foodstuffs, cotton, and so forth, at very high prices, at prices which benefit us, so far as the Nation is concerned, because they are prices which are paid by the foreigner for the articles which we export. The result is that the country is enjoying prosperous conditions; business is doing well; labor is in demand. There is almost an extravagant riot of speculation going on in some parts of the country as the result of these prosperous conditions. But the very result hits most people in the country hard. A few enjoy the splendid benefits of the prosperity, but the man who works for a salary finds that if he had a steady job before, the prosperity of the country ruins his personal prosperity. Instead of all receiving the benefit, those who work are at a disadvantage unless their wages be enlarged.

Most of the private companies and persons who are employers in the land have either willingly or unwillingly been required to advance the wages of their employees. The demand for labor itself would cause that, whether the employers desired it or not. Many of the large corporations have, in addition to raising the wages of their employees, given a bonus at the end of the year or at the end of some time to their employees.

Now, we stand in a peculiar position. It is dependent upon us whether we will at all increase the compensation of Government employees, or whether we will determine that the prosperity which may come to all other people in the country shall be calamity to those who are employed in the service of the Government of the United States. [Applause.] That is what we have to determine. They can not receive the benefit of the prosperity except through our influence. Shall we make it a calamity to them because it spells prosperity to everybody else?

I take it that whatever we do on this bill ought to be followed on the other appropriating bills providing for governmental service. Whatever rate we fix here we ought to fix in other bills, providing for the same classes of service with the same increase of pay. If we do not increase compensation here on this bill, we ought not to increase compensation on the other bills. If we add 10 per cent here to the pay of those who receive less than $1,200 a year, we ought to add 10 per cent to all the other Government employees, because the calamity or the prosperity is not coextensive with the limits of the District of Columbia. The same conditions exist throughout the Union. We must determine now, in order not to play favorites, whether we will increase and to what extent we will increase the pay of Government employees; and we ought to carry that through the various other appropriations which are to come.

Now, I fail to understand the reasoning of those gentlemen who believe that we ought to increase the pay of everybody in the Government service below a certain salary except those that we personally know, who do the personal work for us in the House and the official work here; that we ought to increase the pay of all the Government clerks in Washington and the Government clerks in the post offices and other branches of the Government service throughout the Union everywhere, except the janitor who does the work in our own employ. I fail to understand that reasoning. If we are to be generous—I do not say generous, because I do not think we ought to be generous—but, in any event, if we would be reasonably just, then we ought to apply that to those who work for us here as well as the others, and not draw the line.

I do not believe that we ought to make a great increase in the pay. I commend the committee, which, having a very difficult task before it, finally brought in the proposition which was brought in. I am inclined to think at present that the percentage of increase they propose may be a proper percentage for us to follow all through the Government service. I do not favor extravagant appropriations. We may have the burden on this side before long—probably will [applause on the Republican side]—of raising the money. We know that the other side has always proved incompetent to transact such business. [Applause on the Republican side.] We know that they do not know how to raise money for the Government. We believe that if we have the power we will have the knowledge and the statesmanship to do it properly. I think we will have, and that we can afford to be just to those who work for the Government, as much so as to those who work for private employers, and that we ought here to determine a reasonable increase in pay and apply it to all employees of the Government in the classes covered as we may cover them in any proposition that we may adopt here and now. [Applause.]

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, there are other amendments to follow, and I ask unanimous consent that all debate upon the pending amendment be now closed.

Mr. AUSTIN. I object, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. How much time does the gentleman want?

Mr. AUSTIN. I have been trying all the morning to get the Chairman's eye, and I object to closing the debate on this amendment until I have had an opportunity to discuss it.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. To my certain knowledge the gentleman has an amendment which I know he proposes to offer a little later.

Mr. AUSTIN. I have been on my feet very often, trying to get recognition all the morning, and I do not propose to be cut off.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that there are several gentlemen trying to get recognition, but he can not recognize them all at the same time. He is doing the best he can.

Mr. KEATING. Can we not dispose of the Borland amendment?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I think we ought to dispose of this amendment and then take up the main proposition. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate upon the pending amendment be closed in 10 minutes, 5 minutes to go to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. AUSTIN] and 5 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. FERRIS].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee asks unanimous consent that debate upon this amendment be limited to 10 minutes, 5 of which shall be allotted to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. AUSTIN] and 5 to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. FERRIS]. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I want to address myself for a few minutes to the manner in which we can raise this needed money, in answer to the argument of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY].

Just prior to the adjournment of the last session of Congress two speeches were made on this floor when the revenue bill was under consideration, one by the Speaker of this House and the other by the ranking Republican member of the Committee on Ways and Means. As I now recall the speech made by Speaker CLARK he stated that he had served on the Ways and Means Committee for 15 or 16 years, and that he could take the schedules in the tariff bill and write a tariff measure which would produce a sufficient amount of money to meet all the Government requirements. The ranking Republican member of the Committee on Ways and Means [Mr. FORDNEY] stated during the same debate that if the Payne-Aldrich tariff rates were now in force, with the present large importations of foreign goods into this country we would collect enough money at our customhouses to meet all the running expenses of the National Government without a resort to direct taxation.

Our present tariff duties average about 10 per cent, the lowest in the world. If you double the existing tariff rates you can raise a sufficient amount of money to take care of all these appropriation bills. So there is your remedy and your method for meeting this proposed increase in salaries.

We have not had a rearrangement or readjustment or general increase in Government salaries for half a century. We have increased the salaries of the judges of the Supreme Court, we have increased the salaries of every United States circuit and district judge, we have increased the salaries of the President and the members of the Cabinet. Ten years ago, on account of the increase in the cost of living, the Members of this House increased their own salaries 50 per cent. The United States Steel Corporation has already increased the wages of its 200,000 employees to the extent of $30,000,000, and on Saturday last the American Bell Telephone Co. announced an increase of $3,000,000 for its employees. Other corporations throughout the country have increased wages. Everybody admits the increased cost of living. What fair, just, and reasonable argument can be made against increasing the salaries of the efficient and deserving Government officials? Why, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] in a 15-minute speech argued against the increase of Government salaries, and yet when the eight-hour proposition was before this House last session, which, according to the officials of the railroad companies, meant an increase in wages of 25 per cent, he voted for it. If that increase is to be met, freight rates will be advanced, and in the end the people are to pay for the increase.

This increase reported by the Committee on Appropriations is a delusion and a snare. It means a daily increase of 21 cents for a $1,600 clerk, a daily increase of 18 cents for a $1,400 clerk, 20 cents a day for a $900 clerk, 25 cents a day for a messenger at $840, and 21 cents a day increase for an assistant engineer, a watchman, or janitor, or skilled laborer. For a fireman on a salary of $660 it means a daily increase of 19 cents; for a messenger at $600 a year, 18 cents a day; for a charwoman at $360 a year 10 cents a day; and for one at $240 a year, 7 cents a day. The last increase will pay the price of a loaf of bread.

The weekly increase of a clerk at $1,600 a year will be $1.50 a week or $6 a month. For a $1,400 clerk it will mean a weekly increase of $1.25, or a monthly increase of $5. For a $900 clerk it will mean a weekly increase of $1.87, a monthly increase of $7.50. For an $840 messenger it will mean a weekly increase of $1.75 and a monthly increase of $7. For an assistant engineer, a watchman, a janitor, a skilled laborer, all receiving the same wage, it will mean a weekly increase of $1.50, a monthly increase of $6. For a fireman paid $660 annually it will mean a monthly increase of $5.50 or a weekly increase of $1.37, while a $600 messenger will get a monthly raise of $5 or a weekly increase of $1.25. A charwoman paid $360 would obtain a monthly advance of $3 or 75 cents per week. The lowest-paid charwoman, who now receives $240 for a year's work, will get the magnificent increase of $2 per month or 50 cents per week.

I have worked out this proposed increase under the pending bill to show that this so-called salary increase to meet the high cost of living is practically a delusion, and would be a reflection rather than a credit on this great lawmaking body in doing its duty toward the honest, capable, deserving officials of this great Government. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. FERRIS] is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the time. I will say what I want to say later.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a vote.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND].

The question being taken, on a division (demanded by Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee) there were—ayes 75, noes 61.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I ask for tellers, Mr. Chairman.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chairman appointed Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee and Mr. BORLAND.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 121, noes 65.

Accordingly the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Colorado offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. KEATING: On page 142, after the word "of," in the eighteenth line, strike out "10" and insert "20"; and, in line 20, strike out the figure "5" and insert "10."

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I wonder if it is possible to limit the debate upon this amendment? How much time does the gentleman from Colorado want?

Mr. KEATING. I want about 15 minutes, but there are several gentlemen here who want to discuss it, I imagine.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all time on the pending amendment be limited to 40 minutes.

Mr. KEATING. That is not sufficient. If the gentleman will bear with me, this involves an increase in rates.

Mr. MANN. But there may be somebody else that may propose an increase of rates, and we ought to get through with this bill to-day.

Mr. KEATING. Oh, we will get through with it.

Mr. MANN. Not at this rate.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Then, Mr. Chairman, I will ask that all time on the pending amendment be limited to one hour.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee asks unanimous consent that all debate on the pending amendment be limited to one hour. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Chairman, I think a word with regard to the origin of this amendment would be in order at the very beginning. This amendment was agreed upon by a committee representing the various organizations into which the Federal employees have grouped themselves, working in conjunction with a volunteer committee of Members of Congress, of which the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VAN DYKE] was chairman. The effect of the amendment is to increase the wages of employees who are receiving less than $1,200 20 per cent, and to increase the wages of those receiving from $1,200 up to $1,800 10 per cent, and it provides no increase for those who receive wages above $1,800.

Mr. GORDON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEATING. Yes.

Mr. GORDON. Was the committee that met and determined the action that the House will take composed of Members of Congress or unofficial persons?

Mr. KEATING. I will say to the gentleman from Ohio that he may possess his soul in peace. No body of citizens presumed to meet and dictate the action of this House, but a committee representing the Federal employees met, as they had a perfect right to do, and suggested to Congress and the Members thereof certain increases of salary rendered necessary by a state of affairs well known to exist.

Mr. GORDON. The gentleman said they agreed on this schedule.

Mr. KEATING. They agreed upon it, and I agreed upon it; but I did not attempt to bind the gentleman from Ohio. I would not assume to do that.

Mr. GORDON. I thank the gentleman very much.

Mr. KEATING. The amendment doubles the rates provided for in the amendment submitted by the Committee on Appropriations. Let me repeat: The 20 per cent increase is for employees who draw salaries up to but not including $1,200, and 10 per cent from $1,200 up to and including $1,800, but no increase beyond $1,800.

Mr. EVANS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEATING. I will.

Mr. EVANS. Ten per cent on a salary of $1,700 is an increase of $170. That carries the salary above $1,800.

Mr. KEATING. The increase would include a salary of $1,800, but would not apply to any salary which at the time of the passage of the law was above $1,800.

Mr. SMITH of Idaho. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEATING. Yes.

Mr. SMITH of Idaho. A clerk receiving $1,100 gets an increase of 20 per cent, and he would receive more than the clerk who receives $1,200 would get by an increase of 10 per cent.

Mr. KEATING. I have no doubt that here and there such results would be achieved, but I think in any method of percentage increase you may adopt you can work out such results. Only a few will be affected.

Now, as to the amendment, it increases the salaries for one year, the fiscal year of 1918. It does not increase the salaries for 1917 or 1919.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Chairman, I have 15 minutes.

Mr. SHERLEY. The gentleman is mistaken, Mr. Chairman. The time was limited to an hour and left in control of the Chair. I would be glad if the gentleman from Colorado gets additional time, but I do not want the Chair to be misled.

Mr. KEATING. I did not intend to mislead the Chair.

Mr. SHERLEY. Of course not.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the time of the gentleman from Colorado be extended 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. SAUNDERS). The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Colorado be extended 10 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KEATING. The increase applies to the year 1918 and not to any other year. The need for the increase is just as urgent for 1917 as it will be for 1918, and therefore if you grant this increase you are practically granting a bonus covering two years—1917 and 1918.

Now, I wish to quote from a report by the Secretary of Commerce, his last annual report, to show the need of this increase. The Secretary says:

The following compilation has interest in connection with the facts relating to the cost of living of Government employees in Washington. The present scale of wages for clerks in the Government service, grouping them into four classes and fixing a salary of $1,800, $1,600, $1,400, and $1,200, respectively, per annum for each of these classes, was fixed by the act of Congress approved April 22, 1854 (10 Stat., 276; sec. 167, Rev. Stat.), and has not been changed since that time. For the subclerical grades the rates of compensation were fixed by the acts of Congress approved July 23, 1866 (14 Stat., 207; sec. 167, Rev. Stat.), and July 12, 1860 (14 Stat., 250; sec. 160, Rev. Stat.).

For 60 years the rates of compensation to clerks have remained stationary and for about 46 years to the subclerical grades. The available figures on file in the Bureau of Labor Statistics, based upon wages in selected industries, all of which, however, were not uniform for the entire period covered, but which can be accepted as typical, show an increase in daily average wage of 137.4 per cent from 1854 to 1915. In other words, daily wages in 1915 were 2¼ times as much as in 1854. These figures were taken from Senate Report No. 1394, Fifty-second Congress, second session, Report of Senate Finance Committee on Wholesale Prices, Wages, and Transportation, which, on page 176, gives the average wage increase to 1891; Bulletin No. 77 of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, which, on page 7, gives the average wage scale from 1891 to 1907; and Bulletin No. 194 of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, which, on page 20, gives the average wage scale from 1907 to 1915.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEATING. Yes.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I wish to call attention to the fact that there have been changes in this way—that places at higher salaries have been created which people have been put into that were formerly not in the $1,800 class. The Secretary did not know that fact when he incorporated those remarks into his report.

Mr. KEATING. Clerks have been promoted from one grade to another, I know. The Secretary's statement does not mean that a clerk who went into the service in 1854 is to-day, if he is in the service, at the same salary.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I do not mean that. What I mean is that there have been places created at salaries of $2,000, $2,200, and $2,250 which are occupied by men who formerly never received more than $1,800.

Mr. KEATING. I am glad to have the explanation. Now, the Secretary goes on and gives some interesting figures on the increase in cost of living during that same period:

The reports on cost of living show that for the same period, 1854 to 1915, the increase has been 14.1 per cent. These figures are based on wholesale prices, and it is a fair assumption that the retail-price increases will very closely approximate those of the wholesale-price increases. Bringing the price figures up to the latest date for which they are available, the month of September, 1916, by using figures relating to retail prices of food, the increase over 1854 is 32.4 per cent. In other words, the increase from the average for 1915, to September 15, 1916, in price of food commodities as a group is greater than the increase of the average price for the whole period from 1854 to 1915. The increase during the nine months ended September 15, 1916, over the average price for the year 1915 is approximately 16 per cent.

For the last few years the figures showing wage increases are based on the union wage scale. It is a well-known fact that in many industries to-day wages in excess of the union scale are being paid.

Interesting in connection with this study are some pertinent figures shown by the General Review of Crop Conditions on October 1, 1916, issued by the Bureau of Crop Estimates of the Department of Agriculture. From this report it appears that the index figure of prices paid to the producers of the United States for principal crops on October 1, 1916, is about 27.6 per cent higher than a year ago, 19.9 per cent higher than two years ago, and 23.8 per cent higher than the average of the last eight years on the same date. This report shows that the corn crop is estimated to be 11 per cent below the yield of last year; wheat, 40 per cent; oats, 20 per cent; barley, 22 per cent; rye, 15 per cent; white potatoes, 16 per cent; and apples, 14 per cent. The index figures of meat animals on September 15, 1916, show prices paid to producers of about 23.7 per cent higher than the figures of a year ago; 10.5 per cent higher than two years ago; and 2.5 per cent higher than the average of the last six years on the same date. All these facts point to a still higher charge for food supplies.

Rather startling are the figures compiled by the Bureau of Labor Statistics relative to wheat and flour for the period from May to September, 1916. The report on this subject shows that the average retail price of flour increased from $7.62 per barrel in May, 1916, to $9.39 per barrel in September, 1916, and press reports since that time indicate that the retail price of flour has gone to $12 per barrel.

From the above statements it clearly appears that wages in all branches of industries have more than kept pace with the increased cost of living, but that no increase has been made in the wage scale of Government employees, notwithstanding the fact that since 1854 the daily task of all wage earners has been steadily decreasing, while the Government employee has received increased hours, with no consequent increase in compensation to offset, in a measure, the increased living cost.

That living costs in the last few years have gone up to an unprecedented extent is not shown by Government reports alone. The Annalist states that in the year ended September 30, 1916, the increase in a selected group of commodities, arranged to represent a theoretical family's food budget, has gone from 135 to 185, or an increase of about 37 per cent. The percentage of increase in food commodities shown by the Annalist compares with the official figures of the Bureau of Labor Statistics compiled to June 30, 1916.

The Secretary assumes that the cost of living increased from 1854 to 1915, 14.1 per cent, and from 1915 until his latest estimate was made, which was September 15, 1916, the increase was 16 per cent. In other words, according to the Secretary, the increase in the cost of living in the period covering a little more than a year, during these war times, was greater than the increase in cost of living from 1854 to 1915. I think the Secretary's figures on the increase in the cost of living are ultra-conservative. I believe they are entirely too low, but they demonstrate that the increase in wages which I suggest is anything but radical.

I want to call the attention of the House to another official report. The other day we increased the appropriation for the Children's Bureau, very properly so. One of the most interesting reports submitted by the Children's Bureau has to do with infant mortality in Johnstown, Pa., and Manchester, N. H., and deals particularly with the effect of high wages upon infant mortality. Of the babies with fathers earning less than $450 a year, 1 in 4 died, while, in that same vicinity, where the fathers earned more than $1,050 per year only 1 baby in 16 died.

I call attention to the fact that there are scores and hundreds of fathers in the Government service earning $450 a year. We want to increase their wages, but we are also seeking to increase the wages of the fathers who earn $1,050 a year.

This report goes on to point out that where the mother has to go out to work the increase in infant mortality is startling, and, of course, where the father fails to earn a living wage the mother must assist in making up the deficit. I might give the figures, if time permitted, but it is sufficient to know that when you deprive the father of a living wage you crush the life out of the baby. I want now to quote another great governmental authority upon the effect of increased wages upon the health and happiness of a people. I suppose the most famous authority on sanitation in the world is Surg. Gen. Gorgas, of the Army. In an address delivered before the fifteenth annual conference of health officers in New York City, and issued by the American Medical Association, Gen. Gorgas makes this statement concerning the results achieved at Panama:

The eradication of yellow fever and the control of certain other diseases at Habana and Panama was undoubtedly due to the special sanitary measures taken against these diseases. But these special features could have no effect on the general health conditions. For the last 15 years I have given a great deal of thought to this matter. What did we do to cause the great general improvement in health conditions which took place shortly after our arrival at both places, and which has since continued?

At Panama, shortly after our arrival, we increased the wages of the common laborer from 11 cents an hour to 20 cents an hour. This was nearly four times the wages of the laborer in the surrounding countries.

If we paid the citizen of a foreign country four times the wages he got at home, we naturally had to increase largely the pay of American citizens whom we wished to get to come to the Isthmus. This caused a steady increase in wages all along the line.

This large increase of wages caused a great general improvement in all living conditions—more room to live in, better food, and better clothing. I am satisfied that to this improvement in social conditions, caused by our high wages, we owe principally our extraordinary improvement in general health conditions.

It is a health officer's duty to urge forward these measures in his community which will control individual diseases; but my long experience has taught me that it is still more his duty to take that broader view of life which goes to the root of bad hygiene and do what he can to elevate the general social conditions of his community. This, my experience has taught me, can best be accomplished by increasing wages. Such measures tend at the same time to alleviate the poverty, misery, and suffering which are occurring among the poorest classes everywhere in modern communities.

Mr. SLOAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEATING. Yes.

Mr. SLOAN. I want to call attention to the fact that $1,800 is the lowest salary not affected by the gentleman's amendment, but in case the salary is $1,700 a year the amendment would so affect it that the $1,700 man would receive $70 more than the $1,800 man.

Mr. KEATING. The $1,800 man receives an increase under this amendment.

Mr. LANGLEY. And there is no such salary as $1,700.

Mr. KEATING. I presume not. The fact is that you may imagine a situation where some clerk now in a lower grade would be given a higher salary than a clerk now in a higher grade, but I do not believe it would work out in that way.

The practical effect would be that the poor fellow down below the $1,200 limit would get a 20 per cent increase, and I do not think it is sufficient in many instances. I wish we could make a much greater advance in the salaries of those who might be referred to as the "submerged" portion of the Government employees—the poor devils referred to by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER], the men who are drawing $40 and $50 and $55 per month; and the unfortunate charwomen, who scrub the floors of our public buildings for the munificent remuneration of $240 a year.

Some gentleman asks why they retain these positions, why can not they quit, why can they not go and get another job? There is no particular reason why they can not quit, except the fear that clutches the heart of men who know that if they give up one job they may not be able to secure another job. That is the reason they do not throw up these positions.

It is no answer to an argument for an increase in salary to say that you can get another man to take the place of the poor fellow who is receiving a salary that will not sustain life. So far as this Government is concerned, it should lay down the rule that every employee must have a living wage. [Applause.]

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, the Committee on Appropriations embraced section 6 in the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill proposing an increase of 10 per cent in salaries of all Government employees whose salaries are less than $1,200 per year and an increase of 5 per cent of all salaries from $1,200 to $1,800 per annum. The proposed amendment offered by the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KEATING] proposes an increase of 20 per cent on all salaries below $1,200 per annum and an increase of 10 per cent on all salaries between $1,200 and $1,800 per annum.

The Committee of the Whole House the other day increased the salaries of clerks to Members from $1,500 to $2,000 per year. This discussion has taken rather a wide latitude on the question of increases of salaries at this time. At this time, in addition to later registering my vote against it, I want to protest against the amendment increasing the salaries of clerks to Members from $1,500 to $2,000 per year. There is no doubt about the proposition that 95 per cent of the private secretaries of every one of us are now getting more money than they can get in private establishments to save their lives. If not, why are they here? Why are they willing to sacrifice their time and energy in working for us when they could get better and higher salaries by working for private institutions?

The Committee of the Whole House recently incorporated in this bill a provision voting an additional clerk at the rate of $75 per month during the time Congress is in session. I am equally opposed to this. I do not believe Members can justify themselves in voting for either of these propositions. I do not believe they will do it when it comes to a yea-and-nay vote on these two propositions. This proposed increase in salaries of private secretaries from $1,500 to $2,000 per year, additional stenographers at the rate of $75 per month while Congress is in session, together with the proposed increase of salaries of all clerks up to $1,800 per year, appropriated for in this bill, and working in the city of Washington or elsewhere may well be characterized as a "salary grab" pure and simple. This is all it is, and it should be looked upon and treated as such by those who must finally pay the bill, as well as those who receive the proposed benefits.

Mr. Chairman, I have heard many Members upon the floor of the House time and time again talk about the poor, unfortunate farmer, saying he is the man who bears the burden of taxation, and I quite agree with them on this proposition, and later I will demonstrate the truth of these statements and then see whether or not the friends of the farmer, when the roll is called upon all these increases in salaries, will vote as they have talked.

I have heard it stated on the floor of the House time and time again that the Government should be a "model employer." No one has undertaken to define what the phrase "model employer" means. Does it mean that the Government as an employer should pay higher wages than private employers? If this is what those mean who use the phrase, then they are answered, because the Government does pay its employees much higher wages than the private employer. This is answered by the facts in the case; beyond question our Government pays to its employees much higher salaries than any other Government upon the face of the earth pays to its employees. The salary of our Government employee ranges from 25 to 50 per cent per year higher than the salaries paid by any other Government to their employees. I make this statement after due and careful investigation from books and reports found on file in the library.

Without fear of successful contradiction, I undertake to say that the Government pays from 15 to 30 per cent higher wages to its employees than is paid private employees. Take the salary paid to our private secretaries—$1,500 per year. Thousands upon thousands of traveling men now traveling for private employers do not get as much as $1,500 per year. Thousands upon thousands of bright, active young attorneys, graduates of our leading law colleges, are now receiving less than $1,500 per year. Thousands upon thousands of bright, active young men, graduates of medical schools, now receive less than this sum per annum. Yesterday, coming up on the car from the Treasury Department, I asked the conductor how much he was paid. He answered me, "From 23 to 27 cents per hour, working 10 hours per day." The conductor and the motorman must work in the open, exposed to all kinds of inclement weather, and work day and night, without a single day's layoff in the whole 365 days in each year.

All the clerks and employees working for the Government in the city of Washington have 30 days' leave of absence with full pay each year. In addition, they have 30 days' sick leave of absence with full pay. They have a full Saturday afternoon off during the months of June, July, August, and part of September. They have seven full holidays with pay. All told, the employees working for the Government in the city of Washington work approximately 257 days out of the 313 working days of the year. These same employees here in the city of Washington are now moving heaven and earth, bringing all pressure they can upon the President to get him by an Executive order to establish the half holiday all the year round with full pay. Not so with the private employee working in the city of Washington. He does not get 30 days' leave with full pay or 30 days' sick leave with full pay or his half holiday. He must put in 313 days per year, less the seven national holidays.

I want to briefly quote from a farmers' bulletin which I have, for the benefit of my farmer friends of the House whom I have heard talking so long and so loud and so pitifully, bewailing the unfortunate condition of those living in the country.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. I can not yield. I would if I had time. I would be glad to do so. It is Farmers' Bulletin 746. On page 6 of the bulletin, under the title "Earnings of different classes of workers," "annual average for farmers, cash, farm supplies, $600." This means the income earned by the farmer and his family. The family averages five persons. This would mean an average income for each member of the farmers' family of $120 per year, an exceedingly small amount. Mark you, that out of this $600 earned by the farmer and his family he must buy his supplies, keep his family, pay his taxes, insurance, doctor bills, and all the usual expense connected with the keeping of a family. The farmer knows no holidays except Sunday. He and his family work each day in the year at something. He does not observe the eight-hour day, but works from daylight until dark. He has no 30 days' leave of absence with pay, no 30 days' sick leave of absence with pay. He has no Saturday afternoons off for three months in the year. He is the man who with his family is compelled to work in the open, in the rain, sleet, snow, and sunshine under any and all conditions favorable or unfavorable.

The Government employees in the city of Washington, including our private secretaries, at least 90 per cent of them work in the most favorable conditions seven hours per day in splendidly equipped Government buildings, well lighted, heated, ventilated, with sanitary conditions as nearly perfect as possible. I trust my farmer friends will remember these conditions when they come to vote upon the proposed increase of salaries, when they come to vote upon this salary-grab measure.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. GORDON). The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman have five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. HOPWOOD. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, will that interfere with those of us who desire to be heard upon this question if this five minutes be granted?

Mr. COX. Not on the other side.

Mr. HOPWOOD. I am on the other side, and therefore will not object.

The CHAIRMAN. If there are no objections, the gentleman can proceed.

There was no objection.

Mr. COX. Again quoting from the farmers' bulletin:

Wage earners on street railways, $674 per year; in iron and steel works, $610 per year; in factories, $460 per year; in telephone companies, $438 per year.

SALARIED EMPLOYEES.

In factories, $1,188; on street railways, $1,122; patrolmen, $1,052; Federal employees, $948; in telephone companies, $843; clergymen, $663.

As the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] so well and forcibly stated a moment ago, there are not less than 4,000,000 wage earners in the country to-day drawing the small salary of $470 per year. There are upward of five and one-half million wage earners and toilers who earn less than $600 per year. Enough? No! I wish it were possible for private employers to increase all the salaries of their employees, but I presume that a majority of the employers of labor in this country are paying to their employees all they can afford to pay. The newspapers of the city of Washington, day in and day out since Congress convened, have waged an unrelenting fight for the increase of salaries of Government employees. I undertake to say that many of the employees of the newspapers here in the city of Washington are getting far less than the lowest paid employee working for the Government. In my opinion it would be quite interesting reading, as well as instructive and entertaining, if these newspapers would publish the names of all of their employees and the salaries paid each. Why do not they do it? The merchants, bankers, hotel people, restaurant men, and all others in the city have enlisted in this fight to increase the salaries of clerks in the Government, and yet it is conceded that employees here in Washington are getting from 20 to 50 per cent higher salaries than these same people are paying to their employees in private life.

Since returning to Washington I had occasion to go up on an elevator in one of the largest hotels in the city. I asked the elevator man what wages he was drawing and how many hours he was required to work. He replied, "Thirty-five dollars per month, with hours ranging from 8 to 10 and 12." I recently went up on an elevator in one of the large department stores here in the city and asked the elevator man the same question. He answered me "he was getting $30 per month, and working from 8 to 12 hours per day," while the Government pays its elevator men $720 per year for 8 hours' labor, and if the subject could be properly investigated this would be substantially true in all the various occupations of labor here in the District; but it is to the financial interests of the newspapers, the merchants, bankers, hotel and restaurant men, and others living in the city to get the salaries of these clerks increased, because it means more money to them, more money will be expended in the city. Yet they do not pay one cent of the additional taxes imposed upon the people because of these proposed increased salaries, not a penny. Every cent of this additional increase will be paid by the people of the United States. Their interest in seeking to have the salaries increased is not a human interest but a selfish interest. Their agitation for an increase of salary is designed solely to benefit themselves without regard to the burden it will impose upon those who pay the taxes.

Mr. TEMPLE. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. COX. I can not yield.

Mr. TEMPLE. I would just like to know the date of that bulletin?

Mr. COX. It is dated July 6, 1916. Those who care to carefully investigate the subject of salaries paid by our Government as compared to the salaries paid by other governments will find that we are paying approximately 50 per cent higher salaries to our employees than any other government pays. Those who care to investigate and who will take time to investigate the salaries paid by the Government to its employees with the salaries paid by private establishments to their employees in the same identical line of work will find that the Government is paying its employees upon an average from 15 to 30 per cent higher wages than private employers pay.

Briefly, I want to call the attention of the House to a bulletin issued by the Bureau of Education, No. 31, issued in 1915. On page 18 of the bulletin will be found a compilation of salaries paid by both private and public institutions, as follows:

RURAL TEACHERS, FARM LABORERS, AND RURAL MAIL CARRIERS.

The average annual wage of farm laborers in 1913 was $257. The average for rural school-teachers appears to range only slightly higher—exact figures are not obtainable. It is interesting to compare with these two classes of workers the rural mail carriers, who receive an average salary of $1,115. In Alabama the figure for male farm laborers was $173 in 1913, while rural mail carriers received $1,052; the average salary for all teachers in the State for 1914—including teachers in the large cities—was $446 for male and $369 for female, while for rural teachers in two counties selected at random it was $310. In Arkansas the counties selected reported $273 as the average annual salary of teachers; male farm laborers average $204, and mail carriers on rural routes $1,043. California, one of the best-paying States for teachers, shows $804 for teachers in two counties, as compared with $421 for farm laborers and $1,046 for rural carriers. Colorado pays $309 to farm laborers, $1,060 to rural mail carriers, and $306 to teachers in independent districts. The rural counties in Connecticut pay an average of $449—not quite half the pay of the mail men. Iowa pays her rural teachers in at least two counties less than farm laborers—$326 as compared with $368; rural mail carriers in this State average $1,081. Massachusetts averages $455 to rural teachers for four counties; male farm laborers receive $306, and rural mail carriers $1,031. North Carolina (26 counties) paid her rural teachers an average of $160, as compared with $191 for farm labor, and $1,034 for rural mail carriers. In Oregon, on the other hand, teachers are paid an average of $605 (two counties), as compared with $372 for male farm labor and $1,056 for rural mail carriers. In Pennsylvania the average teacher's salary for the entire State is $744 for males and $550 for females, as compared with $1,057 for rural mail carriers. In Tennessee (46 counties) the average salary for rural teachers was $223, as compared with $190 for male farm laborers, and $1,051 for rural mail carriers.

Mr. Chairman, this bulletin is very interesting, especially when considered in the light of the argument made by the advocates for increased salaries to Government clerks. It establishes the fact beyond peradventure that Government clerks and Government employees are paid out of all proportion above private employees or other kinds of public employment. This bulletin asserts that the average annual wage of farm laborers in 1913 was $237 in the United States, and that the average for rural-school teachers appears to range only slightly higher.

In Alabama the average price paid to farm laborers was $173 in 1913. The average salary for all school-teachers in the State of Alabama for 1914 was $446 for male teachers and $369 for female teachers, while the average price paid to rural-route carriers was $1,052.

In Arkansas the average wage paid farm laborers was $204, and the average wage paid to school-teachers in counties reporting was $273, while the average salary paid to rural carriers was $1,043.

Take North Carolina. In 26 counties the average paid to her rural-school teachers was $160 and the average paid her farm laborers was $191, while the average paid the rural-route carriers was $1,034. Take the great State of Massachusetts, noted for its progress and intellectual activities as well as humaneness. The average paid to rural-school teachers was $455 and to farm laborers $306, and the average paid to rural-route carriers was $1,031. These figures are very significant, if not startling. These figures meet and refute the argument of those who contend that Government employees are underpaid as compared to private employees. It requires a great deal more study, more knowledge, more information on the part of school-teachers to equip themselves for their profession and to enable them to secure a license to teach school than is required of the average civil-service employee before they can successfully stand a civil-service examination. I adhere to the doctrine and commend the argument that the Government should be a model employer. I insist it is a model employer in each one and all of its departments. It pays its employees higher than any other employer; its employees work shorter hours than 90 per cent of other employees. Its employees are better housed, work in better sanitary conditions than private employees. Its employees have more holidays with full pay than any other class of employees in the United States.

Mr. Chairman, this is not a pleasant task for me to assume; but if I interpret my duty aright as a Representative of the people, I must stand on the one hand between those who are to receive, and on the other between those who must pay the bills. I must stand between those who are to receive the benefits on the one hand and those who must have their taxes increased in order to pay these benefits on the other.

I must be just before I am generous. I can not be just to those who pay the tax, and at the same time vote millions out of the Treasury, every dollar of which must be raised by taxation in some form. I may be wrong in my sense of duty; I may not see things from the proper viewpoint, but my sense of duty and my viewpoint compels me to take a stand with the already overburdened taxpayers of the Nation who are crying out on every hand against the onerous increased burden of taxes.

Many thousands of bills are introduced every session of Congress to take money out of the Treasury which mean taxes, and a very small number of bills are introduced proposing to put money in the Treasury. Mr. Chairman, if all these proposed increases in salary to Government clerks and employees and private secretaries go through, and become law, and the same provision proposing similar increases of Government salaries are placed on other appropriation bills, it will mean a charge upon the Treasury of not less than $25,000,000 for the ensuing fiscal year. The price is too high for me to pay. I refuse to vote it.

I am willing to pay the debt, and take the consequences whatever may befall me politically or otherwise. The Secretary of the Treasury informs Congress that in 1918 there will be no escaping a Treasury deficit of $300,000,000. This means that we have got to issue Government bonds or cast about and find some other thing or piece of property on which to place a tax. Instead of constantly increasing the burdens of taxation the wise thing to do, the just thing to do, the economic thing to do is for Congress to cease making so many useless appropriations.

Mr. Chairman, I concede that the cost of living is high, but we should remember that the high cost of living is hitting the wage earners, the toilers, the farmers; in fact, everybody just as hard and just as severe as it is hitting Government employees, and it is unfair to impose a tax upon those underpaid private and public establishments in order to increase the salaries of Government employees upon any ground, legally or morally. It will not be defended by the taxpayers when they come to vote in the next election. They will hold Members of Congress responsible for it, as they ought to.

This proposed increase of salary to Government employees and the proposed increase of salary of our private secretaries should meet a stern defeat when the roll is called upon these measures. I shall vote against it and abide the judgment of the people who have commissioned me to represent them in Congress. [Applause.]

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. SHERLEY having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message from the Senate, by Mr. Waldorf, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment joint resolution of the following title:

H. J. Res. 324. Joint resolution authorizing payment of the salaries of officers and employees of Congress for December, 1916.

The message also announced that the Senate had insisted upon its amendments to the bill H. R. 8092, entitled "An act confirming patents heretofore issued to certain Indians in the State of Washington," disagreed to by the House of Representatives, had agreed to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. PITTMAN, Mr. LANE, and Mr. CLAPP as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

LEGISLATIVE, EXECUTIVE, AND JUDICIAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

Mr. HOPWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I favor the amendment offered increasing the wages 10 and 20 per cent instead of 5 and 10 per cent, and my reason is briefly this: That in every other department of industry in our country the wages have already been increased more than that. In the coke regions in Pennsylvania wages have been increased. I cut a clipping yesterday out of a local paper to this effect, namely, that there had been a 10 per cent increase for 40,000 men in the coke region. This 10 per cent comes upon two other increases during the past year—one last February of 10 per cent, one later on, I think in July, of 5 per cent, and now another of 10 per cent, making 25, or, rather, by taking the percentages on the preceding percentages, making 27 per cent of increase during the year.

Now, one of the gentlemen who was arguing against this matter said that "we must take into consideration the men back home." The men back home are making more money than they ever made before, because of the peculiar conditions at this time, and they have been making that sort of money for the past two years, while the man on salary, either in the Government employ of any other employ, unless his salary has been raised, is the worst-fixed man in this country to-day. The prosperity instead of benefiting him is detrimental. Without any increase in salary, he is compelled to pay from 60 to 100 per cent more for living expenses.

I cut another clipping from the same paper, which is headed "$108.89 two weeks' pay."

It says:

Talking of fat pay envelopes—

Says a news item from Connellsville on Monday—

coal miners are particularly favored these days. Semimonthly pays of $80, $90, to $100 are not uncommon. Some are faring even better. At Davidson plant of the H. C. Frick Coke Co. August Fink last week drew $108.89 for his two weeks' work. To do this he loaded one hundred and twenty-one 40-bushel wagons, mined all his own coal by use of a pick, and set his own timbers. At Coalbrook William Richey mined and loaded 137 wagons of 37 bushels each, his pay amounting to $102.13. At neither plant are machines used for mining. Recently two workers at Trotter made big records for a day's work, but this was for loading only, the mining being done by machine.

So, when you talk about taking care of people back home, they are being taken care of a great deal better than we are taking care of the Government employees. The great corporations of the country, when prosperity comes to them and when prices are advanced for their product, always automatically raise the wages of their employees. But the Government seems to have adopted a flate rate of pay, paying men so much per month or per year, and they pay it year after year, good times and bad, high prices or low, whether living costs 100 per cent more now than it did when the wages were fixed. It pays them the same wage now as it did 40 or 50 years ago when the present scale was adopted. It is a ridiculous and an outrageous thing to do.

They talk about the farmer getting $600 a year only. He is getting nearly $2 a bushel for his wheat. He is getting 60 or 80 per cent more than he ever was getting before—more than when that 1909 schedule was made up that was referred to by one of the opponents of this advance. In riding over my county one day recently I was with a man who had 700 bushels of potatoes to sell, and he said, "What do you think I was offered for my potatoes?" I said, "I do not know." He said, "One dollar and seventy-five cents at my barn." That is about 75 cents more than he ever was paid for them before.

Mr. SLOAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOPWOOD. Yes.

Mr. SLOAN. In what part of the wheat-raising section of this country are the farmers getting anything near $2 a bushel for wheat?

Mr. HOPWOOD. I do not know what they are getting. I know the market prices. There is no doubt he is getting well up to that, because the farmer is smart enough these days to get all that is coming to him.

Mr. SLOAN. On what market is wheat $2 a bushel now?

Mr. HOPWOOD. It was close to $2.

Mr. SLOAN. It was; but in the market at Chicago it is only $1.60 after you carry it to Chicago.

Mr. HOPWOOD. Do not you people in the West get pretty near that at your own market?

Mr. SLOAN. Oh, no; there are some freight rates.

Mr. HOPWOOD. I think it is selling in Pennsylvania at the mills at about the market quotation. They may have better markets than you have in the West.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. HOPWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOPWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I heartily agree with the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND] "that no increase should be made that can not be justified by the general increase in wages throughout the country." I have indicated the increase of about 27 per cent in my own district in the pay of the employees of the coal and coke companies. This increase has also been made in the wages of the employees of the iron and steel works of our country.

The farm laborer and the common laborer in the towns and cities of our land have also received increased wages in many instances of at least 50 per cent within the past two years. I venture to say that the general increase throughout the country in all lines of industry will average more than 20 per cent in the past two years. I also venture the assertion that the increase in cost of keeping a family within the last two years is much more than 20 per cent.

The advance, therefore, as contemplated by the amendment of the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KEATING] is justifiable and right, not only from the standpoint of the general increase in wages throughout the country but also from the high cost of living that causes every man with a family many anxious hours to solve the problems that confront him as to how he is to give to those he loves the common necessities and comforts of life.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, at this time, when there is a perfect deluge of bills for increasing salaries, it appears to me there ought to be some consideration given to the state of the Treasury. No one of these gentlemen, so far as I know, who have offered these various bills for increases, has even attempted to tell the House how much they would cost if carried through all the various departments or even through the particular departments that are now under consideration. Nor have they ventured to think, apparently, about the ways and means for raising the necessary funds to pay these bureau expenses. How many gentlemen in the House have considered that for this fiscal year there will be a deficit of $103,000,000 according to the report of the Secretary of the Treasury?

That is based on the supposition that the National Guard will be withdrawn from the Mexican border on the 1st of January, and no one expects that such action will be taken. We have to-day in the Treasury only about $45,000,000 if we exclude the amount placed to the credit of the disbursing officers, which is no part of the free balance in the Treasury. This balance in the Treasury is melting away at a rate exceeding $20,000,000 a month.

Mr. SLOAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman allow an interruption right there?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. SLOAN. If you exclude the subsidiary coin and the bullion that is provided for coinage, you would have only about $30,000,000 in the Treasury to-day?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Yes. They aggregate something between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000, and that would leave nearly that amount. Of course, the great bulk of the income and corporation taxes will not be paid until June of next year, and at that time there will be a balance.

Mr. FOCHT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. FOCHT. Will the gentleman explain why that money is not there? And if it is not there, how it can be put there, so that we can pay this increase of salaries? Both can be done. You know why it is not there, and you know that it can be provided for. We all know that it can be provided for.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Well, the gentleman can tell that in his own time. I am talking about the condition of the Treasury. Before the income tax and the corporation tax come in we will either have to issue bonds or run the Treasury on trust funds, one or the other. We must use money that we ought not to use or issue bonds.

Gentleman who have stated the condition of the Treasury on the Democratic side have been altogether too conservative in their statements. The deficit will be nearer $150,000,000 if we continue the same military expense for the remainder of the fiscal year, and the report of the Secretary of the Treasury shows that if we do not increase taxation for the next fiscal year—the year ending June 30, 1918—the expenditures will exceed the receipts more than $300,000,000. That is in addition to the fact that we will be more than $100,000,000 behind in our balance at the beginning of the fiscal year 1918.

The gentleman who just asked me to yield seems to think it is easy to raise these vast sums that are necessary to put our Treasury in a good condition, in a condition where it would not be obliged to use trust funds or where the Government would not be obliged to issue bonds. Perhaps some gentlemen can tell us just how it can be done. I do not know at this time how it can be raised, and I doubt whether any other gentleman does. We can not go into the business of lifting ourselves over the fence by our boot straps by taxing men who have incomes amounting to only $1,500 a year in order to pay somebody in the Government employ an additional sum. We could probably raise $100,000,000 on the tariff. We could put perhaps 50 cents more on the tax on beer and 15 cents more on the tax on distilled liquors, and together we could get $50,000,000 from those two sources. But still we would not have enough, and other methods must be used besides taxes on luxuries.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, I am compelled to oppose the amendment of the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KEATING], not because I do not personally feel that I would like to increase the salaries of all wage earners, but in a spirit of justice both to the wage earners who are not employed by the Federal Government and those who happen to be employed by the Federal Government. We must look at this from one standpoint, and that is the particular point that I want to press in upon you in the brief time that is allotted to me.

Whatever raise we adopt in this bill we must in all fairness make uniform throughout the Government service. We can not defend a raise for the clerks in the executive departments in Washington that we could not defend for the civil-service employees in other great centers of the country or employees of the Government here in the Capitol. There is no peculiar condition applying to these men in the executive departments that does not apply all over the country, and it was for that reason that I offered the amendment a short time ago, extending this raise recommended by the committee to all of the employees included in this bill. We must have a raise, if we have one, which is not only uniform but which we are in a position to defend.

I have received petitions from post-office clerks in my district, where I think there are in the neighborhood of 1,000 or 1,200 post-office employees, asking for raises in their salaries. I know that the maximum salary in the post offices among clerks and carriers is $1,200 a year. For railway mail clerks it goes up to $1,600. But the maximum salary for post-office employees is $1,200. I know that the conditions affecting their employment are precisely the conditions affecting employment here, with the exception that they work longer hours and more days in a year. There are 478,000 civil-service employees in the United States. This bill appropriates for about 8 per cent of that whole number. But whatever principle we adopt in this bill, we ought in fairness to carry it out to the other civil-service employees, and I for one am not willing to vote for the increase of any special class of Government employees that I would not be willing to extend to another class of Government employees similarly situated.

That is the whole situation here. To extend the raise recommended by the Appropriations Committee to the Government employees situated as these are would cost from $40,000,000 to $50,000,000. To extend it as proposed by the gentleman from Colorado would cost approximately $130,000,000. I do not personally think that there is a justification for a 20 per cent increase of wages. I heard these arguments made here when my amendment was under consideration, that there are thousands of men trying to crowd into the Government service. I have no doubt it is true. Even in these prosperous times, when labor is at a premium, there are still thousands of men trying to crowd into the Government service, indicating that the Government service is not a hardship and is not underpaid and is not undesirable.

Therefore if we make an increase for these men we ought not to give a cent more than the committee has recommended—a 10 per cent increase under $1,200 and a 5 per cent increase between $1,200 and $1,800. And then we must make up our minds that that same rate of increase ought to be carried out to the men who do not happen to be employed in the city of Washington in the same spirit of justice that we would give it to the men who happen to be employed here. Unless we can defend a raise for all of the civil-service employees, 478,000 of them, we can not defend a raise for any of them; for I will undertake to say that the conditions of living in the city of Washington are not as high in many respects as they are in some of the western and coast cities of the United States. And I will undertake to say that the conditions of employment here are better in many respects than they are in many cities throughout the Union. I will undertake to say that there are a large number of employees here in the District of Columbia who are engaged in outside business, running printing offices, stores, truck gardens, delivery wagons, automobile liveries, and all sorts of things all over the District of Columbia, because of the short hours and the small number of days in the year that they are compelled to work for the Government. But the civil-service employee in the great Postal Service of the United States has no such opportunity. We must have a raise which will apply equally to all men similarly situated.

Mr. GARLAND. Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that this economy preached by some of the gentlemen on the other side of the House when it comes to paying men wages that they may live on is very far-fetched when we go back to the preceding session of this present Congress and remember the tremendous expenditures that they voted for at all times without any excuse. Among them there was one useless item of expenditure that would have been sufficient to pay the employees of the United States the increased wages that they ought to have ten times over. That was the armor-plate factory, a thing passed without any excuse except that the poor figurers, the committeemen on the other side of the House, said that they did not know what the price of armor plate was, therefore they ought to build a factory and find out, at an expense of $11,000,000 to the people of the United States. And that is not half what the expense will be when the building is put up and the works is going, and by that time we will in all probability not need any armor plate, as it will be obsolete.

Those things are brought in and put forward as a wonderful expense account, and they say, "Oh, we can not afford this added expense to pay wages to employees. Why, the exchequer now is short. We have not got enough money to buy these armor-plate factories. Therefore the individual who works for the Government and keeps it running must starve." That is about the conclusion you come to. I am for this advance in wages all along the line to these employees.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GARLAND. No; I will not yield. I have only five minutes. I am for this advance all along the line, because it is satisfactory to those to whom it applies, and I think that is a very good reason. That reason was sufficient here a short time ago, when we were voting on something which the President of the United States insisted upon in the House—the Adamson bill. The people back of it were satisfied, and that was the only real reason and excuse offered, and in this case it is identically the same.

Some one here compared the rates of wages paid in Washington on the street cars. Then the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Cox] brought in a pamphlet showing wages 5, 6, 8, and 10 years ago. He quoted those old wage scales to show you what wages are now. My friends, there has been a mighty change within the last year. The big corporations of this country, those that hire the most men, have raised wages three times, 10 per cent each time, an advance of 32 per cent. Yet you are coming in here and hesitating about giving these poor fellows this increase. I will say to you clearly that I do not think this is enough for them. I think the increase should have been 20 per cent and 15 per cent, and then 10 per cent above $1,800.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. GARLAND. No; I will not yield.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I do not blame him.

Mr. GARLAND. I have got only a couple of minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman declines to yield.

Mr. GARLAND. The wages paid on the street cars here are said to be about $2.20 a day. That is not what we pay out in our country, and if that is the wage here it only goes to show that the people of Washington do not get what they ought to get, because the employees of the Government are the mark that is held up, and they say, "These Government clerks do not get any more, therefore you can not." In all our conferences in years gone by with employers the wages of Government employees were always used to beat down our wages.

Then, I want to say that the men on the steert cars do not have to take an examination. In the Government service even the fellow who labors has got to go through an examination before he can get on. All of these men in Government service who work for these low wages have had to pass an examination of some form or other, and some of them are mighty hard ones. And I want to say that this present administration has a way of escaping even the payment of those wages that are now paid or should be paid. They have used this method before. When they find that they are a little short in their appropriations they simply lay off employees and require that they come to work every half day or every other day during the layoff and catch up with the work that they missed the day before. That was done two years ago, and I have introduced a bill to pay $50,000 to remunerate the men who work in the Federal building, the scrub women, the janitors, and those who get the lowest wages. I have a bill in here to remunerate them for eight days which they lost. When at the end of the year it was found that the appropriation was a little short they laid off those poor fellows, made them come to work every half day or every other day, and compelled them to work harder and to do in one day the work that they should have done in two. I say that is an injustice of which the Government of the United States ought to be ashamed. [Applause.]

I hope this amendment will prevail.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, whatever action is taken on this bill relative to the increase of compensation of the Federal employees in the District of Columbia should be taken with respect to employees throughout the United States. It was the purpose of the Committee on Appropriations in making its report to attempt to establish a rule that could be applied uniformly to the employees of the Federal Government throughout the United States.

There are many differences of opinion as to what would be a proper ratio of increase. The great bulk of the commercial establishments which have given increased compensation to their employees have increased them 10 per cent. That seems to be the uniform rule adopted. There are employees of the Federal Government at salaries ranging from $1,200 to $1,800 whose compensation amounts to $176,751,000, and employees at salaries of less than $1,200 whose compensation aggregates $155,187,381, making a total of $357,311,866.

An increase of 10 per cent upon the compensation of those receiving salaries up to $1,200, and 5 per cent on those receiving compensation of $1,200 to $1,800 will require an appropriation of $25,720,673 for the fiscal year of 1918.

If the amendment offered by the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KEATING] be adopted, the sum required will be $51,441,346. So that the question that we are called upon to decide at this particular time is whether by this proposed amendment we will increase the amount to be paid in compensation to employees of the Government $51,000,000.

Mr. Chairman, I am one of those who have worked to bring about, if it be possible to do so, some reasonable action by Congress to afford some additional compensation to Government employees who, as pointed out by the gentleman from Illinois, are employed at fixed salaries and do not share in the present great prosperity of the country. They are to some extent penalized because of excessive prices which prevail at present, and I believe it would be just and proper to do what is possible to help them.

There are many differences of opinion as to what should be done, but when it was considered, despite all assertions to the contrary, that the average Government employee is better off in the Government service than he would be outside of the service, that the average increase at this time because of existing conditions by private employers is 10 per cent, that we are facing a deficit of $284,000,000, not including the possible additional expenditure of $25,000,000 under the terms of the treaty for the acquisition of the Danish West Indies, which easily, as I pointed out the other day, makes possible a deficit running far in excess of $300,000,000, notwithstanding all these matters it seems to the committee that the just, the fair, and the reasonable thing to do, and what can be justified in the face of all the facts, was to make the proposed increase of 10 and 5 per cent in the compensation as proposed originally in the bill.

I should like to increase as much as possible the compensation of all persons who are compelled to work to earn their living. But there are some things to be considered other than the mere fact that we would be glad to please some one. The responsibility that rests upon us is not only to do justice to the employees and the Government, but to see that no injustice is done to those who must pay to support the Government. It seems to me that we should not go farther than was originally suggested. Whatever is done on this bill, if we are to be just, should be incorporated in the District bill, in the sundry civil bill, in the fortifications bill, in the Navy bill, the Army bill, the Agricultural bill, and in the bill for the support of the Diplomatic and Consular Service. We must include all the persons embraced within that total expenditure of $357,000,000. It would be unjust to do anything else. To attempt at this time, under all the circumstances, to add not $25,000,000 but $51,000,000 to the proposed expenditures in the next year would be unpardonable from any standpoint. I hope the amendment of the gentleman from Colorado will not be agreed to, and that the committee will adopt the recommendation that was incorporated in this bill by the Committee on Appropriations, and establish it as a uniform rule to control the House in all of its proceedings in their action on the other appropriation bills. If we do that much we shall do justice to the employees and all that anyone can reasonably expect, and we shall be able to justify our action to the taxpayers of the country.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Chairman, I ask to have the amendment again reported to the House.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. KEATING: Page 142, after the word "or," in line 18, strike out "ten" and insert "twenty," and in line 20 strike out the word "five" and insert "ten."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Colorado.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. KEATING) there were 25 ayes and 144 noes.

Mr. NOLAN. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. NOLAN: On page 143, line 4, after the colon following the word "herein," insert the following:

"Provided, That during the fiscal year 1918 the minimum compensation for any person provided for in this bill shall be not less than $3 per day, or, if employed by the hour, not less than 37½ cents an hour, and if employed by the month, $90 a month; or, if employed by the year, $1,080 per annum: Provided further, That persons employed on an annual basis and who regularly perform less than a full day's service shall receive compensation at the rate of 37½ cents per hour: Provided further, That the provisions of this section shall not apply to persons enlisted in the military branches of the Government or to persons receiving subsistence and quarters in addition to their compensation: And provided further, That the provisions of this section shall apply only to those persons who have been continuously in the employment of the Government of the United States or in the employment of the government of the District of Columbia for a period of not less than two years and who shall have attained the age of 20 years.

Mr. SISSON. To that I make a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman on the point of order.

Mr. NOLAN. Mr. Chairman, I think the amendment that I offer is strictly in order. The rule provides:

That no amendment shall be in order in the consideration of the foregoing amendment changing existing law beyond the fiscal year 1918, nor shall any amendment be in order relating to the compensation of employees not appropriated for in H. R. 18542.

The amendment that I propose limits the provisions of the minimum salary to the pending bill and to the employees appropriated for in the pending bill; and inasmuch as the rule provides that no amendment shall be in order in the consideration of the amendment changing existing law I contend that my amendment is strictly in order, and that the point of order should not be sustained.

The CHAIRMAN. The special rule adopted only gave the committee the right to consider the Byrns amendment, which necessarily carried with it the right to offer germane amendments thereto. The rule did not authorize the adding of new affirmative legislation.

In the opinion of the Chair, the Byrns amendment simply proposed a lump appropriation to increase the compensation of employees of the Government provided for in this bill of a certain class, namely, those receiving less than $1,800 per annum. The Nolan amendment proposes new affirmative legislation, namely, to adopt a policy by the Government that none of its employees appropriated for by this bill shall receive less than $3 per day. The Chair can not see how the new affirmative legislation is germane to the intent or spirit of the Byrns amendment. Therefore the Chair is constrained to sustain the point of order.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. GARDNER. Will the Chair amplify in the RECORD his reason for the ruling he has just announced?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes; the Chair will amplify his reason in the RECORD. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois: Page 142, line 21, after the word "than," strike out "$1,800" and insert "$2,500."

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order on the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Illinois on the point of order.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, the rule, it seems to me, makes this amendment in order. Certainly this is in order, if the amendment of the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KEATING] was in order, for an increase in salaries of Government employees. I can not see any ground whatever for the point of order. I have nothing further to say.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I think the amendment is clearly subject to the point of order. The amendment offered and now pending provides for increases of salaries to clerks of a cretain class and not exceeding $1,800 per year. The gentleman from Illinois seeks to raise the limit and provide that it shall apply to clerks who draw as much as $2,500 a year. Clearly by implication the rule reported by the Committee on Rules intended that no amendment should be in order for those particular clerks of the class set forth in the amendment reported by the Committee on Rules. It seems to me it would be a strained construction and would go beyond the real meaning and intentions of the rule to hold that an amendment would be in order seeking to raise the limit from $1,800 to $2,500. I do not think it is germane.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that this is an extremely close question, as members of the committee know, but, in the opinion of the Chair, this paragraph was to provide for an increase of compensation for the employees of a certain class, namely those within $1,800 a year. The amendment proposed would create another class, and the Chair is of opinion that the amendment is not germane. The Chair, therefore, sustains the point of order.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, the other day in the discussion of items relative to the Subtreasuries I made a statement to the effect that I had been informed that the Clearing House Association in Boston had been discontinued on account of the fact that there is a Federal reserve bank located in that city. I made that statement based on information which was given to the committee in some hearings that had been conducted on the day before and had every reason to believe it was correct. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] has handed me a telegram from his colleague [Mr. TAGUE] which I desire to read at this point, because I do not want to make any statement which is not entirely accurate. The telegram is as follows:

CHARLESTOWN, MASS., Dec. 19, 1916.

Hon. A. P. GARDNER,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

BYRNS in debate stated clearing house, Boston, discontinued. I have seen President Gaston, of Boston Clearing House, who denies this. Boston Clearing House still doing business, as they always have done. Boston reserve bank has become member of clearing house. I am in Boston for election day.

PETER F. TAGUE, Congressman.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment as amended.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise and report the bill to the House with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and that the bill as amended do pass.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, pending the rising of the committee, I ask unanimous consent that I may have a few minutes in which to make a statement in connection with the statement just made by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS] respecting the Boston Subtreasury.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee has decided to rise, and the Chair thinks that such a request would be out of order.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 18542, the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill, and had directed him to report the same back to the House with sundry amendments, with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and that the bill as amended do pas.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill and all amendments to final passage.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Speaker, pending that I ask unanimous consent that I may address the House for half a minute.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent to address the House for half a minute. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Speaker, all I wish to say is a word in respect to the telegram which the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS] just read from the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TAGUE]. Mr. TAGUE requested me, on behalf of himself and on behalf of his colleagues, Mr. GALLIVAN and Mr. TINKHAM, to ask for a separate vote on the matter of the Boston Subtreasury. All of them are necessarily absent in Boston to-day on account of an election.

The SPEAKER. The question is on ordering the previous question on the bill and amendments to final passage.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there a separate vote demanded on any amendment?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a separate vote on the two amendments relating to clerk hire of Members and Delegates. I think they are amendments numbered 1 and 2.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a separate vote on the two amendments relating to the Children's Bureau.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee asks for a separate vote on the two amendments about the increase of pay to clerks to Members, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] asks for a separate vote on two amendments relating to the Children's Bureau.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a separate vote on the amendment by which the office of the assistant treasurer at Boston was done away with.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] asks for a separate vote on the Boston Subtreasury.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a separate vote on the amendment pertaining to the Subtreasury at Baltimore, and also a separate vote on the amendment pertaining to the Subreasury at Chicago.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD] asks for a separate vote on the Subtreasuries at Baltimore and Chicago.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a separate vote on the amendment in the bill that provides for a session stenographer.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I have already asked that.

Mr. BLACK. Excuse me.

The SPEAKER. That is included in the request of the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. RAINEY. I ask for a separate vote on the Borland amendment—Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the request.

The SPEAKER. Are there any more? If not, the rest of the amendments will be voted on in gross.

The question was taken, and the remaining amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the first amendment on which a separate vote is demanded.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. WHEELER, page 19——

Mr. CALDWELL rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from New York rise?

Mr. CALDWELL. The first amendment was my amendment in reference to a session stenographer.

Mr. FITZGERALD. It does not come that way.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. CALDWELL: Page 19, line 18, after the word "for," insert "one"; before the word "hire," in line 19, insert "and one who shall be a stenographer"; in line 20, after the word "duties," insert "for one clerk"; and in line 22, after the word "necessary," insert "for the stenographer, $75 per month during sessions of Congress, to pay which so much as may be necessary is hereby appropriated."

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. CALDWELL. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York was a little late, but still the Chair will entertain his request demanding the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BENNET. Is this the amendment providing for an additional session stenographer?

The SPEAKER. Yes.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 105, nays 245, answered "present" 3, not voting 80, as follows:

So the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

On the vote:

Mr. CAREW with Mr. ANDERSON.

Mr. COADY with Mr. STINESS.

Mr. HILL (for) with Mr. HULL of Tennessee (against).

Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island (for) with Mr. SAUNDERS (against).

Mr. GALLIVAN (for) with Mr. HARRISON (against).

Mr. DYER (for) with Mr. DECKER (against).

Mr. TAGUE (for) with Mr. HULBERT (against).

Mr. SCOTT of Pennsylvania (for) with Mr. GILLETT (against).

Mr. PATTEN (for) with Mr. OLDFIELD (against).

Mr. COPLEY (for) with Mr. MOON (against).

Mr. FESS (for) with Mr. HENSLEY (against).

Until further notice:

Mr. JONES with Mr. TINKHAM.

Mr. KETTNER with Mr. NORTON.

Mr. TAGGART with Mr. PETERS.

Mr. GRIFFIN with Mr. HINDS.

Mr. CARTER of Oklahoma with Mr. GUERNSEY.

Mr. DAVENPORT with Mr. CAPSTICK.

Mr. TAVENNER with Mr. GRIEST.

Mr. HULBERT. Mr. Speaker, I voted "no." I am paired with the gentleman from Massachusetts, Mr. TAGUE. I desire to withdraw my vote and vote "present."

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call the gentleman's name.

The Clerk called the name of Mr. HULBERT, and he answered "Present."

Mr. HULL of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I voted "no." I find I am paired with the gentleman from Connecticut, Mr. HILL. I desire to withdraw my vote and vote "present."

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call the gentleman's name.

The Clerk called the name of Mr. HULL of Tennessee, and he answered "Present."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment striking out the Boston Subtreasury——

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, the first amendment to be considered of these Subtreasuries is that at Baltimore.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the Baltimore amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 58, line 21, after the word "treasurer," insert the following: "Strike out the balance of the paragraph after the word 'Treasurer,' and insert the following: 'Assistant treasurer, $4,500; cashier, $2,500; paying teller, $2,000; receiving teller, $1,900; exchange teller, $1,800; vault clerk, $1,800; clerks—two at $1,600 each, three at $1,400 each, three at $1,200 each, three at $1,000 each; messenger, $840; three watchmen at $720 each; in all, $31,500.'"

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. STAFFORD. A division, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin demands a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 232, noes 33.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next one, the Boston amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, on page 59, by striking out the paragraph beginning with line 1 and ending with line 9.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. We do not know what that means.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will listen to it when it is read. The Clerk will report it again.

The Clerk read as follows:

Boston, office of assistant treasurer: Assistant treasurer, $5,000; cashier, $2,500; paying teller, $2,500; vault clerk, $2,000; receiving teller, $2,000; redemption teller, $1,800; clerks—1, $2,200; 5 at $1,600 each; 1, $1,500; 1, $1,400; 2 at $1,200 each; 3 at $1,100 each; 4 at $1,000 each; chief guard, $1,100; 3 watchmen, at $850 each; laborer and guard, $720; 4 money counters and handlers for money laundry machines, at $900 each; in all, $46,570.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next one.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, on page 59, by striking out the paragraph beginning with line 10 and ending with line 20, which reads as follows: "Chicago, office of assistant treasurer: Assistant treasurer, $5,000; cashier, $3,000; assistant cashier, $2,000; vault clerk, $2,250; paying teller, $2,500; assorting teller, $2,000; redemption teller, $2,000; change teller, $2,000; receiving teller, $2,000; 2 bookkeepers, at $1,500 each; clerks—1, $1,750; 1, $1,600; 9 at $1,500 each; 13 at $1,200 each; attendant for money laundry machines, $1,200; hall man, $1,100; messenger, $840; 3 watchmen, at $720 each; janitor, $720; 8 money counters and handlers for money laundry machines, at $900 each; in all, $71,420."

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the Children's Bureau amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

At the end of line 22, page 134, insert a new paragraph, as follows: "To investigate and report upon matters pertaining to the welfare of children and child life, and especially investigate the questions of infant mortality, $72,120."

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, there are two amendments relating to the Children's Bureau. I ask unanimous consent that they may be voted upon together.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that the vote may be taken upon the two amendments together as to the Children's Bureau. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the other amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Second amendment, line 16, page 135: Strike out the figures "$58,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$95,000."

Mr. MANN. Upon the amendments I ask for the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks for the yeas and nays on these amendments. Those who favor taking the vote by yeas and nays will rise and stand until they are counted. [After counting.] Evidently a sufficient number, and the Clerk will call the roll. Those in favor of the amendments will answer "yea" when their names are called; those opposed will answer "nay."

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 316, nays 28, answered "present" 2, not voting 87, as follows:

So the amendments were agreed to.

Mr. BLACKMON. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my vote of yea and announce my pair with the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DYER].

Mr. SMITH of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I desire to vote yea.

The SPEAKER. Was the gentleman in the Hall and listening when his name was called?

Mr. SMITH of Minnesota. I was in the doorway or very close to it. I was just between——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman does not bring himself within the rule.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

Until further notice:

Mr. DECKER with Mr. FESS.

Mr. ADAMSON with Mr. EDMONDS.

Mr. BLACKMON with Mr. DYER.

Mr. FLOOD with Mr. GLYNN.

Mr. FARLEY with Mr. FORDNEY.

Mr. LEE with Mr. GRAHAM.

Mr. GALLIVAN with Mr. PORTER.

Mr. MOON with Mr. HILL.

Mr. SISSON with Mr. STINESS.

Mr. WEBB with Mr. COPLEY.

Mr. WALKER with Mr. SCOTT of Pennsylvania.

Mr. TAGUE with Mr. GILLETT.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Mr. McKENZIE. Mr. Speaker, may I inquire how the Clerk has me recorded on roll call No. 7, on the Wheeler amendment?

The SPEAKER. As soon as this bill is disposed of the Chair will recognize the gentleman. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was accordingly read the third time.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Speaker, I rise to offer a motion to recommit the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. GOOD. I am not.

The SPEAKER. Does any gentleman who is opposed to the bill want to make a motion to recommit?

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer a motion to recommit, but I am not opposed to the bill.

The SPEAKER. That puts the gentleman in the same class as the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD] who has the prior right to recognition. If no one opposed to the bill is going to make the motion, the Chair will recognize the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD], whose motion the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. GOOD moves to recommit H. R. 18542 to the Committee on Appropriations, with instructions to that committee to report the same back forthwith with the following amendment: Strike out lines 14 to 22, inclusive, on page 51.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the matter proposed to be stricken out.

The Clerk read the matter proposed to be stricken out, as follows:

For investigation and experimentation and to secure better methods of administration, with a view to increased efficiency or to greater economy in the expenditure of public money, including necessary traveling expenses, in connection with special work, or obtaining of better administrative methods in any branch of the service within or under the Treasury Department, including the temporary employment of agents, stenographers, accountants, or other expert services either within or without the District of Columbia, $15,000.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion to recommit.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question now is on the motion to recommit.

The question was taken, and the motion to recommit was rejected.

The bill was passed.

On motion of Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the bill was passed was laid on the table.

ASPHALT LANDS OF THE CHOCTAW AND CHICKASAW TRIBES IN OKLAHOMA.

Mr. CARTER of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to consider House joint resolution 306.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of House joint resolution 306, of which the Clerk will read the title.

The Clerk read as follows:

House joint resolution 306.

Joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to extend the time for payment of the deferred installments due on the purchase of tracts of the surface of the segregated coal and asphalt lands of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Tribes in Oklahoma.

Mr. MANN. I ask to have the resolution reported.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to extend the time for payment of the final installment due on the purchase of tracts of the surface of the segregated coal and asphalt land area belonging to the Choctaw and Chickasaw Tribes, sold under the act of Congress approved February 19, 1912 (37 Stat. L., p. 67), to four years after the sale was made instead of two years, as provided in section 5 of the said act: Provided, That the accrued interest on all installments to date when due and the principal of the second installment, if due, shall be paid before an extension as herein provided may be granted: And provided further, That in all other respects the provisions of existing law shall apply to these purchases.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. STAFFORD. Reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman if this has the favorable indorsement of the Secretary of the Interior?

Mr. CARTER of Oklahoma. It has, and the bill was drawn by the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There was no objection.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. CARTER of Oklahoma, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the joint resolution was passed was laid on the table.

HOUR OF MEETING TO-MORROW.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, I wish to give notice that the urgent deficiency bill will be called up the first thing to-morrow morning.

ADJOURNMENT FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following privileged resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

House concurrent resolution No. 67.

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That when the two Houses adjourn on Friday, December 22, 1916, they stand adjourned until 12 o'clock meridian, Tuesday, January 2, 1917.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the concurrent resolution.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. KITCHIN) there were—ayes 141, noes 44.

Mr. RAKER. I make the point of no quorum.

Mr. RUBEY. I call for the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California makes the point of no quorum, and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. RUBEY] demands the yeas and nays. The Chair will count.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the point of no quorum.

Mr. RUBEY. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER (after counting). Thirty-one gentlemen have risen, not a sufficient number.

Mr. COX. I ask for the other side.

The SPEAKER (after counting). One hundred and sixty gentlemen have arisen, and the yeas and nays are refused.

So the resolution was agreed to.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

Mr. WILSON of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD some data and facts which I have secured pertaining to the Agricultural Department and its service.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Reserving the right to object, on what line?

Mr. WILSON of Illinois. Relating to the employees and the service.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Does the gentleman criticize it?

Mr. WILSON of Illinois. No.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Boosts it? [Laughter.]

Mr. WILSON of Illinois. Yes; I boost it a little.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I have no objection.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 19119, the District of Columbia appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, with Mr. GARRETT in the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is now in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill of which the Clerk will read the title.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 19119) making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, and for other purposes.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the first reading of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent to dispense with the first reading of the bill. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I will ask the gentleman how long he expects the House to remain in session to-night?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I will say to the gentleman that I had no time set. I did not want to see several hours go to waste, however. I have had practically no applications for time in general debate, I will say to the gentleman.

Mr. MANN. Then I think perhaps we had better read the bill.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Oh, I trust the gentleman will not take up the time of the House in a first reading of the bill.

Mr. MANN. No one was anticipating that this bill would come up for consideration to-day. We met at 11 o'clock this morning with the avowed purpose of trying to get through the legislative bill and then quitting. I am not willing, if I can prevent it, to have the House taken unawares with the consideration of this bill, especially as we have already agreed to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow. I can see no difficulty, as far as we can look ahead, in finishing this bill by Friday.

Mr. MADDEN. I think we ought to have three or four hours of general debate on the bill.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. No one on this side wants any general debate on the bill, nor have any applications been made to the ranking Member on the Republican side, as I understand it.

Mr. MANN. I would suggest that we might dispense with the first reading of the bill and then rise. We have had a somewhat arduous day.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Let us read the first paragraph of the bill this afternoon.

Mr. MANN. As far as I am concerned, I have no objection to that.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I would be willing to do that, if the gentleman will permit me to make a statement of five minutes.

Mr. MANN. I do not care how long the statement is. I could listen to the gentleman for an hour.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Then I shall make the motion to rise, after reading the first paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina that the first reading of the bill be dispensed with?

There was no objection.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, the bill under consideration appropriates for the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918. In making a brief statement as to the bill and the appropriations which it carries, I want to say to the committee that the legislative provision which, in one form or another, has been in this bill during the last three or four sessions of Congress, relative to the fiscal relations existing between the Government and the District of Columbia, is not contained in this bill. I desire to say, further, that this was left out, not because those who favor a different system than that now in force, having charge of the formulation of the appropriation bill, have in the slightest degree changed their minds as to what ought to be done in that particular, but it has been left out more for the reason that it seems futile to undertake to legislate this provision in an appropriation bill. Realizing that time is of some value at this particular session of Congress, we have omitted any legislation upon that subject.

The estimates submitted through the Commissioners of the District of Columbia for appropriations for the fiscal year for which the bill appropriates, exclusive of the water revenues, were $16,278,092.66. The bill as reported to the House carries $12,831,099.66, an amount $255,222.56 in excess of the current law for the District. However, it is $3,446,993 less than the estimates submitted by the commissioners.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. MADDEN. What were the improvements contemplated for which the commissioners asked for $3,446,993 more than the committee recommended?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I will say to the gentleman that there were a number of items that went to make up this sum. Some of the principal ones were estimates for the acquisition of a tract of land in the northwest for park purposes, carrying $625,000; for the purchase of another tract of land for park purposes in the northeast, for which $500,000 was asked. About the same amount was contained in the estimates for the construction of a municipal hospital. The other items were made up of smaller amounts, one of the others of those not mentioned being the purchase of land and the beginning of an appropriation for the beginning of a sewage-disposal plant, and the others were matters carrying not a large amount in themselves.

Mr. MADDEN. The committee concluded it was not wise to enter upon the construction, operation, and maintenance of a municipal hospital at this time?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. The subcommittee formulating this bill decided that it was practically useless to bring a measure of that kind into the House of Representatives, having had some experience in dealing with that particular question. It was on all fours with the proposition I mentioned in the beginning of my remarks. It is one of those things which would merely consume time, amount to nothing, having been up on various occasions before, only to fail.

Mr. MADDEN. Did the committee conclude it was not time yet to consider the establishment of a sewage-disposal plant because there is no need for it in the District?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes, sir; partly that and partly from the fact that it would involve legislative provisions that would probably not be considered by the House, at least it would be subject to the point of order, and we knew of opposition to the matter that would keep us from considering it.

Mr. MADDEN. From the investigation the committee has made on the question of the necessity of a sewage-disposal plant has it reached the conclusion that there will be no such necessity in the immediate future?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Well, I can not say for the committee; but I can speak for myself that my own information is from an investigation and the evidence that has been taken before the committee that there will be no necessity in the immediate or near future.

Mr. MADDEN. Where does the sewage of the District go—out into the Potomac River?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. At the present time in the Potomac River.

Mr. MADDEN. Does not the gentleman and his committee think the time is coming when there ought to be some other disposition made of the sewage in order to preserve the health of the people who live below the city of Washington on the Potomac River?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Well, I will say to the gentleman in this connection that this bill does carry appropriation for the extension of certain sewer mains that will carry, when completed, that part of the sewage of the city that now enters into the Potomac near the city of Washington farther down the river.

Mr. MADDEN. Still the people living farther down are subject to contamination from the sewage that goes into the river from the city of Washington?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. That is true to the extent that there are people living farther down the river which, on personal investigation I think the gentleman from Illinois will find, are not very many. I do not think there is any immediate danger to the inhabitants living on the river from the disposal of the sewage. There is a necessity, unquestionably, for the getting of this sewage into the river at a point lower down the river.

Mr. MADDEN. The gentleman has made an investigation and knows the necessities of the case, and I merely asked this question to call the attention of the committee to the fact that there is no more important question than the disposition of the sewage in such a way that it will not contaminate the health of the people.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I agree with the gentleman thoroughly, but I do not think the time has come when there is any amount of danger to the city of Washington or to the people on the river below.

Now, Mr. Chairman, in the bill under consideration your committee has been in its own judgment, whatever may be the judgment of the House, rather liberal in the number of increases of employment in the service of the District of Columbia, as well as in certain increases of compensation to employees of the District, who would not come within the scope of the provision that was adopted to-day in connection with the Federal employees provided for in the legislative bill.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I will yield, with pleasure.

Mr. MANN. The House this afternoon having voted to increase the compensation of certain Federal employees carried in the legislative bill, does the gentleman expect the House to make the same increase to employees of the District of Columbia employed here in the same place?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I think there is a necessity for it, and justice demands that the same provision should be placed in this bill before it is completed. And I will say to the gentleman that up to yesterday that had been the anticipation of the men having this bill in charge, to carry in the bill exactly the same provision that was in the legislative bill; but it is not in the bill at the present time for reasons I need not explain.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. If the gentleman from Illinois will pardon me, I will.

Mr. STAFFORD. Does the gentleman plan to extend the horizontal per cent bonus to the employees carried in the District of Columbia appropriation bill?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. The provision as drawn in the subcommittee, to be frank, and submitted to the full committee in connection with this bill, was to increase the pay of those employees in the District of Columbia receiving a salary of less than $1,200 10 per cent, and of those receiving salaries of from $1,200 to $1,800 5 per cent.

Those excluded from this were the members of the Metropolitan police force, those who belonged to the fire organizations of the city, and those connected with the public schools. The provision as drawn by the subcommittee included also the same ratio of increase to the per diem employees of the District of Columbia. Those below the sum receiving an increase of 10 per cent, those above receiving an increase of 5 per cent. It also included a provision by which those employed by the District in institutions receiving their subsistence and now being paid less than $1,000 a year should have an increase of 5 per cent in their salaries. That was the provision as drawn, and which I think measures out equity to the employees of the District of Columbia.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. MANN. The House to-day having indicated by a substantial majority its desire to increase the pay of all the employees provided for in the legislative bill receiving a salary of $1,800 or less, does the gentleman now think he ought to differentiate in the District between different classes of employment? I suppose they are just as hungry in one class as they are in another.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I will say to the gentleman that I think that in this particular case there is a reason for the exclusion of those classes I enumerated, and I think he will agree with me when I call his attention to it. In this bill last year, the current law, we increased the compensation of the police force. In the present bill we have undertaken to increase the compensation of the firemen of the District.

Mr. MANN. You have no right to do so. That will probably go out on a point of order.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Certainly it may, if we can not make our case. We have no right under the rule, the gentleman now suggests, but we did it because we thought there was sufficient equity in it, and so far as the police force is concerned that is past. Nobody can make a point of order, I think, against that.

Mr. MANN. But that occurred before the present emergency arose. To be perfectly frank with the gentleman, it was the agreement with other Members of the House to defeat any increase reported in the legislative bill, with the understanding on my part—possibly I was foolish not to secure sufficient knowledge concerning it—that if that prevailed and the House would not increase the amount, the increase would be carried to all the employees of the Government receiving those salaries.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I can say to the gentleman that to the Metropolitan police I am entirely friendly, and I will be glad to include them in any just scheme. But I imagine that the pinch of the high cost of living is no worse in Washington than in the gentleman's city, and we increase their salaries to a plane that will compare with even those of the size of the city from which the gentleman comes.

Mr. MANN. Oh, no; not at all. But that is neither here nor there. However, it is nothing like it.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I think the grades are not organized on the same basis, but still they compare most favorably with salaries paid the police forces of cities corresponding in size with the city of Washington. The same is true of the fire department, and so far as the school organization is concerned—and the gentleman knows and every other gentleman knows that under the plan of organization and under the law that controls the automatic promotion of the teachers of the school system of the city of Washington that they are more highly paid on the average than they are in any other city, not only of the size, but of any other size, in this country. And we thought there ought to be some equity in this matter, and, therefore, it was in the mind of the committee to exclude those. But, I remind the gentleman, this has passed entirely out of the hands of the Appropriations Committee. It is in the hands of the House. There is no provision now in this bill. It can not get into this bill if there is anybody in the House who wants to make a point of order against it, unless there is a rule provided. It is up to the Committee on Rules, it seems to me, as to the automatic increase of the salaries in this bill.

Mr. BENNET. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I yield.

Mr. BENNET. As a member of the Committee on Rules, are we to construe that as a request for a rule?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I have not requested it. I can not answer the gentleman whether any other gentleman has requested it or not.

Mr. MANN. The experience of the Committee on Appropriations is not such that they are running to the Committee on Rules on every question?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Not every morning; no, sir.

Mr. BENNET. You are always very willing for the Committee on Rules to give rules to the Committee on Appropriations?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Well, the House seems to be, whatever may be the attitude of the Committee on Appropriations.

I was going to say when I was interrupted that there are about 100 new employments provided for in this bill. However, there are 110 less than were asked for in the estimates submitted to us. We have here and there increased the compensation of certain employees of the District of Columbia for reasons that seemed to the committee to be good and sufficient. Of course, in many instances, as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] suggested awhile ago, we recognize the fact that they were subject to a point of order, and any gentleman, if alert enough, can forbid us carrying into effect the purpose we had in raising this compensation.

Now, Mr. Chairman, with that statement I have concluded. Under the five-minute rule there will be much discussion of various items. I ask that the Clerk may read the first paragraph of the bill.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes.

Mr. CRISP. Will the gentleman yield me three or four minutes?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes; but I want to keep faith. Yes; I will yield to the gentleman five minutes.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Chairman, I am one of those who believe that the organic act of the District of Columbia, known as the "half-and-half act," has outlived its usefulness and that it can be repealed without doing any injustice to the people of the District of Columbia, but that equity and justice to the people of the United States demands that it be repealed.

I know this is the short session of Congress, and I have conferred with some friends who believe as I do, and they think that it is inexpedient to attempt a fight again at this short session to repeal the half-and-half act on this appropriation bill. It is the practice that when legislation is placed upon an appropriation bill, if the other House refuses to agree to it, the House proposing the legislation recedes. This House last session passed on the District appropriation bill a provision repealing the half-and-half act, but the Senate refused to concur; and I apprehend if we should get the repeal again incorporated in this bill the other branch, constituted now just as it was during the last session of this Congress, would again refuse to concur, and the House would have to recede.

That being true, I do not intend to call the matter up at this session, but I have in nowise changed my opinion about the merits of the proposition, and I am confident that when the people of the United States understand the proposition the law will be repealed. And if I am living when the next Congress convenes, composed of a number of new Representatives from the people, a number of new Members in both branches, I will again call the attention of Congress to it and try to have the law repealed.

I simply make this statement for the reason that I do not care for the press of this city and others to assume that I have abandoned the fight, for I will not abandon it until in my judgment equity is done the people of the United States. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the bill for amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That one half of the following sums, respectively, is appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and the other half out of the revenues of the District of Columbia, in full for the following expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, namely:

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and Mr. GARRETT, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 19119) making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, and for other purposes, and had directed him to report that it had come to no resolution thereon.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing an article appearing in the Chicago Herald, of Sunday, December 3, and written by Mr. James Keeley, the editor, on the United States business after the war.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD by printing the article indicated by him. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED.

Mr. LAZARO, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled joint resolution of the following title, when the Speaker signed the same:

H. J. Res. 324. Joint resolution authorizing payment of the salaries of officers and employees of Congress for December, 1916.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bill of the following title:

S. 7095. An act extending the time for completion of the bridge across the Delaware River, authorized by an act entitled "An act to authorize the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. and the Pennsylvania & Newark Railroad Co., or their successors, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Delaware River," approved the 24th day of August, 1912.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 52 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned, pursuant to the order previously made, until to-morrow, Wednesday, December 20, 1916, at 11 o'clock a. m.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

SENATE.

WEDNESDAY, December 20, 1916.

The Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, we thank Thee for the revelation of Thyself, so clear, so glorious as that all of us can come to Thee in prayer. We seek to justify our ways to men, but we care more that Thou shalt look with favor upon our acts. We fear not them that may kill the body but we fear Him who has power to destroy both body and soul in hell. We come at last with our stewardship before Thee and Thou must pass upon our acts. Give us Thy grace and Thy wisdom. Surround us with Thy providence. Give us the spirit that we may be led in all things to conform our lives to Thy will and glorify Thy name, and through Thy glory bring larger blessings to the people whom we serve. For Christ's sake. Amen.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

PURCHASE OF FOOD SUPPLIES (S. DOC. NO. 645).

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, transmitting, in response to a resolution of the Senate of the 15th instant, certain information relative to the purchasing of food supplies by Army officers and employees through Government agencies, which, on motion of Mr. GALLINGER, was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed.

NOBEL PEACE PRIZE (S. DOC. NO. 644).

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of State, transmitting a copy of a circular issued by the Nobel committee furnishing information as to the distribution of the Nobel peace prize for the year 1917, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by J. C. South, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to a concurrent resolution providing that when the two Houses adjourn on Friday, December 22, 1916, they stand adjourned until 12 o'clock meridian on Tuesday, January 2, 1917, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolution, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 18542. An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, and for other purposes;

H. R. 19178. An act making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, and for other purposes; and

H. J. Res. 306. Joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to extend the time for payment of the deferred installments due on the purchase of tracts of the surface of the segregated coal and asphalt lands of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Tribes in Oklahoma.

ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled joint resolution (H. J. Res. 324) authorizing payment of the salaries of officers and employees of Congress for December, 1916, and it was thereupon signed by the President pro tempore.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. WORKS. I have telegrams relating to the curtailment of the electric energy at Niagara Falls which I ask to have printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The telegrams were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

LOS ANGELES, CAL., December 20, 1916.

Hon. JOHN D. WORKS,
Washington, D. C.:

Curtailment of electric energy by the Canadian Government at Niagara Falls affects deliveries of grinding products used in our shops. This curtailment means to us a big loss of time and labor. We would appreciate your efforts to relieve the situation.

JOSEPH MUSTO KEEHAN CO.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., December 20, 1916.

Hon. JOHN D. WORKS,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Mining interests of West seriously affected by cyanide shortage. Immediate cause of present shortage due to Canadian Government's embargo on power expectation from Canadian plans to United States industries, we request that you use your best endeavors to have our Government protest against arbitrary withdrawal of power by Canadian Government, power developed with United States capital on Canadian side of Falls. We also urge that our Government permit the immediate temporary diversion of water to full capacity. Existing United States power installations suggest to secure cooperation of Senators and Congressmen of other Western States. Delegations from eastern industries are in Washington to-day and to-morrow conferring with the proper Government officials.

CHAMBER OF MINES AND OIL,
By THEODORE MARTIN, President.

Mr. THOMPSON presented a petition of the members of the Bible School of the First Church of Christ of Kingman, Kans., praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the transportation of intoxicating liquor into prohibition States, and also for prohibition in the District of Columbia, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. HITCHCOCK presented a petition of the Commercial Club of Omaha, Nebr., praying for the installation of a pneumatic-tube mail service in that city, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

Mr. KENYON presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Avoca, Iowa, praying for national prohibition, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented petitions of the Chamber of Commerce of Council Bluffs, and of members of the Osceola County bar and the Lyon County bar, of Iowa, praying for the use of all surplus fees received by the Federal Government from applicants for citizenship for education of the aliens in his civic privileges, duties, and responsibilities, which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. LEA of Tennessee presented petitions of sundry citizens of Tennessee, praying for an increase in the salaries of postal employees, which were referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

Mr. POINDEXTER presented a petition of the port commission of Seattle, Wash., praying for an investigation of commercial trade opportunities in China and the establishment of direct trade relations between China and the United States, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN presented a petition of sundry citizens of Whiteson, Oreg., praying for the placing of an embargo on food products and for the enactment of legislation to prevent the storage of food products by speculators, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. WARREN presented a petition of sundry citizens of Sheridan, Wyo., praying for an increase in salaries of postal employees, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

He also presented a petition of the Shoshone Water Users' Association, of Powell, Wyo., praying for the enactment of legislation to extend the provisions of the Federal farm-loan act to reclamation projects, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I have a telegram from my home town, signed by the Hall Printing Press Co., referring to the diversion of the water power at Niagara Falls, and asking legislation which will relieve them from a water famine at that place. They are interested in the power. I move that the telegram be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The motion was agreed to.

CAR SHORTAGE.

Mr. CHILTON. I present a letter from a prominent coal operator in my State on the subject of car shortage. I think this gentleman is very competent to speak upon this subject, and he suggests some remedies. I present also a copy of a letter from this same gentleman to the Interstate Commerce Commission. I ask that these letters be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

There being no objection, the matter referred to was ordered to be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce, as follows:

CHARLESTON, KANAWHA COUNTY, W. VA., December 4, 1916.

Senator WILLIAM E. CHILTON,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I am wondering if something can not be done to secure fair treatment of West Virginia by the Trunk Line Railroad. Few people in our State appreciate what is being done to us.

West Virginia normally produces about 60,000,000 tons of coal annually.

During the past four months the mines have not operated more than half time, in what is known as the Kanawha Valley, which means there has been a loss to West Virginia during the past four months, only, of not less than twelve or fifteen million dollars, with the coal operators of the State actually losing money on account of not having sufficient cars with which to fill their low-priced orders, thus being prevented from selling any quantities of coal on this market.

The coal operators are not only suffering, but there is not a man, woman, or child in the United States whose cost of living has not been increased by the advance in the price of coal of from 4 to 600 per cent during the past four months, due to an insufficient car supply, with the coal mines of the country not running half time with hundreds of thousands of coal miners idle and their families actually suffering. We frequently read in the papers that the scarcity of coal is the result of shortage of labor. That is not true. If that was the case, coal mines would be in operation full time, but with a reduced number of men, instead of a surplus of men, not having sufficient occupation to give them a fair living. The above conditions can not be fair with other industries of the country making millions, running 24 hours a day, 6 and 7 days in a week, which they could not do without sufficient cars with which to handle their products. Thus showing that other industries such as steel plants and businesses of that nature are receiving four times as good car supply as is the coal industry.

This is not only a great injustice to the public generally but is a suicidal policy for the railroads, as it has resulted in increasing the price even of railroad fuel coal from about $1 a ton to $3 and $4 a ton at a time when they claim they need higher freight rates with which to meet operating expenses. Anything you can do to help the situation out in this district will be appreciated. The Interstate Commerce Commission has from me very extensive data in detail on this subject.

With kindest regards, I am, yours, very truly,

KELLYS CREEK COLLIERY COMPANY,
J. W. DAWSON, General Manager.

THE KELLYS CREEK COLLIERY CO.,
Ward, Kanawha County, W. Va., December 12, 1916.

Commissioner C. C. MCCHORD,
Care Interstate Commerce Commission, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR JUDGE: Replying to yours of December 8, I will attach hereto the original pencil memorandum on which my previous letter was based, in addition to my personal knowledge of the transaction.

The Kanawha & Michigan Railway had empty coal cars in its Dickinson yard, only about 6 miles from us, before working time on the morning of the 5th. We did not get these cars until 9.45 a. m. The same condition existed, as I understand it, on the morning of the 6th, and we did not get the cars until 10.20 a. m., on both occasions employees of the Kanawha & Michigan Railway telling us that the cars were available, but they had no motive power with which to move them to us, as five of the best Kanawha & Michigan engines had been taken over onto the Toledo & Ohio Central Railroad in Ohio.

On the 5th a Kanawha & Michigan passenger train was considerably delayed by one of its freight trains, which was being pulled by a very light engine that could not handle the train. Inquiry about that brought the reply that the engine was too light for the business; that the best engines had been taken to the Toledo & Ohio Central.

A coal mine such as ours must start work before 7 in the morning if it starts. We can not hold 500 or 600 men idle several hours waiting for cars; it is difficult enough to get the forces together if the cars arrive on time.

In reply to the last paragraph of your letter, I would state that there is very little improvement in the car supply on the Kanawha & Michigan Railroad as yet. As an illustration we received empty cars for loading as follows:

December 1, 21; December 2, 24; December 3, Sunday; December 4, 20; December 5, 25; December 6, 19; December 7, 22; December 8, 25; December 9, 12; December 10, Sunday; December 11, 20; December 12, 5, making a total for the 12 days, or 10 working days, of 193 cars. We could have loaded 400, which shows that we are still receiving less than about 50 per cent car supply.

Now, Mr. McChord, the complaint we have is not due so much to the car shortage, but our unfair treatment. If we were suffering solely from the general car shortage and congestion of business, we would take our medicine and not complain further than make an effort with all others to correct the trouble; that is not the case with us.

For some 12 years past or longer Toledo & Ohio Central and Kanawha & Michigan cars have been handled and distributed without discrimination as to their lettering. Under this arrangement, the Kanawha & Michigan having been in the habit of using Toledo & Ohio Central cars and giving the Toledo & Ohio Central Railway valuable tonnage in them, it was unnecessary for the Kanawha & Michigan Railroad to purchase a sufficient number of coal cars with which to take care of its business, and under that arrangement the Kanawha & Michigan and Toledo & Ohio Central cars jointly have furnished coal shippers in this district for many years past, until five months ago, practically a 100 per cent car supply, with a few exceptions of very short periods.

Under this arrangement and years of experience we had a right to expect the practice would be continued; we sold coal and made obligations accordingly.

Large producers of coal must keep their products sold six months or a year ahead.

Therefore last spring, as usual, we sold practically our product to be shipped during the summer and fall at reasonable market price or less. Our 500 or 600 customers, scattered through Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, and the Northwest, having purchased their coal from us, and we having agreed to ship it, felt as if their coal supply was secure for this season, they knowing that we had never failed to fulfill an obligation.

But as soon as the coal market became unusually active during the latter part of the past summer and everyone knew that the price of coal would advance sharply the car supply on the Kanawha & Michigan Railroad diminished from 90 and 100 per cent to 35 and 40 per cent, we being told that the New York Central would not permit Toledo & Ohio Central coal cars to come onto the Kanawha & Michigan Railroad, as had been the custom for much longer than 12 years. It seems strange to me that we were permitted to use New York Central equipment before that system purchased the Kanawha & Michigan Railroad and were not permitted to use the same equipment when the owners of that equipment are now the owners of the Kanawha & Michigan Railroad unless, as I believe is the fact, there is some deep-laid scheme connected with it.

Further, I don't understand why, if the Kanawha & Michigan is so independent of the New York Central that we are not permitted to use Toledo & Ohio Central cars, that it is so much a part of the New York Central that the Toledo & Ohio Central takes Kanawha & Michigan engines when they are needed on the Kanawha & Michigan Railroad.

By request and suggestion of officials of the New York Central Railroad we made heavy expenditures here last spring of about $40,000, opened a new mine, constructed new tipples, put in expensive machinery and prepared to double our capacity, and right on the heels of this our car supply is cut half in two.

Our being deprived of cars has prevented our yet shipping the coal that we promised to ship before last September; it has resulted in a loss to us of not less than $75,000 or $100,000; it has resulted in the best class of our customers, who have been depending upon us for coal during the past 8 or 10 years, becoming disgusted and turning their patronage to other coal fields.

It has resulted in five or six hundred dealer customers scattered through Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, and the Northwest, who serve doubtless a hundred thousand customers, being required to pay from $3 to $6 a ton for coal that we had sold them at from $1.23 to $1.75 a ton, and which we would have shipped had we been getting our usual car supply.

The improper railroad management, therefore, has not only caused us to lose our best customers and $75,000 or $100,000, but has caused those same customers to pay out unnecessarily $75,000 or $100,000, while we in turn are loading the coal which they should have into barges and shipping it down the river at prices not exceeding $1.20 a ton, but the parties to whom we sell this river coal resell it on the market; thus two separate and distinct sets of consumers, aggregating, I would estimate, 150,000 families, are paying three or four prices for the coal they are burning unnecessarily, the result of our one company not being able to fulfill its obligations. There are doubtless hundreds of other coal companies in the same condition.

We have been shipping practically every car we could get that would go west on this low-priced, last summer's contract business; we have not been selling coal that could be shipped in the western market at the present market prices; we have refused to accept new orders at any price, even though we are offered $5 and $6 a ton for coal, while at the same time shipping from 18 to 20 cars daily at prices less than $1.75 a ton, thus actually losing money on such a market as this, the result of this unfair railroad practice.

The feature worthy of serious consideration by your commission is that when our customer that purchased his coal last spring from us failed to get it this winter from us, he is forced to rush out on the open market and purchase it from coal concerns who had not sold ahead; therefore if some one connected with the railroad interests or closely identified with them could have had a tip last spring and been told what districts would receive cars and what districts would be deprived of cars this fall and winter, some one would pocket millions. I can not help believing that was done.

Not only our customers and the coal operators are suffering from this practice, but thousands of coal miners, and I might say, with their families, hundreds of thousands are suffering for lack of regular employment at a time when the whole world is suffering for what they would produce, could they be given regular work.

Another thing that proved the correctness of my theory that the shortage of cars on the Kanawha & Michigan is not the result of the general condition over the country. For the past 20 years the Kanawha & Michigan Railroad has furnished its coal operators at least a 50 per cent better car supply than the Chesapeake & Ohio in the Kanawha district, our nearest neighbor, furnished its shippers. During most of that period there was no profit in producing coal, but the New York Central Railroad wanted tonnage; but now when that railroad does not need tonnage from the Kanawha & Michigan and there is a profit in producing coal, the Kanawha & Michigan furnished its shippers a 50 per cent less car supply than the Chesapeake & Ohio, thus reversing the whole condition and comparison.

If the New York Central system is permitted to bunch its coal-car equipment in West Virginia during the summer months and other periods when coal is mined and sold at less than actual cost of production, then withhold from West Virginia and concentrate it on other portions of its system at every period when there is a profit in the production of coal, the practice will more surely put out of business the coal operators of West Virginia than any freight rate that could be applied.

Very truly, yours,

KELLYS CREEK COLLIERY CO.,

LANDS IN OKLAHOMA.

Mr. OWEN. I ask leave to call up joint resolution No. 306, which has just come from the House of Representatives, referring to the extension of time for two years of final payment on certain lands in Oklahoma. It is recommended by the Interior Department and has been passed by the House of Representatives. I ask that the Senate may concur. The Committee on Indian Affairs have ordered a favorable report upon the measure.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a joint resolution from the House of Representatives.

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 306) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to extend the time for payment of the deferred installments due on the purchase of tracts of the surface of the segregated coal and asphalt lands of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Tribes in Oklahoma, was read twice by its title.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oklahoma asks for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution.

Mr. PENROSE. Has the joint resolution been referred to the committee?

Mr. OWEN. It is favorably reported this morning. There was a similar form of resolution submitted in the Senate.

Mr. PENROSE. That may all be, but I want to know when the joint resolution was referred to the committee?

Mr. OWEN. The identical joint resolution was sent to the committee December 5, and ordered reported by the committee this morning, in anticipation of the passage by the House of the act submitted here to-day.

Mr. PENROSE. Has the other joint resolution been reported?

Mr. OWEN. I am authorized to report it.

Mr. PENROSE. I do not object particularly to the purpose of the joint resolution, but I do most strenuously object to this irregular method of conducting the proceedings of the Senate.

Mr. OWEN. I should like to say to the Senator that there is nothing irregular about it. I was authorized to make the report and I make the report now from the Senate committee.

Mr. PENROSE. But the Senator has not done it yet.

Mr. OWEN. I am doing it at this time.

Mr. PENROSE. If that had been done perhaps I would not have interfered, but I did not observe that it had been done. I will object until the joint resolution is reported from the committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The joint resolution will then be referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. OWEN. Just a moment. I submit a report on Senate joint resolution 178, which is identical with the measure that has come from the House. The measure has passed the House, was favorably reported by the Committee on Indian Affairs of the House, of course, and was passed on the favorable report of the Secretary of the Interior. This report merely adopts the House report. I ask for the substitution of the House measure for the Senate measure, that being the parliamentary procedure and ordinary practice. That will meet the objection of the Senator from Pennsylvania that there might be any irregularity in it.

Mr. GALLINGER. But, Mr. President, I will suggest to the Senator if he does that it will have to go back to the House. The Senator had better report the House joint resolution in form.

Mr. PENROSE. I object, Mr. President.

Mr. OWEN. I yield to the objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will state that we have not yet reached reports of committees. The joint resolution will be referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

POWER AT NIAGARA FALLS.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President, I desire to call the attention of the Senate to petitions and memorials which I have received bearing upon the question of the diversion of water from Niagara Falls under a treaty between the United States and Great Britain. These petitions come from various industries on the American side of the border and are very important.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I wish to state that I have received, I think, hundreds of telegrams on the same subject suggested by my colleague [Mr. SMITH of Michigan], and also on the subject of the Sheppard bill. I have not felt that it was necessary to present them to the Senate. They were directed to me. However, I have received more upon the subject now under consideration than upon the measure suggested by the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. STONE. From the Committee on Foreign Relations, by the authority of that committee, I report back favorably the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 186) authorizing the Secretary of War to issue temporary permits for additional diversions of water from the Niagara River, and I submit a report (No. 886) thereon.

Mr. President, this is an emergency matter. I therefore, acting under the direction of the Committee on Foreign Relations, ask the Senate for its present consideration.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let the joint resolution first be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read the joint resolution.

The Secretary read the joint resolution, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to issue permits, revocable at will, for the diversion of water in the United States from the Niagara River above the Falls for the creation of power to individuals, companies, or corporations which are now actually producing power from the waters of said river in additional quantities which, with present diversions, shall in no case exceed the capacity of the generating machinery of the permittee and tenant companies now installed and ready for operation, nor an amount sufficient to enable the permittee to supply the now existing hydroelectric demands of the individuals, companies, or corporations which said permittee and tenant companies are now supplying, but not in excess of the capacity of power-using appliances of said consumers now installed and ready for operation: Provided, That in no event shall the total quantity of water diverted from said river above the Falls for power purposes exceed in the aggregate a daily diversion at the rate of 20,000 cubic feet per second: And provided further, That this resolution shall remain in force until the 1st day of July, 1917, and no longer, at the expiration of which time all permits granted hereunder shall terminate unless sooner revoked; and nothing herein contained shall be held to confirm, establish, or confer in or upon any such permittee any right in or to the water which he is now diverting or which he may be authorized to divert hereunder.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator from Missouri suggested that this is an emergency matter. Will the Senator explain what the emergency is?

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, in the treaty between Great Britain and the United States dated January 11, 1909, and proclaimed May 13, 1910, it is provided that the United States or authorized interests of the United States may divert water from the Niagara River above the Niagara Falls for commercial uses to an amount not exceeding 20,000 cubic feet per second. In the same treaty it is provided that the Canadian Government or provincial Canadian authorities may permit 36,000 cubic feet per second to be diverted for the same purposes. It so happens that under a law of Congress and the rulings of the War Department made thereunder only 15,600 cubic feet per second of the 20,000 cubic feet authorized to be used on this side have been permitted by departmental orders. That is 4,400 cubic feet per second less than the amount we are entitled to use upon this side of the line under the treaty. On the other side a larger amount of water is authorized, under the treaty, to be diverted. Canada may take as much as 36,000 cubic feet per second, or nearly twice what we can take. I think the Canadians have not reached that maximum, but they have gone far beyond what is being consumed on this side.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. The amount now appropriated is 30,000 cubic feet per second.

Mr. STONE. Thirty thousand cubic feet, the Senator from Utah says.

Mr. GALLINGER. But, Mr. President, it puzzles me to understand why we are not permitted to divert the amount named in the treaty. Why is that?

Mr. STONE. It is due to a statute of the United States known as the Burton Act, which limited the amount that we might divert to 15,600 cubic feet. The War Department has so construed the law that it is unwilling, without further congressional action, to grant permits for a larger consumption of the water.

Mr. GALLINGER. That act, then, nullified, to a certain extent, the provisions of the treaty?

Mr. STONE. There was a supplemental act, but the act of limitation was really passed before the treaty was made and proclaimed.

Let me try to explain the difficulty: A number of important manufacturing establishments located on this side, many of them along the Niagara front but others outside, and public municipal interests also are being supplied by power generated at Niagara. Action has been taken, so I am informed, by public authority in Canada diverting the uses of the power generated on that side to public uses, so that contracts in existence between manufacturers on the American side with generators of power on the other side are seriously affected by a reduction of the power the American consumers under their contracts are authorized to import. The result is that a number of our establishments are finding themselves short of power to run their machinery.

The pending resolution provides that the 4,400 cubic feet of unused water we are entitled to use under the treaty may be utilized to meet this emergency, under permits granted by the Secretary of War. If this is not done, it has been made to appear to the Committee on Foreign Relations that important industries in the United States having contracts with Canadian power generators will seriously suffer.

This proposed law is limited in its duration to six months, because the Secretary of War, I think wisely and properly, suggested that if we granted without limit or restriction the right to divert the water and sell the power, it might later on embarrass Congress when it came to deal with the water-power subject in a more general way. So this joint resolution provides only for a temporary disposition of the subject; that is to say, for a period of six months—merely to meet an industrial emergency.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

Mr. STONE. Will the Senator permit me to proceed for a moment?

Mr. GALLINGER. Certainly.

Mr. STONE. There are bills now pending which it is thought, if they should be passed, would deal with the subject in a general way after the expiration of this proposed law, limited in its operation, as the Senator sees, to a short period.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I have been wondering as to exactly what is going to happen at the end of six months. Congress will not then be in session, and these people will be in exactly the same plight in which they are now, unless general legislation is enacted in the meantime.

Mr. STONE. I think that is true; nevertheless this question is presented—that if we should by this joint resolution grant the right involved without limit that grant might embarrass the Congress hereafter because of claims people might present of equities acquired by reason of this law. I think it safer to limit this grant to six months, and let us take care of the situation adverted to by the Senator by general legislation. The committee had before us this morning a number of representative men directly interested in this subject; the same gentlemen, or others of like character, have been before the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the other House, and I think I am safe in saying that it is greatly desired by them that this joint resolution should pass in this form.

Mr. GALLINGER. Of course, Mr. President, I shall yield to the superior judgment of the Senator from Missouri and his associates on the Committee on Foreign Relations; I am not a member of that committee myself, and know very little about the matter except what I gleaned from the reading of the joint resolution.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President——.

Mr. GALLINGER. Yet two or three queries have arisen in my mind. One is, I have wondered why we have given Canada more water power than we have taken to ourselves.

Mr. STONE. That has been done by the treaty.

Mr. GALLINGER. Again, I wondered why we were not getting the amount of water power provided for in solemn treaty between the two Nations; but the Senator from Missouri has explained that. I certainly shall not obstruct the passage of the joint resolution.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, if the Senator from Ohio [Mr. POMERENE] will permit me just one moment, I will then yield to him. I wish to say that it may be seen by examining the joint resolution that it provides that this water power which in effect is to be sold by the generating companies shall be given for a period of six months only to the industrial establishments now using it, and to those establishments only, and not to them to any greater extent than they can now use it under the installations they already have; and this only for a period of six months.

Mr. GALLINGER. I understand it.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, I merely wanted to offer, in answer to the suggestion made by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER], the remark that it is not necessary that we concern ourselves about the status of these different companies on July 1 next, as they are not asking for any extension beyond that time.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, if there is nothing further to be said, I ask that the joint resolution may be laid before the Senate, and I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri asks unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution. Is there objection?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, before unanimous consent is given for the present consideration of this joint resolution I should like to know a little more about it. I myself have received, as I suppose other Senators have, a great many telegrams from parties interested in having this joint resolution passed. If there is no question about conflicting rights, I see no reason why it should be passed for a limited period; but if there is some question of conflicting interests here I should like to inquire whether those who might object to it have been given opportunity to be heard by the committee? I should like to know a little more about the matter before it is acted upon by unanimous consent; that is all.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, if I catch the scope of the Senator's inquiry, he wishes to know whether there are opposing interests which have not been heard. I do not know of any, except we have been informed that, very naturally, there are other industries in the country that would desire to utilize Niagara power. I see no reason myself why they should not be given equal opportunity to contract for it, and I have no doubt that they can enter the field of competition for it whenever we have a general law on the subject; but we have no power now beyond that permitting the use of 15,600 cubic feet per second, and that is already contracted for. However, a number of the industries taking part of their power from this side of the line also take part of their power from the other side. The other side, under some form of embargo, are stopping the export from Canada of the power contracted for and diverting it to public uses, thus cutting down the operating power of establishments on this side that are now being run, their machinery going full head, and which are very important industries.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Affecting, for instance, the lighting plant of the city of Niagara Falls.

Mr. STONE. Yes; the city of Niagara Falls has been notified that it will be cut down 25 per cent in its lighting capacity. That is a public utility, but there are private utilities that are being likewise affected. Now, if this joint resolution goes through, it merely enables the use of the additional 4,400 cubic feet of water power to take the place of power now being diverted on the other side and required to supply the needs of machinery, the use of which is being lost through the action on the other side, as my friend from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] suggests to me, because of the power subtracted by Canada.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. What quantity of water are these companies authorized to take now for power purposes?

Mr. STONE. On this side?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. On this side.

Mr. STONE. They are authorized to take 20,000 cubic feet per second.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. No; Mr. President, I think that the chairman of the committee misunderstood the question. These companies are not authorized to take 20,000 cubic feet, but the treaty gives the United States the right to take that much. These companies, however, are only permitted to take 15,600 cubic feet, as I recall.

Mr. STONE. That is absolutely correct. I thought the Senator was asking me to what extent water might be diverted by the United States under the treaty.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Under what authority are they permitted to take 15,000 cubic feet?

Mr. HITCHCOCK. The act of Congress only gave the War Department the right to issue permits for that amount.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. When was that act of Congress passed?

Mr. HITCHCOCK. In 1910, I think.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. My recollection of the matter is rather vague, but was there not considerable controversy at the time as to whether as much water should be permitted to be drawn from the Niagara River as 20,000 cubic feet? Was there not a very vigorous protest on the part of a great many people in this country, and was it not claimed that if that amount of water was withdrawn it would seriously diminish and affect to a very considerable extent the flow of water over the falls?

Mr. HITCHCOCK. My recollection is that that was the inducement to the making of the treaty with Great Britain, by which Great Britain agreed to limit the withdrawal of water provided the United States would do likewise.

Mr. STONE. All that was discussed at the time the treaty was made, and 20,000 cubic feet were allowed to the United States and 36,000 cubic feet to the other side. The United States have utilized only 15,600 cubic feet. There was a discussion about the effect on the Falls of this diversion of water. That was discussed when the treaty was under consideration; it was also discussed here on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. It was discussed when the action of Congress limiting the amount to 15,000 feet was taken.

Mr. STONE. It was then discussed.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. It was discussed at that time, as I recollect.

Mr. STONE. Now, as we are informed, the total of all this diversion amounts to approximately 25 per cent of the natural flow. Canada, as I am told, was allowed a larger withdrawal of water than the United States because of the contention that the Chicago Drainage Canal, emptying into the Mississippi River, was taking a large amount of water from the Great Lakes, and there was in addition some other diversions of lake water by the United States. In consequence, whether wisely or unwisely, we entered into the convention by which the British Government was allowed nearly double the amount of water diversion this Government was allowed. So far we have not been permitted to use even the 20,000 cubic feet allowed to the United States for reasons which have been stated.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, is the Senator advised, I will inquire, whether the taking of this additional quantity of water for power purposes would operate to reduce the lake level?

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, the Senator asks me——

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. That inquiry is, in my mind, for the reason that I know that the water drawn from the Lakes for the Chicago Drainage Canal has operated to reduce the water level in the Lakes to the serious injury of commerce.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I do not wish to go into that scientific argument. My information is that only about 10,000 cubic feet per second flow from Lake Michigan into and through the canal referred to by the Senator. That and some other diversions in smaller quantity were taken into consideration at the time the treaty was made, and on the general calculation it was considered that the granting of 36,000 cubic feet at Niagara to the Canadian or British authorities would about equalize the amount that we were getting on this side.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I have just caused an inquiry to be made of the Board of Engineers with regard to the possible effect of this increased diversion of water for power purposes upon the lake levels, and am advised that it would be negligible.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President, if the Senator from Missouri will permit me, I should like to say to the Senator from Wisconsin that there has been pending before the Secretary of War for some time an application to appropriate about 2,600 cubic feet of the amount which we could appropriately take under our treaty, but in excess of the amount now used, and that the Secretary of War has publicly said—in fact, he said it the other day before the House Committee on Foreign Affairs—that he would grant that right, and that the Chief of Engineers and the district engineer all concurred that it could be appropriately done if he had the power. I think, under the safeguards that have been thrown around this joint resolution, it being but temporary in its character, we can afford at least to assist the present users of Canadian power on the American side without any fear of bad effects. The limitation of 15,000 cubic feet, approximately, was made before the treaty was made or ratified; and when the treaty was made it was determined that the appropriation of 20,000 cubic feet per second daily by the United States and 36,000 cubic feet per second daily by Canada would not in any way impair the scenic beauty of Niagara Falls.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I wish to say to my friend from Wisconsin that I am in sympathy with his idea that commercial diversions of water should not be permitted that would appreciably lower the level of the Lakes or perceptibly affect the scenic beauty of the Falls. I am informed that engineers who have been brought into consultation have stated that even 40 per cent of diversion from the Niagara would not affect either of those things. At present the diversion is less than 25 per cent.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, will the Senator answer me this question: Do I understand correctly that the water that is diverted is not permanently withdrawn, but goes right back into the river and thence into the Lakes again? I do not see how the question of the level of the Lakes is concerned in this matter. How can the level of the Lakes be affected? The water is taken from just above the Falls and then goes back into the river.

Mr. STONE. At least, it might affect the Falls.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. It can not possibly affect the lake levels, can it?

Mr. STONE. It can not, as I see it.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, will the Senator from Missouri yield?

Mr. STONE. Yes.

Mr. WADSWORTH. May I say something partly in reply to the Senator from Connecticut? The point at which the water is taken for the power plants upon the American side is just above the Falls.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Yes.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Taking water from the river at that point for the purpose of producing power will have no more effect upon the levels of Lake Erie and Lake Michigan and Lake Superior and Lake Huron than allowing it to proceed and go over the Falls.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. The Senator has the same idea that I have about it.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, just a remark, if I may, with the permission of the Senator from Missouri, with reference to the figure 15,600 cubic feet per second. As I understand it, when the Congress made up its mind that these waters and their use for power purposes should come under the jurisdiction of the Federal Government the power plants then completed at Niagara Falls on the American side, or approaching completion, had a maximum capacity of 15,600 cubic feet per second. The Congress passed an act known as the Burton law, as I understand, prohibiting any companies upon the American side taking more water than they had already made investments for, so to speak. In other words, they set by statute a limit of 15,600 cubic feet per second. The purpose of that was to prevent any more companies being organized, any more penstocks or dynamos being installed, or any more water being used pending negotiations between Great Britain and the United States. When the treaty was made between Great Britain and the United States the whole matter of the preservation of the scenery, and, incidentally, the level of the Lakes, was taken into consideration; and as a result of that negotiation it was agreed that the scenery could not be injured by the taking of 20,000 cubic feet per second from the American side and 36,000 cubic feet per second from the Canadian side.

The life of the Burton Act, as I understand, was to come to an end with the making of the treaty; but since the making of the treaty, which permits 20,000 cubic feet to be diverted on the American side, the War Department has held that it is not authorized to exceed the amount set in the Burton Act. During all these years the American companies taking water from the American side have been limited by action of the War Department in its construction of the law to 15,600 cubic feet per second. This joint resolution of mine simply permits the companies with machinery already installed—forbidding them to install any further machinery, forbidding even their customers who buy power from them to install any additional machinery for the use of power or the consumption of power—to take the amount, and not exceeding the amount, permitted by the treaty itself, which is 20,000 cubic feet per second.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, will the Senator allow me to state here that, as I understand, the life of this resolution is not only limited to six months from the date of its passage but the permit to be issued by the Secretary under the authority of the resolution is revocable at any time within that period, at the discretion of the Secretary.

Mr. WADSWORTH. That is right.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I should like a little further information about this matter. I have been listening to this discussion with a view to ascertaining the reason for the special consideration that is to be given to this measure, and to learn what exigency exists that requires this speedy action. The general subject of water-power legislation has engaged more or less of the attention of the Senate, and I have been quite diligently seeking to have consideration for general legislation dealing with this all-unimportant subject. I believe that the Members on this side of the Senate, at least by formal action taken, feel obligated to invite the attention of the Senate at some early day to the pending legislation. There is now on the calendar a bill dealing with the subject. I am very naturally desirous of enlisting the active interest and support of everybody interested in water-power legislation. I do not recall that up to the present time we have had any very interested cooperation from the Senator from New York; and I should very much like to see his bill dealt with in connection with the general subject, that we might have his interested cooperation, unless, indeed, there is some exigency which requires us to take this up as a separate and independent measure in this extraordinary way. I should be glad to be enlightened.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, in reply to the inquiry of the Senator from Montana as to what constitutes the emergency which calls for this legislation, may I say, in the first place, that the joint resolution has been drafted by the Secretary of War in consultation with the Army engineers who have given this matter study for some time. It has been drafted and presented for the reason that the Canadian Government has commandeered a large proportion of the power generated on the Canadian side for its own uses or for municipal uses in Canada, which prior to such commandeering had been imported into the United States and used by our industries along the Niagara frontier. Not only had it been used along the Niagara frontier, Mr. President, but I may say also that a goodly portion of the power which drives the street cars in the city of Rochester, the city of Syracuse, and a large number of towns and villages along the line of the New York Central Railway between Buffalo and Syracuse is generated at this point. A large number of industrial plants along that line are seeking this power; but having it taken away by the Canadian Government the burden placed upon the power houses on the American side of Niagara Falls has been tremendously increased. They are unable to meet the demands of their customers for more hydroelectric power, which is used in the manufacture of a large number of chemicals, which in turn are essential for the successful conduct of many of the greatest industries of the United States. The last action of the Canadian Government in withdrawing power from importation into the United States has indeed brought about a serious situation, where the Niagara chemical plants have had to inform their customers all over the United States that the supply of chemicals which they have been accustomed to sending out must be decreased very materially. One may realize the importance of this situation when one remembers that at Niagara Falls are manufactured in the chemical plants practically all the alloys which go into the manufacture of high-grade steel; and if the Niagara Falls chemical plants were shut down, as the result of failure on their part to get electrical power from the power plants, the steel industry of the United States in many respects would be absolutely crippled.

These same alloys, for instance, go into the manufacture of armor plate for our battleships. They are made, as I understand, only at Niagara Falls, due to the growth of the enormous electrochemical industry there. The automobile industry would be seriously crippled, for the reason that it uses in large quantity an abrasive manufactured at Niagara Falls for the grinding of steel tools and the grinding of parts of automobile engines. That is to be cut down very seriously.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I hope the Senator from New York will understand that I have not the slightest objection to this measure. Indeed, I am heartily in favor of it.

Mr. WADSWORTH. The Senator asked me to tell what the emergency was which gave rise to the pressing of the joint resolution at this time.

Mr. WALSH. Yes; and so I wanted to know from the Senator when this power was commandeered—power that was utilized upon this side, from the development on the other side.

Mr. WADSWORTH. It has been commandeered, Mr. President, in varying amounts by the Canadian Government during the last year. I think the last embargo was placed within the last 10 days. The danger line has now been reached.

Mr. WALSH. That is, the thing commenced a year ago?

Mr. WADSWORTH. It has been going on for a year—the embargoing by the Canadian Government of the exportation of power from Canada.

Mr. WALSH. So that if we could get the general legislation up within the next couple of weeks, the situation would be reasonably taken care of?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, these enormous industries, upon which are dependent in turn hundreds of industries all over the country, can scarcely risk all their future upon the chance of Congress in the next two weeks passing general legislation.

Mr. WALSH. The situation in the State of New York is different from the situation in my State only in this—that the money is all ready to go into the enterprise in our State, and I have been here for two years begging this body to pass the legislation in order to permit the investment to be made.

I have no objection to the joint resolution.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I have been quite in sympathy with the Senator from Montana, as he knows, but I think these things ought not to be confused.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the joint resolution reported by the Senator from Missouri?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. WALSH, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill (S. 1092) for the establishment of a probation system in the United States courts except in the District of Columbia, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 887) thereon.

Mr. OWEN, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to which was referred the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 178) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to extend the time for payment of the deferred installments due on the purchase of tracts of the surface of the segregated coal and asphalt lands of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Tribes in Oklahoma, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report (No. 888) thereon.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED.

Bill and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. CHAMBERLAIN:

A bill (S. 7487) to promote the reclamation of arid and swamp lands of the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation of Arid Lands.

By Mr. ASHURST:

A bill (S. 7488) to cancel allotment made to Ollie House, or Om-O-wat, on Shoshone Reservation, Wyo.; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. PENROSE:

A bill (S. 7489) for the relief of the survivors of McLean's Pennsylvania Regiment and their widows and children; and

A bill (S. 7490) for the relief of Thomas W. Miller (with accompanying paper); to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WARREN:

A bill (S. 7491) to promote the settlement and agricultural development of United States reclamation projects; to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation of Arid Lands.

By Mr. THOMPSON:

A bill (S. 7492) granting an increase of pension to Inez A. Hatchett (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. McCUMBER:

A bill (S. 7493) granting an increase of pension to Howard E. Hoadley (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WATSON:

A bill (S. 7494) granting an increase of pension to David Draper;

A bill (S. 7495) granting an increase of pension to P. T. Simmonds;

A bill (S. 7496) granting an increase of pension to Irvin Tatum;

A bill (S. 7497) granting an increase of pension to Enock Medsker;

A bill (S. 7498) granting an increase of pension to Orville C. Gordon;

A bill (S. 7499) granting an increase of pension to John C. Trimble;

A bill (S. 7500) granting an increase of pension to Andrew Ormston; and

A bill (S. 7501) granting an increase of pension to Andrew Fifer; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. POINDEXTER:

A bill (S. 7502) authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to make donation of condemned naval guns and cannon balls to the John Wannebo Camp, No. 9, United Spanish War Veterans, Everett, Wash., to be placed in public parks; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

A bill (S. 7503) authorizing the appropriation of $50,000 to reimburse the city of Renton, in the State of Washington, for damages done in the destruction of the outlet of the sewerage of said city; to the Committee on Appropriations.

A bill (S. 7504) to amend section 4 of the act to regulate commerce passed February 4, 1887, and subsequent amendments thereof; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

A bill (S. 7505) to punish the storing of foodstuffs for the purpose of cornering the market, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

A bill (S. 7506) granting an increase of pension to William H. Phelps; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota:

A bill (S. 7507) granting an increase of pension to James A. Montgomery (with accompanying papers); and

A bill (S. 7508) granting an increase of pension to Nelson Coffen (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. LA FOLLETTE:

A bill (S. 7509) granting an increase of pension to James Hill; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. OWEN:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 188) providing for an appraisement of lands in Osage County, Okla., owned by Osage Indians, as allottees or as heirs of tribal members; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. POINDEXTER submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $5,000 to be expended under the direction of the Department of Agriculture in cooperation with the extension service of the State College of Washington for the extermination of destructive crickets in that State, intended to be proposed by him to the Agricultural appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed.

Mr. ASHURST submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $1,000 for an investigation of conditions on the Navajo Indian Reservation, Ariz., with respect to the necessity for constructing for the use of Indians suitable bridges across the Little Colorado River and the Canyon Diablo Creek in the vicinity of the Leupp Indian School on said reservation, intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill (H. R. 18453), which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $1,000 for an investigation of the conditions on the Gila Bend Indian Reservation in Arizona with respect to the necessity of constructing for the use of Indians a diversion dam with a bridge superstructure across the Gila River on that reservation, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill (H. R. 18453), which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed.

Mr. McCUMBER submitted an amendment proposing to increase the salaries of clerks and messengers to the committees of the Senate, intended to be proposed by him to the legislative, etc., appropriation bill (H. R. 18542), which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

Mr. PENROSE submitted an amendment proposing to increase the wages, salaries, or compensation of all persons employed by the United States Government, District of Columbia, or either House of Congress, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the legislative, etc., appropriation bill (H. R. 18542), which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

Mr. CHILTON submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $225,000 for payment of interest to owners of lots, pieces, or parcels of land or their heirs or legal representatives who were included in the report and award of the court commissioners of the District of Columbia to condemn the land for the enlargement of the Capitol grounds, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

Mr. GALLINGER submitted an amendment proposing to increase the salary of the superintendent of sewers, engineer commissioner's office, District of Columbia, from $3,300 to $3,600, intended to be proposed by him to the District of Columbia appropriation bill (H. R. 19119), which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to increase the appropriation for the maintenance of the Columbia Hospital for Women and Lying-In Asylum from $20,000 to $25,000, intended to be proposed by him to the District of Columbia appropriation bill (H. R. 19119), which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

EIGHT-HOUR LAW.

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. President, I desire to give notice that on Thursday, January 4, 1917, it will be my purpose to address the Senate in support of the bill introduced by me to amend the act entitled "An act to establish an eight-hour day for employees of carriers in interstate and foreign commerce."

STOCK-RAISING HOMESTEADS—CONFERENCE REPORT (S. DOC. NO. 641).

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, the conference report on the bill (H. R. 407) to provide for stock-raising homesteads, and for other purposes, has been submitted and is now on the table. It is very essential that action should be taken on that report before the Senate takes a recess. I shall, therefore, be obliged to call it up to-morrow morning, either during the morning hour or after the morning hour has expired.

REPORT OF INTERNATIONAL HIGH COMMISSION (H. DOC. NO. 1788).

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, which was read and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith for the information of the Congress the report of the United States section of the International High Commission on the first general meeting of the commission held at Buenos Aires, April 3–12, 1916.

WOODROW WILSON.

THE WHITE HOUSE, December 20, 1916.

[The report accompanied similar message to the House of Representatives.]

COLUMBIA HOSPITAL.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore announced the appointment of Mr. GALLINGER to succeed himself as a director on the part of the Senate of the Columbia Hospital for Women and Lying-In Asylum, as provided for in the act of June 10, 1872.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

H. R. 18542. An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

HOLIDAY RECESS.

The concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 67) relative to adjournment from Friday, December 22, 1816, to 12 o'clock m. on Tuesday, January 2, 1917, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. From the Committee on Appropriations, which has considered that resolution in anticipation, I report it back to the Senate and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution? The Chair hears none, and the Secretary will read the resolution for the information of the Senate.

The concurrent resolution was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That when the two Houses adjourn on Friday, December 22, 1916, they stand adjourned until 12 o'clock meridian on Tuesday, January 2, 1917.

URGENT DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS.

H. R. 19178. An act making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Mr. President, I make a similar report, that bill having been considered in anticipation. I report it back to the Senate and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Virginia?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the following sums are appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to supply urgent deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, and for other purposes, namely:

MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT.

QUARTERMASTER CORPS.

For the support of dependent families of enlisted men, including the same objects and under the same limitations specified in the appropriation for this purpose in the Army appropriation act for the fiscal year 1917 as amended by section 901 of the act entitled "An act to increase the revenue, and for other purposes," approved September 8, 1916, $4,250,000.

MINT AND ASSAY OFFICES.

Denver, Colo., Mint: For wages of workmen and other employees, $12,000.

For incidental and contingent expenses, including new machinery and repairs, wastage in melting and refining department and coining department, and loss on sale of sweeps arising from the treatment of bullion and the manufacture of coin, $25,000.

Philadelphia Mint: For wages of workmen and other employees, $110,000.

For incidental and contingent expenses, including new machinery and repairs, cases and enameling for medals manufactured, expenses of the annual assay commission, wastage in melting and refining and in coining departments, and loss on sale of sweeps arising from the treatment of bullion and the manufacture of coins, and not exceeding $1,000 in value of specimen coins and ores for the cabinet of the mint, $100,000.

San Francisco, Cal., Mint: For wages of workmen and other employees, $18,000.

For incidental and contingent expenses, including new machinery and repairs, wastage in the melting and refining department and in the coining department, and loss on sale of sweeps arising from the treatment of bullion and the manufacture of coin, $7,500.

New York assay office: For wages of workmen and other employees, $25,000.

For incidental and contingent expenses, including new machinery and repairs, wastage in the melting and refining department, and loss on sale of sweeps arising from the treatment of bullion, $20,000.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

SUPREME COURT.

Miscellaneous expenses: For such additional miscellaneous expenses as may be authorized by the Attorney General for the supreme court and its officers, made necessary by the occupancy of temporary quarters pending the reconstruction of the courthouse, Washington, D. C., including an electrician at the rate of $900 per annum and a laborer at the rate of $600 per annum, $3,750, one-half to be paid out of the Treasury of the United States and one-half out of the revenues of the District of Columbia.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

For an additional amount for the removal and readjustment of all office furniture and fittings in connection with the occupancy of temporary quarters by the officials and employees of the courthouse, Washington, D. C., including personal and other services, and for every item connected therewith, $2,000.

For rent of temporary quarters for the office of the recorder of deeds pending the reconstruction of the courthouse, Washington, D. C., $5,000, to be available during the fiscal year 1918.

The two foregoing appropriations shall be expended under the direction of the Superintendent of the Capitol Building and Grounds and payable one-half out of the Treasury of the United States and one-half out of the revenues of the District of Columbia.

Mr. OVERMAN. I wish to say right here that I shall not oppose the bill, but it was stated in the Senate that the payments to the wives of guardsmen who were absent on the border would not exceed two million, and it was put at two million; and this is a deficiency for over $4,000,000 until the 1st of April. If it goes on there is no telling how much it will cost.

Mr. SMOOT. The estimate is $8,000,000.

Mr. OVERMAN. The estimate sent down here is $8,000,000. That will make $10,000,000. I wish to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that we can not be governed by estimates stated in arguments on the floor. It was said that it would cost $2,000,000, and there is an estimate for $8,000,000, and this is an appropriation of $4,000,000. We shall probably have to appropriate the other $4,000,000 later.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. It matters not what the estimate was; Congress passed a law providing that so many dollars a month should be paid to the soldiers' families who were unprovided for, and after Congress passed that law entitling those families to receive that amount an appropriation was made which will be exhausted before the end of this month. Here is a law which provides that there shall be paid $50 a month for each family, or an amount not exceeding that sum. The money has not been appropriated to pay that obligation of the Government, which was undertaken by Congress beyond this month, and the appropriation now carried by this bill will pay it until the 1st of April, and no longer.

Mr. VARDAMAN. May I ask the Senator from Virginia how much the bill carries?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Four million two hundred and fifty thousand dollars for this purpose.

Mr. VARDAMAN. What time will it cover?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. To the 1st day of April. It does not authorize the expenditure of a dollar that Congress has not already directed. It simply appropriates money to meet an obligation that Congress has already assumed.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I should like to ask wherein this miscalculation occurred? Was it in the number of wives whose support became necessary or was it because of the length of time the soldiers were required to be on the border?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I have no doubt both. One could not be accurate; it was merely a speculative estimate, perhaps made by some one on the floor. I do not know that the War Department ever prepared any careful figures on the subject.

Mr. THOMAS. I do not think any estimate was made.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I say I do not think there was any estimate made by the department; but Senators expressed an opinion as to the amount which would be required.

Mr. THOMAS. I wish to call attention to the fact that when the measure was before the Senate for discussion some of us then predicted that this identical condition would present itself. It is now necessary to appropriate $4,000,000 for this purpose. I understand from the Senator that that is designed to cover the period of time between the present and the 1st of April.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. That is all.

Mr. THOMAS. But, as the Senator said, we enacted the law, we made provisions for this outlay, and we must now meet it. It is too late to object to it.

Mr. OVERMAN. I am not objecting to it.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Virginia yield to the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I do.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The implied criticism of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. OVERMAN] upon Senators who had something to do with the moving and the adoption of this provision of law when the military bill was pending is, I think, entirely without warrant. It was upon my motion that the amendment was made. I named that sum because the House upon an earlier bill or at an earlier period had made an appropriation of that amount. I know I did not assert and I have no recollection of anybody asserting on this floor that that would be a sufficient amount to cover the provisions of the law. No one could tell anything about how long the National Guard were to be kept on the border. No one knew whether it would be a week or 2 weeks or 10 months or years.

It is not my recollection at all—and I can speak very definitely with reference to what I said—that anyone said on this floor that $2,000,000 or $2,500,000 would be a sufficient appropriation to meet the requirements of the case more than for the time being. And whatever it may be, Mr. President, whether it be $2,000,000 or $10,000,000, the appropriation should be made.

Mr. OVERMAN. If the Senator from Virginia will yield to me a moment, I did not make any criticism. I am in favor of the appropriation, because the law calls for it. It is my distinct recollection that when the bill called for $2,000,000 it was said that would be the amount needed; and I think the Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS] and others predicted that it would be larger. It may be at least ten million.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Of course, nobody could tell what amount would be required, because it depended on the length of time the soldiers were kept on the border. Who could tell whether they would be kept there 1 month or 12 months? It was impossible to make any estimate that would be at all accurate. The object was to provide $50 a month during the time the soldiers with families were kept in the service of their country, and this amount is needed for that purpose.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Virginia yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I do; I yield the floor.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President, I was very much opposed to the enormous appropriation that was made in the last session for what was known as preparedness, but this is one expenditure that I agreed was entirely right. It not only provided, I understand, for the care and support of the wives and families of the members of the National Guard, but provided for the wives and families of the Regular Army men. I want the RECORD to show that this money is not all going to the National Guard. It is going to the wives and families of the Regular Army troops during their service on the border as it is to the families of the National Guardsmen.

I heartily agree with the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] that whatever amount of money may be necessary it is the duty of Congress to appropriate.

Mr. LEE of Maryland. Mr. President, in this connection I would like to state that the original amount was suggested largely in behalf of the National Guard, and that on the urgency of the Senator from Oregon [Mr. CHAMBERLAIN] and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] the Regular soldiers were included, though it was not supposed that the Regular soldiers had any dependents, because the system in the Army is to exclude men from enlistment who have dependents. Furthermore, it was not supposed that a man who would enlist for $15 a month could possibly have dependents. It has turned out the other way. It has turned out to be the fact that a large number of the Regular enlisted men have dependents. In addition to that, the time has gone beyond the time anybody in the origin of this matter thought it would cover. The National Guard and the Regular troops as well are kept on the border in this indefinite manner, and it is proper that the provision for their dependents should go on, as it has been made by every civilized government in the world, for the care of the families of the soldiers on the border.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I should like to ask the chairman of the committee if he has any data showing how many members of the National Guard are receiving money in behalf of their dependent families and how many members of the Regular Army. I think the thin edge of the wedge is already inserted in the Treasury. I remember the Senator from Maryland [Mr. LEE] urged the passage of this measure originally out of a lofty sentiment of patriotism. He indicated that it would not be any material charge against the Treasury. Some of us thought that it might sooner or later become a serious draft on the Treasury of the United States. Now, it seems it is not to pass away as a mere matter of sentiment, but that the heroes are really after the substance as well as the show of patriotism.

I should like to have a little data on that, because I remember distinctly the Senator from Maryland said there would not be many who would avail themselves of this very generous and patriotic offer.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I have not gone into an inquiry as to the number. The number is, in my judgment, entirely immaterial. Congress authorized the payment of $50 a month to the families of soldiers on the border who were dependent, and the Secretary of War was authorized to ascertain those dependent families and pay them not exceeding $50 a month. The number of those at present I do not know, but I know he reports to Congress that the appropriation made for this purpose will be exhausted before the end of the month of December, and he estimates the amount which is contained in this bill to pay for the support of these families until the 1st day of April.

It is a plain obligation of the Government. They agreed to pay the families of these soldiers not exceeding $50 a month, the necessary amount to be ascertained by the Secretary of War. The amount was ascertained and it was to be paid, and the Government ought either to pay it or repeal the law.

The Government owes this money; it has provided by law that it should be paid; and I think it is a very just and meritorious provision.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I realize the obligation that has been imposed or inflicted on the Government. I do not think, however, the data or statistics are entirely immaterial. We may be obliged to confront this policy in the future. I should like to know now how many of these soldiers are already beneficiaries of these special payments of the Government, with a view of determining in the future whether we should relieve married men with dependent families from the obligation to render military service. It was insisted by myself and by others that we ought not to take these men away from their families; that we ought not to drag these heroes away from their wives and their dependents; that they ought to be allowed to stay at home; and that young men without such encumbrances or such obligations should be sent to the front to vindicate the Nation's honor. I still think it would be a matter of economy and would have saved millions to the Treasury and would not have jeopardized either the vital interests or the honor of the Republic.

I have some curiosity to know how many of these men are availing themselves of this tender on the part of the Government. Although we are now under no financial embarrassment, the revenues are abundant, and the obligations of the Government are inconsiderable, there might come a time when even United States Senators would consult economy and consult the interests of the taxpayers, and, notwithstanding their abounding generosity, they might determine it to be a matter of prudence to allow married men and men with dependent families to stay at home with their families and allow single men to go to the front in order to effect this economy.

Since asking the chairman the question I have come into possession of the statistics desired. There are now on the border approximately 40,000 members of the Regular Army. The families of some 1,700 of these are receiving payments under this policy. There are now on the border approximately 120,000 members of the National Guard. Fifteen thousand of these have made application for the benefits of this appropriation. Approximately 10,000 are now receiving the benefits of this appropriation; that is to say, the dependent families of 10,000 guardsmen are now receiving payments out of the Treasury of the United States. This has aggregated, up to date, approximately $2,000,000. It is estimated that it will amount to $8,500,000 before the close of the current fiscal year.

I maintain that these men should be honorably discharged and restored to their families, and that this could be done without seriously impairing the efficiency of the border defense. The $8,000,000 thus saved would pay half the cost of a first-class battleship. It would pay for the construction of eight first-class submarines and twice that many submarines of a lesser type. This is more than the average annual amount expended on our entire coast defenses during the last 30 years. In my judgment, such a policy would be in the interest not only of sound economy but of well-directed and effective national defense.

Mr. LEE of Maryland. Mr. President, there was no sentiment at all in the suggestion or advocacy of this appropriation. It was done for the purpose of protecting a man who was summoned by his country to undertake military duty, leaving his trade or business, that that man should not be confronted with bankruptcy when he gives that service to his country.

I believe, Mr. President, that there were some who wished to have the National Guard system confused and made utterly disagreeable to the men who are participating in it and who did not want to have their families provided for; but it was done. I want to tell the Senator from Oklahoma that not a dollar of this money is going into the pockets of the soldiers. He is entirely mistaken when he says it is a pension to the soldiers.

Mr. GORE. I understand perfectly well it is going to the families.

Mr. LEE of Maryland. When the soldier is away the money goes to the support of the family, who are not getting the wages the soldier got when he was at home. When the soldier comes back the support is no longer tendered by the Government. That is the universal practice of all civilized nations. The Canadian Government gives its soldiers a dollar a day and takes $20 a month out of this $30 and adds $20 more to it for the support of the family. So all over the civilized world today it is recognized that the man who does the fighting for his country is entitled to have the country feed his family when he is not at home.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, I notice a number of items for an increase in the payment of the wages of employees in the mints and assay offices at a number of different places. Will the chairman of the committee inform the Senate the occasion for an emergency appropriation for the payment of wages in mints and assay offices?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. It is because they are working double time, night and day, and they are unable to supply the demand for coin at even that. It is not to raise the wages but an increased pay roll of laborers is necessary to do the work of the mint. The work has increased in some instances fivefold, and they are without the money to carry on the coining that is absolutely necessary for the business of the country.

Mr. POMERENE. I desire to say in this connection that I have had various complaints from bankers in and about Cincinnati to the effect that there was not a sufficient amount of small bills or fractional coins in that section of the country, and my inquiries showed that the mints would be closed down unless the appropriations were made. I feel that there is a very great necessity for this particular appropriation at this time.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, I understand the bill reports only $4,000,000 for the relief of the families of those members of the National Guard and Regular Army who are on the border. I ask the Chairman if my information is correct?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Four million two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, which will carry the burden until the 1st day of April only.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I should like to ask the chairman of the committee if the estimate of the Quartermaster Corps did not call for a very much larger sum than that.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. It did; but it was impossible to say how long the National Guardsmen would be kept on the frontier. In view of the probability of their being relieved from duty there in the near future the House and the Senate committee, and I think both wisely, determined that it would not make an appropriation to extend beyond the 1st day of April.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. What was the full amount estimated?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Double the amount; but that estimate carried it until the 30th of June.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The 30th of June would be double?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Double the amount in this bill.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Eight million five hundred thousand dollars?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Yes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, I wanted the RECORD to show what I believe will be the condition of affairs in reference to this appropriation. I think this appropriation is a very meritorious one. I do not think this great Government of ours can afford for one moment to occupy the position that it is not going to take care of the families of these men on the border. As far as I myself am concerned, I should prefer to make the appropriation the full amount requested by the department. In the first place, if the troops are ordered home before June it will not be necessary to spend it, and at present it looks like there was no possibility of a large number of troops being ordered away from the border before very late in the spring at least. The reason why I say that this appropriation is particularly meritorious——

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Will the Senator permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. On what does he base that last statement? Has the Senator any information which leads him to believe that our troops will not be taken away from the border in the immediate future?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I have no direct statement to that effect, but I have made inquiries as to when certain regiments from Alabama are likely to come home, and I can get no definite reply which would indicate that they would come home before late in the spring. I have no definite information, however.

Mr. REED. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. REED. Perhaps I can give a little light on that question. A number of companies and regiments from the State of Missouri have been on the border from the very first. Those troops were mobilized in two hours' time and ready to go to the front long before the War Department was ready to furnish them with the transportation. Some regiments from other States were ordered home some months ago. I then insisted at the War Department that it was only fair that the troops which arrived first should be returned first; that if they were going to return the troops they ought to be returned in the order of their arrival. I was informed that the entire question as to who should be returned and when was left to the commanding general, Gen. Funston. From that time to this date I have renewed my efforts. Some of our troops have been returned and some of them are still held. When I make inquiry I am told in substance and effect that these troops can not be taken from the border at this time; that the conditions are such that they find it necessary to retain them at their present places.

The War Department appreciates the hardships that these men are undergoing and the hardships which their families are enduring; but the necessity is such that they can not at this time order the troops back. What that may mean, what that necessity is, the Senator from Michigan can as well define as myself; but manifestly the War Department is impressed with the fact that it must keep a considerable force upon the border until conditions change. What may or may not change those conditions I can not say; but it would appear that at least these troops must be kept there until some sort of definite arrangement or settlement has been effected and until conditions in Mexico change, so that the necessity for the troops no longer shall exist.

I make that statement, because it may throw a little light on the situation. I thank the Senator.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Missouri for his statement. His information is more full in reference to the movement of the troops than that which I myself possess. I am sure that those in authority are endeavoring to do what they consider just and equitable and fair so far as the movement of the troops home from the border is concerned, and yet it seems to me that they overlook the fact that those troops, who were ordered to the mobilization camps in July, kept in the mobilization camps for months, and then sent to the border, are suffering practically as much hardship as are the men who went to the border in July, and that the time they have served in mobilization camps should be taken into consideration as well as the time they have served on the border.

Alabama has three full regiments of infantry on the border, a full regiment of cavalry, and two artillery companies. Those organizations were called out early in July; I do not remember the exact date; but at the time the other National Guardsmen were ordered out by the President. They were kept at the mobilization camp in Montgomery until some time in September or October.

So far as the batteries are concerned, they were ordered to the mobilization camp in Montgomery; they were not furnished with horses and were furnished with only part of their equipment. They practically had to remain in camp doing guard duty, without an opportunity to be trained, and they were not removed to the border, where they could get training, until about the 1st of October. So it is my judgment that it is only fair that, in considering the service of these men and the quotas that are allowed to come home, the authorities should take into consideration the service in the mobilization camps as well as on the border.

What I was really coming to, however, was the hardship on numbers of these men. It is repeatedly stated in the papers that the National Guard as a second line of reserves has broken down and is a failure. Mr. President, I think a statement of that kind is an absolutely unjust reflection on the men who are serving in the National Guard to-day, and who are endeavoring to render patriotic service to their country. If the National Guard has broken down, then the Regular Army has broken down. The National Guard has been able to mobilize more men on the border than the Regular Army has been able to mobilize on the border; the National Guard has been able to recruit its units up to the same standard of efficiency and numbers that the Regular Army has been able to recruit its units.

The National Guard, it may be true, are not so well drilled or so well trained for camp service as are the units of the Regular Army; but, if that is so, whose fault is it? Is it the fault of the National Guard, is it the fault of the States, or is it the fault of the Federal Government? The Federal Government has passed a law creating the National Guard as a second line of reserves. Until they were called out was anything done by the National Government to promote and develop that second line of reserves? Not a thing.

You may say that after the passage of the Army reorganization law the National Government has not had the opportunity, except when they were ordered to the border, to properly organize and promote the efficiency of these men in the National Guard. That is true; it has not; but if it has not, why put the blame on the National Guard? The charge that they have proven inefficient does not properly rest on the National Guard. So far as I can determine our organization of the National Guard as the second line of reserves has demonstrated, without cavil, its efficiency and its importance as one of the arms of defense of the National Government in time of war.

We have been absolutely unable up to this time to recruit the Regular Army to the quota which Congress has provided for immediate service. It may be that the recruiting officers have gone at it in the wrong way; it may be that the industrial conditions in the United States, under which there is a great demand for labor, high wages, and increased opportunities to make money, to some extent are responsible for the young men of the country not joining the Regular Army. I think it is so; but there are other reasons why we have not been able to recruit the Army up to the full quota that is provided by law and I think that the initial fault lies in the legislation itself.

We have written on the statute books a law that says that if any young man in the United States desires to serve his country in the Regular Establishment, he is required to make a contract with the United States Government by which he agrees to surrender himself to his Government, his time, his service, and, if the necessity arises, his life, under a contract of seven years' service. Take the boy who is 18, with seven years of life taken away from him, seven years to serve his country for his clothes and his food and $15 a month. A man might respond to a call of that kind from patriotic motives; he might respond to defend his country, and would do so; hundreds of thousands of young men in this country will come to the standard if in time of war their country needs their services; but we are building an Army under peace conditions. Here is no compulsory service; there is no reason why one boy should surrender seven years of his life to his country rather than his neighbor's boy; and if you ask him to do so under peace conditions, you must make the life inviting and the service which he renders agreeable, or he will not volunteer; and when you want to raise an army you are compelled to resort to a compulsory enlistment.

Put yourself in the place of a young man 18 or 20 years of age in your State, or, if you have a boy of that age, think of your own boy. He is asked to put his name to a contract that signs away seven years of his life, seven years when he has an opportunity to get a college education, seven years when he has an opportunity to develop his business talents, seven years in which he has the chance to fix his place in life. Under the law now on the statute books you say that he must come to the standard and agree to a contract that he will serve three years with the colors and four years in reserve. Then you find you are not raising sufficient men to keep up your military establishment; that you are not getting the men to fill out the new regiments and the new companies and the new brigades. They are not responding. You have passed a law asking these young men to make a contract for seven years of service for $15 a month and rations, when you know that the great steel mills of this country are paying common labor $3 a day, that on the farms of this country men are being paid $40 a month and board under conditions where a man can be a free man and his own agent. Do you think under your law you are going to induce men to enter the military service? I am sure it can not be expected of them. If you are going to have volunteer and not compulsory service, you will have to change the law, or you will not get the necessary number of men.

I am not for compulsory service in time of peace. I believe this country should be reasonably prepared to defend itself against a foreign foe should some misfortune involve us in the horrors of war, but I do not believe that it is necessary for us to keep the military establishment on land that has been maintained in the past and will be maintained in the future by the great Governments of Europe.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I have here a House joint resolution, which has been reported favorably from the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs and which ought to pass the Senate before the holiday recess. I was going to inquire if the Senator would be kind enough to suspend and allow me to make this report and ask unanimous consent to consider the joint resolution at this time?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I desire to finish my remarks, but I can do that later in the discussion of the bill. However, I am not in charge of this bill. The Senator from Virginia [Mr. MARTIN] has the bill in charge.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I will say to the Senator from Arizona that I do not think it is possible that it can be of more importance to pass the joint resolution which he has in mind than it is to pass the pending bill, which is an emergency appropriation bill.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. As I was saying when my line of thought was interrupted, I do not think it is necessary in this country for us to maintain a great standing army; but I do believe that we should have a sufficient standing army to prevent any other nation in the world landing hostile troops on our shores as a second line of reserve to a great Navy and to defend our country until we can call for volunteers and put in the field an army that our country is capable of raising in time of war. If you had compulsory service, of course it would not be contemplated to require every man above 18 years of age who was of sound mind and sound health to serve in the Army; but I take it that those who are the proponents of compulsory service in the United States contemplate passing a law that would require every man who is between certain ages and is of sound health to be subject to military duty. I take it that if we entered upon that line of legislation, that policy of government, we would probably follow the example of military service in Germany or France. We would probably say that all the young men of sound mind and sound health in this country between the ages of 18 and 23 should be subject to military duty. If we did, it would mean the enlistment of four or five million men. Four or five million men carried in the Army at the same cost as the expense of the maintenance of the Regular Establishment to-day would mean that we would entail on the people of the United States an expense of some four or five hundred million dollars a year for the maintenance of the military arm of the Government alone, not taking into consideration what would be paid for the maintenance of the Navy or for pensions.

I do not believe for a moment that so great a burden would be satisfactory to the American people. I do not believe that the American people are prepared to consent to universal military service—I mean, universal military service such as I have indicated—nor do I believe that the people of this country are prepared to expend four or five hundred million dollars a year for the maintenance of an Army alone.

Then, if you say that you are going to have compulsory military service instead of a volunteer corps, but you do not want to bring into that service the entire population of young men between the ages of 18 and 23 who are sound in health and mind, I ask you how you are going to designate, out of four or five million men in the United States, whom you are going to take? Are you going to take the rich man's son or the poor man's son? Are you going to let political influences keep one boy out of military training and drive another one into it because he has not those political influences to protect him?

When you talk about compulsory military service in this country, those are the problems that you must face. You may say that you are going to enroll all of these men between these ages; that you are going to keep a list of them; that you are going to hold them ready for service. If you do so, you interfere with their making contracts for their life work. If you tell a boy "You are on the military list; you may be called out at any time; we will not call you or pay you now, but you can wait four or five years to find out," is that boy in position to prepare for his college education? If he is a rich man's son, his father may send him, pay the bill, and take the chance of his being ordered away from his studies to do duty in the barracks; but if he is a poor man's son he must either go to college at great sacrifices on the part of his parents, or possibly make great sacrifices himself, work and labor to secure the money with which to pay his way through college.

Many a boy has made a contract with a neighbor and friend by which he was enabled to borrow the money to see his way through college, with the understanding that when he finished his college course he would come back to the farm, to the factory, or the law office, and do the work that would pay back that debt which he contracted to pay for an education. But when you enter upon this proposal of a compulsory military system for the youth of this land, you say to thousands—nay, more, you say to hundreds of thousands—of young men in this country "The door to your education is closed on you forever, because you are not going to have the opportunity to make these contracts. You are not going to have the opportunity to get this college education unless you have discriminations made in your favor."

When I think of this situation, Mr. President, it brings to my mind the picture of the pampered child that I see on some of the streets in Washington, streets that are shadowed by the palaces of men of great wealth, a child being led down the street, a nurse with a French cap on her head, a footman walking behind leading a dog, somebody rushing at every crossing to see that the child will not be run over by an automobile, the child carried across the street to keep his feet out of the mud. I never see that happen that I do not say, "God help that boy, because he has no chance on earth to be a man." And so it goes on as he grows older—tutored by private teachers so that he may not feel the rough breath of the world against him, pampered at college, brought out into the world with a gold spoon in his mouth, and with no force of character, no power to struggle against misfortune in him if his father's millions should desert him.

And then I see the picture of the great genius of American life; I see the picture of the boy rail splitter in old Kentucky walking 4 miles through a winter day for the only book that he had from which to get an education; I see the picture of that boy, with lighted pine knots burning in a broken rock chimney, with the light from that fire the only light by which he can study at night after the day of labor. I see there a character builder; I see there a boy growing to real manhood, with no father's millions to inherit; only brains and character inherited from a strong father and a good mother. As you follow the picture of that boy into the Halls of this Congress and into the Executive chair of the Nation, and you realize that Abraham Lincoln was not forced to serve at a military camp for seven years of his life; that an opportunity for education was not driven from him; that he had the freedom of action, thought, and life that builded the great man that served and saved this Nation, then I ask you, because somebody says that our present system has failed; that the National Guard is no good as a second line of reserve; because somebody has said that we can not maintain a standing army by the voluntary system, are you going to enter upon a system of compulsory enlistment that would drive the Abraham Lincoln of to-day into a contract with his Government for seven years' service and deprive him of the opportunity of an education, of a life of freedom of thought and action that may be of more value to his country in the years to come than a hundred thousand men armed cap-a-pie on a battle front?

Is there any man in this country to-day looking at the future who would say that this country in the hour of great peril, the hour of impending disaster, would have exchanged the patience, the kindness of heart, the great force of character, the seeking after high ideals, the determination to stand for what is right and abhor what is wrong, the patriotic love of his country, that was found in Abraham Lincoln for any number of battalions of soldiers that you might place on the battle line and say the exchange would have been worth while for your country in that hour of danger?

Yet these advocates of compulsory service overlook the fact that if anybody is going to escape this compulsory service it is the boy that is growing up with the French maid carrying him across the gutters and the liveried footman following behind with his poodle dog. It is not the rail splitter of Kentucky or of Arizona or the earnest worker of our great Eastern States who is delving in the mills and factories to take care of himself that would be exempt from this service.

Mr. President, I am not one of those who believe that you make men, and make great men, by throwing unreasonable restrictions about them. The Creator of the universe did not intend it that way. Man was put in this world to fight his own battle, to build his own character, and when you take the opportunity of that freedom of action and freedom of thought away from him you are tearing down the man, instead of building him up.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 1082) to prevent the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

REGENT OF SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION.

Mr. LODGE. I ask unanimous consent to introduce a joint resolution filling a vacancy on the Board of Regents of the Smithsonian Institution, and I request its present consideration.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 187) providing for the filling of a vacancy in the Board of Regents of the Smithsonian Institution, in the class other than Members of Congress, was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the vacancy in the Board of Regents of the Smithsonian Institution, in the class other than Members of Congress, caused by the resignation of Andrew D. White, of New York, be filled by the appointment of Henry White, a citizen of Maryland.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the joint resolution was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LANDS IN OKLAHOMA.

Mr. ASHURST. I ask unanimous consent to submit a report (S. Rept. 889) from the Committee on Indian Affairs. It is the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 306) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to extend the time for payment of the deferred installments due on the purchase of tracts of the surface of the segregated coal and asphalt lands of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Tribes in Oklahoma.

I ask that it be read because I purpose asking unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the Secretary will read the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

A joint resolution (H. J. Res. 306) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to extend the time for payment of the deferred installments due on the purchase of tracts of the surface of the segregated coal and asphalt lands of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Tribes in Oklahoma.

Resolved, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to extend the time for payment of the final installment due on the purchase of tracts of the surface of the segregated coal and asphalt land area belonging to the Choctaw and Chickasaw Tribes, sold under the act of Congress approved February 19, 1912 (37 Stats. L., p. 67), to four years after the sale was made instead of two years, as provided in section 5 of the said act: Provided, That the accrued interest on all installments to date when due and the principal of the second installment, if due, shall be paid before an extension as herein provided may be granted: And provided further, That in all other respects the provisions of existing law shall apply to these purchases.

Mr. ASHURST. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I wish to get some information from the Senator regarding this joint resolution before we vote on it. What is the reason why the extension is asked and why should it be granted? We ought to have a little light.

Mr. ASHURST. I think I can make a very brief and concise statement.

In February, 1912, the Congress of the United States authorized the sale of the surface of certain segregated coal and asphalt lands belonging to the Choctaw and Chickasaw Tribes of Indians. Payments were to be made annually and all payments but the last have been made. One of the payments was extended prior to this time. It happened that by reason of that extension two payments ran together, which imposed a hardship upon some of the purchasers. This joint resolution which has passed the House extends the period of time for making such payments on the final installment from two to four years.

I wish, however, to make the observation that pending the payment the rate of interest to be paid to the tribes will be 5 per cent whereas the money that they derive from the sale of this land draws only 4 per cent, and there is in the Treasury over $5,000,000, in round numbers, to the credit of this tribe, $4,000,000 to one tribe and $1,000,000 to the other tribe. So the money is not immediately necessary.

I was requested by the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. OWEN] to make this report and to ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution.

Mr. REED. Can the Senator tell us why this large sum of money is held there and not distributed? Does the Senator know?

Mr. ASHURST. This is not money that is to be distributed. The distribution, of course, of any fund would come in the Indian appropriation bill. The bill last year provided for the distribution of all moneys that anybody thought ought to be distributed, and the appropriation bill we are now working on provides for a further distribution. It is not intended to distribute this fund at all. It draws interest, as I said, at the rate of 4 per cent, but the deferred payment draws interest at the rate of 5 per cent.

Mr. REED. Will the Senator tell us who are the purchasers who have made default or are about to make default?

Mr. ASHURST. I wish to say that no forfeiture has been declared whatever by the Secretary of the Interior. It is only the surface of the land that is sold, and in large measure for agricultural purposes. This is the last payment, and it is somewhat of a hardship, so far as I understand the situation, for the various purchasers to make the final payment now.

I see no objection to it; there was no objection in our committee to the joint resolution.

Mr. REED. Would not the deferring of this payment put off the date of final settlement with the Indians, the final turning over to them of the money?

Mr. ASHURST. I think not, Mr. President, for the reason that additional funds are coming to the credit of the tribe to be taken out from time to time, and the distribution of other funds is being made to those entitled to it. I see no harm that will come from the passage of the joint resolution, whereas some hardship might come to the purchasers who unfortunately are now unable to make the final and last payment, this being the third and final payment.

Mr. REED. Have these Indians been consulted about this proposition of deferring the time when their creditors shall pay?

Mr. ASHURST. The joint resolution passed the House within the last week. It came to our committee this morning. We had rather a large attendance before the committee, and the two Senators on the committee—with perfect respect to all other members—who, in my judgment, know the most regarding the affairs of the Oklahoma Indians—I refer to the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. OWEN] and to the Senator from Kansas [Mr. CURTIS]—both agreed that the joint resolution should be passed. There was no opposition expressed, either before the House committee of which I know or before the Senate committee, to the joint resolution. I am very sure the Indians involved would rather have the 5 per cent that will be paid to them on the deferred payment than to have the 4 per cent that the money would draw from the Treasury. They do not stand in any immediate need of the payment because, as I said, they have $5,000,000 available to them now in the Treasury.

Mr. REED. The Senator asked unanimous consent. I am curious to know——

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. SHEPPARD. It is my understanding that the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] asked that the pending business be temporarily laid aside, in order that he might present a joint resolution for the appointment of a regent of the Smithsonian Institution. Am I correct?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That joint resolution was presented and passed, and then the Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] asked unanimous consent to have the joint resolution presented by him from the committee considered.

Mr. ASHURST. If the Senator will yield to me, I will withdraw it.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It may be that the Senator will not after I state the parliamentary situation as I understand it. Before the hour of 2 o'clock arrived, before laying the unfinished business before the Senate, which has not been done yet, the Senator——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will state to the Senator from Alabama that he is in error in that respect. The Chair laid before the Senate the unfinished business at 2 o'clock.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I did not so understand. I did not hear the Secretary report it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary did report it.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Then I was mistaken.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be now resumed.

Mr. ASHURST. If I may have the floor for a moment, I do not wish in any sense to impede the progress of the unfinished business. I thought I saw an opportunity to pass the joint resolution. I think it ought to be passed; it is an important measure; but I withdraw it rather than impede the progress of the unfinished business.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. The joint resolution having been laid before the Senate by unanimous consent, and unanimous consent having been given for its present consideration, is it subject to withdrawal by anybody? Is it not before the Senate and the unfinished business of the Senate now by unanimous consent?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair would be inclined to submit such a question for the determination of the Senate.

Mr. HUGHES. I make the point of order that there is no quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Jersey suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Gallinger	Martin, Va.	Smith, Mich.
Bankhead	Gore	Martine, N. J.	Smoot
Beckham	Gronna	Nelson	Sterling
Brady	Harding	Norris	Sutherland
Brandegee	Hardwick	Overman	Swanson
Bryan	Hitchcock	Owen	Thomas
Chamberlain	Hughes	Page	Thompson
Chilton	Husting	Phelan	Townsend
Clapp	James	Pomerene	Underwood
Clark	Johnson, Me.	Reed	Vardaman
Colt	Jones	Saulsbury	Wadsworth
Culberson	Kenyon	Sheppard	Walsh
Curtis	La Follette	Sherman	Warren
Dillingham	Lane	Shields	Watson
du Pont	Lea, Tenn.	Smith, Ariz.	Williams
Fernald	McCumber	Smith, Ga.	Works
Fletcher	McLean	Smith, Md.

Mr. THOMAS. My colleague [Mr. SHAFROTH] is absent on account of illness. I will let this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. CHILTON. I wish to announce that the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] is absent on account of illness in his family.

Mr. OVERMAN. I desire to announce the absence of my colleague [Mr. SIMMONS] on account of illness.

Mr. HUSTING. I desire to announce that the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. JOHNSON] is absent on official business.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I wish to announce that the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS] is detained at home by illness.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Sixty-seven Senators have answered to their names. There is a quorum present.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, during the morning hour I attempted to secure recognition for the purpose of making a favorable report on House joint resolution 306, but I was unable to secure such recognition. Some moments ago I secured recognition for the purpose of making a report from the Committee on Indian Affairs on House joint resolution 306. I made a brief explanation as to the same, at the request of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED]. The joint resolution, as I said, is important. The Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. OWEN], who was called from the Chamber, requested me to make this report, and I very gladly did so, because I saw the importance of the Senate acting favorably upon it. To my surprise, certain opponents of a certain bill, I fear, are going to use my report as a subterfuge through which they may talk, apparently, upon the report I have made on another bill. Not wishing to put myself in a position where I am innocently and inadvertently impeding the progress of other legislation, I now withdraw the report.

Mr. REED. Mr. President——

Mr. ASHURST. I have it in my possession, and withdraw it.

Mr. REED. I make the point of order that the Senate by unanimous consent has proceeded to the consideration of the joint resolution; that that is the business before the Senate; and that no individual Senator can arrest the work of the Senate upon which it is proceeding by unanimous consent by stepping to the desk and getting the report on the bill and carrying it away in his pocket. That is a method of withdrawing business from the Senate which is unique.

Mr. ASHURST. And effective.

Mr. REED. But which I have never known to be effective, except, possibly, in some of the western courts where the Senator has practiced with great distinction.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I call for the regular order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri will state his proposition.

Mr. SHEPPARD. My point is that since the unfinished business was laid before the Senate the Senate has taken up one or two matters only by unanimous consent, and that the consideration has continued only because no objection was raised. I ask that the regular order be laid before the Senate, which is Senate bill 1082, the unfinished business.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, that is a unique position, that when a bill is laid before the Senate by unanimous consent it then only remains there as long as everybody unanimously consents to have it remain. That is the first bit of parliamentary law of that character that I have ever heard.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I ask for a ruling of the Chair.

Mr. REED. Unanimous consent was asked to take up the joint resolution for present consideration. Unanimous consent was granted. Thereupon the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the joint resolution. It was duly read to the Senate; it is before the Senate, and nothing can take it away from the Senate except a vote by the Senate. Not even the strong right arm of the Senator from Arizona can withdraw it by taking physical possession of the papers. If the Senator really meant that seriously and if he were to persist in it, he would place himself in contempt of the Senate, and I know he would not do that. He would violate every rule and law and precedent. It would then get to be a question when anybody wanted to stop the passage of a bill of rushing to the Clerk's desk and grabbing the papers and making a speedy exit; and "the race would be to the swift" and "the battle to the strong"; the fellow who could grab the most and run the fastest would be the most effective legislator and the greatest statesman.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry. Is it not a fact that a point of order was made at the time the Senator from Arizona attempted to withdraw the joint resolution and the Chair submitted that point of order to the Senate, and that that point of order is now before the Senate?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. No; the Senator from Nebraska is mistaken. The Chair simply stated that he would be inclined to submit it to the Senate. He did not submit it to the Senate.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. It was not submitted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It was not submitted.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa will state it.

Mr. KENYON. Does the RECORD show that unanimous consent was granted? My recollection is that the question was raised as to unanimous consent, but no opportunity was given to object and the discussion started off at once.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will state that unanimous consent was given and the Secretary proceeded to read the joint resolution.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, regular order.

Mr. SMOOT. I understood the regular order was that there had been a point of order raised to this effect, that unanimous consent having been given to the consideration of the bill the Senator asking unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill had no right to withdraw his request, that that rested entirely with the Senate of the United States, and it could only be obtained by the unanimous consent of the Senate or by a vote of the Senate. Am I right?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That was the point which was made when it was stated that the Senator from Arizona desired to withdraw the joint resolution. Now, the regular order is called for, whatever effect that may have on the situation.

Mr. SMOOT. Then the regular order would be the decision of the Chair as to that point of order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair, as the Senate will recognize, is somewhat young in the performance of his duties. It was the understanding of the Chair and it is the statement of the Chair that the unfinished business was laid before the Senate when the hour of 2 o'clock arrived, and that the Senate then proceeded, as is the custom in this body, by unanimous consent to consider matters that were not likely to produce a discussion. Without undertaking to refine and refine the rules and distinguish them, the Chair is of the opinion that on a call for the regular order under these circumstances the unfinished business becomes the matter before the Senate for consideration, and will so rule.

Mr. REED. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair, of course, would be very glad to submit an appeal from that decision, which will be determined by the Senate.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, just a moment. If the situation is as stated by the Chair, perhaps he is right in his decision; but I understand it differently, and the question may arise at some time when there is a great deal more involved than at present. I understood the Chair to say that we were proceeding by unanimous consent in the consideration of measures that would not lead to debate. Of course, if we had any such understanding, then the ruling of the Chair would be right; but as I understand the record to be, the unfinished business was laid before the Senate and immediately upon that being done by the Chair while the unfinished business was before the Senate the Senator from Arizona rose.

Mr. REED. Will the Senator permit me to interrupt him? Before the Senator from Arizona rose the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] rose and presented some matter to the Senate, upon which action was taken. I did not hear distinctly what it was.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It was a joint resolution for the appointment of a member of the Board of Regents of the Smithsonian Institution.

Mr. REED. That intervened, and then the Senator from Arizona rose and asked unanimous consent to present out of order a joint resolution. The joint resolution was presented. He then asked unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution. Unanimous consent was granted. That joint resolution is now before the Senate, if a measure can be put before the Senate.

Mr. SHEPPARD. The Chair has ruled differently.

Mr. SMOOT. If the Senator will now allow me to conclude my statement, as I remember, the Senator from Arizona presented a conference report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. He reported House joint resolution 306 from the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. SMOOT. Then it was a joint resolution reported from a committee of the Senate?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Yes.

Mr. SMOOT. And he asked unanimous consent for its immediate consideration?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Yes.

Mr. SMOOT. It being granted, the Senator obtaining the unanimous consent has no right to withdraw his request. The resolution can only be withdrawn by unanimous consent of the Senate or by a vote of the Senate.

I am interested in having no precedent made which might in the future arise to plague us. I should like to see the unfinished business brought before the Senate at this time; but I believe, Mr. President, considering how the request was made and the unanimous consent granted, that the only way that the joint resolution reported from the committee by the Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] can be laid aside is either by unanimous consent of the Senate or by a vote of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will say to the Senator from Utah that the Chair was about to state, on the statement made by the Senator from Missouri of the facts, it is clear to the Chair that the ruling should not have been made as the Chair made it, and that the business before the Senate is the joint resolution reported by the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration——

Mr. REED. I had the floor, and have the floor.

Mr. SHEPPARD. The Chair has recognized me.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair has recognized the Senator from Texas.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1082.

Mr. REED. Now, Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I am a little surprised to be taken off my feet in that way. I had been holding the floor. The Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] in the meantime made his point. I sought to elucidate it. The Chair made his ruling, and I was still standing here on my feet. I do not think I lost the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will state to the Senator from Missouri that he understood the Senator from Utah had the floor, and that immediately upon the conclusion of the statement by the Chair in response the Chair recognized the Senator from Texas.

Mr. REED. I know the Chair meant to be entirely fair.

Now, Mr. President, in view of the statement that was made by my good friend from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST], that he withdrew the joint resolution and that he had it in his possession, I desire to call his attention and the attention of the Senate to the very serious nature of that statement.

Mr. President, in order that there may be no misunderstanding as to the seriousness of removing papers from the desk I call attention to Rule XXX of the Senate, which is as follows:

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

1. No memorial or other paper presented to the Senate, except original treaties finally acted upon, shall be withdrawn from its files except by order of the Senate. But when an act may pass for the settlement of any private claim, the Secretary is authorized to transmit to the officer charged with the settlement the papers on file relating to the claim.

2. No memorial or other paper upon which an adverse report has been made shall be withdrawn from the files of the Senate unless copies thereof shall be left in the office of the Secretary.

It will be noticed that the language is very plain that—

No memorial or other paper presented to the Senate, except original treaties finally acted upon, shall be withdrawn from its files except by order of the Senate.

So it would appear that the new doctrine of withdrawing a joint resolution from the Senate by grabbing it from the desk and disappearing with it is in the teeth of the Senate rules.

It also appears that the methods of the Senator from Arizona are not entirely a new discovery; that they have been resorted to in the past. In hastily glancing at Jefferson's Manual in the few moments which have intervened since this unique question was raised—unique now, although not in the past—I find the following at page 93, section 16:

SECTION XVI.—ORDER RESPECTING PAPERS.

The Clerk is to let no journals, records, accounts, or papers be taken from the table or out of his custody. (2 Hats., 193, 194.)

Mr. Prynne, having at a Committee of the Whole amended a mistake in a bill without order or knowledge of the committee, was reprimanded. (1 Chand., 77.)

Now notice this:

A bill being missing, the house resolved that a protestation should be made and subscribed by the members "before Almighty God and this honorable house, that neither myself, nor any other, to my knowledge, have taken away or do at this present conceal a bill entitled," etc. (Parliamentary debates, 5 Grey, 202.)

Imagine the condition we would be in should the Arizona practice prevail. It would no longer be necessary for any Member of the Senate desiring to obstruct the public business or to defeat a bill to resort to the tedium of debate, to weary himself in intellectual or verbal effort. All that he would have to do would be to get his fingers on the bill. Of course, he might do that in several ways.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. REED. I do; certainly.

Mr. VARDAMAN. In view of the spirit manifested by the Senator from Missouri, I want to ask him if he will consent to vote on this bill next January—12 months from now?

Mr. REED. Oh, very much sooner than that. The fact that the Senator from Mississippi is impatient to vote upon the bill leads him to misconstrue the motives of those who want to proceed in order and under the rules of the Senate. There are many very splendid gentlemen in the world who allow their enthusiasm frequently to becloud their usually calm judgment. I hope that no one will be so unkind as to intimate that a just defense of the rules of the Senate is in the nature of the obstruction of public business. On the contrary, the only way to facilitate public business is to proceed in due order; it is the only way to safeguard the public rights. The man who undertakes these short-cut methods breaks down the orderly course of procedure and introduces chaos into the public business.

I was when interrupted remarking, Mr. President, that there would be several ways under this new rule to stop business. A bill might be withdrawn by force and arms. In that event the physically strongest man in the Senate would be the most effective. We would find men elected to this body because they are qualified for the contests of the prize ring or for rough-and-tumble battle. I was about to suggest that the method of withdrawing a bill might be under the Marquis of Queensberry or the London rules, but as we have gentlemen who prefer to pay no respect to the rules of the Senate, I apprehend they would be equally iconoclastic with reference to the rules of the prize ring. Accordingly, there would be no use in having adopted either the Marquis of Queensberry's illustrious regulations or those of the London prize ring. We would soon find ourselves proceeding under "packing-house rules," which, as I understand, permit everything, from the use of thumbs and teeth to the more primitive and feline method of scratching. Again, we might have other means devised for getting rid of business.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. HUGHES. I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry. Is the joint resolution, concerning which this debate is now going on, before the Senate?

Mr. REED. Yes, sir. The Chair so ruled.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The matter before the Senate is the motion of the Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD] to take up for consideration Senate bill 1082.

Mr. HUGHES. I understand that, but I mean to inquire are the papers in connection with the matter now before the Senate in possession of the Secretary and are they properly before the Senate?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Senate bill 1082 is in possession of the Secretary.

Mr. HUGHES. We are not discussing that. As I understand, unanimous consent was given for the discussion and consideration of a House joint resolution, and a unanimous-consent order was entered for the consideration of that measure. Then a motion was made to dispose of that business and put forward Senate bill 1082. Now, until the motion of the Senator from Texas prevails, if it does prevail, we are supposed to have before us the House joint resolution. The purpose of my inquiry is to learn from the Chair whether or not the papers in connection with that House joint resolution are in possession of the Secretary?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair rules that a decision on that matter or an answer to the parliamentary inquiry is not pertinent to the discussion of the motion to take up Senate bill 1082, but the Senator will be privileged to bring the matter up if the pending motion fails.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, if the Chair please, I do not see how we can properly proceed to dispose of business that is not regularly before the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will have to rule the parliamentary inquiry out of order. The Senator can take an appeal from the decision of the Chair, if he desires to do so.

Mr. HUGHES. The Chair can not very well rule a parliamentary inquiry out of order. He can refuse to give a Senator the information if he has it, or plead his own ignorance, and say the Chair does not know whether the papers are on the Secretary's desk, but I am certainly entitled to that information. I am entitled to know whether or not the Senate is in possession of those papers.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will probably be able to furnish the Senator with that information when it becomes pertinent to the discussion.

Mr. REED. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I wanted to complete my elucidation of this new method of transacting business. It might be that strength would not always prevail. Fleetness of foot and skill of hand might come into play. I imagine that a well-trained juggler might be a very valuable asset to have on either side of the Chamber, because the skill with which he could use his fingers might enable him to cause a bill to disappear by the employment of that species of legerdemain known as "Now you see it and now you don't see it."

Again, Mr. President, if a Senator can exercise this right, I do not see how any clerk having possession of the bill might not defeat its passage by putting it in his pocket and walking away with it. So, I think that if we were to adopt this singular method of withdrawing bills we would speedily reach a point where filibusters, at least, would not be necessary in the Senate. I imagine that we might have saved sitting up in the Senate for many long weary hours last summer a year ago when there was a filibuster going on against the river and harbor bill. At that time some very excellent Members of the Senate imagined that they smelled in the bill vast quantities of "pork," and that in contending against it night and day through the long, sultry hours they were doing a service to the country and saving the people much money. If the opponents of the bill had been acquainted with the Arizona rule, it would have been very much more convenient and expeditious to have simply had some one purloin the bill, and thus to withdraw it from the consideration of the Senate. We would not have had to maintain a quorum here all through the long, hot nights, but the country would have been saved, in the opinion of the gentlemen who were opposed to that particular measure. However, I do not desire to go further into detail. I think the imagination of Senators will be sufficient to paint the picture.

Now, Mr. President, I do not like to cavil with the Chair; but if it be true that a bill laid before the Senate has been, or may have been, withdrawn without the consent of the Senate, or if any Senator desires to ascertain that fact, surely the inquiry is one of the highest privilege and takes precedence of every other question. There can not, on consideration, be much dispute about that. The President pro tempore is of the opinion that, because there is a motion pending, the particular interrogatory can not be propounded; but the interrogatory could be propounded at any time, I maintain, with reference to any paper before the Senate, no matter what motion was pending; and it is especially true that it could be propounded in this instance. Why? Because, as the RECORD shows, a certain bill was laid before the Senate and is now before the Senate, and is the property of the Senate and is the business of the Senate.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

Mr. REED. One moment. A motion is made, then, to take up another bill. That involves the question as to what business is before the Senate. The business before the Senate is contained in a paper that is the property of the Senate, and the Senate has a right to know whether that paper is here or not. I now yield to the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, it is very clear to my mind—and, in fact, that has been the custom of the Senate, as I have observed it through a long period of years—that a report or bill can not be withdrawn when it is once before the Senate except by unanimous consent or upon motion.

But what I rose particularly to say to the Senator was that I think he has been pretty severe in his animadversions upon the Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST]. The Senator from Missouri speaks of "purloining a bill." Now, undoubtedly the Senator from Arizona had no intention of taking possession of the bill and keeping it in his possession, but he stepped to the desk and took it, as all of us have done on very many occasions. So, I think really that the Senator comes pretty near transgressing the rule, that dishonorable motives should not be imputed to Senators, when he says that the Senator from Arizona had any purpose in suppressing the bill in that way. I do not think he had.

Mr. REED. Mr. President——

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. REED. Yes.

Mr. ASHURST. I wish to thank my friend, the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER], for his defense of my act in stepping to the desk and getting the bill, but I think the Senator is unduly alarmed. The ferocity of my distinguished friend from Missouri is only verbal.

Mr. REED. It never is any other way.

Mr. ASHURST. His ferociousness is only a verbal ferocity. He would be incapable of carrying out here or elsewhere in any way any of the threats and insinuations that he might make against me or any other person. He dearly loves a joke on all persons except himself, and then when the joke is upon himself he is very much like a hen on a hot griddle. If I have contributed to his amusement I am very much pleased.

Mr. President, I have not said a word in regard to the liquor bill. I felt that others who were interested in the legislation——

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I hope I am not losing the floor.

Mr. ASHURST. I only desire to take a moment.

Mr. REED. I am not going to object, but I do not want to lose the floor.

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator will not lose the floor. I only want it for a moment. I expect to vote against the referendum proposal and for the bill providing that the District of Columbia shall be "dry." A great many men say the saloon was put out of business. It was not; it committed suicide in Arizona and everywhere else by adopting in politics the tactics which my distinguished friend has adopted this morning. Let us be men and have a vote on that bill. I did not intend to say a word about it, but, as I have said, the saloon committed suicide because it spewed its slime upon politics, always unfairly and never fairly, and it ill becomes the Senator from Missouri or any other Senator to interpose extremely technical objections and motions against this bill, and it ill becomes him, pretending to be a friend of mine, to insinuate that I have purloined a bill.

Mr. President, that is all I have to say. If the Senate wishes to have me return to it House joint resolution 306 it will be returned. The interests of the Indians of Oklahoma may suffer, and whisky will still dominate the Capitol.

Mr. REED. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. REED. If the Senator from Arizona before speaking had permitted me to reply to the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] I should have said that the furthest thought from my mind was any reflection upon the Senator from Arizona. I do not think that I used the term that the Senator had "purloined the bill." I stated that the Senator had said that he had withdrawn the bill and had it in his possession. Then I proceeded to discuss what might occur if the practice of withdrawing bills by taking physical possession of them were adopted; but in nothing that I said was I for a moment intending to reflect upon my friend the Senator from Arizona. He could not get me angry with him if he tried for a week, both because, as he has very pointedly said, I have nothing but verbal courage, and I know the Senator possesses every other variety of courage, and therefore, in my timidity, I would take refuge alone in words, and also because I hold him in the highest esteem, regard, and friendship, and, if the term were not too tender to employ as to the relations between men, I would say that I entertain for him a genuine affection. I know that he never stole or even purloined anything in his life and never will, but in his impetuosity and in his desire to extricate the prohibition bill from the parliamentary tangle in which it became involved, he did get the papers and announced himself that he had them; that "he had withdrawn them" and "had them in his possession," which I took to be tantamount to the assertion of a right to take the papers—not a purloining, but a taking in the broad daylight as of right. It was against that innovation I was directing my feeble and very gentle remarks. I hope that the Senator from New Hampshire will not always think that when I am discussing hypothetical cases I am referring to particular individuals.

Now, Mr. President, I am coming seriously, however, to the question propounded by the Senator from New Jersey. He asked for information from the desk as to whether a paper belonging to the Senate, and upon which the Senate was then deliberating, was in the possession of the Senate. The Chair declared that that question he would answer at the proper time, and that it was not pertinent at that time. I simply want to put in the RECORD, for whatever value it may possess, my assertion of the belief that a question of that kind is always pertinent; that it is of the highest privilege; and that it should always be promptly answered.

Mr. President, as to the remarks of the Senator from Arizona—some of them unkind, to the effect that I was pursuing the methods of the saloon by discussing his method of withdrawing papers—that is so far from the record in the case that I would not reply to it, but I know the remarks of the distinguished Senator may be torn from their context, published broadcast in this country, and I might be completely ruined; and therefore I protest that when I insist upon observing the rules of the Senate I am not pursuing the methods of saloons or any other methods but proper methods.

I hold no brief to defend saloons. There are two lines of thought in this country, held by men of equally honest purposes. One is that the way to stop the liquor evil is to pass a law absolutely prohibiting it in all parts of a country regardless of the personal views, the habits, or the methods of life of any of the people of that country. The other view, held by men who are equally devoted to the cause of temperance, is that the best way to suppress the evil is to deal with it as a local question, adopting prohibitory measures in those communities where there is a preponderance of opinion against the liquor business, and allowing a strict regulation in other communities, and to pursue this method until the people of all the various communities shall see fit to abolish the evil.

A map has been printed here. All of the United States that is shown in white, we are told is "dry." A few years ago it would have been nearly all shown in black. The white represents the "dry" territory, the black the "wet" territory. Thus, magnificent progress is shown to have been made. Now, when men entertain the view that this is a local question or a State question and that that is the best way to handle it, it is highly unfair, it is unjust, it is ungenerous, for any man to assert that one holding that kind of a view is in league with saloons. Because I do not see a question in exactly the same light as the Senator from Arizona it does not signify that he is a saint and I am a sinner, that he is a purist and I am in league with the powers of darkness. Both of us are driving to the same end, but he conceives one method to be the best and I conceive another method to be the best.

It is so with many other questions. There are those who believe in woman suffrage and, believing in it, would have a constitutional amendment adopted forcing it upon all States. There are others who believe it is a question to be settled by each State for itself. A man can entertain the latter view and be as much a friend of woman suffrage, and perhaps more, than the man who entertains the view in favor of an amendment to the national Constitution, forcing universal suffrage upon all States.

These gentlemen who thus drive on, demanding national legislation in favor of a proposition, overlook a very important consideration—that the power to enact that which they desire implies likewise the power to reverse that which they desire, and that if this country were to declare in favor of reposing in a general constitutional provision the right of women to vote, and we were to strike down the old principle that that is a question for each State to settle for itself, if discontent ever arose the Constitution might be amended to take away the right of suffrage from the women of the States, even though some States desired to grant it. The evil consists in destroying the right of the people in each State to deal with the question of suffrage for themselves.

In the particular bill that is before the Congress, it is proposed on the one hand to submit the question of prohibition to the people of the District. If that were done, if that precedent were established, it would furnish a very strong argument, if there should be a "wet" Congress elected here three or four years from now—which might readily occur—for the advocates of prohibition to say: "This law should be again submitted to the people of the District, and Congress ought not to exercise an arbitrary power." It might be a very strong bulwark in favor of the maintenance of prohibition in this District. It might be the means of preserving it. In the enactment of these various measures of reform, driving ahead to do something because we desire to do it in a speedy manner, we very frequently make the mistake of forgetting that the power we are employing and the means we are invoking may be employed and invoked by those who are upon the other side of the question.

Let me illustrate. There was a great demand in this country for the referendum. It was said that legislators were too much under the domination of certain sinister influences, particularly capitalistic influences; that railroads had too great a control with members of the legislatures of various States, and therefore that a right should be given to the people of a State to compel a reference of any law to them for their direct vote. Those who were the advocates of that measure were acting in good faith. They proceeded, and would heed no warning or suggestion. Every man who had a word to say against the referendum, or who called attention to the fact that it might become an evil, was at once denounced as a friend of corporations and as an enemy of the rule of the people.

So these laws were engraven upon the statute books of many States, including the State of Missouri. But, now, how has it worked? I am not familiar with other States, but I say to the Members of the Senate that since the enactment of that law we have not been able to crystallize into law in the State of Missouri a single great measure for the control of the corporations of that State. The same agitation that brought about the initiative and referendum, the same cry for relief, brought us general assemblies ready to enact the remedial legislation we desired. They did enact it, and immediately the corporations that were to be affected circulated referendum petitions. The moment those petitions were filed in accordance with law the law was suspended until the next general election, when a referendum vote would be taken by the people.

It has transpired in every one of these elections that a great number of propositions have been submitted to the people, so multitudinous, so intricate, that the voters have not understood what they were intended to accomplish, and accordingly, preferring the ills they suffered to those they knew not of, they have voted "no" on every proposition. I think until the last general election not a single measure has carried by a referendum vote. At the last general election I believe, although I am not certain—for the vote had not been fully returned the last time I heard from my State—there was a proposition passed to pension blind people.

I cite our experience merely that the Senate may understand that it is not always those who drive on regardless of principles or precedents who make the most speed. I utterly repudiate the statement that I stand here as the advocate of the saloon, or that I am in league with saloons. I imagine that I am as temperate in my habits and as much a friend of temperance legislation as the distinguished Senator from Arizona or any other man on this floor; but there can be an intemperance in legislation, and men can proceed so far as to destroy the very purposes they have in view.

Consider the case of forcing a law upon a people if nine-tenths of the people are against that law. Such a law under such conditions has never been enforced in the history of this country; and if not enforced, then the law comes into disrepute, and the evils which result from the dominance of an element that disregards the law far exceed the evil it was sought to remedy.

This has been tried. Bootleggers, blind tigers, murders, crimes, feasting places of villainy—all these things have followed in the wake of intemperate action, whereas proceeding along the line of submitting these questions to local people has resulted almost without exception in a sound enforcement of the law, in the building up of the moral tone of the people, in the eradication of the evil, and in the promotion of temperance. So that those who do not see these questions through the identical lenses of others may be, after all, the soundest and best friends of temperance and sobriety.

I regret that my friend from Arizona, with whom I was endeavoring to have a little pleasant passage at arms, saw fit to allow himself to make some derogatory remarks about my motives and purposes. Now, what are the facts?

The District bill was the unfinished business. It was laid before the Senate as the unfinished business. Everybody knows that when another legislative matter is laid before the Senate it becomes the unfinished business. The author of the District bill consent that another legislative matter should be introduced, or at least that another matter requiring the action of the Senate should be introduced by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE]. That, of course, had the effect of laying aside the regular order, of laying aside the District bill. Thereafter the author of the District bill allowed the Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] to ask and gain unanimous consent to take up another bill. He, of course, knew that that indefinitely laid aside his bill. He consented to it. He gave his own consent. Thereupon I asked the Senator from Arizona some questions in the best of faith—questions that I would have asked and which ought to have been asked under any circumstances, because the Senate ought not to pass a bill affecting millions of dollars without some information; and it was during that time that the interesting fact developed that the Senator from Arizona said that he had withdrawn the bill, and that he had it in his possession. That led me to make some remarks upon the effect of that practice.

Now, Mr. President, I have said all I care to say on this question. I am glad the papers were returned, and I hope that the Arizona method will not be hereafter regarded as a precedent to be followed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARDWICK in the chair). The question is on the motion of the Senator from Texas.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. What is the pending motion?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion of the Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD] to proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1082.

URGENT DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, when I was interrupted by an effort to take up a bill by unanimous consent I was discussing some of the features of H. R. 19178, a bill making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, and for other purposes, carrying urgent deficiency appropriations for the Army. I was discussing the effect of compulsory military service on the opportunities of the young men of the country. I had given in some detail my views in reference to the effect of depriving these young men of the opportunity to get a college education and taking them away from their opportunities in life at the very age when business character was developing alongside of business opportunity. But it has another effect on the development of the character of men. It is not only depriving them of education, but the difference in the environment in which they must live must have a very serious effect on the character of the growing generation.

I am not now referring to the moral character of these men, but I am referring to the mental character, to the line of development for life work. Of course, I know that there are those who contend that by driving the youth of this country into military service we may improve conditions of labor and conditions of life in this country. The first question, though, is as to whether we are going to improve the conditions of citizenship, because the first place a man must occupy for the good of the country is the place of a good citizen; and the question to be considered is as to whether pouring men into a military mold, to turn them out by military law and military procedure, makes a higher class of citizenship, makes men with higher ideals of life, both moral and mental, than by giving them an opportunity of free development along the lines that they believe they are best fitted for, and in the bent to which their nature drives them.

My own judgment is that if we are to change the whole life of the Nation—a life we have lived for 136 years—and mold ourselves into a military nation, with all the limitations that must come from the change of form, it will not be beneficial toward the upbuilding of a great citizenship.

Except in actual time of war, we have never had anything in this country that approached compulsory military training. The youth of this land have grown up with home surroundings to guide their path in life with the opportunity when manhood was reached to branch out without limitations upon them except those that their mental capacity and ability to endeavor might place upon them. What is the result? As I said awhile ago, we have seen a man start out as a rail splitter in life and become one of the two greatest Presidents of the United States. We have seen a boy come from a cobbler's bench to be the Chief Executive of our Nation. We have seen boys who started out in life in the great iron mills of this country with nothing but their hands and their brains and their character to build upon, and we have not only seen them come to the head of an industry in which they served and we have seen them develop a great industry from a point where it was hardly to be counted in the competition of the world's traffic to a point where to-day they have developed it to be the master industry of the whole world. We have seen the office boy in a bank become the great financier of the Nation. We have seen the newsboy on the street reach the exalted position where in the forum of the church he became the master advocate of all that stood for good morals and good life, a leader among the men of the Nation.

Opportunity, Mr. President, under our system of freedom for 136 years has been given to the youth of our land, and now it is proposed, not for anything that is happening on our shores, not for anything that confronts us at our gates, not for any cause of quarrel that we have indulged in, to change the whole system of the Nation, to mold men in a military mold, and take away from them that freedom of action that has been the building of our men for a century and a quarter past.

Look to the shores of Europe. Look to the countries beyond the seas that have developed under a compulsory military system. It is true they have had great statesmen, great rulers, great scientists, great advocates; but as a rule they have not come from the people; they have been the birth of an aristocracy. In those countries in Europe that have maintained a compulsory military system, such as Germany and France and Austria, have you found a peasant boy who has become a Lincoln? Have you found the man in the foundry who delves with his hand becoming the captain of great industrial enterprises? Have you found the opportunity for the boy of poverty and want through his character and his brains and ability to build himself up until he becomes the head of a nation? No.

The human race has never developed in confinement. You might as well tell me that you can take a highwayman and improve his character by putting chains about his legs and locking him in a dungeon where he can not commit crime and say that in doing so you have developed his character, his integrity, and his morals, because you have chained him away from crime, as to say that you can make men of high and moral character by putting them in a strait-jacket or confining them in the ranks of a regiment. Men's characters are building; they grow; and no man can grow in confinement any more than a plant can grow in the darkness. For a man to develop physically he must have the opportunity for physical exercise. For a man to develop mentally you must give him the opportunity for mental exercise. For a man to develop morally he must have the opportunity to resist temptation and rise above it. You may keep his hand out of his neighbor's pocket by force, but you do not keep his heart from being the heart of a thief by force.

It is in this field of free opportunity, free effort, free development, a great Nation and a great people have been builded, and you will never be able to accomplish it by driving the youth of the land into military camps in time of peace.

I am not complaining against military training. In fact, I think a certain amount of military training is a good thing. It is a wise thing to do; but unless the life of the Nation demands it, I say it is an unwise thing to make military training compulsory. You build a machine to mold the character of these young men in the hour when their character is building and forming for life. I have had many letters on this subject. One I bear in mind. Last summer when it looked like this country was going to become involved in war on our southern border the President of the United States summoned troops to the colors.

The recruiting sergeants were filling the vacant places in the ranks. One boy of 18 in my State enlisted at his country town without the knowledge or consent of his parents. He was carried to the mobilization camp. Congress changed the law after he had been taken there, fixing the age at which a boy could legally enlist, without his parents' consent, at 18 instead of 21. This boy was then locked within the grip of the military service of this country. Then I received a letter from his mother appealing to me to get him out, saying the boy was not one of those strong young oaks that grow on the mountain tops; that he was a good boy, but that he was a weak boy; that he needed a mother's fostering care and the protection of a mother's loving arms; that she did not want her boy carried to a camp at the age of 18 and thrown in contact with older men whose characters in life were formed and whom she did not know. She did not want them to form the character and the life of that boy. She wanted to do it herself until he became older. I tried to secure the discharge, but he had made his contract and the law had said his contract was legal. The Government said we need men on the line, and he is there to-day. For good or for worse, somebody else is building that boy's life and character and not the mother with home surroundings.

That is the history of only one boy; but if you go to the compulsory military service of this Nation it means the same for all boys. It means for your boy and for my boy. I do not for a minute say that it should not mean your boy and my boy if his country needed him; we should be ready to give our boys to protect the life of the Nation if it is necessary; but in an hour of profound peace, a time when there is no nation threatening us, with a strong probability that no foreign foe will ever put his foot on American soil in five generations yet to come, shall we give up the present life of our Nation, the present opportunities of youth to adopt the methods of nations that for hundreds of years have been confronting each other with fixed bayonets? I do not believe it is the way to build youth into manhood. I know it is not the way to build a free nation.

But I have digressed from the real point I rose to discuss, and that is the National Guard and the reflections that have been made upon it by some high in authority. You should bear in mind, Mr. President, that this National Guard throughout the United States was made up not of professional soldiers, not of men who had given their lives to war and the preparations for war, but it was made up of the young men of this land who were engaged in civil pursuits, who had homes and wives and families dependent upon them, who had enlisted in the National Guard of their several States, for what purpose? For the purpose of going beyond its border, of invading foreign countries? No. But for the purpose of protecting the peace and the property and the honor of their own States. Bear in mind that these men when called to the colors to serve their country had made no contract to serve the Government of the United States. When they made their original contract, enlistment service under the command of the President of the United States was not contemplated and it was not in the contract. It is true that we had a law on the statute books that authorized the units of the National Guard to volunteer for service in the Federal Establishment if they desired to do so, but there was no compulsion.

Then trouble arose on the Rio Grande. The black cloud of war seemed to loom on the horizon, and the President of the United States very properly, in order to protect the lives of American citizens, called the National Guard to the colors, and the Congress passed a law providing for the enlistment of the National Guard in the Federal constabulary, and providing that under their term of enlistment these men should take an oath to serve for seven years, three years with the colors and three years in the reserves.

Mark you, Mr. President, that when these units of the National Guard responded there was no obligation on their part to take the Federal oath except the obligation to serve their country well, the obligation of a patriot. Up to that time they had made no contract with the Government of the United States. Those in authority controlling our Army had not trained them, had not developed them, had only partially equipped them, and yet, Mr. President, almost to a man these men in the National Guard responded and took the Federal oath, signed the contract to serve their country, and were ready and prepared to go to the border and do their duty on the firing line.

That was in July. Congress only a few months before had passed laws making the National Guard the second line of defense in this country, providing for its organization and equipment. As I said up to the time when they were called out they had not taken the oath, they had not been organized; they had not been trained; they had not been given equipment for national service, and most of the men in the column had not gone into the service contemplating foreign service that would take them away from their homes.

Now, Mr. President, what I say is that it is no fault of these men that they were not trained. They have had no opportunity for training. In fact, if the Regular Army of the United States had been called to service and recruited with only the opportunity for training that has been given to these men in the National Guard they would have made a more complete failure than anything that has been charged against the State troops.

In my judgment, there is another reason that might interfere with the efficiency of the guard to-day, that would not to-morrow. Many of the men who responded because they thought it was a war summons would not have responded under other circumstances. They have left remunerative employment; they have left high salaries; they have left people at home to support; and although they are willing to give their lives and their services in time of war they feel that in time of peace the ones near and dear at home are entitled to their service first. Naturally they want to leave the service.

In the future every man who enlists in the National Guard will know as a part of his contract that he may be summoned for military service, and the man at home who has a family dependent on him will not enlist. It will only be confined to those younger men who have an opportunity to go without undue sacrifice. As a matter of fact, in my view, they are not being dealt with in a manner that will upbuild the service even after they have been trained and mustered out.

I note that the companies that are being sent home, Artillery companies for instance, probably having 140 horses or in that neighborhood. They are mustered out and sent back to their home camps. All their horses are taken away from them except probably 30. Then if they are again summoned to the colors how do you expect efficiency when they have to get 100 horses and train them before they can go to the front? Do those in command of the Regular Army expect to have a trained and organized efficient National Guard as the second line of reserves when they pursue a policy of taking the weapons of warfare out of their hands for training when they return to their homes and are not at the front?

What I want to say, Mr. President, in reference to this bill—and I want to complete it this evening if the Senate will bear with me for just a moment—is that we have a bill here to pay $4,000,000 to take care of the destitute at home of the soldiers who have gone to the front. Is there a man here who does not think they are entitled to it? They did not enlist with any idea of going to the front when they joined the National Guard. They are not professional soldiers. They only joined a citizen soldiery contemplating only home service; but you have ordered them to the front; you have taken the bread-winner out of the house, and in many cases the bread out of the mouths of his children. Then shall we be niggardly in the amount that we will pay these men and their families at home whilst they are serving their country on the border under these circumstances?

So far as I am concerned, I think they deserve every dollar of this money; so far as I am concerned, I am in favor of giving to the families of these men who were sent to the border under these circumstances the last dollar that the War Department says is needed to take care of them.

Mr. STONE. Would it interfere with the Senator from Alabama if we could have an executive session?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARDWICK in the chair). Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I shall be glad to do so, but I was just about concluding, and I think possibly we may reach some agreement about the pending business before we go into executive session.

PROHIBITION IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I should like the unfinished business laid before the Senate, and then I desire to submit a request for unanimous consent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the Senator from Alabama has yielded the floor, the question is on the motion of the Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD] to proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1082. Does the Senator from Alabama yield the floor?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield for that purpose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Then the Senator from Texas is recognized.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I ask for a vote on my motion, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Will the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1082?

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 1082) to prevent the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I now desire to submit a request for unanimous consent that a day be fixed for a final vote on the pending measure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will state the request for unanimous consent proposed by the Senator from Texas.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Should not the roll of the Senate first be called?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will first state the request for unanimous consent.

The SECRETARY. The Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD] submits the following request for a unanimous-consent agreement:

It is agreed by unanimous consent that at not later than 1 o'clock p. m. on Friday, January 5, 1917, the Senate will proceed to the consideration of S. 1082, a bill to prevent the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, and during that calendar day will vote upon any amendment that may be pending, any amendment that may be offered, and upon the bill through the regular parliamentary stages to its final disposition; and that after the hour of 2 o'clock p. m. on said day, January 5, 1917, no Senator shall speak more than once or longer than five minutes upon the bill or more than once or longer than three minutes upon any amendment offered thereto.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. As I understand, under the agreement as it stands the bill really could be taken up and voted on to-morrow; but I take it the understanding is that it shall go over as the unfinished business until after the Christmas holidays.

Mr. SHEPPARD. That is the understanding.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That is satisfactory to me. Will the 5th of January be the first day after the holiday recess or the second day after that recess?

Mr. SHEPPARD. It will be the third day after that recess.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Very well. I do not want the vote to come on the first day after the recess; that is all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will now call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Gore	McCumber	Smoot
Bankhead	Gronna	Martin, Va.	Sterling
Beckham	Harding	Martine, N. J.	Stone
Borah	Hardwick	Newlands	Sutherland
Brandegee	Hitchcock	Norris	Swanson
Catron	Hollis	Overman	Thomas
Chamberlain	Hughes	Page	Thompson
Chilton	James	Pittman	Townsend
Clapp	Johnson, Me.	Poindexter	Underwood
Clark	Johnson, S. Dak.	Pomerene	Vardaman
Colt	Jones	Reed	Wadsworth
Culberson	Kenyon	Sheppard	Watson
Curtis	Kern	Sherman	Williams
Fernald	Lea, Tenn.	Shields	Works
Fletcher	Lee, Md.	Smith, Ariz.
Gallinger	Lodge	Smith, Md.

Mr. CLARK. I desire to announce the unavoidable absence from the Chamber of my colleague [Mr. WARREN].

Mr. CHILTON. I wish to announce that the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] is absent on account of sickness in his family.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Sixty-two Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The question is, Will the Senate agree to the unanimous-consent order proposed by the Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD]?

Mr. GALLINGER. Let it be again stated, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will again state the unanimous-consent agreement proposed by the Senator from Texas.

The SECRETARY. The Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD] proposes the following unanimous-consent agreement:

It is agreed by unanimous consent that at not later than 1 o'clock p. m. on Friday, January 5, 1917, the Senate will proceed to the consideration of S. 1082, a bill to prevent the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, and during that calendar day will vote upon any amendment that may be pending, any amendment that may be offered, and upon the bill through the regular parliamentary stages to its final disposition; and that after the hour of 2 o'clock p. m. on said day, January 5, 1917, no Senator shall speak more than once or longer than five minutes upon the bill or more than once or longer than three minutes upon any amendment offered thereto.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Texas if he will not change his proposal so that it will read on "the 5th day of January," instead of "not later than 1 o'clock on Friday, January 5."

Mr. SHEPPARD. I accept that suggestion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That modification will be made by the Secretary, if there be no objection.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, very reluctantly I shall have to object to the proposition as now made, although I am quite willing to agree to any other date for a vote. On the 5th and 6th of January, however, I shall be obliged to be out of the city on important public matters. I am extremely anxious to be here when a vote is taken. I should have no objection to having a vote on the 4th of January or any other date except the 5th or the 6th.

Mr. JAMES. Make it the 8th of January.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, if it will relieve the situation, I will agree to make a special pair with the Senator from Utah, and make the pair nontransferable.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I prefer not to do that. The Senator from Missouri and I will vote the same way on one aspect of the proposition, and perhaps against one another on another aspect of it. I intend to vote for the referendum, as I have already voted for it, and then, whether the referendum carries or not, I intend to vote in favor of the bill itself on the final vote.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. As I understand, the Senator from Utah states that the 5th of January is not a satisfactory date to him?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Neither the 5th nor the 6th would be so. The 4th or the 8th, or any other date would be satisfactory to me.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I will accept the suggestion, and make the date the 4th of January.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to that modification?

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I object to making it the 4th of January.

Mr. CATRON. I also object to making the date the 4th of January. I shall be compelled to be absent on that day.

Mr. CURTIS. I suggest to the Senator from Texas that he make it Saturday, the 8th of January.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I suggest that in proper form the date be changed to January 8.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request as modified?

Mr. POMERENE. Yes; Mr. President, that is one day I feel that I want to be away, as it is the inauguration day of our governor in Ohio.

Mr. JAMES and Mr. SHEPPARD. Make it the 10th.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In what form, if any, does the Senator from Texas finally present the request?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am willing to agree to any date along there, if the Senator from Texas can get an agreement. Fixing the day seems to be the only trouble. I am willing to agree to the 4th of January.

Mr. JAMES. That has been objected to.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Well, I will withdraw my objection.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I again suggest that the vote be taken on the 4th of January, Mr. President.

Mr. CATRON. I object to the vote being taken on the 4th.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Then, I suggest that the vote be taken on the 9th, if that is not Sunday.

Mr. SMOOT. The 9th is Tuesday.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Then, I suggest that we change the agreement so that the vote may be taken on the 9th of January.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request for the unanimous-consent agreement as modified, providing that the vote shall be taken on January 9, 1917? The Chair hears none, the unanimous-consent agreement is made, and the order will be entered.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to place in the RECORD two resolutions, one by the Washington Board of Trade and one by the Chamber of Commerce of Washington on this subject.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolutions referred to are as follows:

WASHINGTON BOARD OF TRADE,
Washington, D. C., December 19, 1916.

Hon. OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. UNDERWOOD: It is a great pleasure to note the interest you are taking in the District of Columbia referendum amendment to the Sheppard bill which proposes prohibition for the District. The Washington Board of Trade has gone on record in favor of this referendum without aligning itself either for or against prohibition.

As chairman of a special committee appointed by the president of the board, I forward you a copy of the resolution as passed by the Board of Trade, and for your convenience I am inclosing herewith a duplicate copy, again calling to your attention the fact that our organization passed this resolution at a very largely attended meeting and after full discussion.

The membership of the Board of Trade is approximately 1,500, composed of the leading business and professional men of the District, and we feel that the people of Washington should have a voice by means of a referendum on this subject. It is also thought by many that we should have this privilege on subjects that are vital to the welfare of the District.

I thank you very much for your interest in this matter and beg to remain,

Very respectfully,

C. J. GOCKELER,
Chairman Special Committee.

Whereas the effectiveness and value of a law prohibiting the liquor traffic are measured by the strength of the local public sentiment back of such law to compel its enforcement; and

Whereas it is not the purpose of the Washington Board of Trade by this resolution to put itself upon record as either favoring or opposing the adoption of such a law: Now, therefore, in view of the principle involved and the importance of this question to the community at large, be it

Resolved by the Washington Board of Trade, That Congress be requested to authorize a referendum vote of the residents of the District of Columbia to determine whether the community favors absolute prohibition of the liquor traffic or its stringent regulation under a high-license system with small zones of sectional prohibition, in development of the system provided by existing law.

(The above resolution was adopted by the Washington Board of Trade at its meeting on Jan. 26, 1916.)

WASHINGTON CHAMBER OF COMMERCE,
1202 F Street NW., December 20, 1916.

Be it resolved by the Chamber of Commerce, That it favors a referendum on the question of prohibition before any prohibition act is passed by Congress for the District of Columbia.

The above motion was carried almost unanimously at a regular meeting of the chamber, February 8, 1916.

True copy.

THOMAS GRANT, Secretary.

URGENT DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of the urgent deficiency appropriation bill that was laid aside this morning.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia asks unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the measure indicated by him. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 19178) making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, and for other purposes.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill is in the Senate and open to amendment.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment, to come in at the close of the appropriation for the payment of money to the families of dependent soldiers. I move to add the following words:

Provided, That the Secretary of War shall issue or cause to be issued forthwith honorable discharges to such enlisted men in the National Guard, other than commissioned officers, who have dependent families; or, in the discretion of the Secretary of War, he may issue furloughs during the present mobilization, and such payments shall be discontinued during the period of such furloughs.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Mr. President, I make the point of order against this amendment that it is plain legislation, and nothing else.

Mr. GORE. The amendment is undoubtedly subject to the point of order. I had merely desired to submit a few statistics to illuminate this subject.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is compelled to sustain the point of order.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

VOLUNTEER OFFICERS' RETIRED LIST.

Mr. TOWNSEND, Mr. THOMAS, and Mr. JONES addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 392.

Mr. LANE. Will the Senator yield to me for a moment?

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President——

Mr. STONE. I move that——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Colorado.

Mr. THOMAS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the conference report on House bill 407.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion of the Senator from Colorado is privileged.

Mr. GALLINGER. Oh, no, Mr. President.

Mr. SMOOT. It is not a privileged motion.

Mr. GALLINGER. A conference report is privileged so far as its presentation is concerned, but not as to its consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair was in error in regard to the matter. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. TOWNSEND] that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 392.

Mr. THOMAS. Well, Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the conference report on House bill 407.

Mr. GALLINGER. That is not in order. The motion of the Senator from Michigan is not amendable under our rules.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is of the opinion that the motion to take up the conference report is not privileged, and that the motion of the Senator from Michigan must first be disposed of, it not being amendable.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I understand there is a desire to adjourn. I suggest that we have an executive session.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let us first have a vote on the motion of the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I ask that my motion be put.

Mr. STONE. To take the sense of the Senate, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. GALLINGER. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. STONE. I withdraw the motion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Michigan that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill named by him.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 392) to create in the War Department and the Navy Department, respectively, a roll designated as the "Civil War Volunteer officers' retired list," to authorize placing thereon with retired pay certain surviving officers who served in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of the United States in the Civil War, and for other purposes.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. STONE. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. JONES. I suggest that Senate bill 392 be laid before the Senate.

Mr. TOWNSEND. That bill has been laid before the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill has been laid before the Senate. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Missouri that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business. [Putting the question.] The Chair is in doubt and will again put the question. [Putting the question.] The ayes seem to have it.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I ask for a division.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Senators in favor of proceeding to the consideration of executive business will rise and stand until they are counted.

Mr. STONE. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. OLIVER]. In his absence I withhold my vote.

Mr. CHILTON (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. FALL] to the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. HUSTING] and vote "yea."

Mr. CLAPP (when his name was called). In the absence of the senior Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SIMMONS], with whom I have a general pair, I withhold my vote.

Mr. GALLINGER (when his name was called). I announce my general pair with the senior Senator from New York [Mr. O'GORMAN], who is absent, and will withhold my vote.

Mr. OVERMAN (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] and vote "yea."

Mr. STERLING (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. WALSH (when his name was called). Transferring my pair with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. LIPPITT] to the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. BROUSSARD], I vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. JAMES. I transfer the general pair I have with the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WEEKS] to the senior Senator from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON] and vote "yea."

Mr. STERLING. I transfer my pair with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] to the Senator from Michigan [Mr. SMITH] and vote "nay."

Mr. CURTIS. I desire to announce the following pairs:

The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. GOFF] with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN];

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. DILLINGHAM] with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. SMITH]; and

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MCLEAN] with the Senator from Montana [Mr. MYERS].

Mr. LODGE (after having voted in the negative). I inquire if the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. SMITH] has voted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is informed that he has not.

Mr. LODGE. I have a general pair with that Senator, and therefore withdraw my vote.

The result was announced—yeas, 37, nays 26, as follows:

YEAS—37.

Ashurst	Hughes	Overman	Swanson

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WEDNESDAY, December 20, 1916.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Thou, who art the inspiration of our fondest hopes, our highest ideals, and our noblest endeavors, we draw near to Thee that we may be cleansed by the touch, and fitted for the new duties of the new day; that whatsoever our hands find to do we may do with our might, leaving the results to Thee, who doeth all things well; for Thine is the kingdom and the power and the glory forever. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Speaker, on yesterday I was to have paired with my colleague Mr. LOFT, who is sick, on the increase of pay allowance to secretaries. I came to the conclusion that I should vote for the increase, which was the same way that he would have voted. Therefore I left my colleague unpaired. I make this explanation in justice to Mr. LOFT, who, if he had been here, would have voted as I did, for the increase.

URGENT DEFICIENCIES.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the urgent deficiency bill, H. R. 19178.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 19178) making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, and for other purposes, with Mr. STEPHENS of Texas in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the first reading of the bill.

Mr. MANN. It is a short bill. I should like to have it read.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I withdraw the request.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the following sums are appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to supply urgent deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, and for other purposes, namely:

MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT.

QUARTERMASTER CORPS.

For the support of dependent families of enlisted men, including the same objects and under the same limitations specified in the appropriation for this purpose in the Army appropriation act for the fiscal year 1917 as amended by section 901 of the act entitled "An act to increase the revenue, and for other purposes," approved September 8, 1916, $4,250,000.

MINTS AND ASSAY OFFICES.

Denver, Colo., Mint: For wages of workmen and other employees, $12,000.

For incidental and contingent expenses, including new machinery and repairs, wastage in melting and refining department and coining department, and loss on sale of sweeps arising from the treatment of bullion and the manufacture of coin, $25,000.

Philadelphia Mint: For wages of workmen and other employees, $110,000.

For incidental and contingent expenses, including new machinery and repairs, cases and enameling for medals manufactured, expenses of the annual assay commission, wastage in melting and refining and in coining departments, and loss on sale of sweeps arising from the treatment of bullion and the manufacture of coins, and not exceeding $1,000 in value of specimen coins and ores for the cabinet of the mint, $100,000.

San Francisco, Cal., Mint: For wages of workmen, and other employees, $18,000.

For incidental and contingent expenses, including new machinery and repairs, wastage in the melting and refining department and in the coining department, and loss on sale of sweeps arising from the treatment of bullion and the manufacture of coin, $7,500.

New York Assay Office: For wages of workmen and other employees, $25,000.

For incidental and contingent expenses, including new machinery and repairs, wastage in the melting and refining department, and loss on sale of sweeps arising from the treatment of bullion, $20,000.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

SUPREME COURT.

Miscellaneous expenses: For such additional miscellaneous expenses as may be authorized by the Attorney General for the supreme court and its officers, made necessary by the occupancy of temporary quarters pending the reconstruction of the courthouse, Washington, D. C., including an electrician at the rate of $900 per annum and a laborer at the rate of $600 per annum, $3,750, one-half to be paid out of the Treasury of the United States and one-half out of the revenues of the District of Columbia.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

For an additional amount for the removal and readjustment of all office furniture and fittings in connection with the occupancy of temporary quarters by the officials and employees of the courthouse, Washington, D. C., including personal and other services, and for every item connected therewith, $2,000.

For rent of temporary quarters for the office of the recorder of deeds pending the reconstruction of the courthouse, Washington, D. C., $5,000, to be available during the fiscal year 1918.

The two foregoing appropriations shall be expended under the direction of the Superintendent of the Capitol Building and Grounds and payable one-half out of the Treasury of the United States and one-half out of the revenues of the District of Columbia.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, this bill carries $4,578,250 to supply urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the support of the Government.

The chief item in the bill is the sum of $4,250,000, to continue making payments to dependent families of enlisted men in the Regular Army and National Guard who are now stationed on the border. That is the amount it is estimated will be required to meet the payments until the 1st of April. The committee included sufficient money to make the payments until April 1 in the expectation of making in the general deficiency bill such other provision as may be required beyond that time. I may add that of the $2,000,000 appropriated in the last session there was remaining a day or two ago a little over $300,000, and payments are being made at the rate of $70,000 a day.

The other items in the bill are almost entirely for the mints and the New York assay office. The mints have been called upon for an extraordinary supply of subsidiary and minor coins, so that the Philadelphia Mint has been working 24 hours a day and the Denver and San Francisco Mints 16 hours a day for almost three months. Despite such overtime it has not been possible to meet the demands of the banks for all of the subsidiary and minor coins for which requisition has been made. The sum carried in the bill for the mints and the New York assay office is the amount required to continue them in operation until the end of the fiscal year upon the present basis of output.

In addition there is an appropriation of $10,700 in connection with the reconstruction of the Supreme Court building in the District of Columbia. The supreme court of the District of Columbia has been moved into the old Census building. This change necessitates an electrician and an additional laborer, and an additional sum of money on account of the increased expense for fuel and light, and some miscellaneous items.

The recorder of deeds of the District of Columbia is at present located in the supreme court building. The work of reconstructing that building can not begin until his office is moved out of the courthouse. Under an old statute, enacted in the sixties, the Chief of Engineers is required to furnish accommodations for the recorder of deeds. When called upon recently by the recorder of deeds he had no means of furnishing the accommodations needed. It is estimated that suitable fireproof accommodations for the records of title in the District of Columbia and to enable the recorder of deeds to transact the business of his office during the time of reconstruction, can be rented for a trifle less than $5,000 a year, and $5,000 is included for that purpose.

Mr. EMERSON. If the gentleman will yield, I notice under "Military Establishment" the sum of $4,250,000 is appropriated. On whose recommendation is that asked for?

Mr. FITZGERALD. On an estimate submitted by the War Department.

Mr. EMERSON. Did the committee get any information as to how long the National Guard is to be held on the border?

Mr. FITZGERALD. We have no information on that matter. At present there are about 100,000 National Guardsmen there, and the estimate that $8,500,000 will be required to meet the payments until the 30th of June is based upon an estimate of 75,000 members of the guard being kept on the border.

Mr. EMERSON. I said during the campaign that I thought perhaps they would be sent home after election, and I can not see any reason for keeping them there.

Mr. FITZGERALD. This shows that some gentlemen who charged that the National Guard were sent down to the border for purely political purposes were unjustified in their statements.

Mr. EMERSON. What have the National Guard been used for on the border? Of what use have they been there? Millions of dollars were spent to send them there. What have they done for the country?

Mr. FITZGERALD. They have been of immense value. The information that comes to me in an informal, unofficial, vague, hazy manner is still of a reliable character; I believe it to be substantially correct. It is to the effect that if the Guard had not been sent to the border in all probability there would have been a great many outrages perpetrated upon American citizens living in the United States. Had that occurred, my good friend [Mr. EMERSON] and many others, perhaps on this side as well as on that side of the House, would have criticized the administration very severely for not having taken measures to prevent such a situation. It is neither customary, nor is it desirable, nor is it always possible to take everyone into the confidence of those administering the affairs of the Government, as to the peculiar reasons that necessitate the mobilizing of troops under certain conditions.

Mr. EMERSON. What I was specially interested in——

Mr. FITZGERALD. Perhaps the feature of our system of government that under some conditions make it most ineffective is the fact that too much publicity accompanies every important action of the Government. I assume, and always have assumed, and I believe that it is what everyone else assumes who thinks seriously, that some controlling motive induced the President to issue the order which resulted in the members of the National Guard being sent to the border and which has resulted in their being retained there. I believe that we should not say or do anything that would tend to make the men who are there dissatisfied, but should do what we can to convince them that important military reasons must have existed or no one in authority would have been willing to have had these men subjected to the inconvenience and hardships that they have been compelled to undergo.

Mr. EMERSON. If I understand it correctly, the object of sending the Regular Army to Mexico was to capture Villa. Am I right in that?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Is the gentleman asking me?

Mr. EMERSON. I hear that Villa has asked to meet some representative from the United States in conference.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I do not deny what the gentleman's understanding is, but if he asks me to confirm his understanding as a fact, I prefer not to participate in such a dark situation.

Mr. EMERSON. I understand that Gen. Funston has advised that the National Guard should be sent home—I think they should have been sent home for Christmas—and the Regular Army be used to patrol the border.

Mr. FITZGERALD. The information is that more men are required for that work than are available in the Regular Army. It would be rather a peculiar military movement to send the troops home for Christmas and then send them back again after Christmas. The Army can not take a holiday for Christmas the same as Congress can, however desirable it might be.

Mr. EMERSON. There is some use for Congress, but no use for the National Guard on the border. If I understand correctly, the President was largely reelected because he kept us out of war.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Now, that the election is over, every citizen of the United States has the absolute right to solace himself with whatever reasons he wishes to ascribe as the cause of the election. That is one advantage we all enjoy. Whether we like the result or not, we can go off and chuckle to ourselves that we know what did it, even if we are not in the winning class.

Mr. EMERSON. I saw up at the Treasury the other day a sign which said, "Wilson, peace and prosperity; Hughes, what?"

Mr. FITZGERALD. The President was reelected because his administration of the public affairs of the United States has been the most successful, the most statesmanlike, the most progressive, and the most admired of any President since the time of Washington. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. MANN. Does the gentleman from New York contemplate going upon the vaudeville stage as a joker? [Laughter.]

Mr. FITZGERALD. No; but I am afraid that some of my friends have become so unbalanced that they can not see anything serious in life, and take it all as a huge joke.

Mr. CANNON. I think a sufficient reply to the gentleman would be that which we hear on the street from the newsboys, when one taunts another, and the other says, "What are you giving us?"

Mr. FITZGERALD. Well, I refer gentlemen to the result of the last election as an indorsement of what I said.

Mr. BENNET. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Yes.

Mr. BENNET. My colleague does not refer to any of the returns of the election in the State of New York?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Once in a while my neighbors go astray, but, like the prodigal son, they come back again. [Laughter on the Democratic side.] I would not, of course, refer to the returns in my colleague's district. [Laughter.]

Mr. BENNET. If my colleague would refer to the returns in my district in relation to the national ticket, he would find that Mr. Wilson got something like 6,000 less majority than he did four years ago.

Mr. FITZGERALD. But he got enough.

Mr. BENNET. In New York State? I will agree with the gentleman that he got enough—he got only twenty-eight thousand majority in Greater New York.

Mr. FITZGERALD. President Wilson got the largest majority that any candidate on the Democratic ticket has received within the last 20 years in the county of New York.

The following figures are enlightening on this subject:

1896 Mr. Bryan lost the county by	18,787
1900 Mr. Bryan carried the county by	19,387
1904 Judge Parker carried the county by	22,375
1908 Mr. Bryan carried the county by	4,117
1912 Mr. Wilson carried the county over Roosevelt and Taft by	5,728
1916 Mr. Wilson carried the county by	27,263

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I yield.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, when the gentlemen are through with their persiflage I would like to ask a serious question.

Mr. HOWARD. I think enough of the post mortem has been indulged in, and the corpse has been decently interred.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The gentleman from New York, in his statement last Friday, said that the department would ask for $8,500,000 for the relief of dependent families of enlisted men. Now, he brings in a bill calling for an appropriation of $4,250,000, just one-half of the amount stated.

Mr. FITZGERALD. This is the amount estimated to be required up to the 1st of April. The committee provided the money required up to that date in the expectation that we could provide any additional sum that may be required in the general deficiency bill. More would be known then as to whether the troops will be kept on the border.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I would like to get an opinion from the gentleman for the benefit of the municipalities and voluntary associations which are now helping the families of these men. He said that eight and one-half millions would be estimated, and he has provided one-half of that sum.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Eight million five hundred thousand dollars was asked for, but one-half of that sum will be required to take care of the situation until the 1st of April.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Does the gentleman know whether that will tend to relieve cities and voluntary associations now helping these dependent families?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I do not believe that it will.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The War Department's advice yesterday was that the Pennsylvania troops would be ordered home in a very few days; that would include the Cavalry, which has been doing excellent service on the border. I understand they will be ordered home in three groups, so as not to crowd the trains. Will we not then cease making appropriations for the deserving families of these men?

Mr. FITZGERALD. There are now on the border about 100,000 members of the guard. The estimates are based upon 75,000 members of the guard being retained upon the border until the 30th of June, so that anticipates 25,000 of those who are now there returning.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Then, the funds thus appropriated would be relieved to the extent of 25,000 men, if that number is ordered home within a very few days?

Mr. FITZGERALD. The estimate is not based upon the number now upon the border. It is based upon the 75,000 being retained on the border.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The families of those who return to their homes will no longer receive any advantage from this dependent fund?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Not after their discharge.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. May I ask the gentleman as to the items for the maintenance of the mint and assay offices. Will this deficiency appropriation for these various mints carry their work along until the 30th of June next?

Mr. FITZGERALD. The 30th of June upon the basis of the present pay roll.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman explain why it is that these deficiencies occur? Sufficient appropriation was made, as I understand, for the original work of the various mints; and yet we have been advised in two reports from the Secretary of the Treasury that the mints would have to close unless this deficiency appropriation is passed.

Mr. FITZGERALD. It is due to the fact that there has been an unprecedented demand for minor and subsidiary coin. The demand has been so great that for practically three months the Philadelphia Mint has been operating upon a 24-hour basis.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. That is true.

Mr. FITZGERALD. And the Denver and San Francisco Mints are operating upon a 16-hour basis. When the appropriations were made it was contemplated that they would be operated upon a single shift. It is also due to the fact that there has been a very great increase in the cost of material used in the mints. Both things taken together have resulted in the deficiency.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. It would be very interesting if the gentleman is prepared to make a statement as to why there has been such an extraordinary and abnormal demand for coinage.

Mr. FITZGERALD. It is due——

Mr. GARNER. To Democratic prosperity.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. It may be the high cost of living.

Mr. FITZGERALD. It is due to business activity and the tremendous development of the country.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Is it due to the influx of foreign gold?

Mr. FITZGERALD. That does not affect the situation. In the last fiscal year the per capita circulation was increased about $4. In 1916 the per capita circulation was $39.29, and in 1915 $35.44. The increase in business activities has required a large volume of subsidiary and minor coin. The importation of gold has affected only the New York assay office. The work of the mints has been in coining half dollars, quarters, dimes, nickels, and pennies.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I would say to the gentleman that I am familiar with the situation at the Philadelphia Mint. We have been advised that the conditions there have been so precarious that the department would be obliged to close down early in January unless this deficiency appropriation be made. The appropriation has been exceeded. There must be some reason for it.

Mr. FITZGERALD. These figures may interest the House. At the Philadelphia Mint the coinage from July 1 to November 25, 1915, aggregated 22,210,850 pieces of all kinds. For the same period from July 1 to November 25, 1916, the number of pieces was 120,395,926. From July 1 to November 1, 1915, the deposits of bullion amounted to $585,204, while for the same period in 1916 it amounted to $70,486,657.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. That is an extraordinary condition.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Yes.

Mr. MADDEN. I have a number of letters from men who were on the border with the National Guard of our State, who left dependent families at home, and who, while on the border, made application for the allowance provided for the dependents at home, but who have not had the allowance awarded to them. In some cases they left their families sick, left their homes with mortgages upon them, left their business where they were earning good salaries, and went into the service at $15 a month. They were unable to furnish any sustenance to the people at home, unable to meet the interest charges upon the mortgages upon their homes, and in some cases they have lost members of their family while away, and have had the mortgages foreclosed. Their claims for allowance provided by law have not been adjudicated. Does this appropriation provide for the allowance to men who were on the border who have made application and who have been discharged, or does it provide for payment to men only who are still upon the border?

Mr. FITZGERALD. There were some applications unacted upon, I think to the number of 2,000. This appropriation is to take care of them, whether the men have been discharged or not. My information is that the allowances have been made to all those who would be entitled to them under the rules, excepting in those cases where it has been impossible to act upon the applications. A great many claims were not allowed. The Quartermaster General stated the rules adopted. A man in the Army receiving $15 a month was considered to be receiving only what was necessary for himself while he was in the Army, so that when he made application, if he showed that he was receiving more than $15 a month in the Army the excess would be deducted, and then he had to show how much he had been contributing to the support of his family, and they would allow up to $50 a month under the law.

Mr. MADDEN. In cases where they have been able to show and allowances have not been made, and the men have been discharged, will such allowances be made out of this appropriation to these men, or does the gentleman know?

Mr. FITZGERALD. My understanding is this: To meet allowances to be made whether the men have been discharged or are still in the service. It was stated that the number of applications allowed in the Regular Army was 1,760. The number of applications allowed in the National Guard was 9,760; refused, National Guard 358, Regular Army 575. Number of applications on hand awaiting action for all reasons, 2,512. It may be that some men who have been discharged had applications which were not acted upon.

Mr. MADDEN. I have in mind the case of a man who owned his own home with a considerable mortgage on it, who was earning a good salary before he went away. He left his sick wife in the care of a doctor. He was unable to contribute anything whatever to her medical expenses or to her household expenses while he was away. His wife has since died and his home has been sold under the mortgage, because he was unable to meet the interest payments. He made application for an allowance and has had no information as to whether it is to be allowed or whether it is to be rejected. It seems to me that a case of that sort is one that ought to be given serious consideration and ought to be expedited.

Mr. FITZGERALD. The Quartermaster General stated they had 12 clerks working on those cases. There might be a case like the one mentioned by the gentleman from Illinois that would be especially urgent which might come in a mass of papers and there would be no way to distinguish or single it out for special action. My information is that a board of three Army officers was appointed to pass on all the applications, and there seems to be a disposition to act upon them expeditiously and to be as liberal as possible.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Is there a uniform standard of allowances in dependent cases where the application is made?

Mr. FITZGERALD. There is a series of rules adopted and the allowances are made in compliance with those rules. They have been all printed in the hearings together with a copy of the application blank.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Based on the number of children or on the particular nature of the case?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Dependent upon the circumstances in each case.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will allow me, as I understand it, many communities, cities and probably counties, have contributed voluntarily to the support of families of some members of the National Guard. Now, when the application is made I understand that that donation is not refunded to the citizen or its equivalent allowed to the applicant?

Mr. FITZGERALD. That is my understanding.

Mr. CANNON. I was present in the hearings——

Mr. FITZGERALD. It is considered as part of the income that he has received and taken into account.

Mr. CANNON. If the gentleman will allow me, I am glad, indeed, that where there was suffering and necessity to a considerable extent relief came when it was needed; but in the very nature of the things the claim has to be presented and when presented the contribution, in fact, while made to the applicant, was also made to the Treasury of the United States, so that these localities that contributed to private suffering not only bore the other burdens of other localities but also that which other communities which did not contribute did not bear. I understand that is the condition.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, if I may say, I know of a number of cases where individuals contributed to individual families, the head of which was on the border, and when applications were made to the War Department for allowance to a family at home they were not allowed, and those families were dependent entirely upon individual charity during the period. I recall a number of families I took care of myself.

Mr. CANNON. The gentleman, as I understand it, will not be reimbursed?

Mr. MADDEN. I do not expect to be. I was glad to make the contribution.

Mr. CANNON. And the equivalent of the amount contributed when the claims are allowed will be deducted from the amount.

Mr. MADDEN. I do not see how it could be, because the Government would have no means of knowing what I contributed.

Mr. FITZGERALD. There would be no means of knowing it. The applicant states what the amount of his income is and what sources of income all the members who are dependent have. There may be many cases in which assistance was extended by individuals or associations to families of the soldiers of which the soldier had no knowledge.

Mr. CANNON. Precisely.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Thus allowances might be made to them while some additional help had been extended from private sources.

Mr. MADDEN. As a matter of fact, in the cases which I have described there was no allowance made by the Government to the family at all, though application had been made for it and the family at home was dependent entirely upon what men like myself were willing to contribute to their support while their husbands and fathers were on the border doing duty for their country.

Mr. CANNON. In those cases under the questions that have to be answered when the application is made nothing would come of the application, because there has been an income that supported the family, as I understand it.

Mr. MADDEN. The applicant himself might not know that his family was living on the charity of their friends. They might be doing that without giving any information to the husband or father who was on the border. There are cases where the family was dependent entirely upon individual charity at home, and when the husband made application to the Government it was disallowed.

Mr. FITZGERALD. It would not be allowed under such circumstances only because of the inability of the man properly to make out his application. I have read the application blank, and if the dependent members of the family had no source of income, and if he had been able to show he had been contributing to the support of his family when he went into the guard, he was allowed up to $50 when contributing that much, less anything he might be receiving in excess of $15 a month in the Army.

I ask the Clerk to read.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the bill for amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

New York assay office: For wages of workmen and other employees, $25,000.

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of asking my colleague if this sum of $25,000 in this item and $20,000 in the next item is the sum asked for in the estimates?

Mr. FITZGERALD. It is the amount requested.

Mr. BENNET. Of course, it is made necessary by reason of the additional work.

Mr. FITZGERALD. That is true of all of these items in the mint and assay offices. The committee recommended the amounts requested, because they are necessary to continue the operation of the plants to the end of the fiscal year upon the basis of the present pay roll.

Mr. BENNET. And if it is not enough it is the fault of the departments and not of the Congress?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Yes. We give them every dollar they ask.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk resumed and completed the reading of the bill.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise and report the bill with the recommendation that it do pass.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. STEPHENS of Texas, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 19178) making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, and for other purposes, and had directed him to report the same to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The bill was passed.

On motion of Mr. FITZGERALD, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. MCLEMORE, by unanimous consent, was granted leave of absence until January 6, 1917, on account of important business.

DISTRICT APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 19119) making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 19119, with Mr. GARRETT in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and the Clerk will report the title of the bill.

The bill was read by title.

Mr. GARD. Mr. Chairman, I desire to ask how much, if any, of the bill the Clerk has read.

The CHAIRMAN. The first paragraph.

Mr. GARD. Then, having read the first paragraph, I move, Mr. Chairman, to strike out the last word, this being done for the purpose of asking a question of the chairman of the committee. I desire to ask the chairman of the subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations this question: In his statement of yesterday, I understood him to say that he and his fellow members of the committee were opposed to the plan contained in the bill of providing for the fiscal relations in the District of Columbia by the old half-and-half ratio. Is that true?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. That is true as to the members of the subcommittee who formulated this bill.

Mr. GARD. I desire to ask the chairman further what, last year, in fact, was the ratio of apportionment between the General Government and the District of Columbia?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. In the bill as passed, the current law, which carries something over $12,000,000, the ratio as between the District revenues and the General Treasury was in round numbers about 60–40, possibly 61–39.

Mr. GARD. That is, 61 per cent for the District and 39 per cent for the General Government?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes.

Mr. GARD. What would be the proportion under the present appropriation?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I have not worked out that percentage, I will say to the gentleman, but not very far from the same percentage, because this bill carries a larger amount.

Mr. GARD. As a matter of truth, then, the so-called fiscal relation of half and half is purely a legal fiction and does not obtain in fact?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. It has not obtained in fact for several appropriating years in the past.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

The chairman of the subcommittee has reported this bill with the half-and-half language in it as in the former bill. On yesterday, in explanation, he stated that he thought it was futile to engage in this short session in another fight to abolish that half-and-half principle. I did not understand him to mean that it would be futile so far as the judgment and opinion of this House were concerned. I think that with the light that has been thrown upon it by the committee, the absolutely impartial committee that examined into the fiscal relations of the District and the Government, and by the light that has been thrown upon it by the chairman of the District Committee and his researches, and also by the Appropriations Committee, the opinion is pretty well settled in this House that the half-and-half principle has been outgrown and that the old form of the half-and-half contribution ought to be abandoned.

Now, the truth about the matter is this: The District now raises over $8,000,000 in taxation, and if the Federal Government were compelled to contribute an equal amount it would compel us to find some way of expending $16,000,000. Manifestly we have not been able hitherto to do that, even with the most generous and modern government in the District of Columbia.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. COX. It would not be very difficult to find a way to spend that money if the House would proceed to increase salaries as it did yesterday, would it, here in the District of Columbia?

Mr. BORLAND. Well, I think it would take a great many increases of salary; but, as I said a moment ago, the House has never been able to spend double the amount of taxes raised in the District of Columbia. And when we speak of the taxes raised in the District of Columbia we are speaking only of taxes upon tangible personal property and real estate and the excise taxes upon merchants. We have now added a tax on intangible property, and by this bill we are providing for an annual tax upon automobiles. We ought to have a general inheritance tax in the District of Columbia. If we did, the receipts in the District would be between $12,000,000 and $13,000,000—almost enough to carry the entire burden of the District.

Now, the result is simply this: Congress, in its wisdom, appropriating only $13,000,000 when the District raises $8,000,000, a certain amount goes back into the Treasury, and will under these appropriation bills, even when the appropriation bill is drawn to require half-and-half payment. The practical effect is that the surplus is left, which is covered into the Treasury to the credit of the United States, and stays there. So that, as a matter of fact, the old half-and-half system is broken down of its own weight.

Personally I think it ought to be abolished, and I think that this House, if it had the time at this short session, with the matters crowding in it, would do well to have abolished it at the short session. As the gentleman said yesterday, the fight, or the movement, in favor of abolishing it and adjusting the system of relations existing between the Government and the District of Columbia has not been abandoned, and the manner in which this bill is drafted, in the very wording of the old law, is not to be taken as evidence of such abandonment.

Now there is another thing I wanted to say in that connection, and it is this: It has always been assumed by a very small but active element here that the District of Columbia was some kind of a principality or conquered province, and that we could not govern it without some kind of a treaty with that province. That is a misconception. The whole creation of the District of Columbia is referable to the provision of the Federal Constitution providing that Congress shall have a seat of Government. It has nothing else as a foundation for its creation. It is the National Capital. It belongs to the people of the Nation. It does not belong in any sense, whether small or great, to the men who happen for their own convenience to transact business here or own property here. We owe them no obligation to treat them as a municipality. The people of the United States own this District. They have a right to raise here all the taxes that are customarily raised upon private property anywhere in the United States, and they have a right to expend those taxes in providing the very best form of government that we can provide for the District. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Missouri has expired. The pro forma amendment will be withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

GENERAL EXPENSES.

Executive office: Two commissioners, at $6,000 each; engineer commissioner, so much as may be necessary (to make salary $6,000); secretary, $2,400; three assistant secretaries to commissioners at $1,600 each; clerks—one $1,500, two at $1,400 each, two at $1,200 each, one (who shall be a stenographer and typewriter) $1,200, one $840, two at $720 each; two messengers, at $600 each; stenographer and typewriter, $840.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against that paragraph. There is an increase of salary there.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman reserve his point of order for a moment?

Mr. COX. Yes; I will reserve it.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I can not say that I am at all taken unawares by the point of order being made against the increase of salary for the Commissioners of the District of Columbia which has been provided in this bill, an increase from $5,000 to $6,000 a year. However, I am sorry that the point of order has been made.

I want to say to the House in this connection and in justification of the recommendation made by the committee for the increase of the salaries of the Commissioners of the District that I am sure that the membership of the House individually and personally are not acquainted with the duties that these men have to perform. Their hours are not confined to seven or seven and one-half, as in the case of the Government clerks, and their responsibilities are onerous. In addition to those duties which the Commissioners of the District have had to discharge for a number of years, new duties have been imposed upon them by the passage of the utility act, creating them into a utility commission, and the new burdens incident to that legislation have been imposed upon them. These men not only have the duties ordinarily imposed upon the governing heads of a city, but they have had imposed upon them by that act of Congress the duties devolving because of this legislation, the result of which has been that they are possibly as hard-worked men as there are in the District of Columbia, either in the employment of the District or of the Federal Government, and they have very large responsibilities.

Here is an appropriation bill carrying between $12,000,000 and $13,000,000 to take care of the activities of this city, including the responsibilities for the expenditures, the responsibilities of the proper organization, and direction of all these activities devolving upon these three men under this organization; and I submit to the House that they not only earn but they are entitled to the compensation that the committee has undertaken to give them in this bill.

I regret very much that my friend has seen fit to make the point of order. Of course, it is subject to a point of order, and I shall not contest it.

Mr. MANN rose.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I yield to the gentleman. That is all, Mr. Chairman, that I care to say.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. MANN. Do we make any provision whatever for the benefit of these commissioners except their salaries?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. None whatever.

Mr. MANN. Do they get automobiles?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. There is one automobile for the use of the two civilian commissioners, and the engineer commissioner has one automobile.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman says that the two civilian commissioners have the use of one automobile. As a matter of fact, has not each one of them the use of an automobile?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. No; that is not my understanding of it.

Mr. MANN. Does not each one of them ride to his office?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. There is only one automobile for the civilian commissioners.

Mr. MANN. Do they have a carriage, then?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. No; they have no carriage. The provision authorizing this automobile was accompanied with a provision providing that the carriages might be disposed of.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman is quite sure that they provide their own carriages when they travel to their offices?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. No; I will not make that statement positively. I have seen one of them going to the office in an automobile, and I think the only occasion when I saw the other civil commissioner he was on foot, as was I.

Mr. MANN. An automobile is usually provided for these people as officials of the Government. I think they are the highest paid officials of the city of Washington for the work they do.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I would like to call the attention of the gentleman to the provision in this very bill, that "the appropriations in this act shall not be expended for the purchase or maintenance of horses or horse-drawn vehicles for the use of the commissioners."

Mr. EMERSON. They do not want horses any more?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. There is a prohibition against any of this money being used for the purchase or maintenance of a horse-drawn vehicle.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. MADDEN. The gentleman stated a moment ago that the public-utilities act imposes a great deal of additional work upon the commissioners. Will the gentleman be kind enough to state to the committee how much additional expense is incurred by the employment of experts who take charge of the work in connection with the public-utilities act.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. The current law, as I recall it, carries $34,000 to pay the salaries of men who are employed under the utilities act.

Mr. MADDEN. What was expended during the current fiscal year for that purpose?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. They had only $10,000 in addition to the sum that I have mentioned for the employment of experts.

Mr. MADDEN. The experts do the work, and it costs $34,000—will cost that for the fiscal year?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes.

Mr. MADDEN. In this appropriation which is about to be made, and which is to be added, of course, to the expense for the employment of the commissioners; so that as a matter of fact the commissioners do not do the work imposed upon the Public Utilities Board, but that work is done by men who are expert in that line.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. That remark only verifies the statement which I made in the beginning, that the membership of the House do not know what the commissioners do. They are sitting every day now as a Public Utilities Board, sitting long hours, in the examination and comparison of the valuations that have been made, with those of the public-service corporations, of those utilities.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. MANN. Did the commissioners ask for this increase for themselves?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. There was an estimate submitted. As submitted from the commissioners, they estimated for $7,500 for the salary of each commissioner.

Mr. MANN. Then they asked for an increase of 50 per cent in their salaries.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. There was no possible way for it to reach us except through the commissioners.

Mr. MANN. Did they ask for any such increase for the various low-paid employees in the District of Columbia?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. No; they did not for the employees as a whole. In the estimate they asked for a number of increases.

Mr. MANN. Did they ask for as much as a 50 per cent increase for anybody else except themselves?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. No; I think not.

Mr. MANN. And no increase for the ordinary laborers?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes; for some of the ordinary laborers they did, but not as a whole.

Mr. MANN. Not the ordinary laborers. They did not ask for any increase for the charwomen.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. No; they asked for an increased number of charwomen.

Mr. MADDEN. Yes; and an increased number of other people.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. For street employees they did.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Chairman, I wish to congratulate the gentleman in charge of this bill [Mr. PAGE] on his conversion on the question of increases of pay for Government officials. I remember the impressive speech he made on the floor of the House yesterday against an increase of pay for the subordinate officers of the Government.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I know the gentleman wants to be fair.

Mr. AUSTIN. Yes; absolutely.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I did not make any impassioned appeal against an increase for these people. I made an appeal against an increase that I thought was not justified in comparison with the work these employees do as compared with private employees. I have come in this morning asking some small recognition for administrative men who, I do not think, are paid in comparison with the gentleman and myself for the work that we perform.

Mr. AUSTIN. I remember, I think correctly, the admonition of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. PAGE] to the majority side of the House not to be carried away, not to increase these Government salaries from $1,800 down beyond an increase of 5 or 10 per cent; and the statement also was made by the gentleman that every Democratic Member here knew that there were an army of applicants on the outside who would be quite anxious to step in and accept these positions with prevailing salaries.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, can the gentleman deny that statement which I made yesterday?

Mr. AUSTIN. If that statement is true——

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Is it not true?

Mr. AUSTIN. I have no Democratic applicants, and I am not concerned with the question of patronage; but if that statement be true in reference to these subordinate positions, I submit to the gentleman, if the same argument does not apply in reference to these high-salaried positions, the Commissionerships of the District of Columbia, and if there are not thousands of men who would be glad to have those positions at the present salaries of $5,000 each?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I assume that there are just about the proportion of men in the District of Columbia who would like to have the office of commissioner that there are in the gentleman's district who would like to have his place.

Mr. AUSTIN. But the gentleman is evading. Does not the same argument obtain in this particular case, where it affects some of these high-salaried officers, that did appeal to the gentleman yesterday when we were insisting upon a fair, just, and reasonable increase of the pay of clerks, watchmen, firemen, skilled laborers, and charwomen? Here is an increase of 20 per cent. Yesterday we were appealing for an increase of 20 per cent for the $1,600, $1,400, $1,200, and $900 clerks, and the gentleman opposed that.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. AUSTIN. Certainly.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I would like to ask the gentleman if he did not vote yesterday to increase the pay of his own secretary 33⅓ per cent?

Mr. AUSTIN. Yes; Mr. Chairman——

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I did not.

Mr. AUSTIN. And what I insisted on was not only that increase, but increases all along the line.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Did the gentleman insist upon an increase of 33⅓ per cent for the employees of the Government carried in the legislative bill?

Mr. AUSTIN. I had an amendment here which carried an increase of 25 per cent, 20 per cent, 15 per cent, and 10 per cent, but the ruling of the Chair prevented me from offering my amendment for a larger increase.

Now, I want to say to the gentleman, as I said yesterday to the House, that it is unjust and absolutely unfair of Congress when in season and out of season it increases the high-salaried officials and absolutely refuses to increase in proportion the low-salaried officials. We have increased the salaries of the President and the members of his Cabinet, the members of the Supreme Court, the circuit and district judges, and the Members of Congress, and now here is an effort to-day to increase the salaries of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, right in the face of a majority of this House refusing yesterday to give an adequate and just increase along the same lines to the poorly paid Government employees. I think we were right yesterday, and I congratulate the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. PAGE] for seeing a new vision to-day, and I hope he will carry it all down the line and give every subordinate in the District of Columbia the same rate of increase—20 per cent.

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman, as a member of the Subcommittee on Appropriations that recommended the bill to the full committee, I want to say this: It is always a very easy matter for one side of the House to criticize the other for its action. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. AUSTIN] is complaining about the attitude of certain Democrats on this side on yesterday relative to increase of pay of the smaller salaried men in the Government employ. The gentleman and his party had absolute power for 16 years, undisputed power, and all during that time they made no effort to correct any injustice that was done to these men in the Government service in the lower grades of employment. But now, when another party is in power, they criticize us for not going far enough.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I want to submit this proposition to the House: The Government of the United States does not pay all of the salaries of the employees of the District of Columbia. The larger portion is paid by the taxpayers of this District eventually. The citizens in this District who are interested in their government have held meetings in different parts of the city, and they themselves have recommended and passed resolutions asking that the Commissioners of the District of Columbia have their salary increased—not a thousand dollars a year, but their salaries increased $2,500, making them $7,500. Since I have been on the Committee on Appropriations it has been my pleasure to come in intimate contact with the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, and I unhesitatingly say that there are not three harder-worked men in the District of Columbia in any employment, private or governmental, than the three present commissioners in the District. They are men who reflect great credit on the appointive power in selecting them. The people of the District are all applauding their efforts, their unstinted efforts, in behalf of the welfare of this District.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOWARD. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Is their time fully and completely occupied now with the business of the District?

Mr. HOWARD. I will answer the gentleman by saying that this is a city of about 390,000 people, and every time I have been into the District building for the transaction of any business in connection with my work as a member of the Committee on Appropriations or any other matter I had up with the District Commissioners I have found them there on the job.

Mr. MANN. I could say that myself, for I have never called on them.

Mr. HOWARD. I have called on them numerous times.

Mr. MANN. I ask the gentleman if their time is fully occupied by the business of the District?

Mr. HOWARD. I will say to the gentleman that I think it is.

Mr. MANN. Then how can they each take a chairmanship of committees for the inaugural, which must take a great deal of their time?

Mr. HOWARD. That is an honorary position.

Mr. MANN. Not at all; it is a very active position.

Mr. HOWARD. I presume if the gentleman from Illinois had had an opportunity to take a chairmanship next March he would have been glad to have accepted it. He could have spared the time, although I know he is one of the hardest-worked men in Congress.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman is mistaken. I would attend to my official duties and let some man who had the time attend to the inaugural preparations without an increase of salary.

Mr. HOWARD. I want to say that the present commissioners—the two civil and the engineer commissioners—are rendering as efficient service and do more for the material welfare of the District of Columbia than any three men that have occupied the positions within the last 25 years.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOWARD. Yes.

Mr. MADDEN. Does the gentleman know at what hour of the day the offices in the District building are closed?

Mr. HOWARD. I do not; but I get down there early, a long time before the gentleman from Illinois comes down town in his limousine, and I have never been there after 9 o'clock that I did not find the particular commissioner with whom I had business to transact.

Mr. MADDEN. I said, what time do the offices close, not what time do they open.

Mr. HOWARD. I have been there at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and all the commissioners were there engaged in a matter that involved the public utilities.

Mr. MADDEN. I suppose the gentleman will believe me, and I expect the gentleman is going to believe what I am going to say. I went down there one day at half past 2. The man inside, the watchman or whatever you may call him, accosted me and wanted to know where I was going. I said I was going to see the commissioners. He said, "No; you are not. The office of the commissioners is closed at 2 o'clock." And I was not permitted to see the commissioners. I did not tell him who I was, but I thought that an ordinary American citizen, who did not look like a burglar, ought to be treated with more respect in a public building than to be told that he could not see a public officer who is paid out of the Public Treasury.

Mr. HOWARD. I am sure the watchman's eyes were very poor, or the gentleman did not note on the calendar that it was a legal holiday.

Mr. MADDEN. It was not a legal holiday.

Mr. HOWARD. The gentleman knows that with all the supervisory Government officials the offices are not open to the public after 2 o'clock.

Mr. MADDEN. Is a Member of Congress considered as belonging to the general public? But it makes no difference whether he is or not, the law says that the public offices in the District of Columbia shall be open from 9 o'clock in the morning until half past 4 in the afternoon.

Mr. HOWARD. I know that the watchman could not take the gentleman from Illinois to be an ordinary man——

Mr. MADDEN. I think it is an outrage to close the public offices at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. I do not think the commissioners can be attending to the business for which they are paid when they close their offices at that early hour in the day.

Mr. HOWARD. That would apply to every other Government official head in Washington.

Mr. MADDEN. Then the same thing is true as to all of them?

Mr. HOWARD. They must have some time in which to attend to the executive matters of the District of Columbia.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Georgia has expired.

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for one minute more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SMITH of New York. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask if that statement is true, that the supervising Government officials close their offices at 2 o'clock?

Mr. HOWARD. Yes; there is a sign up in the Post Office Department and in the Department of Justice, and in every other department, that their offices are closed to the public after 2 o'clock.

Mr. SMITH of New York. Do not all of the Cabinet officers receive delegations in the afternoon?

Mr. HOWARD. Sure; they will do it by engagement; and as for the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN], I know that nobody regrets that occurrence more than the present Commissioners of the District of Columbia, because they were deprived of the distinguished honor of a visit from my most amiable friend from Illinois, and I now apologize for that watchman who was so indiscreet——

Mr. MADDEN. Oh, the gentleman need not apologize.

Mr. HOWARD. In not recognizing the distinguished gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. MADDEN. I simply make this statement to the public, that neither the Commissioners of the District of Columbia nor any Cabinet officer in the United States has any power under the law to fix a rule that will close their offices to the public at half past 2 o'clock, because the law distinctly says these public offices shall be open for the transaction of public business from 9 o'clock in the morning until half past 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Mr. HOWARD. In conclusion, I will just say this: That I think that $6.000 a year pay for the Commissioners of the District of Columbia is reasonable pay; that it is not exorbitant; that they ought to have it on account of the responsibilities attached to their office, and on account of the class of men that is required to fill these positions.

Mr. DILL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOWARD. Yes.

Mr. DILL. If the committee thought it proper to raise the salaries of these commissioners, who already receive $5,000 a year, $1,000, why does the committee report in its bill the payment of salaries to men at four and five hundred dollars a year, without raising them to a living wage?

Mr. HOWARD. Why, there has to be a difference in pay, because there is a difference in intellect and training; there is a difference in efficiency and in men. There is a minimum and a maximum pay in all things. I have seen some lawyers that I would not give $5 to represent me, while I have seen others that I would readily give $5,000 to represent me if I were in a tight place.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Georgia has again expired.

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for one minute more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DILL. Does the gentleman think they should be paid so little wages that their standard of living must be forced down?

Mr. HOWARD. I do not.

Mr. DILL. Does the gentleman think a decent standard of living can be maintained on four or five hundred dollars a year?

Mr. HOWARD. I think they ought to have an increase, and they are going to get it.

Mr. DILL. Does the gentleman believe that with the prices of foodstuffs the way they are, and of clothing, and of shelter, a man can keep a family on $500 a year?

Mr. HOWARD. I do not.

Mr. DILL. Does the gentleman think a Government like this can afford to continue to pay such salaries, then?

Mr. HOWARD. I do not think that, and I think we are going to increase them.

Mr. DILL. Ten per cent, which will mean $50.

Mr. HOWARD. Well, that is a heap. I have seen the time when if I had had $50 I would have thought that I was rich. That is a good deal.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Georgia has expired. Does the gentleman from Indiana insist upon his point of order?

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I want to make a brief statement. I regret very much to disagree with my friend from North Carolina [Mr. PAGE], the gentleman in charge of this bill, a man whom I have always followed and followed implicitly since he has had charge of appropriation bills relating to the District of Columbia.

One thing, however, I am delighted at and it is this: That the gentleman does not seek to justify this increase upon the high cost of living. He seeks to justify the increase of salary from $5,000 to $6,000 per annum on the ground of the increased responsibilities coming to the commission. One of the increases of responsibility which has come to them, according to the gentleman's version of it, is the Public Utilities Commission. I see in this bill an appropriation for $55,000 for the Public Utilities Commission. I imagine that the increased work thrown upon these commissioners by virtue of the creation of that commission is a mere bagatelle, that whatever work is thrown upon them by virtue of that is worked out, completed in its minutest detail, laid upon the tables and desks of the commissioners for their approval. That argument may be carried clear down the line as the responsibilities of the departments of the Government have materially increased in the last few years, in fact, are increasing every year. Now, if every time a little additional burden is to be thrown upon the head of a department and that head of the department must be compensated by an increase in salary, the Lord himself only knows where the limit is to extend.

Mr. LLOYD. If the gentleman will permit, in this matter of public-utility work there have been hearings for quite a while, nearly every day, and they have done a large amount of work along that line, which is an investigation of the whole subject. It is not taking matter, as the gentleman suggests, that is found on a table and passing on a thing already found out, but they are investigating the thing originally and they have been doing that kind of work for quite a while.

Mr. COX. Well, the presumption of the law is that every officer ought to do his duty. The presumption of law is that the officer does do his duty. The officer does not do his duty unless he devotes his entire time and efficiency to the office, no matter whether additional responsibility has been thrown upon him by virtue of new legislation or not, and even though this may be an additional burden it can not take any more time away from these men than they are required to give by law to the public. Now, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] talked about certain benefits that this commission have. I want to call the attention of the committee to page 17 of this bill, to that part of it which relates to automobiles. On page 17 you will find a provision for automobiles for the offices of the civilian commissioners. Now, I am willing to take the word of the gentleman in charge of this bill upon it, but the language contained on page 17 of the bill provides "automobiles for the officers of the civilian commissioners."

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. If the gentleman will permit, that is not for the commissioners, that is for the officers under the civilian commissioners, and it goes on to enumerate them.

Mr. COX. Do the commissioners use these automobiles?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. They do not use them. As a matter of fact these automobiles are used by the various heads of the different departments in the discharge of their duties—the superintendent of streets and various others. There is really but one automobile for the use of the civilian commissioners.

Mr. COX. I am willing to accept the gentleman's version upon that point. Now, I have not been very much impressed all through this argument of yesterday and to-day about these eternal increases in salaries, and yet I do not want to be hard-hearted; I do not want to be cold-blooded; I want to be deliberate about these things; but if we continue these constant increases in salaries I do not know where we are going to land. I know there is a belief prevalent now in some of the departments here, because they have told me, for more than one head of the various departments of this Government have said, "You always get economy by paying high-priced salaries." I do not believe that. I believe you can get a good man to fill these places for $5,000 a year. I say no doubt but what these men are good, are competent, but I have no doubt you can get men just as good for $5,000 per year.

Mr. SNYDER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. I will yield.

Mr. SNYDER. Does the gentleman know whether any of these resident commissioners have notified the committee that in case their salaries are not raised they will resign.

Mr. COX. I do not think they have.

Mr. SNYDER. I have not heard of any.

Mr. COX. Some one upon the floor made the argument this morning that everybody here in the District of Columbia wants these salaries increased. As far as I am concerned, I will not object if this bill were amended so as to let these proposed increases of salaries be paid exclusively out of the revenues of the District.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. I would not object to it. Yes; I yield for a question.

Mr. MANN. Was not the statement made, not that everybody in the District wanted salaries increased, but that certain localities of people had gotten together and asked for the increases?

Mr. COX. I think that is true.

Mr. MANN. Does the gentleman imagine that the people of the District would have got together and asked for increases in the salaries of the commissioners unless some of the employees under the commissioners had had the meeting called?

Mr. COX. I think that is probable. So if the people here in the District are really desirous of having these salaries increased let us put them to the test, a patriotic test, and let the patriotism go to the pocketbooks of the people of the District of Columbia. Let them pay it and not undertake to force the people of the United States to pay these increases of salary.

Mr. SIMS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. SIMS. Would the gentleman not also couple with that proposition one providing that if the District pay all charges due to increases they should have all the appointments and not have them made upon the recommendation of Senators and Members of the House?

Mr. COX. I never made any such recommendations.

Mr. SIMS. It takes a good deal of the time of Members hearing those who seek their support in their applications for positions in the District service.

Mr. MANN. I would like to inquire whether anybody in this House knows of a case where the commissioners appointed anybody at the request of a Member of the House?

Mr. COX. I have not made any such request. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I wish to offer two amendments.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina offers two amendments. The Clerk will report the first one.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, line 5, after the word "at," insert "$5,000."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the other amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, line 7, after the word "salary," insert "$5,000."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

So much of existing law as provides that the assessor of the District of Columbia and the members of the permanent board of assistant assessors shall not be removed except for inefficiency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office, is repealed: Provided, That on and after the date of the approval of this act all records and accounts in any way relating or pertaining to the bookkeeping, accounting, and collection of taxes and assessments now prepared and kept in the office of the assessor of the District of Columbia shall be transferred to and kept in the office of the collector of taxes of said District; and the collector of taxes shall hereafter be charged with the duties heretofore required of the assessor in relation to the preparation and issuance of tax bills and bills for special taxes and assessments; the preparation for public inspection of lists of all real estate in the District of Columbia heretofore sold, or which may hereafter be sold, for the nonpayment of any general or special tax or assessment; and said collector shall furnish, whenever called upon, a certified statement, over his hand and official seal, of all taxes and assessments, general and special, that may be due at the time of making the said certificate; and he shall prepare the lists of taxes on real property in said District subject to taxation on which taxes are levied and in arrears on the 1st day of July of each year: Provided further, That on or before November 1 of each year the assessor shall prepare and deliver to the collector of taxes of said District tax ledgers in completed form, showing the assessed owners, amount, description, and value of real property listed for taxation in the District of Columbia; and on or before April 1 of each year the assessor shall prepare and deliver to the said collector personal-tax ledgers in completed form, showing the names and addresses of assessed owners and the location and value of property assessed: And provided further, That the register of wills of the District of Columbia shall hereafter furnish copies of wills, petitions, and all necessary papers wherein title to real estate is involved to the collector of taxes and the assessor of said District.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois makes a point of order against the paragraph, and the Chair sustains the point of order. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

License bureau: Superintendent of licenses (who shall also be secretary to the automobile board without additional compensation), $2,000; clerks—1, $1,400 (transferred from assessor's office); 1, $1,200 (formerly license clerk, assessor's office); 1, $1,000 (transferred from assessor's office); 1, $900 (formerly index clerk and typewriter, engineer commissioner's office); inspector of licenses, $1,200 (transferred from assessor's office); assistant inspector of licenses, $1,000 (transferred from assessor's office); in all, $8,700.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the paragraph.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I send an amendment to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from North Carolina concede the point of order?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I do.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. DUPRÉ). The point of order is sustained.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I concede the point of order, and I ask unanimous consent to revert to page 4 of the bill, line 18, made necessary by this paragraph going out on the point of order, and offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 4, strike out lines 18 to 25, inclusive, and, on page 5, strike out lines 1 to 5, inclusive, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Assessor's office: Assessor, $3,500; assistant assessors—3 at $3,000 each, 2 at $2,000 each; 5 field men at $2,000 each; record clerks—1 $1,800, 2 at $1,500 each, 1 $1,200; clerks—4 (including 1 in arrears division) at $1,400 each, 4 at $1,200 each, 8 (including 1 in charge of records) at $1,000 each, 2 at $900 each, 2 at $720 each; draftsmen—1 at $1,600, 1 at $1,200; 2 stenographers and typewriters at $1,200 each; assistant or clerk, $900; license clerk, $1,200; inspector of licenses, $1,200; assistant inspector of licenses, $1,000; 2 messengers at $600 each; board of assistant assessors—clerk $1,500; vault clerk $900, messenger and driver $600; temporary clerk hire, $500; in all, $68,340."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

All the authority, duties, discretion, and powers now vested by law in the assessor of the District of Columbia with respect to licenses and the issuance thereof, shall, on and after July 1, 1917, be transferred to and vest in the superintendent of licenses provided for in this act.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the paragraph.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I concede the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained.

The Clerk read as follows:

Excise Board: Three members, at $2,400 each; clerk, $1,500; inspector, $1,500; messenger, $600; hire of means of transportation, $1,000; in all, $11,800: Provided, That the term of office of any member of the Excise Board whose nomination has been or may be rejected by the Senate shall be terminated by such rejection and no part of this appropriation shall be used to pay the salary of any member of the board whose nomination has been rejected by the Senate.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the proviso in the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is made against the proviso in the paragraph.

Mr. MANN. It is subject to a point of order, and I do not see any need in carrying it.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I concede the point of order, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained.

The Clerk read as follows:

Office of corporation counsel: Corporation counsel, $4,500; assistants—first $2,500, one $2,500, second $2,000, third $1,800, fourth $1,500, fifth, $1,500; stenographers—1 $1,200, 1 $840; 1 $720; clerk, $720; in all, $19,780.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of making an inquiry. You provide for first assistant corporation counsel, second assistant corporation counsel, third assistant corporation counsel, and so forth, but what is this new man to be called?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. We did not designate him or give him any title whatever except as counsel.

Mr. MANN. But he is assistant corporation counsel at $2,500 a year. The assistants are—first $2,500, and a second $2,000. So his title will be "one assistant corporation counsel." The others are designated as "first," "second," "third," and so on.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I will say to the gentleman that if the committee had followed out the criticism he is making they would have changed the man at $2,000 as second assistant and made this second. But the idea was to give the corporation counsel another assistant.

Mr. MANN. I understand, but as long as that is designated that way——

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. And if the gentleman will allow me I will offer an amendment, as follows:

On page 8, line 21, strike out the word "one" and insert "second."

Mr. MANN. Put them all together.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I will put them all together. I will change the form of the amendment:

In line 21, strike out the word "first" and the word "one" and the word "second," so that it will read "assistant"——

Mr. MANN. Strike out "one" and insert "second," and strike out "second" and insert "third"; strike out "third" and insert "fourth," and so on. Put them all together in one amendment.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes. Strike out in line 21 the word "one" and insert "second"; strike out "second" and insert "third"; in line 22 strike out "third" and insert "fourth," and in the same line strike out "fourth" and insert "fifth"; strike out of the same line "fifth" and insert "sixth."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 8, line 21, strike out the word "one" and insert "second"; strike out the word "second" and insert the word "third"; line 22, strike out the word "third" and insert the word "fourth"; strike out the word "fourth" and insert "fifth," and strike out the word "fifth" and insert the word "sixth."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kansas moves to strike out the last word, and asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Farmers' produce market: Market master, $900; assistant market master, who shall also act as night watchman, $600; watchman, $600; laborer for sweeping sidewalks on B, Little B, and Tenth and Twelfth Streets NW., and the center walk of the Farmers' Produce Market Square, and raking up space used for market purposes, $480; laborer to remove market refuse from streets and from sidewalks around Farmers' Produce Market and to assist in the care of the interior of the market, $480; hauling refuse (street sweepings), $600; in all, $3,660.

Mr. DILL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Washington moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. DILL. I do so for the purpose of asking the chairman a question.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Very well.

Mr. DILL. I notice in the hearing that a recommendation is made for an increase in the price of these laborers in the Eastern and Western Markets, and the committee not only did not raise this one on page 10, but left those wages at $300.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I will say to the gentleman that these were left as they are on the theory of carrying on this bill a general increase such as was carried on the legislative bill.

Mr. DILL. Which would make their salaries $330.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Which would increase their salaries by 10 per cent.

Mr. DILL. In the hearings I notice that Mr. Brownlow says these men work every day, although they do not always work 10 hours a day.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. They are on the job every day, but their hours of service do not always cover a whole day.

Mr. DILL. They clean up the place?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes; they clean up the place, but it does not require a full day's labor.

Mr. DILL. I will not take the time to offer an amendment, because I take it that a point of order would be raised, as was done all through the other bill. But it does seem to me that $25 or $27 a month, as it will be, is an exceedingly low wage.

I note also that Mr. Brownlow says that one of these men has written to him saying it was impossible for him to live on $300 a year. Of course, that is needless to be stated.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. These services, of course, are not continuous, nor are the hours long. Otherwise the wages would have been increased beyond that scale. In the bill two years ago we increased them from $240 to $300, so that they have been receiving some little increase in the last year. On the statement that the gentleman makes, putting the wage at $27 a month, it does seem to be a small wage. That is true, but perhaps they have some employment elsewhere. It is not an exacting employment, as I understand.

The CHAIRMAN. The pro forma amendment is withdrawn. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Engineer commissioner's office: Engineer of highways, $3,000; engineer of bridges, $2,500; superintendents—1 of streets $2,000, 1 of suburban roads $2,250, 1 of sewers $3,300; asphalts and cements—inspector $2,400, assistant inspector $1,500; trees and parkings—superintendent $2,000, assistant superintendent $1,350; assistant engineers—2 at $2,200 each, 4 at $1,800 each, 2 at $1,600 each, 4 at $1,500 each, 2 at $1,350 each, 1 $1,200; transitmen—3 at $1,200 each, 1 $1,050; rodmen—4 at $900 each, 8 at $780 each; 12 chainmen, at $650 each; draftsmen—1 $1,500, 2 at $1,200 each, 1 $1,050; general inspector of sewers, $1,300; inspector of sewers, $1,200; bridge inspector, $1,200; inspectors—2 at $1,500 each, 5 (including 2 of streets) at $1,200 each, 1 $1,000, 1 $900; foremen—12 at $1,200 each, 1 $1,050, 10 at $900 each; foreman, Rock Creek Park, $1,200; 3 subforemen, at $1,050 each; bridge keepers—1 $650, 3 at $600 each; chief clerk, $2,250; permit clerk, $1,500; assistant permit clerk, $1,000; clerks—1 $1,800, 3 at $1,500 each, 1 $1,400, 2 at $1,350 each (including 1 transferred from per diem roll), 7 at $1,200 each, 2 at $1,000 each, 1 $900, 1 $840, 2 at $750 each, 1 $720, 1 $600; 7 messengers at $600 each; skilled laborers—1 $625, 2 at $600 each; janitor, $720; steam engineers—principal $1,800, 3 at $1,200 each, 3 assistants at $1,050 each; 6 oilers, at $600 each; 6 firemen, at $875 each; inspector, $1,400; storekeeper, $900; superintendent of stables, $1,500; blacksmith, $975; 2 watchmen, at $630 each; 2 drivers, at $630 each; in all, $179,640.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment by Mr. PAGE of North Carolina: On page 11, after line 14, insert the following:
"Index clerk and typewriter, $900."

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I will say, Mr. Chairman, in regard to this amendment that this employment was transferred from this paragraph to the license bureau, but went out on a point of order. It is simply a matter of transferring it back.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Chairman, that the Clerk may be allowed to correct the total.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that the Clerk may be allowed to correct the total. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Board of examiners, steam engineers: Two members, at $300 each, $600.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment by Mr. PAGE of North Carolina: On page 13, after line 18, insert the following: "Automobile board, secretary or acting secretary, $300."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Free Public Library, including Takoma Park branch: Librarian, $4,000; assistant librarian, $1,500; chief circulating department, $1,200; director of children's work, $1,500; children's librarian, $1,000; assistant in charge of school work, $1,000; librarian's secretary, $1,000; Takoma Park branch librarian, $1,000; chiefs of divisions—order and accessions $1,200, industrial $1,200; reference librarian $1,000; assistants—1 $1,000, 1 in charge of periodicals $1,000, 1 $900, 7 at $840 each, 7 (including 1 for the Tokoma Park branch) at $720 each, 3 at $600 each, 3 (including 1 for Takoma Park branch) at $540 each; copyist, $540; classifier, $900; cataloguers—1 $840, 1 $720, 2 at $600 each; stenographers and typewriters—1 $900, 1 $720; attendants—1 $720, 6 at $600 each, 5 at $540 each; collator, $540; 3 messengers, at $600 each; 10 pages, at $420 each; 3 janitors, at $480 each, 1 of whom shall act as night watchman; janitor of Takoma Park branch, $360; engineer, $1,200; fireman, $720; workman, $600; library guard, $720; 2 cloakroom attendants, at $360 each; 6 charwomen, at $240 each; in all, $59,420.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I suggest that the word "Tokoma" on line 16, page 14, should have its spelling corrected to read "Takoma."

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. In the absence of objection, the correction will be made.

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For printing all annual and special reports of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, for submission to Congress, $5,000.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois reserves a point of order on the paragraph.

Mr. MANN. I will ask the gentleman out of what fund this printing comes now?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. They have had an allotment from the congressional printing fund, but the law has been so amended that they can not use it for that purpose, and this becomes necessary.

Mr. MANN. How is the law amended?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. By a ruling, as I understand, of the Joint Committee on Printing.

Mr. MANN. Do they not get an allotment out of the printing appropriation in the sundry civil bill?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. No; they do not.

Mr. MANN. That is sufficient. I withdraw the point of order. I think they do a lot of useless printing.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. We investigated this matter, and the commissioners estimated for $6,000 on this item, and we took it up with the Public Printer to find out how much printing had been done under the old act for the commissioners and found it would have amounted to that much. But we took the liberty of cutting them down from about $9,000 that they had been getting under this old provision; we took the authority to cut it down to $5,000, thinking that they had more of their reports printed than was actually necessary.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. MANN. I would be perfectly willing, so far as I am concerned, to appropriate money for somebody who would print a decent map of Washington or the District of Columbia. We get, I believe, in connection with our Congressional Directory a map of the city of Washington, made in the seventeenth century, evidently, or the eighteenth; certainly, it was not the nineteenth or the twentieth. Nobody can tell anything about it. You can not get a decent map from the District Commissioners. At least, I have not been able to, although I have gotten several that were no good. There is no other city in the world that I am familiar with, although I am not familiar with very many, where you can not find a map that gives information in reference to the city. I got a map from the District Commissioners last year and on it, for instance, it shows Sixteenth Street plainly opened and extended where it does not exist. That is about the only clear thing that it did show, and that was not so.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I will say to the gentleman that I hope very much that the Engineer Commissioner of the District will read the RECORD to-morrow.

Mr. MANN. Oh, probably he may, so far as it relates to his salary.

The CHAIRMAN. The pro forma amendment is withdrawn. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

In all, for motor vehicles, $18,860. All of said motor vehicles and all other motor vehicles provided for in this act and all horse-drawn carriages and buggies owned by the District of Columbia shall be used only for purposes directly pertaining to the public services of said District, and shall be under the direction and control of the commissioners, who may from time to time alter or change the assignment for use thereof or direct the joint or interchangeable use of any of the same by officials and employees of the District: Provided, That no automobile shall be acquired hereunder, by purchase or exchange, at a cost, including the value of a vehicle exchanged, exceeding $700 for one seating more than two persons, $500 for one seating not more than two persons, or $2,000 for a motor truck: Provided further, That hereafter all motor vehicles and all horse-drawn carriages and buggies owned by the District of Columbia shall be of uniform color and have painted conspicuously thereon, in letters not less than 3 inches high and markedly contrasting in color with the body color of the vehicle, the words "District of Columbia."

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. Does the gentleman in charge of the bill happen to know how many automobiles the street-cleaning division has?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Four.

Mr. MANN. And they are buying two new ones this year, and want to buy two new ones next year. How long do those machines last?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I think there is one new this year for the superintendent of the street cleaning department.

Mr. MANN. It says—

Two automobiles to be purchased in lieu of automobiles to be exchanged.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes.

Mr. MANN. The same provision is carried in the current law.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes; that is true.

Mr. MANN. That makes two this year and two next year.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes; unless they are exchanging the same ones they did last year, and I think they are not.

Mr. MANN. If they are buying two new ones——

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I think the gentleman's first idea is the correct one.

Mr. MANN. I was wondering how long they were able to use these machines.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I think the life of a Ford machine——

Mr. MANN. I am not speaking of their life, but how long these people keep them generally, and whether they——

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I can say to the gentleman, not as regards these particular machines to which he refers, that in the hearings there is evidence that there are machines being used by the District employees now that are 4 years old, some of them, so I presume that they use them a longer period of time than that.

Mr. MANN. Of course, it depends very largely on the care of a machine how long it lasts.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I understand that.

Mr. MANN. And whether they want to break up a machine, or whether they want to keep it.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. In the absence of other evidence I assume that there is enough direction and supervision over this machinery to prevent wanton destruction or abuse of it.

Mr. MANN. If they can get two new machines every year, doubtless they will continue to do that.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I do not think that will keep up indefinitely, of course. The two machines to be exchanged were purchased in 1913, according to the evidence in the hearing, one for $1,532.60 and one for $536.65. One has a mileage of about 30,000 miles and the other a mileage of about 17,000 miles. That is the statement made by the engineer commissioner in the hearing.

Mr. MANN. I should not think that was a very great mileage for the streets of the District of Columbia. Still, I do not know much about machines.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I should say that when a machine of that kind had made 30,000 miles the expense of upkeep would justify a private owner in making an exchange.

Mr. WINGO. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. Can the gentleman from North Carolina advise us how many motor vehicles are now owned by the District of Columbia in its different departments?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. We have provided in this paragraph, either for the purchase of new ones or the maintenance of old ones, for 19 motor vehicles. That is about as nearly as I can tell the gentleman.

Mr. WINGO. Can the gentleman tell me whether or not anyone has ever been punished for a violation of the inhibition against the use of these machines for other than purposes directly pertaining to the public service?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. No; the gentleman having charge of this bill has no connection whatsoever with the enforcement of the law in the District of Columbia and no connection with the police force, and can not give the gentleman from Arkansas any information on that subject.

Mr. WINGO. As a matter of fact, it is notorious that that law is a dead letter.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. No; to be perfectly fair, I do not thing that is a fair statement. I think that at one time there was very great abuse. Limitations were put upon it, and a great deal was said on the floor of the House by various Members as to this abuse; and my information, from such sources as I can gather it, is that there is now a minimum of the misuse of these cars.

I will say to the gentleman further than that in the bill a year ago, in an effort not only to bar the use of these cars for other than official purposes, but in order that the machines owned by the District government might be utilized to the fullest extent, we authorized the purchase of land and the construction of a central garage in proximity to the District building, so that all these machines should be under the direction of some central authority; and, for instance, if the superintendent of the street-cleaning department was not using the machine assigned to him, and there was occasion for some other department to use a machine, that it might be temporarily turned over to that department in an effort not only to utilize the machines that they had to the greatest practicable extent, but also to have them more directly under the eye of some responsible person, so that this abuse of which he speaks, which existed at one time, might still further be diminished.

Mr. WINGO. I will say to the gentleman, in justice to the officials of the District of Columbia, that I think there is less abuse of their cars by using them for private purposes than there is possibly of cars that belong to other departments. It is a fact that is notorious, however, to anyone who keeps his eyes open that you can see these cars—not only of the District of Columbia but of other departments—used for all kinds of private purposes. You can find them at almost any hour of the night—cars belonging to some departments—parked before some of these apartment houses.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. If the gentleman will permit me, I do not know that there is any greater violation of the law with reference to the use of automobiles than there is of any other law to which there is no penalty attached.

Mr. WINGO. I agree with that.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I know it is less than it was in prior years, and I hope it will be less in future years than it is at present.

Mr. WINGO. It was less about two years ago, but it was pretty notorious last winter. I kept track of one or two cases last winter for several nights, and there were not less than two Government-owned automobiles standing in front of a fashionable apartment house at an hour as late as I cared to be up, being a man used to country life and country habits. I do not know how long they remained there after I went to bed. They were not being used officially. I do not mean to say that they were being used for any improper purpose, other than that they were officially prohibited from the use that they were being put to. I recognize that it is impossible to enforce this inhibition absolutely. The only thing that can be done is to keep it down to the minimum. It is sometimes exasperating to see some man who criticizes the alleged extravagance of Congress riding around in a Government-owned car and using it for private purposes. When men occupying minor positions in the Government attempt to criticize Members of Congress for alleged extravagance in voting for appropriations it is a little irritating to see those same Government employees misusing Government property. I had in mind a particular instance, and my sole object in rising was simply to relieve my mind of a little feeling of exasperation that I had on account of one of these gentlemen. Having relieved my mind of that, I have no desire to embarrass the gentleman in charge of this bill by blaming him for a lack of enforcement of the law which I know he and other Members of Congress can not prevent. Congress has prohibited by law the use of these cars for private purposes, and if those upon whom the duty devolves willfully and contemptuously ignore the law, as it is notorious they do, they and not Congress should be criticized and held to account.

The Clerk read as follows:

For erection of suitable tablets to mark historical places in the District of Columbia, to be expended under the direction of the Joint Committee on the Library not exceeding the sum of $500 of the unexpended balances of the appropriations made for this purpose by the acts of June 27, 1906, and subsequent District of Columbia appropriation acts, is continued available for the fiscal year 1918.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. Why do they not use this money? There are a great many historical places in and around Washington. A great many visitors come here and tablets marking historical places would be of great advantage. But I suppose the commissioners are so busy getting their salaries increased that they do not have the time.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. If the gentleman would let me answer his question before he undertakes to answer it himself——

Mr. MANN. I was trying to incite the gentleman to an answer.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. The commissioners are very anxious to expend this money, but it is under the control absolutely of the Joint Committee on Library and they will not designate the places where they can put them, and so the commissioners can not expend the money. That is the answer to the gentleman's question. If he has any quarrel it is with the Joint Committee on the Library and not with the Commissioners of the District. As busy as the commissioners are they would like to be a little busier.

Mr. MANN. If it is the Joint Committee on the Library, they are so busy reading the innumerable bills providing for monuments and statuary that they have not the time.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I shall not undertake any defense of that committee for they can defend themselves.

Mr. MANN. I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

On and after January 1, 1918, every deed offered for record in the office of the recorder of deeds for the District of Columbia shall have attached thereto an affidavit duly executed by the grantor named in said deed setting forth the true consideration passing from the grantee to the grantor as the purchase price of property therein conveyed, and the recorder of deeds for the District of Columbia shall refuse to accept for record any deed which does not have attached thereto such affidavit: And provided further, That on and after January 1, 1918, all deeds of trust secured by real estate in the District of Columbia and offered for record in the office of the recorder of deeds for the District of Columbia shall have attached thereto an affidavit wherein the party secured by said deed of trust sets forth that the sum of money recited in said deed of trust as the sum in which he is secured is the amount actually loaned by him on the security of said real estate, and the recorder of deeds for the District of Columbia shall refuse to accept for record any deed of trust which does not have attached thereto such affidavit.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the paragraph.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, this is clearly subject to a point of order, and it is not worth while to waste any talk about it. I do not think I could persuade the gentleman.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman's committee does not have jurisdiction of this; it is pending before another committee.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. The gentleman recognizes that, but he also recognizes the fact that it will remain pending there for a long time.

Mr. MANN. It ought to if it is drawn in this form.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. The gentleman will have the chance on the floor if it comes in in this form.

The Clerk read as follows:

For purchase of enamel metal or other metal identification number tags for horse-drawn vehicles used for business purposes and motor vehicles in the District of Columbia, $1,500.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. It is unfortunate that the preceding paragraph has gone out on a point of order. It may not be strictly in order on an appropriation bill, but it is certainly very germane to an appropriation bill. The purpose of it, of course, is to secure a distinct and fair assessment of the real estate in the District. The people who own property in the District and pay the taxes are as much interested in a fair assessment as anybody else.

There is another purpose, and that is to prevent colorable sales which may be made at a fictitious valuation surrounding proposed public improvements by the Federal Government. I have in mind the purchase of the land between here and the Union Depot for the purposes of Capitol Park. The law was so drawn that a certain amount was to be bought every two years, and each installment cost more than the last. A great many apparent or pretended sales were made in that vicinity, upon which testimony was predicated of the value of the land. Whether those sales were genuine nobody knew.

As long as we have a system in the District of Columbia of buying land for public purposes and condemning it under the terms of the Constitution before a jury, and no part of the cost is assessed back on the property owner, there is no check on the value of that land. If any portion of it, 20 per cent, 10 per cent, or 5 per cent of the cost of the improvement was ever assessed back on the benefit district, the attorneys representing the property owners in the benefit district would be there to cross-examine the witnesses. But they are not there and it is all one-sided—Uncle Sam on the one side and everybody else on the other. The valuations given by the witnesses are not analyzed nor criticized from any scientific standpoint. Here we have a check, a genuine check, on wash or fictitious sales. If there is any reform in the interest of the taxpayers and the Federal Government, this ought to go in for the purposes of true valuation, and if it can not go in anywhere else it ought to go in on an appropriation bill.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BORLAND. Certainly.

Mr. MADDEN. Does the gentleman know of any place in the United States where a municipality purchases land by condemnation where any part of the cost of the purchased land is charged back to the abutting property owners?

Mr. BORLAND. Where the land is purchased for Government use that is true. Where it is purchased for park purposes it is universal, except in the District of Columbia, to assess a portion of the cost back on the abutting property owner. That is what was done in the city of Chicago; the boulevard in that magnificent city was formed on that principle.

Mr. MADDEN. I think the gentleman is wrong. I think where you open a street by condemnation and it thereby improves the value of the abutting property a portion may be assessed on the property owner, but if you buy land for the purpose of using it as a park, that has nothing to do with the abutting property, and no part of it should be charged back, and the gentleman knows it.

Mr. BORLAND. The gentleman from Illinois is entirely mistaken about that. I may say that Kansas City is divided into five park districts, and each park acquired is assessed against the property in that park district in which it is acquired, and it is paid separately from the general taxes of the city. That is not a rare case, but, in my judgment, it is uniform and almost universal in the country. I am speaking of the situation of the Federal Government; the Federal Government is compelled to buy a great deal of land, but it is not compelled to buy land for the beautification of the cities.

This question of parks is a beautification of the city, as the Capital. All of your Capital parks, Rock Creek extension, and all, ought to be assessed back on a benefit district, either constituting the District at large or the immediate adjoining property, and if it were, there would be a radically different attitude toward the damage allowed to the property in the taken district.

This amendment, in my judgment, opens up the door for a very decided reform in that direction.

Mr. MADDEN. Does the gentleman know any place in the United States where anybody is compelled to put the consideration into the deed?

Mr. BORLAND. No; I do not. I confess that is a new idea.

Mr. MADDEN. Why should there be any different law here than in any other place?

Mr. BORLAND. I confess that it is a new idea, but I do not see anything hostile in it to the interest of any honest man, if we compel him to put the consideration in his deed.

Mr. TILSON. Is not the value of the land stated for the purpose of the revenue stamp?

Mr. BORLAND. The revenue stamp has been abolished.

Mr. TILSON. This is for the future?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes; this would not take effect until the 1st of July, 1917.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I wish to resist the motion to strike out the last word. It was indicated to me by the distinguished gentleman in charge of the bill and other gentlemen on the other side of the House that it was their desire to get along as speedily as possible with the appropriation bills, and without the expenditure of any great amount of hot air. Evidently they did not take my friend from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND] into consideration when they passed that word around, because, although the item has gone out of the bill, he wants to lecture me and the House with reference to the necessity of embodying it in the bill, and under the circumstances I think I shall call off all bets and indulge in a little myself.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN. I will, although I did not interrupt the gentleman, but I realize that it is impossible under any circumstances to keep the gentleman from wanting to talk.

Mr. BORLAND. The chairman of the committee is in no wise responsible for "the gentleman from Missouri."

Mr. MANN. Oh, I know that, and the Chairman is glad of that and so am I. No one is responsible for the gentleman from Kansas City when he wants to talk. What are the facts in reference to this? The object of the bill to put the true value in a deed was not for the purpose indicated by the gentleman at all in reference to the condemnation of property. There has been no case in the District of Columbia and there will not be any case in the District of Columbia where in condemning property for park purposes we will levy a special assessment to pay for it, and the law now exists as to that in reference to the condemnation of streets. The purpose of putting this provision in is due to the recent inclination on the part of purchasers and sellers of property to keep their private business private, and not to put in anything but a nominal consideration. I would a little rather myself that they would put in the true consideration, but that is their private business. After all, the tendency in the country is to try to have uniformity in reference to deeds, and almost every State in the Union, if not every State, provides that a deed executed in another State in conformity with the laws of the other State is valid in the State in which it is recorded, and yet here we have a proposition to single out a little bit of territory, 50 or 60 or less square miles in extent, and say that a deed executed in relation to the District of Columbia in any State of the Union which conforms to the laws of that State shall be invalid in the District of Columbia, and the people who make the deed may not know anything about it at all until after a death has occurred, until after a bankruptcy has occurred, until after a great many things may have occurred, which renders it impossible to obtain a new deed. It is preposterous for the people to expect that in a little territory like the District of Columbia they are going to say that we shall be governed differently in respect to deeds than all the rest of the United States.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN. Yes.

Mr. BORLAND. I do not want to prolong this discussion——

Mr. MANN. Nor do I.

Mr. BORLAND. But I do want to remind the gentleman that he is in error in saying that a deed drawn according to the laws of some other State is good to pass land in a particular State.

Mr. MANN. Nearly every State in the Union has that provision.

Mr. BORLAND. Is it not just the other way, that the law is that the real estate is governed by the law of the State where the land lies?

Mr. MANN. Certainly it is.

Mr. BORLAND. And that the deed must conform to the law of the State where the land lies?

Mr. MANN. Certainly, that is the law; but if the law of the State provides that a deed executed and acknowledged in conformity with the laws of another State shall be valid in that State, that is the law of the State.

Mr. BORLAND. But that is not the case.

Mr. MANN. Of course, I suppose the gentleman has had great experience. I have been dealing in real estate all of my life and I have received and signed thousands of deeds, but I confess that I do not know as much about it as the gentleman from Kansas City. Yet that has been my experience.

Mr. BORLAND. The gentleman has considerably modified his statement.

Mr. MANN. I have not modified it at all.

Mr. BORLAND. I think he is a lot nearer correct. If the law of a State permits the execution of a deed outside, it is valid; otherwise, not.

The Clerk read as follows:

On and after December 31, 1917, all licenses, including identification tags and registrations, for motor vehicles heretofore granted shall expire and become null and void, and on and after January 1, 1918, there shall be charged annually for the licensing and registration of motor vehicles the following fees, which shall be paid annually to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia and which shall include registration and the furnishing of an identification number tag—$5 for each vehicle of more than 24 horsepower, $3 for each vehicle of 24 horsepower or less, and $2 for each motor cycle or similar motor vehicle: Provided, That the term "motor vehicle" used herein shall include all vehicles propelled by internal-combustion engines, electricity, or steam, except traction engines, road rollers, and vehicles propelled only upon rails and tracks: Provided further, That motor vehicles owned and maintained in the District of Columbia by the United States or the government of the District of Columbia shall be registered and furnished identification tags without cost: And provided further, That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are authorized to establish such rules and regulations and to affix thereto such fines and penalties as in their judgment are necessary for the enforcement of this act and the regulations authorized hereunder.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order on the paragraph. I know it is customary to give to the District Commissioners very great authority about controlling everybody in the District. Is this a proper regulation, to give them authority to prescribe penalties, fines, and so forth?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I think within the limits of their power and in connection with the penalties and fines as to licenses of automobiles, we are not giving them any great authority.

Mr. MANN. They have some of the craziest regulations about automobiles in this town that the imagination of man could have devised. Does not the gentleman agree with me about that—some of the most foolish in the world?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I agree entirely with the gentleman that the regulations as to traffic are not such as I would approve. Whether I accept his language in describing them I am not prepared to say. I have seen some very foolish regulations here, indeed.

Mr. MANN. They have a regulation here, for instance, saying that you can not put a strong light on your automobile on a dark road even when the automobile has no other light.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. That is equivalent to prohibiting the automobile from going on a dark road.

Mr. MANN. A man who wants to travel there can not travel at night over it, and yet if he does it the law is violated and he is subject to a fine.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I think that the authorities themselves found out the ridiculousness of that, and they at least have not prosecuted anybody under it.

Mr. MANN. I will tell the gentleman something in reference to that. Last year I was going through Rock Creek Park several times at night. I think it is a beautiful place to go at night, and several times I was stopped by a policeman who told me, "You will have to turn off your lights or else pay a fine." Of course, that is practicable.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Out in the park.

Mr. MANN. Out in the park; that is silly, of course, that nobody can go on those roads in Rock Creek Park, which are not lighted, on a dark night with a light. I went to Maj. Pullman, who was very courteous about it. That regulation was changed as to Rock Creek Park, but it still exists as to all the other country roads, and there are a great many in the District of Columbia, where people must travel in automobiles, but can not travel without being subject to a penalty. Well, the gentleman says they do not enforce it, but that is because they do not catch them; they have not had enough policemen to do so.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I agree with the gentleman that this is altogether a regulation that can not be complied with.

Mr. MANN. That is only one way of many. I myself have never been taken in tow by an officer.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I have.

Mr. MANN. But very frequently I have seen them take somebody else in who was not violating the law.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Is the gentleman blaming me about it?

Mr. MANN. No; I am trying to get information—yes, partly, because the gentleman proposes to extend the authority of the commissioners.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Well, I will make a confession to the gentleman. If I could sit down and write the regulations for the governing of traffic, when you could turn on your lights and when you could not, if I had brought such a provision into this House, we would not pass this bill this session of Congress, because every gentleman who owns an automobile or operates one, or even walks where they are operated, has his own ideas about what ought to be done, and men might not even agree with the gentleman from Illinois about it.

Mr. MANN. I will accept anything the gentleman has said to be correct so far as I am concerned; it never annoys me. I believe, however, the real purpose of the provision is to do away with the existing system of licensing automobiles indefinitely.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. That is the real purpose of this provision.

Mr. MANN. Five dollars does not seem to be a very high license tax?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I will say to the gentleman in that connection that the reasons the committee which prepared this provision here put the license low were two, one being that the jurisdiction is small, and the other that the man owning an automobile here—if he operates it, there being no reciprocal relation between the adjoining jurisdictions—must go to the expense of buying a Maryland or Virginia license, and sometimes both. In addition to that they are required to give in their automobiles as personal property. They are paying a personal property tax of 15 mills on the value of the machine, so it is not so much the tax to be derived from it as to be able to have a system under which automobiles might be taxed equitably.

Mr. MANN. I heartily approve of the high license of Maryland, and if I were going to keep the roads in order—the automobiles destroy the roads faster than anything else in the world, although the automobilists will not admit it——

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Except the motor truck.

Mr. MANN. That is the same thing as far as the license is concerned. I think there ought to be a substantial license paid in the District of Columbia for automobiles which might probably be used in keeping the roads in repair. Anybody who will travel from the District of Columbia into Maryland will know the minute he strikes Maryland. Why? Because the roads become so decent you can ride without hitting the top of the machine; but not in the District of Columbia.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. If the gentleman will allow me to say I not only agree with him in what he is saying but I have had pending before the Committee on the District of Columbia, the legislative committee, for some time a bill for a higher license and providing that the revenue derived could be expended upon the suburban roads in the District of Columbia.

Mr. MANN. As long as the gentleman is usurping the function of the Committee on the District of Columbia, why did not he put that in at this place in the bill?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. There are several reasons, I will state to the gentleman. I did not have power myself to write this bill.

Mr. MANN. Oh, well; now, of course, Mr. Chairman, that does not go. The gentleman not only has power over the subcommittee, but over the full Committee on Appropriations, and over the House itself in reference to appropriations for the District of Columbia.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. If the gentleman concedes me that power over my subcommittee or the full committee on which I serve, or over the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, if he will permit me at this juncture I will offer as a substitute for this bill the one I have now pending before the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. MANN. I will vote for it very gladly.

Mr. MADDEN. I would like to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I will yield to the gentleman, although I believe the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] had the floor.

Mr. Chairman, I will take recognition in my own right in order to answer the gentleman's question.

Mr. MADDEN. A great many people come to Washington, especially Members of Congress, and bring their automobiles here, and have their own State license. They are compelled to take out a license in their own State. Does this, then, compel them to take out a license in the District of Columbia as well?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I think if you keep an automobile here a year it would, just as in Maryland.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Any Member of Congress who can afford an automobile these days ought to pay taxes.

Mr. MADDEN. Well, in our State, for example, we are compelled to pay a State license. Then we are compelled to pay a wheel tax in the cities, and these amount probably altogether to $40 or $50 a year. In cases where license charges of that sort are made and a man comes here just during the period of the congressional session it does not seem to me he ought to be taxed during his temporary stay here officially.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I will say to the gentleman that the very question he has raised had some influence in the fixing of these license taxes, and they are lower than in almost any other jurisdiction.

Mr. MADDEN. I will say to the gentleman that the first tax ever imposed on automobiles was proposed by myself and the gentleman from New York on this bill, when I was a member of the Appropriations Committee a few years ago, and the license charge——

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Which was $2 for all time. I hope the gentleman is not taking great pride in the authorship.

Mr. MADDEN. We were lucky to get that. When we got over to the other side we had a hard job. I think there ought to be a reasonable charge.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I will say to the gentleman that if this provision stays in the bill it can from time to time be amended not only as to the license tax but as to the administration under it, all the regulations and other things.

Mr. MADDEN. That is all right. I do not want to object to it.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] withdraw the point of order?

Mr. MANN. I withdraw the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

The committee informally rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, a message, in writing, from the President of the United States, by Mr. Sharkey, one of his secretaries, who also informed the House of Representatives that the President had approved and signed bill and joint resolution of the following titles:

On December 19, 1916:

H. R. 10049. An act for the relief of Capt. Harvey H. Young.

On December 20, 1916:

H. J. Res. 91. Joint resolution authorizing and directing the Department of Labor to make an inquiry into the cost of living in the District of Columbia and to report thereon to Congress as early as practicable.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, That streets and avenues named in said schedules already paved with Belgian block or granite shall not be paved or otherwise improved under this appropriation, and the remaining streets and avenues, except as herein specified, shall be contracted for in the order in which they appear in said schedules and be completed in such order as nearly as practicable, and shall be paved, in the discretion of the commissioners, instead of being graded and regulated.

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of asking the chairman of the committee a question.

I notice all this work is provided for by reference to Appendix K in the Book of Estimates. I can not exactly visualize in a moment—or, rather, recall, to be more accurate—the trouble we got into in the State of New York by this method of legislation, by referring to another book, but I do know it was so serious that we amended the constitution of our State so as to prevent the passage of an act attempting to legislate by incorporating a reference to another book into legislation. I would like to ask the gentleman, in all seriousness and candor, if this method of legislation—I assume it is an old method—has proved to be satisfactory?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. This method of appropriation for the improvement of streets in what is known as the original city of Washington has been carried, so far as my investigation is concerned, back through all the appropriation bills. Carried in the bill prepared for the committee from the Book of Estimates, the committee print of this bill, there is for the guidance of the committee, so that they may know, the identical streets to which this appropriation is carried. The list is accurate. They might, of course, be transferred to the body of the bill, but it would entail just so much more printing, that is all. And if the gentleman thinks that is worth while, his suggestion might be carried out.

Mr. MANN. Of course, all the appropriations in the river and harbor bill, practically, are made by reference to the reports of the engineers, and if we carried them in the river and harbor appropriation act they would make 100 pages, or perhaps 1,000 pages or more.

Mr. BENNET. It is possibly a safe method in legislation. I did not rise for the purpose of criticism.

Ma. PAGE of North Carolina. I will say to the gentleman this in the past has been absolutely accurate. There has been no mistakes made and there has been no effort at overstepping what was estimated for and what was appropriated for.

Mr. BENNET. I will ask the gentleman a question. What is the reason for the provision in lines 13 and 14, which says:

That streets and avenues named in said schedules already paved with Belgian block or granite—

The English is very bad—

shall not be paved or otherwise improved.

That means the streets and not the schedules, of course. Is that because Belgian block and granite last longer?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. That provision was put in, I imagine, at some time because Congress wanted to designate when these Belgian blocks and granite should be taken up and replaced by asphalt. I am not familiar with when this language was originally put in the bill.

Mr. MANN. That provision was originally put in by some archaic gentlemen who were afraid to put decent streets in the city of Washington. There are a lot of old Belgian-block pavements, not worn out, and which will not be worn out in a million years, on which nobody dare ride, and they are not fit to be used, and they decided they would not improve them or pave them with asphalt because they are already there. They were put in at a time when Belgian block was thought to be the best paving in the world. They were a pretty good pavement when there were no springs on wagons and nobody cared how much he was jolted. But they are there now. The gentleman can strike one just before you enter the driveway of Potomac Park. It was put there in that way.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the chairman of the committee one question.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes.

Mr. MADDEN. Why could not authority be given to the District Commissioners to cover these Belgian-block streets with asphalt? It can be done successfully and at very little cost. In all other cities where they are up to date they do not take off the Belgian-block pavement, but they use it as a base and cover it with asphalt. It makes the kind of street that ought to be made, and if we had commissioners in the District of Columbia who were alive to the needs of the District that is what they would do in this case.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I will say to the gentleman from Illinois that he will find on the next page of the bill that we provide for several of these Belgian-block pavements that they be repaved with asphalt.

Mr. BENNET. I move, Mr. Chairman, to strike out the proviso on lines 13 to 20. It has not served any useful purpose. I agree with both gentlemen from Illinois, and in this particular with the gentleman from Illinois who spoke last, that in large cities the Belgian-block pavement, as in New York City, is now being used as a base for asphalt, and the result is that we are getting good streets.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. BENNET. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York moves to strike out the proviso, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 26, by striking out the proviso beginning with line 13 and ending with line 20.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I shall make no particular objection to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. BENNET], except that I would suggest in making it I do not know that he knows exactly what he is doing. I can not say that any of these streets will not be rather seriously affected by his amendment to these schedules.

Mr. MANN. It will not affect these streets at all. The estimate is already made. It will probably affect what they will submit next year to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. BENNET. Of course, as I understand it, the estimate is already made, and striking out this proviso would simply get rid of a bad precedent and enable the commissioners next year to approach this work with one fetter less in the way of improvement.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Does the gentleman desire to strike out the direction as to the order in which these streets shall be taken up? He will find that on line 17.

Mr. BENNET. Which page?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. On the same page, on page 26, in the proviso that he moved to strike out. The language is:

And the remaining streets and avenues, except as herein specified, shall be contracted for in the order in which they appear in said schedules, and to be completed in such order as nearly as practicable, and shall be paved, in the discretion of the commissioners, instead of being graded and regulated.

Mr. BENNET. I think that is a matter that ought to be left in the discretion of the commissioners, the order in which they are contracted for; and I think it is a bad thing to bind them down as to the order in which they shall contract for them. Why should they be restricted? They might be able to secure a better contract for Georgetown at one time and for the northeast at another time.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. They are placed here in the order in which the commissioners thought they ought to be.

Mr. BENNET. Even if we strike them out the commissioners would probably let the contracts in that order, so that there is no necessity for having them stay in.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I confess, Mr. Chairman, that I do not like to see this paragraph go out. There were certain schedules submitted in this Appendix K of the Book of Estimates, naming the different streets that would be improved under the amount estimated for, and in no single instance does the sum carried for that section of the city and for that improvement include all that was estimated for. In the judgment of the committee we incorporated the sum for those we thought ought to be improved and left out those that should not be, and if this is stricken out it will give permission to the commissioners to use all the money appropriated on any of the streets in the schedule.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes; I yield.

Mr. MANN. Take the northwest section schedule. The item carried this year is $55,900?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Does that include all of the estimated cost of that schedule?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. No. There was estimated for that schedule $82,400.

Mr. MANN. So that the committee, then, intended to appropriate a less amount than was estimated for it, with the idea that it would be used for the improvement of the streets first named?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. That is exactly true.

Mr. MANN. Of course, the committee does not pretend that it knows which streets ought to be improved?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Only from an examination of those streets which need it most.

Mr. MANN. Well, I suppose the committee would hardly say that a not too critical examination would permit them to say which needed it most. The committee would determine whether they thought certain streets needed to be improved by looking at them.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. We have assumed to say, as between the items submitted in these schedules, which were needed most.

Mr. MANN. My recollection is fairly good. There has been no variation from this language for a great many years, and in each case the committee has taken them up in the order named by the commissioners. They have not varied that order one iota.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. No. I would say to the gentleman that that has not been true since I have been in charge of this bill. We have varied from it. Ordinarily that has been true, which means that the judgment of the subcommittee making up this bill agreed with the judgment of the engineer commissioner as to the necessity for the order in which he submitted them; but that has not always been true.

Mr. MANN. I thought it had, but of course the gentleman's statement is sufficient.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. The law requires that they shall submit these streets in the order of their importance.

Mr. MANN. I understand what the law requires, but that has nothing to do with the question.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. No; nothing at all.

Mr. MANN. If you accepted their order each time——

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. If we accepted the full amount of their estimate——

Mr. MANN. No; if you accepted their order each time, you would not exercise any independent judgment.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. No; but we have not accepted their order each time. It happens that in this schedule here we have; but I point out to the gentleman now that in the schedule, in the northwest section, there are nine streets that they estimated for to be improved. The sum of $35,900 carried under the northwest section provides for five of those streets. Now, if you strike out the language in the paragraph to which I called the gentleman's attention, there is nothing to prevent the commissioners improving first of all the four that the committee did not approve.

Mr. MANN. No; and if they had recommended those four at the head of the list, those four would be improved under the language of the committee.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. That may have been so in the past, but it is not so with this subcommittee.

Mr. MANN. It is so now, and it is so in all these bills. There has been no practical variation.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Does it not occur to the gentleman from Illinois——

Mr. MANN. I do not criticize the gentleman and his committee.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I understand. Does it not occur to the gentleman from Illinois that having this provision in the law inclines the commissioners to recommend those which are most needed?

Mr. MANN. I think that is true. I think what we should do is to strike this out and keep it out hereafter all the time. I do not think striking it out now will make any difference.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Simply striking it out now will not make any difference; no.

Mr. CARLIN. I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Will not the gentleman from New York modify his amendment by striking out——

Mr. CARLIN. That is what I was coming to.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Will not the gentleman from New York modify his amendment so as to strike out beginning with the word "already," in line 14, down to and including the word "specified," in line 17? I think that will serve the purpose, and I hope the gentleman will make that modification.

Mr. BENNET. I consent to that modification.

Mr. CARLIN. Just one second, before I renew it.

The CHAIRMAN. One moment. The gentleman from North Carolina offers an amendment to the amendment, which the Clerk will report.

Mr. BENNET. I have modified my amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment as modified.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, That streets and avenues named in said schedules shall be contracted for in the order in which they appear in said schedules, and be completed in such order as nearly as practicable, and shall be paved, in the discretion of the commissioners, instead of being graded and regulated.

Mr. BENNET. That is satisfactory to me.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands that the Clerk has read the paragraph as it will read if the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. That is true.

Mr. CARLIN. I was just going to say that I think that meets the suggestion which I was going to make, so as to leave in the bill the real substance of what is wanted, and to take out what we desire to have taken out.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. That is correct.

Mr. RAGSDALE. I should like, if I may, to get a little piece of information from the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Does it relate to the amendment which is now pending?

Mr. RAGSDALE. I think it relates to the expenditures of these moneys.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Let us dispose of this amendment, and then the gentleman can get in a little later.

Mr. RAGSDALE. How long is this going to take?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Just a moment.

Mr. RAGSDALE. All right.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. BENNET]. The Chair suggests that the amendment be reported again, because it has never been reported in the modified form. Let it be reported so that the RECORD may state it.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, on page 26, beginning with line 14, by striking out the words "already paved with Belgian block or granite shall not be paved or otherwise improved under this appropriation, and the remaining streets and avenues, except as herein specified."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York as modified, which has just been read.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RAGSDALE. I just want, Mr. Chairman——

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Let the Clerk read another paragraph.

Mr. RAGSDALE. Very well.

The Clerk read as follows:

Under appropriations contained in this act no contract shall be made for making or relaying sheet asphalt or asphalt block pavement at a higher price than $1.80 per square yard for a quality equal to the best laid in the District of Columbia during the years 1914 to 1917, inclusive, and with same depth of base: Provided, That these conditions as to price and depth of base shall not apply to those streets on which, in the judgment of the commissioners, by reason of heavy traffic, poor foundation, or other causes, a pavement of more than ordinary strength is required, in which case the limit of price may be increased to $2 per square yard.

Mr. RAGSDALE. I move to strike out the last word. I wish the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. PAGE] would give me a little light on a question raised by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN]. He indicated that the improvements of these streets were made according to the order in which they appeared in the bill. Is that correct?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. The order in which they appear in the schedule submitted in the Book of Estimates.

Mr. RAGSDALE. In other words, it is not left to the commission to say which streets they shall repair?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. No. It is their province to submit them in the order in which they think they should be improved in the list in the Book of Estimates. The committee and the Congress, of course, have the right to change that in any way they may see fit.

Mr. RAGSDALE. There seems to have been a deliberate attempt on the part of the commissioners, since I have been residing at the corner of Thirteenth and Clifton Streets, to keep every street around and adjacent to my house so torn up that the greatest amount of personal inconvenience would be inflicted on my family and on myself. I have noticed that this work usually stopped when we left town and began again about the time when we got ready to return. I just wanted to know whether it was any personal attention that these commissioners were paying to me, out of any special regard they had for me, or whether it was just simply the rule to do things in this way.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. If it will not wound the gentleman's pride, I may say to him that I do not suppose that the commissioners knew he was there. I know where the gentleman lives—right by the new Central High School. It happened that that was constructed upon a plat of ground surrounded by streets that had not been paved. Of course, the construction of the new building was the cause of the condition around the gentleman's home. As to whether the engineer commissioner or the street force have undertaken to punish the gentleman by doing the work when he is here and not when he is away, I can not answer.

Mr. RAGSDALE. That is a question upon which I wanted to get information. It seemed to me that the matter was so handled that the greatest possible inconvenience was visited upon me, and I just wanted to know whether I was being singled out. I am sure that it was not without the knowledge on their part, because I took occasion by phone, letter, and in person to inform them of the inconvenience, which seemed to increase the more I protested.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. The gentleman knows that because he happens to live across the street from the new Central High School, on a street that is unimproved, he would not have the work delayed.

Mr. RAGSDALE. Oh, no; but I will have lived there on January 1 a year. I think there has hardly been a period of time that the street has not been obstructed in that way.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. And it was occasioned largely by the construction of the new building. The gentleman will not claim that they could put up a building of that size without obstructing the street.

Mr. RAGSDALE. But they ought not to obstruct the street continually and leave great double wagon loads of material in front of my home at night.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. The gentleman does not attach any blame to the Appropriations Committee?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Oh, no; I am trying to get the proper information. I should like to know also who specially designed the ending up of the street—I think it is Thirteenth Street—that goes down between the Wardman Courts and the school building? That leaves one of the most dangerous turns that could be devised at the end of the long, dangerous hill, so that it runs into another square, whereas a slight alteration in the direction would obviate it.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I suppose the gentleman would have to go back a good many years to find the culprit, because that was on the original plan of the laying out of Washington.

Mr. RAGSDALE. The change could easily have been made so as to make it a perfectly safe passage. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

For repaving with asphalt the granite block roadway of First Street NW., between Defrees Street and I Street, 32 feet wide, $1,350.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word in order to ask the chairman a question. Is there any effort being made on the part of the District to ascertain which is the better method of paving? Is there any study or investigation being made?

Mr. HOWARD. As to the materials being used?

Mr. FESS. Yes; one of the questions concerning most of us is what sort of materials are best for roads that are being built that will not require to be repaved at periodic times.

Mr. HOWARD. I think the committee's information is that the District engineer's office is continually experimenting with materials, trying to ascertain which material is most substantial to use in the surfacing of roads. I think they get all the scientific information they can from every source as to what sort of material makes the best road.

Mr. FESS. Does the gentleman know whether we are advancing, especially in that line?

Mr. HOWARD. The Department of Agriculture, as the gentleman knows, under the Bureau of Highways, is carrying on all the time in and adjacent to the District experiments with different materials for the construction of highways. The District Commissioners will get the benefit of these experiments, and what they recommend for roadways which are being paved is generally the best material that has been ascertained up to that time.

Mr. FESS. In the judgment of the gentleman, as far as he knows, are we making any special progress in that line?

Mr. HOWARD. I think so; very great progress.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman; I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Upon the approval of said new highway plan for said subdivision of Barry Farm, the said commissioners are authorized to open, extend, or widen any street, avenue, road, or highway laid down on said plan, and in the interest of economy where buildings project beyond the highway lines shown on said plans, and it is practicable to move such buildings back to such highway lines, the said commissioners are authorized to designate such buildings in the petition of condemnation as buildings to be moved, and when so designated the condemnation jury shall allow in its verdict for damages to such buildings no greater amount than may be necessary to move such buildings; and the commissioners are further authorized to include in such highways any land owned by the District of Columbia that they shall deem necessary. The cost of said condemnation proceedings and all expenses incident thereto, including the cost of surveys and of the preparation of plats, shall be paid from the appropriation herein made for the extension of streets and avenues.

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word in order to ask the gentleman a question. Has this particular provision here, which provides for a sensible thing, if it can be done, the moving of the buildings back, been tested in the courts as to whether a man can be compelled to minimize his damages in that way?

Mr. HOWARD. I do not know as to that. The testimony before the committee shows that this was a congested center out there known as the Barry Farm; that the landlord line really ran out to the middle of the street. At one time they had no water out there, but the commissioners have extended the water pipes so as to give them pure water. They are practically all colored people who live there. They have no sewerage. The proviso was put in the bill for the purpose of reducing the width of the street which, as a rule, is 90 feet wide. They have discovered that by making the roadway less than 90 feet they can make the necessary improvements. I will read to the gentleman, if he would like to have me do so, the statement by the commissioners which will give the information.

Mr. BENNET. The gentleman can state it in his own language perhaps better than that of the commissioners.

Mr. HOWARD. Col. Kutz, the engineer commissioner, said this:

All the lot lines run to the center of the existing roadways, and they are merely meandering trails without any pavement. We have, in the interest of health and sanitation, run small water lines through there so as to give them pure water, but we can not properly sewer the territory. We can not put in any sidewalks and we can not even pave. There is some doubt as to whether we can use our repair fund for the paving of those streets, because they are not in public ownership.

That is what he says about the situation up there.

Mr. BENNET. If the gentleman will permit, I am commending the committee for having done something if they can legally do it, but here is another question which the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] raised. What does this language mean: That said commissioners are authorized to open, extend, or widen any street, avenue, or road, or highway laid down on said plan and in the interest of economy where buildings project beyond the highway lines shown on said plans, and it is practicable to move such buildings back to such highway lines, the said commissioners are authorized to designate such buildings in the petition of condemnation as buildings to be moved, and when so designated the condemnation jury shall allow in its verdict for damages to such buildings no greater amount than may be necessary to move such buildings?

The gentleman from Illinois asks if this means just to move them right back, put them on the ground, or are they to be built on foundations?

Mr. HOWARD. The truth of the business is that these are practically shacks. They are very poorly constructed buildings, all of wood, and the object of this provision is this, that we take these houses and move them back so that we can improve this property for ingress and egress, which they have not now in any way. They have no roadways at all, and we are to put these houses on the same basis in which we found them—that is to say, of course, on foundations—leave them in as good condition as we found them.

Mr. BENNET. I think that very possibly the gentleman, if he wants to be sure to avoid litigation, could reach that by making this language more specific.

Mr. MANN. He can not avoid litigation. That is what this provides for.

Mr. BENNET. Of course, this is litigation; but what I meant was obstructive litigation on the part of some owner. I think this is a very good thing.

Mr. HOWARD. It is suggested by the chairman of the subcommittee, as I suggested a few moments ago, that these houses are of very little value.

Mr. MANN. They do not want to open these streets probably if they have to pay for all these houses. The cost is assessed back on the property. They want to open them if they can and move the houses back. The gentleman says possibly we have not authority. Nobody will know, I suppose, in respect to that until the court passes upon it.

Mr. BENNET. I was trying to ascertain whether the Committee on Appropriations have looked into that question of whether it could be done?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, the chairman of the subcommittee does not happen to be a lawyer, and he does not rely on his own knowledge of the law. That question has not been brought up, I will be frank to say to the gentleman, during the hearings. We assumed that it could be done. The subcommittee does know that this needs very greatly to be done, for reasons that my colleague may or may not have mentioned during my absence. The principal reasons for the need of opening these streets and allowing this limitation on the width, a restriction on the original highway plan, is a health condition. You can not put down any paving, you can not put down any sidewalks, you can not run in your sewer lines, you can not put in your water, or you can not get the fire engines in there now, and if you were to improve these streets by the original highway plan of 80 feet or 90 feet in width, you would take these people's property and their houses, and there is no necessity for that. The main purpose is the modification of the original highway plan of allowing these people to run narrow 40-foot streets in there, in order to improve health conditions, so that they may get water in and pave the streets and get the fire engines in.

Mr. BENNET. But the gentleman's limitation is the opposite. It says that they shall not be less than 40 feet in width. They might be a hundred feet in width.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. But the original plan provides that they shall not be less than 80 feet in width.

Mr. BENNET. I am frank to say that if this can be done it is an admirable thing, and if it can be sustained in the court it is going to save the city of New York millions of dollars.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Possibly we will do New York a great service by having this tested out.

Mr. BENNET. I was anxious to find out whether there had been any precedents or if there had been any investigation, or whether we were doing this simply by brute—no——

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Not brute force, but just force.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words. I take it that it is quite obvious to any lawyer who has gone into the subject that we can not by a provision in the bill control the verdict of a jury. It seems to me that what the committee in charge of the bill intended was to provide that no greater payment should be made to any of the owners of this property than the amount necessary to move the buildings, and if that be the case, why not, instead of this provision, which it appears quite clearly to me can not be enforced, merely state that the commissioners shall not pay any greater sum than the amount necessary to move the building in any of these proceedings. The commissioners, of course, are not obliged to accept the result of the condemnation proceedings.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I was just going to suggest to the gentleman that the commissioners are not obliged to accept the verdict of this condemnation jury, if it exceeds the amount, and I do not think the language would be necessary. The truth is that these people who live in there so greatly want this improvement that you are not going to have any trouble in carrying out the provisions. It is superfluous, I think, to provide against contingencies of that kind.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The principal objection that I would have to it would be that there would seem to be an intimation of a belief that such a provision should be carried out. It is quite clear, to my mind, that this Congress has no power whatever over the verdict of a jury.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I think everybody recognizes that, whether he is a lawyer or is not.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. But it would seem to me to have been better to simply provide that the commissioners shall not pay any greater sum than necessary to move the buildings. However, if the gentleman thinks that this provision will have the effect of assisting in the settlement of these matters, I am not inclined to be captious.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I think if it has any effect at all it will have that effect. Therefore we can let it go on and try it.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Northeast. Twentieth Street, Jackson Street to Lawrence Street, grade and improve, $3,700.

Mr. FOCHT. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I would like to ask the chairman in regard to these sums here. They state in one item, "to grade, $6,400," or in another item, "to pave, $3,700." How many square feet is that intended to cover?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. It is indicated in the item itself. For instance, Douglas Street, Tenth to Twelfth Streets. That defines the distance.

Mr. FOCHT. How many square feet would that be? I am asking for information, and I would like to know what it costs here to pave with asphalt.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. We have a limitation that it shall not exceed $1.80, and it is under that limitation we designate them in the block.

Mr. FOCHT. It is done under a previous paragraph which provides that the cost of asphalting shall not exceed $1.80?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes, sir.

Mr. FOCHT. I thank the gentleman very much.

The Clerk read as follows:

To carry out the provisions contained in the District of Columbia appropriation act for the fiscal year 1914, which authorizes the commissioners to open, extend, or widen any street, avenue, road, or highway to conform with the plan of the permanent system of highways in that portion of the District of Columbia outside of the cities of Washington and Georgetown, there is appropriated, payable entirely from the revenues of the District of Columbia, such sum as is necessary for said purpose during the fiscal year 1918.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word simply for the purpose of asking the gentleman in charge of the bill a question. Is this provision in the last paragraph just read the usual form, "there is appropriated, payable entirely from the revenues of the District of Columbia, such sum as is necessary for said purpose during the fiscal year 1918"?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes, sir; that is the usual language carried in the bill.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. There is no way of telling from the bill anything as to how much that amount would be.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I can tell how much it was during the fiscal year 1916—$18,700.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Knowing the commission as I do, I suppose it could be safely left in this discretion, but it seems to me it is a very wide discretion to be given.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Their estimate is not to exceed $35,000 during the life of this appropriation.

The Clerk read as follows:

Hereafter in all proceedings for the opening, extension, widening, or straightening of alleys and minor streets and for the establishment of building lines in the District of Columbia the jury of condemnation shall not be restricted as to the assessment area, but shall assess the entire amount awarded as damages plus the costs and expenses of the proceedings as benefits upon any and all lots, parts of lots, pieces or parcels of land which they may find will be benefited by the opening, extension, widening, or straightening of the alley or minor street, or by the establishment of the building line as they may find said lots, parts of lots, pieces or parcels of land will be benefited.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from North Carolina concede the point of order?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I do not care to contest the point of order as it is subject to the point of order, and if the gentleman shall insist it will go out, but I want to say in that connection——

Mr. MANN. I will reserve the point of order.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Under the present law it has been utterly impossible to open up any of these minor streets or alleys because they can not find the property upon which to assess the benefits necessary to do it. This language may not be——

Mr. MANN. I think I said they could not do it when we passed the Borland amendment before.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. The statement made to this committee is that it has been utterly impossible under the present law to open up any of these minor streets or alleys because under the terms of the law they can not assess——

Mr. MANN. Anything but abutting property?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes.

Mr. MANN. I called the attention of the House to the situation when we passed that.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. And this is to remedy that.

Mr. MANN. I do not say it is not proper. The other was attached to an appropriation bill, I think, but I am not sure about that, but it ought to come from the legislating committee in a bill, so that Members may have an opportunity to examine it and know what it is.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I am satisfied——

Mr. MANN. I have no criticism of the Committee on Appropriations for reporting such a thing, yet the commissioners, instead of going to the proper committee, having an opportunity easily in the hearings before the Appropriations Committee, asked them to amend the act. Meanwhile I do not think there is any great loss to the District of Columbia if it does not open some of the minor streets unless people are willing to give the streets.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I concede the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

Disposal of city refuse: For collection and disposal of garbage and dead animals; miscellaneous refuse and ashes from private residences in the city of Washington and the more densely populated suburbs; collection and disposal of night soil in the District of Columbia; payment of necessary inspection, allowance to inspectors for maintenance of horses and vehicles or motor vehicles used in the performance of official duties, not to exceed $20 per month for each inspector for horse-drawn vehicles, $25 per month for automobiles, and $12 per month for motorcycles; fencing of public and private property designated by the commissioners as public dumps, and incidental expenses, $186,640.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I think during the consideration of this bill for the current fiscal year the question was raised as to whether the commissioners had made any effort to receive any revenue for the privilege of the removal of dead animals from the streets. My recollection is that it was suggested that some consideration would be given to the question during the year. I was wondering whether any consideration has been given to it by the commissioners or anybody else.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Not so far as I know, I will say to the gentleman frankly. I recall the discussion about that in the current law a year ago, and I did not recall it in the hearings on this particular bill, and nothing was said about it in the hearings, and I know nothing about what has been done.

Mr. MADDEN. Of course, I do not know how many horses are used on the streets of the District of Columbia now—perhaps not as many as formerly—and it is altogether likely there are not many dead animals to be removed.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I assume there are not a great many, for the amount of money expended is less than $3,000.

Mr. MADDEN. It seems to me there ought to be some effort made to derive a revenue from the removal of dead animals from the streets.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I agree with the gentleman, and yet I think, as I suggested to him when this matter was under discussion in the former bill, that Washington is somewhat differently situated from a commercial city, and I do not know of my own knowledge whether there is any establishment——

Mr. MADDEN. There may not be——

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. In reach of the city of Washington that utilizes material of this sort.

Mr. MADDEN. I should think that somewhere down along the Potomac River they would have a glue factory.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I was going to say it would be so far out it might overcome the value of the animals.

Mr. MADDEN. In other cities they load these animals onto scows and tow them down to some waterway or other to an outlying place, where they utilize the carcasses for different purposes, and they pay not less than $5 for each animal for the privilege of moving it.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I realize that in most cities that is true, and I think the gentleman will agree with me that in most cities there is a greater necessity, both because of the numbers of horses and the necessity for utilizing these carcasses.

Mr. BENNET. If the gentleman will yield, I would like to ask him whether there is any attempt in the city of Washington to reclaim any of this waste other than that mentioned by the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. No, sir. The cleaning of the streets, as the gentleman knows, and the removal of the refuse in the city of Washington is done by contract.

Mr. BENNET. Yes.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. And, so far as I am informed, there is no revenue from any of this refuse, either garbage, trash, or street cleanings, or other things, except, I believe I can say, or my impression is, that the street sweepings are utilized by the District and carried down the river to the workhouse, where we have a farm, and in that way the manure that is taken from the streets is utilized by the District.

Mr. BENNET. In our city, and I do not doubt it is also true in Chicago, the refuse is carefully divided before it is collected and the rags are collected in one way, the paper in another, and the ashes in still another.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. It is so here, also. There are separate contracts.

Mr. BENNET. And when those get to the place of disposal, where they will be loaded, in our city, on scows, they are gone over by men. And there is a man who pays the city of New York—I think it is—$85,000 for the privilege of going over the ash scows, and what he gleans out of those ash scows presumably pays him a respectable profit, because it is let out by competitive bidding.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Is that done in New York by contract or is it done by the city?

Mr. BENNET. The cleaning?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes.

Mr. BENNET. It is done by the city.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I will say to the gentleman that my own opinion about those matters is that here in the city of Washington, instead of making the contracts for the removal of garbage, ashes, papers, rags, and street cleanings, and other things, the city ought to have a garbage-disposal plant where all these by-products could be utilized. But the gentleman has seen enough to-day and in his experience to know that I could not bring it in on this bill and make it law. But I think there is a necessity for establishing a garbage-disposal plant for the city of Washington for this reason: Under the contract made now the term is for five years, and necessarily in their contract price the contractor estimates for the cost of some kind of plant for the disposal of this garbage. In other words, the taxpayers of the District and the Government must pay for a plant of some kind that is written off in every new contract of five years. It is not a permanent plant or it is not such a plant as the city ought to construct—a permanent plant—and yet it has to pay for that plant during the life of the contract, because it is not known whether he is going to renew the contract. There is every argument, in my mind, for a city-disposal plant, but it has been impossible to legislate for it.

Mr. BENNET. Does the gentleman understand whether the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, either the present commissioners or prior commissioners, have recommended anything of the kind?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. The present commissioners have recommended it, and I think the Board of Commissioners prior to this board also recommended it.

Mr. BENNET. So if there is anybody at fault it is Congress?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. This particular body. It is not the fault of the commissioners?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last three words; and if no member of the committee objects, I would like to return to the previous paragraph in order to get a little more information from the gentleman.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I have no objection to returning for information if I can give it.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Is there any enforceable ordinance in this city requiring the removal of snow from the sidewalk by the owners of abutting property?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. My understanding is, as a property owner in the District and not as a legislator, not being able to refer the gentleman to the act, that there is a provision requiring the removal of snow from the sidewalk in front of the property by the owner of the property within a certain length of time—I do not recall what—after a storm has ceased.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Is it the understanding of the gentleman that any of the money appropriated by the previous paragraph is to be used in removing the snow from the sidewalks where property is occupied by persons?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. No; I do not think any of it is expended in that direction. It is not certainly so intended. It is for the removal from the street or abutting Government or District property.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. We have done so much for the citizens of this city that most of them do not remove the snow from the sidewalks?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. The Metropolitan police are lenient to the gentleman and others who do not remove it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Playgrounds: For maintenance, equipment, supplies, tools, construction of toilet facilities, wading pools, installation of telephones and telephone service, grading, and repairs, including labor and materials, and transportation of materials, maintenance and repair of storehouse, and necessary incidental and contingent expenses for all playgrounds, under the direction and supervision of the commissioners, $18,500.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, on page 39, line 22, the letter "r" is omitted from the word "under," at the end of the line. I suggest that it be inserted.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend page 39, line 22, by inserting the letter "r" at the end of the line.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For salaries: Supervisor, $2,500; inspector of playgrounds, $1,200 (transferred from per diem roll); clerk (stenographer and typewriter), $900; to be employed not exceeding 10 months—17 directors of playgrounds or recreation centers at $65 per month each, assistant director at $60 per month, general utility man at $60 per month; to be employed not exceeding seven months—two assistant directors at $60 per month each, assistant director at $50 per month; to be employed not exceeding three months—assistant director at $60 per month, 17 assistants at $45 per month each; watchmen to be employed 12 months—17 at $50 per month each; in all, $30,715.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. FESS. I do so for the purpose of asking the chairman of the committee in charge of the bill whether the playground administration is under the direction of the school board or directly under the commissioners?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. It is directly under the commissioners, through the superintendent of the playgrounds.

Mr. FESS. Is the superintendent of the playgrounds appointed by the commissioners?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. He is appointed by the commissioners; yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. The pro forma amendment is withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

In all, for playgrounds, $52,415.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. BORLAND. I do not know whether there is a plan contemplated for putting the school playgrounds and the general playgrounds under the direction of the school board or not, but it seems to me there ought to be. We have now two sets of playgrounds, those connected with the schools and those under the supervisor of playgrounds.

Here is a provision, a very necessary one, passed without a point of order being made against it, providing that the supervisor of playgrounds may accept at his discretion the voluntary services of people interested in maintaining these playgrounds. It is a very necessary provision, but over on page 59, under the school provision, there is an item to the effect that no money shall be collected from the school children on the school property except for certain purposes, "for the promotion of school athletics, including school playgrounds, vocation schools, school gardens, school publications, and commencement exercises of high schools."

Now, it seems to me from personal observation that there has been a slight abuse of that section. If we are providing here an appropriation for playgrounds which Congress thinks is ample for that purpose, and then in addition to that are willing to accept voluntary services of anybody else who is willing to help, it does not seem to me that there ought to be any collections of money from the children in the schools for the maintenance of these playgrounds. They ought to be maintained at public expense, or by the voluntary support of the people interested in playground management.

But there have been in the past a good many collections of this kind. As I remember, two or three times in the course of a year there will be tickets sold to moving-picture shows for the benefit of the playgrounds. That involves not only an expense to the families that buy the tickets, but it involves the children going out and selling the tickets, which I have always condemned and refused to permit being done by my own children. I do not think it ought to be done by the children.

That is not the only objection connected with it. Another objectionable feature is that there is generally a holiday or a half holiday declared in order to permit the children to attend these moving-picture shows. There are already a great many holidays in the District of Columbia. It is the only place I ever saw where they adjourned the schools in order to let the children see a circus parade and the only place I ever saw where they adjourned the schools to allow the children to see a moving-picture show. In addition to this they have other moving-picture shows which are supposed to have an educational value, but which, of course, displace the regular school lessons for the time being. I am old-fashioned enough to believe in the theory that reading and writing and arithmetic should be taught to the tune of a hickory stick. Moving-picture shows and other educational entertainments are usually learned by the children anyway, without any help, so that it does seem to me that this encouragement in the sale of tickets and the collection of money for playgrounds ought to be eliminated.

I do not intend to offer any amendment to this bill, out of consideration for the gentleman who has charge of it, but I do think that when the matter comes up, with a fair opportunity to consider it, we ought to eliminate that. We ought also to eliminate the permission to collect money for vocational schools. These vocational schools are thought by some to be very necessary, but if so they should be paid for out of the tax budget. There is no reason why they should be supported, in whole or in part, by voluntary contributions or by the proceeds of benefit performances for which tickets are sold by the children. As a matter of fact, these vocational schools are run by regular public-school teachers during the summer vacation, who get an additional compensation for running the vocational schools.

The District of Columbia is one of the few jurisdictions where teachers are paid 12 months in the year. Most teachers are paid 8 months in the year, or 9 months; but here they are paid throughout the 12 months. In other words, their time during the three summer months belongs to the people of the District of Columbia. There is no reason why the teacher should be paid an extra compensation, unless it is fixed by law, for any work done during those three summer months. I think we would have a perfect right to require them to do the work during the three summer months without extra compensation; but if we think not, and think that a certain proportion of the teachers ought to be employed during that extra time, and compensated for that extra time and work, that ought to be a matter of law, and not a matter to be provided for through collections made by the pupils or by the sale of tickets to benefit performances.

I can easily understand, and every man here can understand, how liable that system is to abuse, because the money that is collected for these playgrounds and educational entertainments goes in many cases to some of the teachers who are interested in propagating this plan. It is a thing that we ought not to permit unless we regulate it by law. And if it were not, as I say, that the gentleman in charge of the bill has drawn a very good bill and is anxious, naturally, that it should not be delayed by amendment, I would proceed to argue that plan and submit amendments. I am not going to do it, but I simply call attention to what I consider a grave abuse in that respect.

The CHAIRMAN. The pro forma amendment is withdrawn. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the erection of a brick or concrete storehouse on land belonging to the District of Columbia, to be used for the storage of material and supplies of the electrical department, including the inclosing, grading, and improving of the ground, $7,500.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. Did we not carry this item for a big storehouse in the current law?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. No; that is carried in the current law.

Mr. MANN. This is the new item?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I should like to ask the chairman of the committee if there ought not to be some description of the land on which it would be possible to locate this brick or concrete storehouse? The language of this paragraph would allow somebody in his discretion to locate it on any land belonging to the District of Columbia.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I think the committee elicited the information in the hearings as to the proposed location of this storehouse, and it was in such a place that they did not think a description of it would be necessary. It is in a rather out-of-the-way place. I will say to the gentleman that there was a provision in last year's bill for the erection of this warehouse, but it was withdrawn before the bill became a law, because of the objection of the people who lived in the block. For that reason we asked some questions this time as to the location of the storehouse, and another site has been selected on the south side of Garfield Park, on a tract of land that abuts on the railroad, down in a section where there are practically no residences and no buildings.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. That is very true, in so far as the understanding of the committee is concerned. Yet there is nothing obligatory in the language of the bill itself. That would leave it entirely to the discretion of somebody to locate it anywhere on land in the District of Columbia belonging to the government.

Mr. MANN. To the District of Columbia.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Belonging to the District government; not belonging to the General Government.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. That is what I mean.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. The land within the District of Columbia belonging to the District government is not very extensive. There are a few lots here and there, but this place certainly would not be objectionable, and I do not think the District owns land where it would be objectionable.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, more and more in municipalities is arising the question of restricting the possible location of public buildings of any kind that could seriously injure the private property of citizens.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I think very properly so.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Yes; because some poor man, a mechanic, or somebody else not making much money, might put practically the savings of a lifetime into a dwelling, and then, without any inhibition in the law, some building might be erected which would destroy its value as a dwelling, make it impossible for him to sell it, and so rob him practically of his life savings.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. That is true.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. One illustration right in this city has been brought to my attention within the past few days, a case where an apartment house was so built as to obstruct the view of two residences, and so very seriously to injure their value for residential purposes. Without a building line and without any sort of restriction injuries of that kind can be wrought constantly. I was told last fall of a case in a large city in my own State where a manufacturing firm has, in the residential district of the city, within recent months put up a repair shop close to some private residences and really ruined their value as dwellings.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I will say to the gentleman in that connection that, while the exact location of this electrical supply storehouse is not described here, there is an understanding between the engineer commissioner and the committee, who have held these hearings, as to where it shall be constructed, and none of the objections urged by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER] can possibly obtain against the location which he has selected.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be considered as withdrawn and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Washington Railway & Electric Co. and the Brightwood Railway Co. are directed and required to remove all of the poles and overhead wires owned and used by them on Georgia Avenue from Florida Avenue to Rock Creek Church Road NW., and to install a nongrounded metallic circuit underground trolley system in lieu of the overhead trolley system of propulsion on the street railway lines owned and operated by said companies on said portion of Georgia Avenue. The Potomac Electric Power Co. and the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. are directed and required to remove all of the poles and overhead wires owned and used by them on said Georgia Avenue from Florida Avenue to Rock Creek Church Road NW. The removal of the said poles and wires and the construction of the said underground trolley system shall be upon plans to be approved by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, and shall be completed within one year after the date of approval of this act: Provided, That if any or all of said companies shall fail or neglect to remove such poles and wires, or shall fail or neglect to complete such underground construction within one year after the approval of this act, the said companies, and each of them, shall forfeit and pay to the District of Columbia the sum of $100 for each day of such failure or neglect.

Mr. FOCHT. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against this paragraph. I think the gentleman will concede that it is new legislation.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I concede the point of order. It is well taken.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Potomac Electric Power Co. is directed and required to remove all of the poles and overhead wires owned and used by it on Water Street, between Sixth and Fourteenth Streets SW. and on all reservations and public spaces adjacent thereto, and to install suitable and sufficient underground conduits, conductors, and appliances in lieu thereof. The removal of said poles and wires and the replacement thereof by underground constructions shall be upon plans to be approved by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, and shall be completed within one year after the date of approval of this act: Provided, That if said company shall fail or neglect to remove such poles and wires, or shall fail or neglect to complete such underground construction within one year after the approval of this act, said company shall forfeit and pay to the District of Columbia the sum of $100 for each day of such failure or neglect.

Mr. FOCHT. I make the point of order against that paragraph.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I should like to inquire of the gentleman just what his point of order is.

Mr. FOCHT. The point of order is that it is new legislation, which I think the gentleman himself will concede does not belong in this bill, but that another committee has jurisdiction of it.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I concede that it is new legislation, not already authorized by law.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, I should like to ask the gentleman the reason for these provisions. They seem to be very much in the interest of the public, and of the beautification of Washington.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I will answer the gentleman's question. Of course this subcommittee, in putting legislative provisions into this bill——

Mr. MANN. A parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. MANN. What is now pending before the committee?

The CHAIRMAN. There is nothing pending. The Chair sustained the point of order.

Mr. MANN. I thought the gentleman from North Carolina wanted to get through with the bill.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I do. Let the Clerk read.

The Clerk read as follows:

PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Officers: Superintendent, $6,000; assistant superintendents—1 $3,500, 1 $3,000; director of intermediate instruction, 13 supervising principals, supervisor of manual training, and director of primary instruction, 16 in all, at a minimum salary of $2,200 each; secretary, $2,000; clerks—1 $1,600, 1 $1,400, 4 at $1,000 each, 1 (to carry out the provisions of the child-labor law), $900; 2 stenographers, at $840 each; messenger, $720; in all, $60,000.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Is it the understanding that at the end of the reading of the bill there is to be an amendment proposed increasing the pay of the smaller-paid clerks 10 per cent, or whatever the amount may be?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. That is practically the same provision that was adopted by the House yesterday in connection with the legislative bill.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Does that include school-teachers?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. No, sir; it does not.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. What others does it exclude?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. It excludes the Metropolitan police, the fire department, and the public schools.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Will it be so drawn that there will be no opportunity to move to amend it to include anyone else?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. There is no rule, and all I can say to the gentleman is that he will recognize that the amendment is subject to a point of order, and if the point of order is made the gentleman submitting it is helpless, but being submitted and no point of order is made against it, it will be open to amendment, of course, under the rules of the House.

The pro forma amendment was withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

Assistant principal, who shall be dean of girls of the Central High School, $1,800: Provided, That hereafter said assistant principal shall be placed at a basic salary of $1,800 per annum, and shall be entitled to an increase of $100 per annum for five years.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the language in this bill so far as it covers the word "hereafter."

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I concede the point of order, of course, and shall not contest it.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is made to the word "hereafter"?

Mr. MANN. Yes; to the word "hereafter."

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

Directors of music, drawing, physical culture, domestic science, domestic art, kindergartens, and penmanship, seven, at $1,500 each: Provided, That hereafter the director of penmanship, who shall be an instructor in the normal school and a director in the grades, shall be placed at a basic salary of $1,500 per annum, and shall be entitled to an increase of $100 per annum for five years.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order to the word "hereafter," in line 19.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I concede the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

Assistant director of primary instruction, $1,500: Provided, That hereafter the assistant director of primary instruction now in the service of the public schools, or hereafter to be appointed, shall be placed at the basic salary of $1,500 per annum, and shall be entitled to an increase of $50 per annum for five years.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph. How long has this provision, if the gentleman remembers, been carried in the appropriation act?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. My recollection is that this was carried in the current law for the first time; that this was created in the current law.

Mr. MANN. Then this assistant director is getting, under the law, an increase of $50 a year, and would for five years?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes.

Mr. MANN. He is not satisfied with that, but wants to get two increases.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. That happens very often in the peculiar plan of increase under the law for the teachers in Washington.

Mr. MANN. I do not remember many cases where appropriation bills expressly provide for the increase of salary in one way and then take another turn and provide for an increase in another line. I do not think it is quite a fair proposition.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I am informed by the Clerk that she receives longevity pay under the current law.

Mr. MANN. If the provision remains in the bill without the word "hereafter" and without increase of basic salary—the gentleman says "she"; I did not know whether it was a male or female—would receive the annual increase. But if you increase the basic salary she would receive the annual increase; that is, two increases. No doubt the money can be profitably used by the person; still it seems to me that under the circumstances one increase is sufficient. I make the point of order against the word "hereafter" and against the salary of $1,500.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. There are two hereafters in the paragraph.

Mr. MANN. I refer to the word "hereafter" in line 25, and also to the amount of $1,500 in line 3, page 47.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains both points of order.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I move to amend by inserting in line 3, page 47, "$1,400."

Mr. MANN. And the same in line 24.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. And in line 24, page 46.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina offers two amendments, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 46, line 24, strike out "fifteen hundred" and insert "fourteen hundred." Page 47, line 3, at the beginning of the line, insert "$1,400."

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, both amendments will be voted on together.

There was no objection.

The amendments were agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Assistant directors of music, drawing, physical culture, domestic science, domestic art, kindergartens, and penmanship, seven, at $1,300 each: Provided, That hereafter the assistant director of penmanship, who shall be an instructor in the normal school and an assistant director in the grades, shall be placed at a basic salary of $1,300 per annum and shall be entitled to an increase of $50 per annum for five years.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the word "hereafter" in line 7.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

Conduit Road, Chain Bridge Road, and Fort Slocum Schools: Three janitors, at $150 each; in all, $450.

In all, $177,650.

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of asking the gentleman in charge of the bill a question. How many public schools are there in the District of Columbia?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. They are all enumerated in this schedule. I have not counted them.

Mr. BENNET. By a very rough count I made 120. Can it be possible that there are that many schools in the District of Columbia?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes; I think probably more than that rather than less. They are all enumerated by name in this schedule, and then there are some portable schools that are not enumerated.

Mr. BENNET. No one can ever say that the education of the children of the District is not properly cared for.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I should think not, in a city with a population that Washington has and the number of schools provided.

Mr. BENNET. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON] says that, according to his recollection, there are 199 schools.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. The gentleman's recollection is in error. The number is much nearer that stated by the gentleman from New York.

Mr. FESS. And there are about 2,000 teachers?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Two thousand teachers.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I would like to ask the gentleman if there is any school in the District for defective children?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes; there are schools for children that are not of the average intellect, backward children.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Backward children, they are called.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes; defective and backward. They are cared for not in a separate school building, but in separate classes, because obviously the gentleman will see that to gather all of that class of children at one place in the District would work a great hardship on the parents of those children. They are taken care of in classes in the various schools scattered about the city.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I have observed there is some agitation in the District with reference to the segregation of these children.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. With reference to the segregation of tubercular children, not of defective or backward children, in a separate school.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Is a separate school now maintained for tubercular children?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. No.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. That, of course, would require a special open-air treatment?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Of course. There has been recently by the health department and the school authorities some action taken excluding from the schools on medical examination tubercular children, but so far no provision has been made for the teaching of that child in a separate school.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. It frequently happens in other cities that backward children are taken out of the classes and otherwise provided for. I was interested to the extent of knowing whether when a backward child is discovered, a child that is unable to keep up with the ordinary classes, provision is made for it in the same school.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. There is provision made for that class of children, but just how extensively I do not know; but I know that such classes are maintained and provided.

Mr. MANN. I would say to the gentleman that with respect to tubercular children it would be cheaper and more humane to poison them than it would to do a lot of the things that are asked should be done.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. We have not done anything, I will say to the gentleman.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Nothing has been done as to tubercular children?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Absolutely nothing has been done. That is the matter that is now being agitated and for which no provision is made.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I assume, of course, in line with the suggestion of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], that there would have to be special treatment with respect to tubercular children; that is to say, it would have to be an open-air treatment in some form or other?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I think not only an open-air treatment, but some provision would have to be made because of the character of these children and the homes from which they come, in the way of the provision of proper nourishment and possibly proper clothing. There are a number of things involved in this question that is just now beginning to be agitated.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I am glad to have the gentleman's answer with respect to defective children, because it has happened in other cities that children that ought to have a fair chance in the world, although behind in their classes, are rather roughly pushed aside, when they ought to have special consideration.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I agree with the gentleman, and while I do not know that it is being done to the extent to which it should be done, yet there is an effort being made to carry out that work by forming classes of these backward children.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes.

Mr. FESS. Investigation indicates that backward children are not necessarily mentally defective, but they are slow to learn, and under expert teachers many of them come to very large degrees of achievement.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. The gentleman noticed I met the gentleman's statement as to backward children by using both terms—backward and defective. Because a child is backward does not mean that he is necessarily defective.

Mr. FESS. And usually the school boards, and I think this one, undertake to employ the very best teacher for that particular group of pupils that can be found anywhere.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. If they do not, they should.

Mr. FESS. They do.

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words. There is the backward child and the defective child and then the ungraded child, the child that comes from some State where they have a different system, or the child that comes from a private school. Is there any class anywhere in the District of Columbia that takes care of them?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I do not know of any. I think those children are graded up as best possible. Of course the child will naturally come to its own level, in which he finds he can make his way, and he is not put into a higher grade than one in which he can maintain himself.

Mr. BENNET. In New York we have a few classes that are called ungraded classes, where they take the normal child who has come from another jurisdiction and prepare him for an appropriate grade, so that he will not retard the grade or injure himself by being put into a grade into which he ought not to go. It is the gentleman's belief there is no such thing here?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. If there is any such thing, I am not familiar with it. I am inclined to think that there is no such provision made, but that these children are placed in the grade they most nearly fit and in which they can make their way.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For care of smaller buildings and rented rooms, including cooking and manual-training schools, wherever located, at a rate not to exceed $72 per annum for the care of each schoolroom, other than those occupied by atypical or ungraded classes for which service an amount not to exceed $108 per annum may be allowed, $10,000.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I call the attention of the gentleman from New York to the paragraph just read. It seems there is an attempt made to do just what we were discussing.

Mr. BENNET. That answers my question thoroughly.

The Clerk read as follows:

For purchase of United States flags, $900.

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word in order to ask the gentleman from North Carolina whether there is a law in the District of Columbia, such as there is in some States, including my own, I am glad to say, providing that the United States flag shall fly at all times on schoolhouses, or is that governed by the general law relating to public buildings?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I think there is a law. At any rate, there is a flag on all public buildings and all school buildings of the District.

Mr. MANN. In some places it requires a law to incite patriotism, but here no such thing is required.

Mr. BENNET. I understand that they do not have flags on school buildings in Chicago.

Mr. MANN. Oh, the gentleman is mistaken about that. We are required by law to do it there, just as they are in New York.

The Clerk read as follows:

For payment of necessary expenses connected with the organization and conducting of community forums and civic centers in school buildings, including fixtures and supplies for lighting and equipping the buildings, payment of janitor service, secretaries, teachers, and organizers, and employees of the day schools may also be employees of the community forums and civic centers, $5,000.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order on the paragraph. I judge from this paragraph that the school board now has authority to give permission to organizations to use school buildings for municipal forums?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes; they have, and now there are a number. The statement was made that there are 78 of these organizations known as social centers, with the permission, of course, of the board of education, being conducted in school buildings.

Mr. MANN. What does the Government pay in the way of services, teachers, and organizers? Do they pay some one to go and organize these?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. No; I think not. I think the payments represented to the committee under this appropriation, or any other that was at their disposal, was for light and janitor.

Mr. MANN. Oh, but it says, "Payments of janitor service, secretaries, teachers, and organizers." However, what I really wanted to get at is this: If this appropriation is agreed to, what necessity will there be to pass the bill that we had under consideration here on Monday last. Why is it not all covered by this?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. To be entirely frank with the gentleman from my point of view, there is no necessity, whether this went in or not——

Mr. MANN. I am not sure I quite agree with the necessity if this does not go in; but this being in, what is the necessity of the other. In other words, if the school board is doing a thing voluntarily in matters where they ought to have some discretion, what is the reason for binding them by a law?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Being even more explicit in my answer, the subcommittee that framed and allowed this appropriation have in mind, under the present authority given the governing board of the schools of the District of Columbia, if they were given this appropriation it would not only obviate the necessity of the passage of the bill which was being considered a few days ago but would so appeal to those who were pushing that bill that they would stop and this would meet all that is now required.

Mr. MANN. I call attention to it—I was under the impression this item was subject to the point of order—so if anybody desired to specially pose as a representative of the other bill they might make the point of order now. Mr. Chairman, I will withdraw the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

Buildings and grounds: For continuing the construction of the new Eastern High School on the site purchased for that purpose, $300,000.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. Will the gentleman in charge of the bill kindly state whether provision is made in this bill for paying a teacher of practical printing?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. No, sir; there is no such recommendation included in the estimates made to Congress.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Is practical printing taught in the public schools of the District?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. No; I think not, unless it is in what is known as the Business High School or the Manual-Training School; certainly not in the grade and grammar schools.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. On page 47 provision is made for certain principals of high and manual-training schools. They are referred to only in classes, so it is impossible from the reading of the bill to distinguish what occupations are taught.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I will say to the gentleman there is no instruction in printing in the Washington public schools, the graded schools. I am inclined to think there is none even in the high schools or manual-training schools.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. If there had been such an instructor—I had been informed that practical printing has been taught, though I take the gentleman's word for it that practical printing is not taught here——

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. If it is it has not come within my knowledge.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The question arises whether a practical printer—that is to say, one experienced in practical printing—is in charge of that work.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. My answer is that there is none within my knowledge, and there is no teacher so designated as a teacher of the art of printing.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I am frank to say it does not appear from a cursory reading of the bill that such a provision is made.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I do not think there is any such provision made.

The Clerk read as follows:

Hereafter so much of any balance of appropriations remaining after the purchase of sites for buildings as is necessary to clean up, grade, drain, fence in, and place the sites in safe and suitable condition for the purposes intended may be used for such purpose.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph. You provided last year the balance of appropriations for buildings authorized by the current law might be used to clean up the lot. I think that was perfectly proper. You propose to insert as a permanent law a provision under which Congress will have to appropriate money for the purchase of a site. Congress supposes the site is going to cost so much, but they pad the returns and ask for a greater sum with a view of doing what nobody will know in the way of improvements. That does not seem to me to be good legislation.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Well, I shall not be offended if the gentleman makes the point of order. I agree with him that it is not good legislation.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained.

The Clerk read as follows:

The school buildings authorized and appropriated for herein shall be constructed with all doors intended to be used as exits or entrances opening outward, and each of said buildings having an excess of eight rooms shall have at least four exits. Appropriations carried in this act shall not be used for the maintenance of school in any building unless all outside doors thereto used as exits or entrances shall open outward and be kept unlocked every school day from one-half hour before until one-half hour after school hours.

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of asking the chairman a question. In line 8 should not the word "an" be "in." It should read "having in excess of eight rooms." I think that is what is meant.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. It should be "in excess" in line 8. It should be "in."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 60, line 8, strike out the word "an" and insert the word "in."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the chairman of the subcommittee another question. Lines 11 to 14 of this paragraph are intended to accomplish a very worthy purpose, but how, as a practical matter, is it ever going to be enforced?

Mr. MANN. It has been the law for 10 years.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. As a matter of fact, I will say to the gentleman, these school buildings are constructed so that the doors do open outward, and they have this number of doors. It is construed by the authorities of the District and those having charge of the construction of these buildings to be demanded.

Mr. BENNET. It is a sort of general instruction carried in the form of this bill?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. It is. It is really a limitation.

Mr. MANN. I remember when a hysterical wave swept over the town and the House, and they stuck this in. Of course, if there was a penal clause in connection with that, every school-teacher, every principal, every janitor, everybody connected with the school board, would have heavy fines to pay.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Having the doors open half an hour after and before?

Mr. MANN. Yes.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I was not referring to that in my reply to the gentleman from New York. But as to having the number of doors and having them open out——

Mr. BENNET. That is a physical fact that can be established by the inspection of the building.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I do not know anything about the enforcement of this law as to keeping the doors open before and after school hours.

Mr. BENNET. It is like one of the "God-bless-our-home" mottoes on the wall.

Mr. MANN. It is very much like the movement in the House the other day to increase the clerk allowance.

The Clerk read as follows:

For instruction of indigent blind children of the District of Columbia, in Maryland or some other State, under a contract to be entered into by the commissioners, $7,500, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I ask unanimous consent that I may have permission to extend my remarks on this subject.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California asks unanimous consent that he may have permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Reserving the right to object, I would like to ask if the gentleman intends to extend his remarks at this point in the proceedings or at the back of the RECORD?

Mr. RAKER. At the back of the RECORD. It is the custom of the House, and it has been agreed that where a man extends his remarks they should go at the end of the RECORD.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. It is a custom that is not always observed.

Mr. RAKER. It is a custom that has been observed pretty well. If it is not observed, I think the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] ought to see that it is observed, because I think it is right and proper that it should be carried out.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. A day or two ago it was not observed, and in a very conspicuous way. In the midst of a discussion of a bill like this a gentleman asked permission to extend, and cut out four or five pages of pertinent matter in the RECORD with a speech entirely foreign to the discussion.

Mr. RAKER. If the gentleman refers to me——

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I did not refer to the gentleman.

Mr. RAKER. That is where my speech belonged, because it related to the amendment under discussion in the House, and I wanted it in the RECORD so that the Senate might have the context and the amendment together.

Mr. MANN. The Senate will not read the gentleman's speech, and it was not proper to insert it at that place in the RECORD under leave to print.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The speech should have gone at the back of the RECORD. I have no objection if the extension appears there. I understand the gentleman intends to put this at the back?

Mr. RAKER. I do.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Then I will not object.

The Clerk read as follows:

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Chief engineer, $3,500; deputy chief engineer, $2,500; 4 battalion chief engineers, at $2,000 each; fire marshal, $2,000; deputy fire marshal, $1,400; 2 inspectors, at $1,080 each; chief clerk, $2,000; clerk, $1,400; 38 captains, at $1,500 each; 40 lieutenants, at $1,320 each; 40 sergeants, at $1,200 each; superintendent of machinery, $2,000; assistant superintendent of machinery, $1,200; 27 engineers, at $1,200 each; 27 assistant engineers, at $1,100 each; 2 pilots, at $1,150 each; 2 marine engineers, at $1,200 each; 2 assistant marine engineers, at $1,100 each; 2 marine firemen, at $720 each; 40 drivers, at $1,150 each; 40 assistant drivers, at $1,100 each; 183 private of class 2, at $1,140 each; 44 privates of class 1, at $960 each; hostler, $600; laborer, $600; in all, $596,460.

Mr. CARLIN. Mr. Chairman, I want to ask the chairman of the committee which of these items represents an increase in the pay of these men mentioned?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Thirty-eight captains in the force are increased from $1,300 to $1,400; 40 lieutenants from $1,200 to $1,320. The grade of sergeant has grown from privates now receiving $1,080 to $1,200, and 183 privates are increased from $1,080 to $1,140. That is the increase with these active units in the fire department.

Mr. CARLIN. Has there been any increase in the engineers of the fire department?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. No.

Mr. CARLIN. Why not?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. In 27 engineers now receiving $1,200 and 27 assistant engineers at $1,100 each there is no increase.

Mr. CARLIN. Why not?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Well, sir, if the gentleman has an amendment to offer——

Mr. CARLIN. I am asking why it is the committee saw fit to increase the salary of all the other employees and did not increase that of the engineers?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I will say to the gentleman that there is some distinction between those who are engineers and the active fire fighters, and, in the judgment of the committee, there is a reason why they are entitled to get the increase more than the men in charge of the machines. And that appealing to the subcommittee, we made these increases and changes, thinking we were putting them more on a parity than they are at the present time.

Mr. CARLIN. Is it not a fact that the 10 per cent increase provided for all District employees covers all under $1,200?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Not in this department. The provision I have drawn, as I have said several times to-day in reply to inquiries of gentlemen—the amendment I shall offer at the end of the bill for percentage increases to the employees of the District excludes from the provision the Metropolitan police, the fire department, and the public schools.

Mr. CARLIN. The gentleman having increased the police and fire departments by specific items, of course it would not be necessary to include them in an amendment, but having omitted these few men, the engineers, would the gentleman include them?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I will call to the gentleman's attention that the engineers in the department, under the same bill, are receiving the same as the sergeants in the department. I do not think they ought to be given a greater salary than that. I do not believe that the engineer is entitled to it.

Mr. CARLIN. They have always received a greater rate of pay until now, and you have increased the sergeants' pay.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. The gentleman will recognize that we have not had in this organization a sergeant before. Now we have sergeants, but we put them in for reasons of discipline and good organization, because privates have heretofore been acting as sergeants, and while they had no additional pay they did not have the proper authority or the respect of the men under them. For that reason we thought it wise to create the position of sergeant, and we put that salary on an equality with the engineer.

Mr. CARLIN. They have no relation with each other, and can not be compared with one another.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. That may be a matter of opinion as to whether they can be compared with each other. They can be compared as to the service rendered. The committee did not feel that the class of employees that the gentleman is now referring to has the same claim, but, of course, as to the others, that is our judgment.

Mr. CARLIN. Is not this true, that if the amendment you propose to offer should pass, increasing the salaries of all other District employees, these will be the only employees of the District government who do not receive additional compensation?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Oh, not at all. There are a great many of the Metropolitan police and people in the schools who will be in the same position.

Mr. CARLIN. I notice these increases seem to be along the line of about 10 per cent. Would the gentleman object to an amendment increasing them by that rate?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I can not object if you offer them.

Mr. CARLIN. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment to these particular items, beginning with line 13 of page 65. My amendment covers lines 13 and 14 of page 65.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CARLIN:

Page 65, line 13: "An increase of $120 a year for the 27 steam engineers, making a total increase of $3,240.

"Twenty-seven assistant engineers at $1,100 a year, an increase of $100 a year, making a total increase of $2,700.

"Two marine engineers at $1,200, an increase of $120 a year, making a total increase of $240.

"Two assistant marine engineers at $1,100 a year, an increase of $100 a year, making a total increase of $200."

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I submit that that language is not in the proper form, and I reserve a point of order against the amendment.

Mr. CARLIN. I think the point of order is a good one. I shall move, as an amendment, that, on line 13, page 65, after the "$1,200," it shall be made to read "$1,220 each."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CARLIN: Page 65, line 13, strike out the figures "$1,200" and insert in lieu thereof "$1,220."

Mr. CARLIN. Mr. Chairman, I mean "$1,320."

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. What is the gentleman's point of order?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. The point of order is that it increases a salary that is now in the law.

The CHAIRMAN. Changing existing law?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Changing existing law.

The CHAIRMAN. What has the gentleman from Virginia to say about it?

Mr. CARLIN. If that be true, Mr. Chairman——

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order.

Mr. CARLIN. If that be true, and the gentleman is going to insist upon that, I am perfectly willing to get an expression from the House. I insist that these men are entitled to the increase that is given to every other employee of the District government, and I am content to rest there. If the point of order be good, it will be good as to all the other items in the bill, and we might as well have an adjournment now, so as to enable us to consider these things to-morrow morning.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. That does not lie. It is too late, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. That point of order comes too late. The point of order which the gentleman from Virginia intimates he would like to make would be good if made in time, but the question in the mind of the Chair now is this: In view of the fact that there are increases carried in this paragraph for some of these employees, is the point of order well taken when it is proposed to apply it to others? I suppose there is no question about it.

Mr. CARLIN. Mr. Chairman, I think we can arrange this thing satisfactorily. I perhaps misunderstood the purpose of the gentleman's amendment covering the general employees. It is 10 per cent to those under $1,200 and 5 per cent to those at $1,200 and over. So I will make my amendment 5 per cent, and move to strike out "$1,200" and make it "$1,260." That is on page 65, line 13.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I want to be fair to the House. I have no pets, and I have nobody in mind who would be affected by it. If we are going to do this, I suggest that, on line 12, page 65, the figures "$1,200" be stricken out and "$1,260" inserted therefor.

Mr. MANN. I shall make a point of order against any of these amendments.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina made a point of order against the amendment pending, proposed by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. CARLIN]. The Chair sustains the point of order. Now the gentleman from Virginia offers another amendment, does he?

Mr. CARLIN. I understood the chairman of the committee offered this amendment.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I began to offer an amendment, but if the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] is going to make his point of order against it, I have no purpose to move amendments merely in order to see them go out.

Mr. MANN. I have no objection, so far as I am concerned, against providing an increase for these people in the fire department who have no increase under the general provision. We propose to give an increase for one year. We propose to treat them all alike.

Mr. CARLIN. The gentleman admits that these persons of whom I am speaking are not included in the general increase at all?

Mr. MANN. Well, I do not know as to that; but if so, and because they are not included, is the gentleman trying to get them included permanently?

Mr. CARLIN. That would seem to be so, but I want them included in the annual appropriation bill if the gentleman from North Carolina will simply provide for them. That will suit me. And that will suit the gentleman from Illinois as well as myself.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. If the amendment does not go out on a point of order—and it is subject to a point of order—I can not control it; but if the gentleman will merely reserve his right until we have reached that place in the bill I think that matter can be adjusted.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment will be withdrawn.

There was no objection.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I move, in line 12, of page 65, to strike out the figures "$1,200" and insert the figures "$1,250" for the assistant superintendent of machinery.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against that. It is the same point of order that I made against the amendment of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. CARLIN].

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I hope the gentleman will reserve his point of order. I wish to ask him a question.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I reserve the point of order.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I wish to ask the gentleman whether or not the increase that he proposes at the end of the bill will cover this salary?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. There is no proposition to increase by percentage or automatically anything in excess of $1,800, either here or anywhere else.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Is the gentleman aware that this was estimated for at $2,250?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes; I am aware that the commissioners asked for an increase in this particular item, but as it related to other employment, in other divisions and other departments of the Government, the committee did not think it was warranted and they did not allow it.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Is the gentleman aware that this superintendent of machinery has under him the repair shop and the purchase of apparatus, and so forth, amounting to $16,000, at the bottom of the next page?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes; and I know of men in the District government who have the expenditure of $1,000,000—a man in the purchasing division of the District government——

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. But they are not required to run a shop, as this gentleman is.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Oh, no; and propably this man is very glad to run it, instead of being one of those employed there and having some one else run it. I think possibly he has an advantage in that he does run it.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I hope the gentleman will withdraw the point of order.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I insist on the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. DALLINGER. I should like to ask the gentleman from North Carolina if I understand correctly that the amendment which he intends to offer does not apply to employees of the fire department whose salaries are under $1,800 and under $1,200, respectively?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. The amendment which I shall offer excludes from the increase of 10 per cent in the one case, and 5 per cent in the other, the employees of the Metropolitan police, the fire department, and the public schools.

Mr. DALLINGER. May I ask the gentleman his reason for excluding the employees of the fire department from these increases?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Because in this particular bill we have increased practically all of the active units of the fire department fully 10 per cent.

Mr. DALLINGER. In this bill?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. In this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

HEALTH DEPARTMENT.

Health officer, $4,000; assistant health officer, $2,500; chief clerk and deputy health officer, $2,500; chief, bureau of vital statistics, $1,800; clerks—1, $1,600, 5 at $1,200 each, 4 at $1,000 each, 2 at $900 each, 1 $720; sanitary inspectors—chief $1,800, assistant chief $1,400, eight at $1,200 each, 2 at $1,000 each, 3 at $900 each; food inspectors—chief $1,800, assistant chief $1,400, 3 at $1,400 each, 5 at $1,200 each, 6 at $1,000 each, 5 at $900 each; chemist, $2,000; assistant chemist, $1,200; director of bacteriological laboratory, $2,500 (now on per diem roll at $7); assistant bacteriologist, $1,500; assistant bacteriologist, $1,200; skilled laborers—1 $720, 1 $600; 2 messengers, at $600 each; driver, $600; poundmaster, $1,400; watchman, $600; laborers, at not exceeding $50 per month each, $2,400; in all, $82,240.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph. What is the occasion for these three new inspectors at $1,400 each? Is it the necessity for more men, or is it to give a chance for promotions?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. It is the necessity for an increased number of employees; the representation being made to the committee not only this year, but last year, when we gave practically no increases, that the present force find it impossible properly to inspect the food and dairy products of the District.

Mr. MANN. Does the gentleman remember how many sanitary and food inspectors there are here?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I do not remember the number.

Mr. MANN. There are about 30.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Somewhere in that neighborhood.

Mr. MANN. Something like that, in a city which is not large.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. But I should like to call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that the inspectors go outside of the District, to dairies at a considerable distance from the city of Washington.

Mr. MANN. Oh, they do not go very often.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I do not know how often.

Mr. MANN. That is mostly moonshine.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I know that they do go, and that they inspect these dairies that furnish milk to the city of Washington.

Mr. MANN. Then you carry in this bill a director of the bacteriological laboratory at $2,500. Of course, that is an increase in salary and a considerable increase.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. He is on the rolls now at $7 a day.

Mr. MANN. Why is he not willing to stay there?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I do not know but that he may be willing. The health officer of the District, who has charge of this particular activity, feels that this man's services are worth $2,500. I do not know how the gentleman from Illinois may feel about it as a layman, but I want to say to him that I was not willing to stake my judgment as a layman against the judgment of professional experts in the inspection of milk and food for the inhabitants of the city and particularly children and babies.

Mr. MANN. If I had not been willing to put my judgment against a whole lot of experts the pure-food bill would never have become a law, but it did. I do not think I have to apologize for that. A raft of experts told us that it could not be done.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. The gentleman achieved a great deal in the pure-food law, and he is entitled to great credit for it.

Mr. MANN. I am not claiming any credit for it.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. The gentleman demonstrated that he was willing to risk his judgment in the formation of a law against that of experts. But I want to say that as against the department of health and the inspection of food and milk for the District, I do not care to risk mine. I did exercise considerable judgment as to the estimate that was submitted. We did not allow all that they asked for. In some particulars we have increased it; we have increased the inspection force, and I think we are justified by the hearings.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the language in lines 11 and 12, "three at $1,400 each"; and also line 14, "director of bacteriological laboratory, $2,500 (now on per diem roll at $7)"; also "assistant bacteriologist, $1,500."

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I have no desire to consume the time; I concede the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

Not less than 12 of the sanitary and food inspectors above provided for shall be employed in enforcement of milk and pure-food laws and regulations relating thereto and in the inspection of dairies and dairy farms.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order on the paragraph.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I concede the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

For maintenance of disinfecting service, including salaries or compensation for personal services when ordered in writing by the commissioners and necessary for maintenance of said service, and for purchase and maintenance of necessary horses, wagons, and harness, $6,000.

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of asking the gentleman in charge of the bill for information about a paragraph on page 68. Is any part of this appropriation spent outside of the District of Columbia?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. There is none used outside the District of Columbia except in the inspection of dairy farms.

Mr. BENNET. They do follow the system of going into adjacent States to inspect dairy farms?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Yes; where the dairy farms supply milk to this jurisdiction.

Mr. KING. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words. I would like to get some information at this point. Last year I was residing at 225 B Street NE. Personally I do not care anything about the matter, but I noticed that there was a terrific stench rising within two squares of the Congressional Library. On investigation I found a certain dray firm in the city was keeping 45 head of horses within two squares of the Congressional Library, so that that section of the city was entirely covered by this stench. I called on the health department, and they investigated the matter and reported that they had no authority under the law to remove anything of the kind. The health officer claimed that they could keep horses anywhere in the District. As I understand it, it is reported on good authority that meningitis is caused by something that emanates from the horse. I want to inquire why it is that a thing of that kind can not be remedied on Capitol Hill?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I do not know. I should have said that under the language of the bill and the general authority given to the health department they had power enough to abate a nuisance of the kind that the gentleman mentions. Whether they have the power to remove the keeping of horses or not, they have the power to see that the premises are kept in a sanitary condition, so that they will not produce a nuisance. I do not think there is any question about that. It is very likely a question of the exercise of power under the law.

Mr. KING. The gentleman believes that the nuisance could have been abated if the officer had done his duty?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I think they could have used their power under the law to abate such a nuisance.

The Clerk read as follows:

For special services in connection with the detection of the adulteration of drugs and of foods, including candy and milk, $100.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. Is this $100 all that is expended in the District of Columbia for the detection of the adulteration of drugs?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Oh, no; there are several special acts, as I understand it, very drastic ones.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Some newspapers here have made a specialty of investigating the sale of narcotic drugs?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I am not familiar with the general law; but they have more appropriations than this.

Mr. MANN. The food inspectors are under the health officer.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. The pure food and drug act is as much applicable to the District of Columbia as to any other place, as well as the Internal-Revenue Service.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Of course; but this matter of detection is a very important one to the District.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. This is for the purpose of allowing the commissioners a small sum of money by which they can send some person unidentified into places of business to buy these things in order that they may be inspected and tested in the laboratory. It is a provision that they may get hold of these things without sending an officer of the law who is known.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I am glad to have the gentleman make that statement. While I am on my feet I want to say that it has been brought to my attention that the use of narcotic drugs is largely on the increase in the District of Columbia, and that this has been particularly so since the introduction of certain alleged reform laws in the District, which have tended to encourage vice and which, instead of suppressing vice and restricting it, have spread it over the District, into apartment houses and hotels and residential sections, where it ought not to exist. It has come to my attention with respect to the use of narcotic drugs, that they have had a very deleterious and serious effect upon the morals of certain of the young people in the District, and that that tendency has been on the increase. Of course, if this $100 were all that was to be appropriated for the purpose of detecting this nefarious trade, I would ask that more money be appropriated.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. That has no relation whatever to the enforcement of those laws. It is merely for the purpose of aiding the commissioners in the enforcement of the law under other appropriations, to purchase these drugs or foods, as the case may be, in order that the investigation may be made.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the establishment and maintenance of a dispensary or dispensaries for the treatment of persons suffering from tuberculosis and of persons suffering from venereal diseases, including payment for personal service, rent, and supplies: Provided, That the commissioners may accept such volunteer services as they deem expedient in connection with the establishment and maintenance of the dispensaries herein authorized, $12,500.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 71, line 24, after the word "authorized," insert:
"Provided further, That this shall not be construed to authorize the expenditure or the payment of any money on account of any such volunteer service."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. Will the gentleman state, if he knows, whether these dispensaries for the treatment of the diseases referred to are to be under the same roof? The diseases are of a vastly different character.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I will say to the gentleman that they are not established at all yet. This is a new paragraph, and an effort on the part of the committee and of those in charge of the health of the District to establish and maintain a dispensary or dispensaries for the treatment of persons suffering from these diseases. It is not the purpose to retain patients having these diseases. They are intended to be really what the name calls for.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. For the dispensing of medicine?

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. For the dispensing of medicine.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The treatment of the two kinds of diseases would be so vastly different that they ought not to be put into juxtaposition.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. It is not the purpose to put them together, and therefore the plural, "dispensaries," is used.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I call attention to it because it is rather anomalous that the situation should be stated as it is in the paragraph. I trust when the time comes to create these dispensaries, which I favor, the administrative department will have sense enough to have tuberculosis treated by itself, apart from any other disease.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. I think the gentleman, from his statement of the case, may rest assured that they will not treat these two diseases in the same place.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words. We have made pretty good progress to-day and we have now reached the courts. I think it would be a good idea to rise at this point.

Mr. PAGE of North Carolina. Well, Mr. Chairman, in view of the goodness not only of the gentleman from Illinois but other gentlemen during the day I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. GARRETT, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 19119 and had come to no resolution thereon.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Waldorf, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had agreed to the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 6116) providing for the taxation of the lands of the Winnebago Indians and the Omaha Indians in the State of Nebraska.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bill of the following title:

S. 6116. An act providing for the taxation of the lands of the Winnebago Indians and the Omaha Indians in the State of Nebraska.

ENROLLED BILL PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT FOR HIS APPROVAL.

Mr. LAZARO, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that this day they had presented to the President of the United States, for his approval, the following bill:

H. R. 1788. An act for the relief of Thomas M. Jones.

UNITED STATES SECTION INTERNATIONAL HIGH COMMISSION (H. DOC. NO. 1788).

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith, for the information of the Congress, the report of the United States section of the International High Commission on the first general meeting of the commission held at Buenos Aires, April 3–12, 1916.

WOODROW WILSON.

THE WHITE HOUSE, December 20, 1916.

The SPEAKER. The message is referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs and ordered printed, together with the accompanying documents.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

SENATE.

THURSDAY, December 21, 1916.

The Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, we desire to enter into sacred and holy communion with Thee that the path which lies before us in this day's service may be as the path of the just that shineth more and more to the perfect day. Thy kingdom is within us, and we desire to interpret the terms and qualities and forces of Thy kingdom in the outward acts of life, especially in this place of great influence and power. We desire to represent the highest interests of humanity in the name of God. Guide us to this end this day. We ask for Christ's sake. Amen.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Utah suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

PEACE OVERTURE.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I ask that the note sent by the President to the various European belligerent powers on Monday of the present week, which has been quite generally published this morning in the press of the country, and a copy of which I send to the desk, may be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The note referred to is as follows:

[Telegram.]

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO AMBASSADOR GERARD.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 18, 1916.

The President directs me to send you the following communication to be presented immediately to the Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Government to which you are accredited:

"The President of the United States has instructed me to suggest to the Imperial German Government a course of action with regard to the present war which he hopes that the Imperial Government will take under consideration as suggested in the most friendly spirit and as coming not only from a friend but also as coming from the representative of a neutral nation whose interests have been most seriously affected by the war and whose concern for its early conclusion arises out of a manifest necessity to determine how best to safeguard those interests if the war is to continue.

"The suggestion which I am instructed to make the President has long had it in mind to offer. He is somewhat embarrassed to offer it at this particular time because it may now seem to have been prompted by a desire to play a part in connection with the recent overtures of the Central Powers. It has in fact been in no way suggested by them in its origin and the President would have delayed offering it until those overtures had been independently answered but for the fact that it also concerns the question of peace and may best be considered in connection with other proposals which have the same end in view. The President can only beg that his suggestion be considered entirely on its own merits and as if it had been made in other circumstances.

"The President suggests that an early occasion be sought to call out from all the nations now at war such an avowal of their respective views as to the terms upon which the war might be concluded and the arrangements which would be deemed satisfactory as a guaranty against its renewal or the kindling of any similar conflict in the future as would make it possible frankly to compare them. He is indifferent as to the means taken to accomplish this. He would be happy himself to serve, or even to take the initiative in its accomplishment, in any way that might prove acceptable, but he has no desire to determine the method or the instrumentality. One way will be as acceptable to him as another if only the great object he has in mind be attained.

"He takes the liberty of calling attention to the fact that the objects which the statesmen of the belligerents on both sides have in mind in this war are virtually the same, as stated in general terms to their own people and to the world. Each side desires to make the rights and privileges of weak peoples and small states as secure against aggression or denial in the future as the rights and privileges of the great and powerful states now at war. Each wishes itself to be made secure in the future, along with all other nations and peoples, against the recurrence of wars like this, and against aggression of selfish interference of any kind. Each would be jealous of the formation of any more rival leagues to preserve an uncertain balance of power amidst multiplying suspicions; but each is ready to consider the formation of a league of nations to insure peace and justice throughout the world. Before that final step can be taken, however, each deems it necessary first to settle the issues of the present war upon terms which will certainly safeguard the independence, the territorial integrity, and the political and commercial freedom of the nations involved.

"In the measures to be taken to secure the future peace of the world the people and Government of the United States are as vitally and as directly interested as the Governments now at war. Their interest, moreover, in the means to be adopted to relieve the smaller and weaker peoples of the world of the peril of wrong and violence is as quick and ardent as that of any other people or Government. They stand ready, and even eager, to cooperate in the accomplishment of these ends, when the war is over, with every influence and resource at their command. But the war must first be concluded. The terms upon which it is to be concluded they are not at liberty to suggest; but the President does feel that it is his right and his duty to point out their intimate interest in its conclusion, lest it should presently be too late to accomplish the greater things which lie beyond its conclusion, lest the situation of neutral nations, now exceedingly hard to endure, be rendered altogether intolerable, and lest, more than all, an injury be done civilization itself which can never be atoned for or repaired.

"The President therefore feels altogether justified in suggesting an immediate opportunity for a comparison of views as to the terms which must precede those ultimate arrangements for the peace of the world, which all desire and in which the neutral nations as well as those at war are ready to play their full responsible part. If the contest must continue to proceed towards undefined ends by slow attrition until the one group of belligerents or the other is exhausted, if million after million of human lives must continue to be offered up until on the one side or the other there are no more to offer, if resentments must be kindled that can never cool and despairs engendered from which there can be no recovery, hopes of peace and of the willing concert of free peoples will be rendered vain and idle.

"The life of the entire world has been profoundly affected. Every part of the great family of mankind has felt the burden and terror of this unprecedented contest of arms. No nation in the civilized world can be said in truth to stand outside its influence or to be safe against its disturbing effects. And yet the concrete objects for which it is being waged have never been definitively stated.

"The leaders of the several belligerents have, as has been said, stated those objects in general terms. But, stated in general terms, they seem the same on both sides. Never yet have the authoritative spokesmen of either side avowed the precise objects which would, if attained, satisfy them and their people that the war had been fought out. The world has been left to conjecture what definitive results, what actual exchange of guaranties, what political or territorial changes or readjustments, what stage of military success even, would bring the war to an end.

"It may be that peace is nearer than we know; that the terms which the belligerents on the one side and on the other would deem it necessary to insist upon are not so irreconcilable as some have feared; that an interchange of views would clear the way at least for conference and make the permanent concord of the nations a hope of the immediate future, a concert of nations immediately practicable.

"The President is not proposing peace; he is not even offering mediation. He is merely proposing that soundings be taken in order that we may learn, the neutral nations with the belligerent, how near the haven of peace may be for which all mankind longs with an intense and increasing longing. He believes that the spirit in which he speaks and the objects which he seeks will be understood by all concerned, and he confidently hopes for a response which will bring a new light into the affairs of the world."

LANSING.

ESTIMATES OF APPROPRIATION.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the Secretary of War submitting a further estimate, under the office of the Chief Signal Officer, for the services of skilled draftsmen and such other services as the Secretary of War may deem necessary to be employed in the Signal Office to carry into effect the various appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense for the Signal Service of the Army, in the amount of $100,000 (S. Doc. No. 647), which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the Secretary of the Navy submitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation for salaries, Bureau of Steam Engineering, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, amounting to $12,500 (S. Doc. No. 646), which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

He also presented a petition of Central California Branch No. 231, National Association of Letter Carriers, of Fresno, Cal., praying for an increase in the salaries of postal employees, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

AMENDMENT OF POSTAL LAWS.

Mr. BANKHEAD, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, to which was referred the bill (S. 4429) to amend the postal laws, reported it without amendment and submitted a report thereon (No. 890).

PINE TIMBER IN MINNESOTA.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. From the Committee on the Judiciary I report back favorably without amendment the bill (S. 5617) to confer jurisdiction upon the United States district court for the District of Minnesota to hear, try, and determine the value of certain pine timber.

Mr. CLAPP. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill, and I desire to make a brief statement of the purpose of it.

The court in trying some cases as to the right of allottees to certain land found the allottees were entitled to the land, but under the circumstances the court would not assess the damages for the timber that the Government had sold from the land. This is simply to give the court authority to assess that damage. Otherwise another action would have to be brought to determine the value of the timber.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Minnesota asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

Mr. JONES. I think the bill should be read before consent is granted.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read the bill.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the United States district court for the district of Minnesota to hear, try, determine, and render judgment for the value of the pine timber cut by the agents, officers, employees, and representatives of the United States from the lands described in the respective complaints filed in the suits stated as follows:

United States circuit court district of Minnesota—

Maggie Vanoss against United States, involving right to south half of northeast quarter section 24, township 143 north, range 39, Mahnomen County, Minn.

Jane Leecy against United States, involving east half of northwest quarter section 24, township 143 west, range 39, Mahnomen County, Minn.

Charles Vanoss against United States, involving north half of northeast quarter section 24, township 143 north, range 39, Mahnomen County, Minn.

Said court is hereby authorized to refer the taking of the evidence and reporting the fact to the court commissioner of said court.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in the Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as folows:

By Mr. PHELAN:

A bill (S. 7511) to acquire a site and for the erection and completion thereon of a public building in the city of Marysville, Cal. (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. SHIELDS:

A bill (S. 7512) to establish a fish-cultural station in the State of Tennessee; to the Committee on Fisheries.

A bill (S. 7513) to provide for the erection of a public building at Kingsport, Tenn.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

A bill (S. 7514) authorizing the Secretary of War to acquire land for aviation purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. MARTIN of Virginia:

A bill (S. 7515) granting a pension to Letta Davidson Webster; and

A bill (S. 7516) granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Campbell (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SMOOT:

A bill (S. 7517) granting an increase of pension to Joseph J. Meyers (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CURTIS:

A bill (S. 7518) providing for a site and public building for post-office and other Federal purposes at Hays, Kans.; and

A bill (S. 7519) to provide for enlarging the United States building at Fort Scott, Kans. (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

A bill (S. 7520) for the relief of The Boyle Co., of Wichita, Kans. (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Claims.

A bill (S. 7521) granting an increase of pension to Frank Rogers (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 7522) granting an increase of pension to Sylvia McDevitt (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 7523) granting a pension to Mary F. Robinson (with accompanying papers); and

A bill (S. 7524) granting an increase of pension to Lottie L. Matthews (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WATSON:

A bill (S. 7525) granting a pension to Clarissa F. White;

A bill (S. 7526) granting an increase of pension to Phuel Linville;

A bill (S. 7527) granting an increase of pension to Daniel W. Hilligoss;

A bill (S. 7528) granting an increase of pension to Thomas A. Walters;

A bill (S. 7529) granting an increase of pension to John W. Middlebrook;

A bill (S. 7530) granting an increase of pension to Frank Lynch;

A bill (S. 7531) granting an increase of pension to William H. H. Jones;

A bill (S. 7532) granting an increase of pension to Levi G. Wilgus;

A bill (S. 7533) granting an increase of pension to James M. Goodrich;

A bill (S. 7534) granting an increase of pension to John Ginley; and

A bill (S. 7535) granting a pension to Josephine Babcock; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. PENROSE:

A bill (S. 7536) authorizing the Western New York & Pennsylvania Railway Co. to reconstruct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Allegheny River, in the borough of Warren and township of Pleasant, Warren County, Pa.;

A bill (S. 7537) authorizing the Western New York & Pennsylvania Railway Co. to reconstruct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Allegheny River, in the town of Allegheny, county of Cattaraugus, N. Y.; and

A bill (S. 7538) authorizing the Western New York & Pennsylvania Railway Co. to reconstruct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Allegheny River in Glade and Kinzua Townships, county of Warren, Pa.; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. GALLINGER:

A bill (S. 7539) granting an increase of pension to Augustus Wagner (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HUGHES:

A bill (S. 7540) granting a pension to Bessie Mandeville Trenor; to the Committee on Pensions.

FLOOD CONTROL.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I introduce a bill providing for the development and control of waterways and water resources, for water conservation, for flood control, prevention, and protection, and so forth, which I ask may be received.

The bill (S. 7510) to promote interstate commerce, agriculture, and the general welfare by providing for the development and control of waterways and water resources; for water conservation; for flood control, prevention, and protection; for the application of flood waters to beneficial uses; and for cooperation in such work with States and other agencies; for the control of the floods of the Mississippi River and the Sacramento River, Cal.; and for other purposes, was read twice by its title.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I ask that the bill be referred to the Committee on Commerce. I will state that this bill is intended as a substitute for the House bill regarding flood protection, which is known as the Humphreys-Ransdell bill, now pending in the Committee on Commerce, and also as a substitute for Senate bill 5706, heretofore introduced by myself, providing for a general system of waterway regulation and development.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I will ask the Senator from Nevada if he does not think that this comprehensive bill of his, if seriously considered, will put an end to all effort to prevent floods in the Mississippi and Sacramento Rivers?

Mr. NEWLANDS. I do not. I think it will aid that measure.

Mr. GALLINGER. When does the Senator think we would get a bill such as he proposes considered and passed through the Congress of the United States?

Mr. NEWLANDS. I will state that the bill which I have been urging for years has been very much modified in this bill. This bill does not provide for a large fund or a large appropriation, for which my bills have heretofore called. It provides simply for a fund of $1,000,000 for general investigations upon the lines indicated by my previous bills, and also includes, by way of compromise, the specific allowances for the flood protection required by the Humphreys bill upon the Mississippi River and the Sacramento River projects, which have been reported favorably by the War Department.

The bill simply provides for a general scheme of legislation, under which investigations and plans can be made, which will be submitted, as they are perfected, to the approval of Congress, and if Congress approves the proper appropriations will be made.

Mr. GALLINGER. So that it means to defer the entire matter for a long time, and the Senator's suggestion that it does not call for so much money in the beginning is true. It calls for a million dollars for investigation, but the Senator does not think, does he, that the large amount that he has suggested will be less after the investigations shall have been made?

Mr. NEWLANDS. On the contrary, I think it will be increased. I think this country is coming to the conclusion that it requires a perfected system of transportation, involving the coordination of rail carriers, river carriers, and ocean carriers. As the railroads are preparing to expend, and are gathering themselves to expend, $1,000,000 annually in the development of their railroads for rail transportation, the United States Government can easily afford to spend $60,000,000 annually for 10 years, as is proposed by my original bill, in the development of the water carriers. This whole matter, however, of course, will be left to the future.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be referred to the Committee on Commerce.

H. G. LARIMER.

Mr. CURTIS submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $125 to pay H. G. Larimer for fees and expenses as an expert witness on behalf of the Government in the case of the United States v. Henry Samuels, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the legislative, etc., appropriation bill (H. R. 18542), which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

Mr. WATSON submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 18994) to increase the limit of cost of certain public buildings, to authorize the enlargement, extension, remodeling, or improvement of certain public buildings, etc., which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds and ordered to be printed.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS—WILLIAM H. DURHAM.

On motion of Mr. POMERENE (for Mr. JOHNSON of Maine), it was Ordered, That the papers accompanying the bill S. 2241, Sixty-fourth Congress, granting an increase of pension to William H. Durham, be withdrawn from the files of the Senate, no adverse report having been made thereon.

DOCUMENTS RELATIVE TO GEN. WASHINGTON.

Mr. WILLIAMS submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 297), which was read and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on the Library:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate is authorized and directed to transfer to the custody of the Librarian of Congress the following documents which are now in the files of the Senate, namely: The message of President John Adams, December 19, 1799; letter of Tobias Lear to the President, December 15, 1799; address of the Senate to the President, December 23, 1799, and the answer of the President, December 23, 1799; address of the House to the President and his answer, December 19, 1799; message of the President, January 8, 1800; and a letter of Martha Washington to the President, December 31, 1799, all pertaining to the death of Gen. Washington.

PEACE OVERTURE.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I send to the desk a resolution which I should like to have read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read the resolution.

The resolution (S. Res. 296) was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate strongly indorses and approves the action taken by the President in sending diplomatic notes under date of December 18 to the nations now engaged in war, suggesting and recommending the first steps in possible negotiations to arrange the terms of peace.

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that this action of the President represents the overwhelming public sentiment and earnest desire of the people of the United States.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I object to the present consideration of the resolution. I think this is a matter upon which we might reflect more than we have had an opportunity to do. I presume everybody would agree with the President in the great desire to have peace; nobody would certainly criticize the President for doing anything that would have a tendency in his judgment to bring about peace; but there is a wide difference of opinion as to how best to effectuate that purpose. So far as I am concerned, I do not want to be placed in the attitude of indorsing a proposition of such tremendous consequences as this, upon which I have had no opportunity to reflect, and about which we have had no facts presented by the President and whose note we have not had an opportunity to read only hurriedly and imperfectly.

In a matter of this kind each individual has a responsibility which he can not shift, and I have no desire to shift it. This resolution has just been presented this minute, has never been to a committee, and I do not propose myself to consent to its consideration at this time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under objection, the resolution will go over for a day and be printed.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, I recognize that under ordinary circumstances a resolution of this character should go to the Committee on Foreign Relations for consideration. I was moved by the fact, however, that we are about to take a recess for something like 10 days, and I thought it might be possible to have immediate consideration of the resolution by the Senate. I really am more than surprised that the objection should come from the Senator from Idaho, but I recognize that there is some force in what he says, that some time should be taken for deliberation, and I therefore ask that the resolution be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is so ordered.

DOWNWARD TENDENCIES OF GOVERNMENT AND CITIZENSHIP.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, I give notice that on the 4th of January, immediately after the conclusion of the routine morning business, if permitted, I will address the Senate on the subject of the downward tendencies of Government and citizenship.

ADDRESS BY HON. ANDREW J. PETERS.

Mr. FLETCHER. I wish to submit an address before the Boston City Club, November 16, 1916, by Hon. Andrew J. Peters, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, on the importance of our South American trade. It is a very valuable address, and I should like to have it referred to the Committee on Printing for action on the request to have it printed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be so referred.

FLOODS OF THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER.

Mr. SHIELDS. Mr. President, I have here a copy of a report made by a subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Commerce on the control of floods of the Mississippi River. This report is now out of print. It is a very valuable report, and one which has been made by a committee of this body. I ask that it be printed in the RECORD for the convenience of Senators now having charge of the flood-control measur

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, there was so much confusion in the Chamber that we could not hear the request made by the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. SHIELDS. This is a report made by a subcommittee, under the direction of the Commerce Committee, on the flood control of the Mississippi River. The report is now out of print; it is a very valuable report, and one which is pertinent to the flood-control bill now being considered by the Commerce Committee. In order that it may be available by that committee and by the whole membership of the Senate, I ask that the report be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. SMOOT. Very well.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

The report referred to is as follows:

[Senate Report No. 1433, Fifty-fifth Congress, third session.]

FLOODS OF THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER.

Mr. NELSON, from the Committee on Commerce, submitted the following report.

The Committee on Commerce makes the following report of the action of the committee taken pursuant to the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the Committee on Commerce is hereby instructed to make full examination and inquiry as to the following questions and report thereon to the Senate, by bill or otherwise, on the first day of the regular session in December next:

"First. What are the causes of the disastrous floods in the Mississippi River and its tributaries, and how can such floods be prevented or diminished?

"Second. If such floods are the result to any extent of the destruction of timber upon or near the headwaters of said river or its tributaries, what measures should be adopted to prevent such destruction, and whether reservoirs to hold the water caused by rain or the rapid melting of snow on or near said headwaters should be constructed to prevent the floods caused by the sudden precipitation of the rain or snow water into the streams flowing from the regions where the sources of the Mississippi and its tributaries are located.

"Third. Whether said reservoirs, if their construction should be deemed necessary for the purposes before set forth, could not also be utilized for the irrigation of arid lands in the vicinity of such reservoirs.

"Fourth. Whether the outlet system by which it is proposed to furnish avenues through which the waters of the Mississippi River can escape in times of flood is practicable or expedient.

"Fifth. Whether the present system of improving the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers under which it is sought to confine the water within the banks of said rivers, by means of levees, and by such levees, together with jetties at different localities, to increase the erosive power of the current so as to protect the banks and deepen the channel, should be continued.

"Sixth. What has been the effect upon navigation and commerce of the jetties at the mouth of the Mississippi River, and what is the present condition of said jetties and their probable future?

"Seventh. Whether the Mississippi and Missouri River Commissions should be continued in existence; and if continued, what amendments should be made to the statutes creating such commissions and defining their duties and powers.

"Eighth. What legislation is necessary to prevent the enormous destruction of property by floods in the Mississippi River and its tributaries, and what amount of money should be appropriated by Congress for the establishment and maintenance of systematic improvements and safeguards for said purposes?

"That said committee shall have power to prosecute its inquiries through a subcommittee, which may sit during the recess of the Senate at such times and places as may be thought necessary, with power to send for persons and papers, and to employ a stenographer, the expenses of said committee to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate."

The investigation contemplated by the resolution was carried on through a subcommittee composed of Senators NELSON, Elkins, Vest, McBride, GALLINGER, Berry, and Caffery.

In October, 1897, the subcommittee visited the reservoirs at the headwaters of the Mississippi, also St. Paul, Rock Island, and St. Louis on the Mississippi River, and Sioux City on the Missouri River, and took the testimony hereto appended. In February, 1898, the subcommittee went to Cairo, Ill., and from there on the Mississippi River down to the Gulf of Mexico on the boat of the Mississippi River Commission, and on this trip took the residue of the testimony hereto appended. The testimony so taken is comprehensive and instructive, covering every feature of the contemplated inquiry. In addition to the facts and data derived from the testimony, your committee have also derived much valuable information from a pamphlet on The Floods of the Mississippi River, by William Starling, chief engineer of the lower Yazoo levee district, 1897, and from Bulletin E of the Agricultural Department on the Floods of the Mississippi River, prepared by Park Morrill, under the direction of Willis L. Moore, Chief of the Weather Bureau, 1897. The pamphlet will be cited as "Starling," and the bulletin as "E."

The questions propounded for the investigation of the committee are to a large extent questions of science and engineering, and the committee can do little more than to briefly summarize the opinions and conclusions of experts.

CAUSES OF THE FLOODS.

The principal territory submerged or affected by the floods of the Mississippi River before the construction of levees, and in part since, consists of certain basins or bottoms along the banks of the river between Cairo and Forts Jackson and St. Phillip. These basins, from Cairo down, are as follows:

The St. Francis Basin, on the right bank of the river, extending from Cairo to Helena, near the mouth of the St. Francis River, and embracing an area of about 6,706 square miles;

The White River Basin, on the same side of the river, extending from Helena to near the mouth of White River, and embracing about 950 square miles;

The Yazoo Basin, on the left bank of the river, extending from a short distance below Memphis to a point near the mouth of the Yazoo River, and embracing, in all, about 6,648 square miles;

The Tensas Basin, on the right bank of the river, extending from near the mouth of the Arkansas River to near the mouth of the Red River, and embracing an area of 5,370 square miles;

The Atchafalaya Basin, on the same side of the river, extending from the junction of the Red and Atchafalaya Rivers to Fort Jackson, and embracing 8,109 square miles; and

The Pontchartrain Basin, on the left bank of the river, extending from Baton Rouge to Fort St. Phillip, and embracing an area of 2,001 square miles.

The aggregate area of all these basins is 29,790 square miles, or 19,065,600 acres. (Testimony, 431.) Ever since the immediate valley of the river below Cairo has been settled there has been a constant struggle to reclaim these basins and to protect them against overflows and floods. The problem has been in part accomplished, chiefly by means of levees, but much still remains to be done. The ultimate object of this investigation was to determine the best method for the complete and permanent protection of these basins against the floods and inroads of the river.

The Mississippi River at Cairo is composed of the waters of the Ohio, the upper Mississippi, and Missouri Rivers. The Ohio and its chief tributaries have their sources in the western slopes of the Allegheny Mountains and their spurs. The upper Mississippi and its principal tributaries have their sources in numerous lakes in that plateau of land between the Red River of the North and Lakes Michigan and Superior, and the Missouri has its source in the upper eastern slopes and foothills of the Rocky Mountains. The White and the St. Francis Rivers, with sources in the Ozark Mountains, in southern Missouri and northwestern Arkansas, and the Arkansas and the Red Rivers, with their sources in the lower eastern slopes of the Rocky Mountains, contribute considerable volumes of water to the Mississippi River within the basins subject to overflow.

The annual normal rainfall in the different river basins varies greatly. In the Ohio it is 44.2 inches; in the upper Mississippi, 31.9; in the Missouri, 19.4; in the Arkansas, 29.6; in the Red, 39.1; and in the central valley of the Mississippi, including the White and the St. Francis, 51.4 inches. (E, 24 and 25.) In the upper Mississippi and the Missouri the rainfall is, as a rule, greatest in May and June. In the Ohio and the central valley it is greatest in January, February, and March. (Starling, 22 and 23.)

The greatest and most destructive floods have generally come from the Ohio. This was the case with the great floods of 1882, 1883, 1884, and 1897; and these floods culminated in February or March. (E, 40–45, and Starling, 29 and 41.) Of the total amount of water passing Cairo during these floods the Ohio contributed 69 per cent in 1882, 70 per cent in 1883, 85 per cent in 1884, and 76 per cent in 1897. (Starling, 27 and 41.) These great floods from the Ohio River, like all similar floods, came from excessive rains in the basin of the Ohio and its tributaries. These rains arise from cyclonic storms and warm, moisture-laden winds, originating in the Gulf of Mexico, and passing thence up the central valley and the valley of the Ohio into the western slopes and spurs of the Allegheny Mountains, where a colder atmosphere is encountered, leading to the precipitation. (Testimony, 267.)

The Ohio floods, after passing Cairo, are frequently largely reenforced by floods from the White and St. Francis Rivers and other streams in the central valley. Occasionally the floods from the Missouri and upper Mississippi are, to a limited extent, a factor in extending or prolonging the flood on the lower river, but this applies rather to the May and June freshets of the Ohio than to the earlier and more extensive ones. (Starling, 24 and 25.)

In Bulletin E (p. 46) the "Cause of the Mississippi floods" is thus summarized:

"It is, of course, conceivable that a flood should occur in the lower Mississippi from heavy precipitation over any of the great contributary basins. In these floods of the past quarter century we do not, however, find the western tributaries playing an important part. The great source of floods is the Ohio Basin, with its steep slopes from the crest of the Alleghenies, upon which falls the heaviest rains of spring at a time when the normal rise of the lower Mississippi brings the river almost to the danger line from Cairo to the Gulf. In the greatest floods we also find that heavy rainfall over the great swamp region that extends along the Mississippi from the mouth of the Ohio to the Gulf of Mexico is an important factor. Third in importance as a factor in producing floods is the upper Mississippi, which, while never discharging a volume sufficient to produce of itself a flood, yet, rising later than the Ohio, serves to prolong the high water, and thus to increase the overflow."

There are other causes, to which we shall refer further on, which have tended more or less to aggravate the destructive features of recent floods, but the foregoing presents briefly, and in a general way, the primary and chief cause.

DESTRUCTION OF FORESTS.

Nothing in the evidence or other data obtained by your committee discloses the fact that the destruction of timber at or near the headwaters of these river systems tends to cause or promote the floods referred to. It was shown that where timber is cut down for purposes other than cultivation the underbrush remains and grows more luxuriant than ever, and such underbrush serves to retard rather than hasten the movement of water on the slopes and hillsides; and where timber is cut down for purposes of clearing and cultivation the plowed area becomes an enlarged absorbent of surface moisture. It is a generally accepted opinion that the destruction of timber tends rather to diminish than to increase the rainfall.

RESERVOIRS.

There are five reservoirs constructed at the headwaters of the upper Mississippi. These reservoirs repress to some extent the floods in the river bottoms above Lake Pepin and improve the navigation of the river in low water down to that point, but have no material effect upon the floods or navigation of the river below that point. The evidence discloses no other points on the upper Mississippi available for reservoir purposes. On the Missouri the only point where sufficient holding ground could be found for a reservoir of any magnitude is on a reach of the river above Great Falls. Such a reservoir, if constructed high enough to bring the waters of the Missouri River into the Milk River Valley, would be valuable for purposes of irrigation, but would have no material bearing on the floods in the Mississippi River nor on the navigation of the Missouri River.

The evidence, as well as the other data, discloses that on the Ohio River, as well as its main tributaries, where reservoirs could act more directly on the floods than elsewhere, with the exception hereinafter stated, there are no suitable sites or holding grounds where reservoirs could at any moderate or reasonable expense, and without working far-reaching and extensive damage, be constructed that would at all be adequate to pen up and retain the great downpour from innumerable mountain torrents during the great freshets of January, February, and March. There are no great basins adequate for reservoir purposes either on the Monongahela, the Allegheny, the Tennessee, or the Cumberland; and to be effective in repressing the floods of the Ohio, big, strong reservoirs would be requisite on these streams.

The only place where a reservoir basin can be found, proximate and sufficiently large to afford a holding ground at all commensurate with any material or practical relief is the St. Francis Basin; but the cost of constructing and maintaining a system of reservoirs in this basin would be enormous, and far greater than the cost of leveeing the entire river front of the basin. The scheme is regarded by nearly all engineers and other experts as wholly impracticable. In short, your committee can discover no just or adequate relief in reservoirs.

OUTLETS.

Neither can your committee discover from the evidence, or through other sources, any material relief from the outlet system. It is not practicable to relieve the river by means of outlets except below the Red River. Two important natural outlets now exist and have for years existed on this reach of the river—the Atchafalaya and Bayou Lafourche. A third, Bayou Plaquemine, is now closed pending its preparation for reopening by means of locks and dams. But these outlets, or others that might be constructed on this reach of the river, could afford no perceptible relief for the river about, where relief is much more called for and needed. The St. Francis, Yazoo, White, and Tensas Basins can get no relief from any practicable outlet system. And where this system exists and is feasible there is no disposition to extend it or to substitute it for levee enlargement. (Testimony, 424–455, 335, 375; see also Humphrey and Abbott's report of 1861 as to reservoirs and outlets.)

LEVEES.

The history of levee construction on the Mississippi River has been a history of the gradual reclamation of the several basins or bottoms from the inroads of the floods of the river. Anterior to levee construction these basins served as great natural reservoirs for the floods, the exterior hills or ridges of the basins serving as the high-water banks of the river; and within these banks so wide apart and with these basins for a high-water bed the floods never reached the high level nor the increased rapidity obtained since the great extension of the levee system. Levees are the penning up of the floods of the river from these high-water basins. The narrowing of the high-water stream by means of levees does not result in materially scouring a deeper channel nor in raising the bed of the river (testimony, 269), and so the stream at its flood stages, as it becomes narrower, also becomes higher. Contraction without deepening of necessity leads to elevation, and as a consequence levee construction has brought in its wake higher flood levels, necessitating from time to time higher and stronger levees. The history of levee construction shows this. (Dabney, testimony, 311; Driver, testimony, 199; Starling, testimony, 269; Gillespie, testimony, 382, 383; Newcomer, testimony, 334; Richardson, testimony, 370, 371; Taylor, testimony, 237, 239, 241; Table, testimony, 432; Tollinger, testimony, 510.)

The first levee construction began in 1717, when a levee 1 mile long was constructed to protect New Orleans, then a mere village. This levee was 4 feet in height and 18 feet across at the top. The country settled up slowly, and levee construction only kept pace with the settlement. Fifty years after this levee was built the settlements extended only 30 miles above and 20 miles below the embryo city. It was not until after Louisiana had been ceded to the United States that levee extension was undertaken on an enlarged and systematic scale. By 1828 the levees, though of rather inferior character, had been extended nearly up to the mouth of the Red River. At the beginning a levee 4 feet in height was ample, but as levee construction progressed up the river, and additional basins and bottoms were inclosed and protected, the levees were, of necessity, increased in height. (Testimony, 237.) There are still levees below New Orleans that are only from 3 to 4½ feet in height, but the average height of the levees in Louisiana, above New Orleans, is now from about 12 to 13 feet (testimony, 380, 369), and this height proved insufficient in the great flood of 1897 (testimony, 370).

The flood stage of 1897, above New Orleans, was from 1½ to 3½ feet higher than that of any previous flood, notwithstanding that the flood level at Cairo was less than in 1882–83 and 1884. Three great crevasses occurred in 1897 that remained unrepaired until after the flood subsided, and several minor crevasses occurred, which were closed during the pendency of the flood. This increased flood level was "partly due to the improvement and increase of levees." (Testimony, 370. 371, 380, 423, 424.) The experience of 1897 indicates that a complete inclosure of all the river basins will require from 3 to 4 feet higher levees in Louisiana. The levees on the Yazoo Basin were only 4 feet high in 1858. From 1874 to 1882 they were raised to from 7 to 8 feet (testimony, 269–308), which proved insufficient under the flood of 1882; and based on this flood as a standard, the levees were increased to an average of from 13 to 14 feet in height prior to 1897. This was more than 3 feet above the high water of 1882 (testimony, 308–311), but it proved utterly insufficient under the flood of 1897.

Since the floods of 1882–83 and 1884 the White River Basin, the upper Tensas Basin, and much of the St. Francis Basin have been inclosed, and this, together with the higher levees on the Yazoo front, have greatly aggravated and raised the flood levels on this reach of the river. (Testimony, 269, 272, 273, 311.) The flood of 1897 made it plain that a complete inclosure of all the river basins would require an increase of from 4 to 6 feet in height of the Yazoo levees. (Testimony, 274–275, 311; see Starling's paper on levee construction in Yazoo Basin, testimony, 505–508.)

The work of inclosing the White River Basin was commenced in 1888, and most of it was done after 1890. By 1897 the basin had been inclosed by a levee of an average height of 12 feet, deemed sufficient under the flood levels of 1882–83 and 1884, but this proved utterly insufficient in the flood of 1897. That flood overtopped the levee at many points, and was from 4 to 6 feet higher than any previous flood, clearly indicating that a complete levee system along the entire river would require an increase of 6 feet in the levee height along this basin. (Testimony, 301, 302.)

In the upper Tensas Basin nearly all levee construction has taken place since 1882—mainly since 1892. In the lower Tensas Basin there was an old levee existing before this period, but of low grade and insufficient in strength. By 1897 the upper and lower Tensas Basin levees had attained an average height of 13 feet. In the flood of 1897 the river was from 2½ to 3 feet higher in front of these basins than in the flood of 1882, and hence the levees were insufficient. Had the level in 1897 not been any higher than in the floods of 1882–83 and 1884, the levees would have been ample. (Testimony, 330–332.) Several serious crevasses occurred in these levees during this flood. The higher flood level of 1897 was largely due to increased levee construction and the further inclosures of river basins. (Testimony, 334.) The completion of the levee system would require the levees on the Tensas Basin to be raised to the height of from 17½ to 18 feet. (Testimony, 334, 335.)

In the St. Francis Basin levee construction begun in 1893. Since that time a continuous levee of an average height of 9 feet has been constructed from Point Pleasant, Mo., to Chute 38, Ark., a distance of 127 miles. About 100 miles more are required to reach the mouth of the St. Francis River and to entirely inclose the basin. The levees on the St. Francis Basin proved insufficient for the flood of 1897, and several serious and extensive crevasses occurred. These levees need to be made stronger and higher—at least 2 feet higher than the grade of 1897. (Testimony, 167–170.)

The flood of 1897 wrought great havoc, especially in the older levees, many of which have been defectively and improperly constructed. There were 23 breaks in the St. Francis front, 6 in the Yazoo front, 14 in the White River front, and 4 in the Tensas front, most of which occurred from an overtopping of the levees. Below the Red River there were only a few small breaks, and these were closed during the pendency of the flood. (Testimony, 432.) Engineer Ockerson in his testimony (p. 432) describes the flood of 1897 and compares it with the flood of 1882, as follows:

"From a point about 100 miles below Cairo to the Gulf the stage reached in 1897 was greater than any previous record. As far as volume of water is concerned, however, the flood of 1882 was much greater than that of 1897. The flood of 1882 stood above the danger line at Cairo, or 42 feet on the gauge, for a period of 72 days. The flood of 1897 stood above the danger line for a period of 54 days. During the flood of 1897 the tributaries below Cairo were all rather low."

A due consideration of the testimony and other data bearing on the subject makes it clear that the flood of 1897 was, in its effects and consequences, greatly enlarged and aggravated by the extensive inclosure of basins and the extended and enlarged levee construction that had taken place since the floods of 1882–83 and 1884 (testimony, 241), though it is doubtless true that if no levees at all had been in existence a larger area would have been submerged. Engineer Starling, in his book (41, 42), to which we have already referred, concurs in this conclusion in the following clear and apt language:

"It is not only the magnitude of the flood of 1897 which has made it of surpassing importance to the engineers of the Mississippi service. The widespread damage which it has wrought, while great, is yet not without a parallel. Its principal interest to the engineer is due to the experience which has been derived from the wholesale closure of unleveed tracts and the extraordinary elevation of its high-water line consequent thereon. There are two of the great basins into which the Mississippi Valley is divided which have only recently been protected to any extent by levees. These are the St. Francis and the White River Basins. The former was closed during the last three years, or since the flood of 1893, to a distance, measured along the river, of about 120 miles. There still remains a gap of about 100 miles. The White River Basin has been undergoing a gradual process of closure for several years. In 1893 there was a gap of about 15 miles, extending between points 330 and 360 miles, respectively, by river, below Cairo. In 1896 this gap was closed and the line of levee was made continuous from the hills at Helena to a point 8 miles above the mouth of White River. It is to the building of these lines and to the maintenance of the lines previously existing until a late period of the flood that the unparalleled stages attained by the water have been due."

The construction and repair of levees was, in the first instance, undertaken by riparian owners, afterwards by parishes or counties, then by the States or certain levee districts, under the authority of the States, and finally by the latter and the Federal Government combined, which is the system now prevailing. The first material aid given by the Federal Government was a grant of swamp and overflowed lands made to the several States in 1850. The same year Congress also made provision for a survey and investigation of the Mississippi River.

This work was carried on for the next 10 years under the direction of Capt. Humphrey and Lieut. Abbott, who made their final report in 1861. This report was most thorough and exhaustive, and is still the standard work on the hydraulics and physical features of the river. It made clear that no substantial relief from floods could be obtained from reservoirs or outlets, and that levees, properly constructed, would afford the necessary relief and protection. Neither the testimony taken by your committee nor other obtainable data has shaken or invalidated these conclusions. During the Civil War levee construction was at a standstill. After the war was over the several States began, without concert and without due plan or system, to extend and repair the levees. But the great flood of 1874 showed how inadequate, both in quality and quantity, the efforts of the States were. Congress again intervened and passed an act providing for the appointment of a commission of five engineers to investigate, determine, and report as to the best plan for relief against the floods.

This commission made its report in 1875, and came to the same conclusion as Humphrey and Abbott did in 1861—that a system of levees could alone afford adequate protection. But no systematic improvement of the river by the Federal Government was yet undertaken. Finally, in 1879, Congress passed an act creating the Mississippi River Commission, outlining its work in the following terms:

"It shall be the duty of said commission to take into consideration and mature such plan or plans and estimates as will correct, permanently locate, and deepen the channel and protect the banks of the Mississippi River, improve and give safety and ease to the navigation thereof; prevent destructive floods; promote and facilitate commerce, trade, and the Postal service."

From 1879 to 1882 $1,475,000 was appropriated by Congress for expenditure by the commission in making surveys and in improving the navigation of the river, but none of it was allotted for levee construction. In 1882 Congress appropriated the gross sum of $4,123,000, and from this the first direct allotment for levee construction was made—about $1,300,000 in all. (Testimony, 237.)

The testimony of Judge Taylor, a member of the commission, explains in detail the make-up of the commission, the mode in which it performs its work, and the methods it pursues. From each appropriation made the commission allots a certain proportion for the construction and repair of levees in each levee district, which is expended by the United States engineer in charge of the district. The commission plans the work, subject to the approval of the War Department, and the district engineers carry on the work conformable to the plan.

The first effort of the commission was directed to the closure of the Yazoo Basin, and then followed the improvement of the Tensas Basin, then the White River Basin, and, finally, a part of the St. Francis Basin. In the respective levee districts the State and Federal engineers, while acting in concert and harmony as far as possible, work each on separate and distinct portions of the river. One reach is constructed under Federal authority and another under State authority. When a levee is constructed the constructing engineer or his successor takes charge and care of the same. (Testimony, 257, 258.) In case of an emergency there is, by mutual consent, a sort of joint care and supervision. As a rule, both Federal and State engineers are men of fine attainments, high character, and great public spirit, which tends to obviate any friction that otherwise might ensue from an undefined joint tenancy. It would no doubt be advisable to provide by law in which authority the care and maintenance of a constructed levee should vest. The evidence (p. 518) discloses the fact that 18 suits have been brought against the United States for damages claimed to arise from the construction and maintenance of levees or failure to construct or maintain proper levees along the Mississippi River. The aggregate amount of damages claimed in these suits is $656,337.04.

From a table (following p. 518 of testimony) prepared by Capt. Waterman, secretary of the Mississippi River Commission, under the direction of Gen. Gillespie, president of the commission, it appears that the total yardage of levees constructed by Federal, State, local, and private authority is 164,860,375 yards, built at a cost of $47,631,503.78, of which yardage 68,570,431 yards were constructed by Federal authority at a cost of $13,320,708.44 and 96,289,944 yards by State, local, and private authority at a cost of $34,310,795.34.

It is estimated that it would cost to complete the entire levee system, from the head of the St. Francis Basin to the Head of the Passes, at a grade sufficiently high and strong to afford complete protection against floods at the highest probable stages, the sum of from $18,000,000 to $20,000,000, and that it would take from four to five years to complete the system. (Testimony, 245, 246, 357, 360, 390, 396, 408.)

From all the evidence taken and considered by your committee it is evident that the basins and bottoms along the Mississippi River exposed to the floods of the river can only be protected and preserved from such floods by an ample and complete system of levees from Cairo to the Head of the Passes.

Crevasses and inundations, resulting in extensive loss of life and property, are liable to occur during all floods so long as the system is incomplete. The burden of completing the levee system is too great for local and State authority. Your committee are of the opinion that the Federal Government should continue, as it has since 1882, to aid in the great task of controlling and repressing the floods in the river.

Your committee are also of the opinion that the Mississippi River Commission should remove its principal office and headquarters from New York City to some point on the Mississippi River.

NAVIGATION, MISSISSIPPI RIVER.

The testimony discloses that the navigation of the upper Mississippi River has been considerably improved by the reservoirs on the reach above Lake Pepin and by riprapping, wing dams, spur dikes, hurdles, revetment works, and a little levee work at various points on the river below that reach. (Testimony, 20–34.)

The Mississippi River Commission has carried on more or less extensive improvements of the navigation of the river on many of the reaches below Cairo. Such improvements, in addition to levee work, have consisted of bank protection in the form of riprapping and various kinds of revetment work, of channel contraction by means of jetty work, hurdles, and various forms of spur dikes, and of dredging on an extensive scale. Some of the work has been rather tentative and of a temporary character, and on account of the great cost has not been followed up.

At present, aside from levee work, the chief reliance for obtaining a low-water navigable channel seems to be dredging. The new style of hydraulic dredges seems to be very potent and effective and seems to give great and promising results. Four new dredge boats have been for some time completed and in use, and two more are under contract and by this time ready for use, and there is money available for another dredge. It is estimated that from 9 to 10 dredges will be required to keep a due low-water channel open. (Testimony, 100–108, 140–148, 218–235.) In the light of results obtained, your committee recommend that ample provision be made for the construction of dredge boats and dredging. In view of the great cost, especially great as to results, it seems that it would be more judicious to limit revetment work to levee and harbor protection. Contraction by means of jetties, dikes, and dams, supplemented by dredging, seems to have given the best results at least cost. There is no doubt that revetments are very efficacious, but the cost is so immense that its systematic application is scarcely warranted.

JETTIES AND PASSES.

As the Mississippi River in its downward course is about to debouch into the sea it divides itself into three great passes, through which it enters the Gulf, and forms the delta at its mouth. These passes are known as the Southwest Pass, South Pass, and Pass a Loutre. From New Orleans down to the Head of the Passes there has been no impediment to deep-water navigation. The impediment occurs in the passes, especially at their heads and mouths, chiefly the latter. Prior to the improvement of the South Pass by means of jetties navigation was chiefly confined to the Southwest Pass, though Pass a Loutre had for some years been utilized to some extent.

In 1839, when the Southwest Pass was first examined, it was 15.2 miles long and 13 feet deep on the crest of the bar, and it was then, as now, of an average width of twice the width of the South Pass. Between that time and 1877 considerable work was done in improving this pass, but such work, aside from a short and abortive jetty work on one side of the pass in 1856, consisted of dredging and stirring up the bed of the channel by means of drags, harrows, scrapers, blasting, torpedoes, and other similar appliances. By these means a depth of 18 feet was at one time for a short period obtained on the crest of the bar. In 1874, the year before the improvement of the South Pass began, the Southwest Pass had attained a length of 18 miles, with a depth of only 15 feet on the crest of the bar, and on the 9th day of February last the pass had attained a length of 18½ miles, with a depth of only 9 feet on the crest of the bar, according to soundings then taken. (Testimony, 464.)

In aid of the improvement of the South Pass Capt. Eads placed a mattress sill acros the head of the Southwest Pass, which, aside from a little dredging prior to 1878, is the only improvement made in this pass since 1875.

Prior to 1875 like efforts at improving Pass a Loutre, except jettying, were also made, which were in like manner partially successful. By the fall of 1858 an 18-foot channel had been obtained in this pass, and for some years it was, on account of being the shorter pass, utilized for purposes of navigation; but in 1875 the channel was destroyed by a large mud lump, and since that time no improvement has been made, except placing a mattress sill at the head of the pass and the work of attempting to close a large crevasse on the south side of it near the upper end, both of these works being in aid of the maintenance of the South Pass jetty system.
